Father McQuade averred that a library is one of the most important assets on a college campus. It achieves its object in helping to produce great scholars. All forms of education require greater use of the libraries. Unless students and scholars use the library, they can't remain abreast of new developments.

The presentation of the memorial plaque was made by John C. Kelly, Class of '15. Mr. Kelly, a personnal friend of Father Falvey, delivered a few words permeated with emotion.

Result: The experimental Ford Mustang, lively 2-seater loaded with significant engineering features

Just under 13 feet long—weight, 1544 pounds, 400 to 700 pounds less than comparable models of popular imported sports jobs—the Mustang is representative of the interesting design challenges at Ford Motor Company. Unique ways of reducing weight without sacrificing strength, to improve performance and economy, may stem from its design.

For example, seats are an integral part of the Mustang's body, adding structural rigidity. Brake, clutch and accelerator are mounted on a movable cluster which can be adjusted fore and aft (as can the steering wheel) to suit varying sizes of drivers.

Other important features: low-drag, aerodynamic shape proven in the wind tunnel; independent front and rear suspension; disc front brakes; roll bar built as an integral part of the body/frame structure; hot V-4 engine mounted forward of the rear axle in unit with a 4-speed manual transmission.

The Mustang is another example of how challenging assignments met by our engineers and stylists help Ford Motor Company maintain engineering leadership and provide new ideas for the American Road.

Three Singers Overwhelm 4,000

by Tim Hauser

In the hectic world of Tin Pan Alley, where most singers and club acts come and go overnight, and where EVERYONE is tagged as an artist, it is a rare thing to have what is known as a solid act.

In lieu of this, I feel that we at Villanova should feel honored, for on the evening of April 26, in the Field House, we saw such a solid act in the persons of Peter, Paul, and Mary.

From their opening number of "Settle Down" to their finale of "If I had a Hammer," P, P & M utilized every tool in their musical bag of tricks and, as a result, presented a most delightful and entertaining concert. The most gratifying thing one can say about them is that they are artists in the real sense of the word.

They render their songs in a sincere and honest manner, and avoid the pitfalls of ultra-commercialism. This is an unusual thing, because the majority of folk groups utilize the "hard sell" in order to achieve excitement.

Polished Artists

Peter, Paul, and Mary use art. Art in their music, and art in their stage act. They bring out the true meanings inherent within their songs, and achieve psychological conveyence with their audience. Their skill in changing moods is the ultimate in professionalism.

From their rendition of the Gary Davis gospel of "If I Had My Way," to the children's fantasy of "It's Raining," they move from one world to another. In doing so, they bring their audience with them, and never stop to set the scene. They are nostalgic, as well as current.

One can almost cry, as he recalls the cherished moments when he played hide-and-seek indoors, because it was raining, or when he played knights in armor with "Puff."

Their movements on stage add to the meaning, as one can obviously see. Their motions are Chaplinesque, and their facial expressions are childlike.

One Act Play

Visually, Peter, Paul, and Mary are a one act play. All the movements and facial expressions that they convey correspond to the demands of their songs. But let us not forget their humor.

From the Seabring sounds of a sports car, to the "you name it" sounds of a flush bowl, P, P, and M reflect true comical qualities. Actually, Paul Stookey is a comedian by trade, having groomed himself as master of ceremonies at The Cafe What in New York's Greenwich Village.

What more can one add? They are polished to a "T," pleasing to the ear, and fun to watch. They are the number one vocal group in the nation.

SEMINARY ENTRANCE TEST

Any student interested in entering the Seminary of The Augustinian Fathers next fall, must take the entrance examination here at Villanova on June 28 and 29. Detailed information can be secured from Father Duffey, the Director of Vocations. Father maintains and office in the basement of St. Rita's Hall. He lives in Room No. 108, Alumni Hall.

Fred's Forum: Nurses Versus Boys

Send your questions in care of FRED 'S FORUM, Villanovan Office, Dougherty Hall. Fred will be answering your questions right here every week.

Dear Fred,

A girl I have been dating for the last couple of months has asked me to go to a dance at her school next week. I have tried everything I know to get out of it, because I have also been invited to a swinging party that same night.

I've even told her that we have no possible way to get there, which we don't, but she insists that we can take the train. What do you think I should try next, I don't have much time left, so I have to think of something.

John B.

Dear John,

I think that she is acting like a complete witch about the whole thing. She suggests that you take the train to town, why don't you suggest something equally as ridiculous. Ask her if her broomstick will seat two and then you can go that way.

Fred..

Dear Fred,

From reading your column last week, I gathered that you don't think that there are any sophisticated nurses at Villanova. Well, I happen to think that you are DEAD wrong. There are some awfully sophisticated nurses here. So sophisticated, in fact that you can't even talk to them. I think that whoever wrote that letter must have his schools mixed up.

Mike J.

Dear Mike,

Thanks for the comments. I am glad to see that some other loyal Villanovan agrees with me.

BEAT THE RUSH FOR SUMMER EMPLOYMENT!

SET UP A FULL-TIME SUMMER WORK OPPORTUNITY NOW

EARN FROM $125 TO $200 WEEKLY!

Right now — whether you realize it or not — literally thousands upon thousands of teachers, college students, even high-school students are thinking ahead toward summer employment!

Remember the summer of 1962? Perhaps you were among the "great majority" of annual summer-job seekers who went begging because our economic system was unable to absorb the summer employment flood.

Plan to be an "early bird" this year. Make certain you have a lucrative work opportunity ready and waiting for you when summer vacation period begins.

How? Here's one way!

We invite you to investigate the growing NATIONAL ORGANIZATION SERVICE summer program for college men — a program where earnings normally run between $125 and $200 OR MORE weekly! Students have found this to be pleasant, clean work providing wonderful business experience.

There is no "route" work — no night work. YOU select your own general work location anywhere from coast to coast!

For full information on the program send your name, address, preferred work location, age and any miscellaneous information pertaining to possible prior business experience to:

General Manager, Dept. B
National Organization Service
488 Madison Avenue
New York 22, New York

One final note. Earliest applications must receive prime consideration. We would like to have our own program set up well in advance of summer vacation, and there is very definitely a limit to the number of applicants we may accept.

EARN FROM $125.00 to $200.00 WEEKLY!

HOW TO SEE EUROPE FOR ONLY $300 A DAY: NO. 3

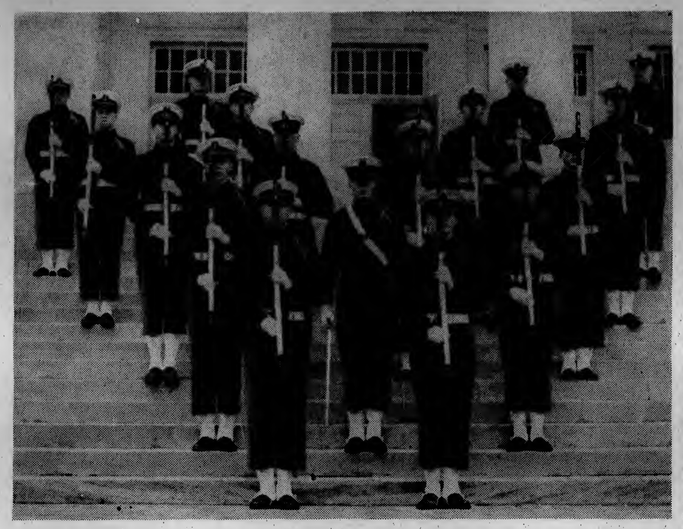
When all of you go to Europe during your summer vacation, you will certainly want to visit Spain, where the tall corn grows,

The first thing you will notice upon entering Spain is the absence of sibilants. In Spain "s" is pronounced "th" and thereby hangs a tale. Until the reign of Philip IV—or Guy Fawkes, as he was sometimes called—Spaniards said "s" just like everybody else. Philip IV, however, lisped, and Spaniards, having an ingrained sense of propriety and not wishing to embarrass their monarch, decided that everybody should lisp. This did indeed put Philip IV very much at his ease, but in the end it turned out to be a very bad thing for Spain. It wrecked the sassafras industry—Spain's principal source of revenue—and reduced the nation to a second-class power.

As a result, Spaniards were all forced to turn to bull fighting in order to keep body and soul together. Today, wherever you go in Spain—in Madrid, in Barcelona, in Toledo, in Cleveland—you will see bulls being fought. For many years the bulls have sought to arbitrate this long-standing dispute, but the Spaniards, a proud people who use nothing but Castile soap, have rejected all overtures.

It is therefore necessary for me to explain bull fighting to anyone who is going to Spain. It is also necessary for me to say a few words about Marlboro Cigarettes because they pay me for writing this column, and they are inclined to pout if I ignore their product. In truth, it is no chore for me to sing the praises of Marlboro Cigarettes, for I am one who fairly swoons with delight when I come upon a cigarette which gives you the full, rich taste of good tobaccos plus the pure white Selectrate filter, and Marlboro is the only smoke I have found that fulfills both requirements. Oh, what a piece of work is Marlboro! The flavor reaches you without stint or diminution. You, even as I, will find these statements to be happily true when once you light a Marlboro. Marlboros come to you in soft pack or Flip-Top box, and are made only by the makers of Marlboro.

But I digress. Let us return to bull fighting. Bulls are by nature bellicose creatures who will keep fighting till the cows come home. Then they like to put on pipe and slippers and listen to the "Farm and Home Hour." However, the Spaniards will not allow the bulls any surcease. They keep attacking the bull and making veronicas—a corn meal pancake filled with ground meat. Bulls, being vegetarians, reject the veronicas and then, believe you me, the fur starts to fly!



To be perfectly honest, many Spaniards have grown weary of this incessant struggle and have left their homeland. Columbus, for example, took off in three little ships—the Patti, the Maxene, and the Laverne—and discovered Ohio. Magellan later discovered Columbus. Balboa also sailed to the New World, but he was silent on a peak in Darien, so it is difficult to know what he discovered.

Well sir, I guess that's all you need to know about Spain. So now, as the setting sun casts its rosy fingers over El Greco, let us take our reluctant leave of Spain—or Perfidious Albion, as it is jocularly called. Aloha, Spain or Perfidious Albion, aloha!

©1963 Max Shulman

Let us not, however, take our leave of smoking pleasure. Let us keep enjoying those fine Marlboro Cigarettes—rich, golden tobacco—pure white Selectrate filter—soft pack or Flip-Top box—available in all fifty States of the Union.

Seventeen shining sailors salute in a Villanova V-for-victory as the University's unparalleled drill team prepares to parade in City Title Meet.

Drill Team Finishes String Capturing Title In City Meet

Villanova's NROTC Drill Team culminated a season of hard work by winning six trophies at the Annual Greater Philadelphia Drill Meet held at St. Joseph's College on April 24th.

The Drill Team, Whiskey Company in the NROTC Unit, consists of two platoons, the Advanced Platoon, composed mostly of upperclassmen, is led by Midshipman Ensign Alexander Ward. The Basic Platoon made up entirely of Freshmen, follows the commands of Midshipman Ensign Frank M. Dirren.

Prior to this meet, the drill team participated in three major drill meets. In March, they travelled to Pittsburgh and College Park, Maryland. These two meets were against top competition yet Villanova's drill team held its own.

Although they didn't win any first place trophies at these meets, the team received valuable experience and were able to develop an excellent drill routine.

This polishd drill routine was performed in the National Drill competition held during the Cherry Blossom Festival in Washington. This meet is considered to be the true test of a Drill Team, and the best teams in the country participate.

Although Villanova did not win first place, the team did prove conclusively that it was one of the best NROTC Drill Teams in the country.

The Greater Philadelphia meet found Villanova's Drill Team primed for victory. Competition at St. Joseph's was separated into two divisions, basic drill and trick drill and the fifteen participating teams were subdivided into class A and class B according to their national rating.

The Advanced Drill Team was judged to be the best overall drill team in class A. This was achieved by an overwhelming victory in the basic drill and a close third place in trick drill by a slim margin of four points.

The Basic Drill Team only competed in the basic drill. Marching against the upperclassmen from other area colleges, the Villanova freshmen came as close as possible to victory. They finished second to a platoon judged better by 1.4 points.

Concept Goes On Sale Today In Pie Shoppe Criticism Invited

Concept, the Villanova magazine of fact and opinion, will go on sale today in Dougherty Hall at twenty-five cents per copy.

This year's Concept, according to publicity manager Richard Monks, will cover a wider range of matter than it did last year.

Featured articles in the issue are: "A Colloquium: Some Intellectual and Cultural Aspects of a Catholic University;" "A Pictorial — Villanova Coloring Book" by Joseph Petraitis; and "This Thing Called Love" by Pete Federico.

Concept was originated by its founders as a magazine which would be a medium of student opinion and a stimulation of serious interest in academic and social problems. The magazine does not have a limit as to the range of the articles in it.

The editors of the magazine, Paul Norton and Peter Murray, invite criticism of the articles which appear in it.

Senior Steering Committee Applications may be picked up in Student Council Office and MUST be returned by Fri., May 10.

Pre-Law Society Holds Elections For 1963-64

Officers of the Pre-Law Society for the coming year have recently been announced. President of the Society will be Tom Menchin, vice-president, Tony Fulginiti; treasurer, Joe Kelly; secretary, Joe Brennan; and liaison officer, Steve Cabot. Bill Bleauvelt will be the Student Council representative.

Secretary Brennan also announced the name of a book that should be useful to prospective law students, How to Pass Law School Admission Test — Questions and Answers. The book can be purchased from College Publishing Corp., 132 Livingston Street, Brooklyn 1, New York, for $3.95 plus postage.

Guess who offered me an executive position with a leading organization, where I'll get good pay, further my education, and enjoy world travel?

My uncle.

In this case, nepotism's a pretty good idea. But of course you've got to measure up to get it. To be admitted to Air Force Officer Training School, you've got to be a good student with skills or aptitudes we can use.

Air Force OTS is an intensive three-month course leading to a commission as a second lieutenant. As an Air Force officer, you'll be a leader on the Aerospace Team—and be a part of a vital aspect of our defense effort.

Here's a chance for ambitious college men and women to assume great responsibility. It's a fine opportunity to serve your country, while you get a flying head start on the technology of the future.

We welcome your application for OTS now—but this program may not be open to you in a year or so. If you're within 210 days of graduation, get full information about Air Force OTS from your local Air Force recruiter.

COULD THIS BE WHY THE FOUR FRESHMEN CAN'T FINISH SCHOOL?

Yes. But there's nothing wrong with their addition. Four master vocalists, plus four swinging instrumentalists, plus four on stage-off the cuff comedians total Four Freshmen. Honest. And this fantastic triple threat versatility is why college audiences refuse to let the Freshmen finish school.

In "The Four Freshmen in Person • Volume 2" on Capitol, you'll hear them at their versatile best, in a recording made during an unforgettable performance at Long Beach City College. The packed house called it great, and so will you.

Summer Camp Openings Abundant; Graduate Jobs On Downward Trend

John A. Moritz, Director of Villanova's Placement Office, has announced that about 200 summer job openings for undergraduates, in 30 different summer camps, remain without takers.

In addition, numerous requests for various other types of summer work have been received. Mr. Moritz indicated that this is the largest number of available summer positions that the office has received in several years.

In sharp contrast, he predicted a distinct drop in the number of positions available for June graduates. Comparing present statistics with those at this time last year, a record year, he estimated that prospective offers would be better salary-wise, but that there would be less.

The main function of the Placement Office is providing graduating seniors with contacts and interviews leading to potential careers with some of the finest firms in the nation. Every year approximately 50% of the two hundred top-ranked companies in the United States are represented on campus.

Accurate figures on this year's standings are not yet available since most companies do their recruiting during the month of May.

Mr. Moritz also pointed out that, contrary to popular opinion, the office does receive a considerable number of openings for Liberal Arts graduates. They range from business management positions to internships in government service.

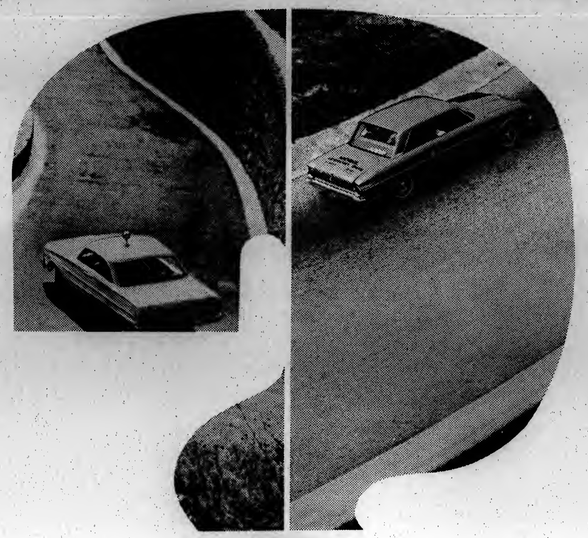
This year ten students signed for the PSEE Exam for government internships—with only seven actually taking the test.

Student response from Liberal Arts majors is also hindered by the fact that a great many intend to go on to graduate school. This same condition holds true for students taking degrees in physics, mathematics, pre-med and other related subjects.

The bulk of offers received are for technical work, chiefly in the engineering field. Last year over one hundred offers were made by engineering firms.

Board Of Consultors Visits Villanova School Of Law

The Board of Consultors to the School of Law, headed by the Honorable Thomas J. Clary, Chief Judge of the United States District Court of the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, engaged in its fifth annual "Day of Visitation" to the Law School on April 26.



The Board of Consultors is a group of twenty-five distinguished lawyers and judges from various cities stretching from New York to Chicago and from Boston to Washington. Their function is to advise and counsel the administration of the university and the faculty of the Law School.

On this "Day of Visitation" the consultors visited classes, discussed matters of curriculum, administration, library, recruitment of students, placement of law graduates, and the conduct of various law school activities such as the Villanova Law Review, Moot Courts, and the Student Bar Association.

After their inspection of the Law School in operation, they met informally with the administrative officers and the trustees of the university and were guests of the university at a reception in Garey Hall and at a dinner later that evening.

Serving with Chief Judge Clary as Chairman of the Board are Herman J. Obert, Esquire, Vice-Chairman, and William C. A. Henry, Esq. Secretary. William E. Schubert, Jr., Esq. was chairman for arrangements.

WHAT'S HAPPENED TO FALCON

EVERYTHING! AND YET...

Early this year we put a 164-hp V-8 in a new kind of Falcon called the Sprint, and entered the stiffest winter road test we could find . . . the 2,500-mile Monte Carlo Rallye. We didn't know what would happen . . . but happen it did.

First, no one dreamed all the Rallye cars would have to experience the worst winter in decades. Snow, below zero temperatures, and the most demanding terrain in Europe took their toll. Two thirds of the 296 cars that started, failed to reach Monaco.

A lot of experts told us that the Falcon V-8's, untried as they were, could not hope to finish the Rallye with the best of weather. But not only did two Falcon Sprints finish, they placed first and second in their class. But there were more surprises (for everyone) in store. Against all competition, regardless of class, the lead Sprint went on to take first in the final six performance legs.

We honestly didn't know the Falcon Sprint would do this well. But it showed us a Falcon with our new 164-hp V-8 is a car that can perform with the best of them. So a lot has happened to Falcon, and yet . . .

A six-cylinder Falcon has just finished the Mobil Economy Run and finished first in its class. It had to take a lot of punishment, too . . . 2,500 miles from Los Angeles to Detroit over mountains, deserts, and long stretches of superhighways. But the nickel-nursing ways of the all-time Economy Champ took all comers in its class.

So you see something has happened to the Falcon. It can be what you want it to be . . . a V-8 that travels in the same circle as Europe's performance kings . . . or a Six that can travel cross-country on a budget. There's something to put into your compact.

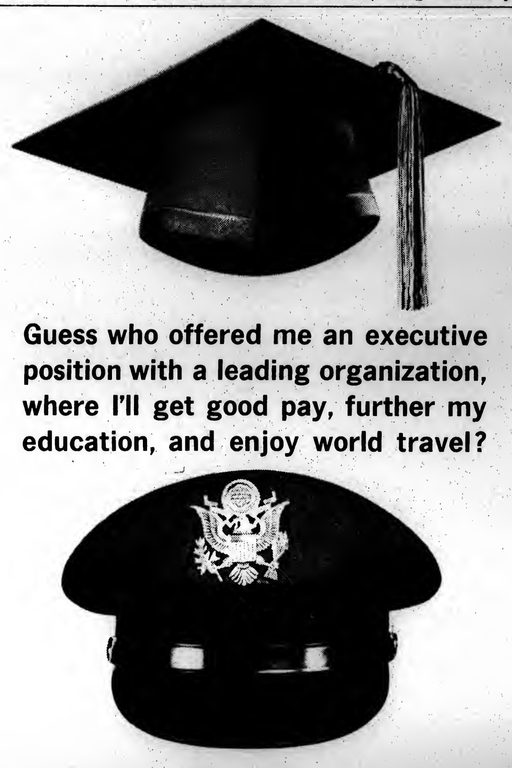
The selections for the 1963-64 co-Captains of the Villanova cheerleaders have been announced for the forthcoming year. The senior co-Captain will be Peter J. Smith and the junior co-Captain will be Charles Zaccaria.



Peter Smith has been an active cheerleader for the last two years and has made the cigar famous on the Villanova infield. Charlie Zaccaria, while being an active member of the squad for the past, year, has also subbed for Maurice McCarthy as the infamous "Wildcat."

Pete and Charlie have announced that applications are now being accepted for cheerleaders in 320 and 147 Sullivan Hall.

An article entitled, "Zeno's Paradoxes of Motion," by Dr. James F. O'Brien, associate professor of philosophy, was recently published in The Modern Schoolman.

Dr. Helen North, Professor of Classics at Swarthmore College, delivered a Philosophy Department sponsored lecture at Villanova on "Sophrosyne in Patristic Thought," April 30.

Guess who offered me an executive position with a leading organization, where I'll get good pay, further my education, and enjoy world travel?

My uncle.

In this case, nepotism's a pretty good idea. But of course you've got to measure up to get it. To be admitted to Air Force Officer Training School, you've got to be a good student with skills or aptitudes we can use.

Air Force OTS is an intensive three-month course leading to a commission as a second lieutenant. As an Air Force officer, you'll be a leader on the Aerospace Team—and be a part of a vital aspect of our defense effort.

Here's a chance for ambitious college men and women to assume great responsibility. It's a fine opportunity to serve your country, while you get a flying head start on the technology of the future.

We welcome your application for OTS now—but this program may not be open to you in a year or so. If you're within 210 days of graduation, get full information about Air Force OTS from your local Air Force recruiter.

COULD THIS BE WHY THE FOUR FRESHMEN CAN'T FINISH SCHOOL?

Yes. But there's nothing wrong with their addition. Four master vocalists, plus four swinging instrumentalists, plus four on stage-off the cuff comedians total Four Freshmen. Honest. And this fantastic triple threat versatility is why college audiences refuse to let the Freshmen finish school.

In "The Four Freshmen in Person • Volume 2" on Capitol, you'll hear them at their versatile best, in a recording made during an unforgettable performance at Long Beach City College. The packed house called it great, and so will you.

Look for "The Four Freshmen in Person • Volume 2" on Capitol, and look for the Four Freshmen in concert on your campus.

Summer Camp Openings Abundant; Graduate Jobs On Downward Trend

John A. Moritz, Director of Villanova's Placement Office, has announced that about 200 summer job openings for undergraduates, in 30 different summer camps, remain without takers.

In addition, numerous requests for various other types of summer work have been received. Mr. Moritz indicated that this is the largest number of available summer positions that the office has received in several years.

In sharp contrast, he predicted a distinct drop in the number of positions available for June graduates. Comparing present statistics with those at this time last year, a record year, he estimated that prospective offers would be better salary-wise, but that there would be less.

The main function of the Placement Office is providing graduating seniors with contacts and interviews leading to potential careers with some of the finest firms in the nation. Every year approximately 50% of the two hundred top-ranked companies in the United States are represented on campus.

Accurate figures on this year's standings are not yet available since most companies do their recruiting during the month of May.

Mr. Moritz also pointed out that, contrary to popular opinion, the office does receive a considerable number of openings for Liberal Arts graduates. They range from business management positions to internships in government service.

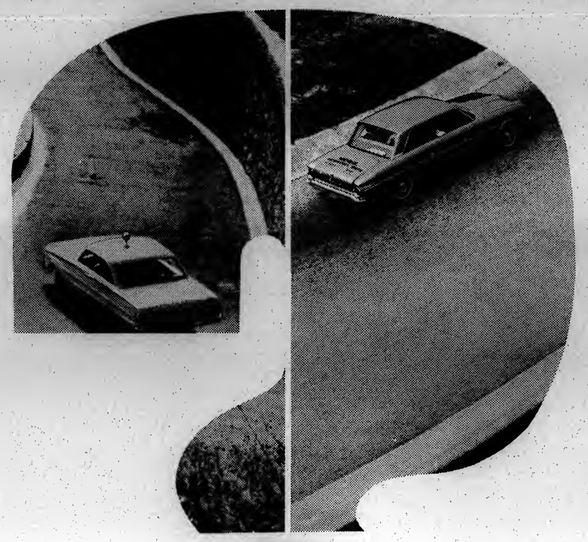
This year ten students signed for the PSEE Exam for government internships—with only seven actually taking the test.

Student response from Liberal Arts majors is also hindered by the fact that a great many intend to go on to graduate school. This same condition holds true for students taking degrees in physics, mathematics, pre-med and other related subjects.

The bulk of offers received are for technical work, chiefly in the engineering field. Last year over one hundred offers were made by engineering firms.

Board Of Consultors Visits Villanova School Of Law

The Board of Consultors to the School of Law, headed by the Honorable Thomas J. Clary, Chief Judge of the United States District Court of the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, engaged in its fifth annual "Day of Visitation" to the Law School on April 26.



The Board of Consultors is a group of twenty-five distinguished lawyers and judges from various cities stretching from New York to Chicago and from Boston to Washington. Their function is to advise and counsel the administration of the university and the faculty of the Law School.

On this "Day of Visitation" the consultors visited classes, discussed matters of curriculum, administration, library, recruitment of students, placement of law graduates, and the conduct of various law school activities such as the Villanova Law Review, Moot Courts, and the Student Bar Association.

After their inspection of the Law School in operation, they met informally with the administrative officers and the trustees of the university and were guests of the university at a reception in Garey Hall and at a dinner later that evening.

Serving with Chief Judge Clary as Chairman of the Board are Herman J. Obert, Esquire, Vice-Chairman, and William C. A. Henry, Esq. Secretary. William E. Schubert, Jr., Esq. was chairman for arrangements.

WHAT'S HAPPENED TO FALCON

EVERYTHING! AND YET...

Early this year we put a 164-hp V-8 in a new kind of Falcon called the Sprint, and entered the stiffest winter road test we could find . . . the 2,500-mile Monte Carlo Rallye. We didn't know what would happen . . . but happen it did.

First, no one dreamed all the Rallye cars would have to experience the worst winter in decades. Snow, below zero temperatures, and the most demanding terrain in Europe took their toll. Two thirds of the 296 cars that started, failed to reach Monaco.

A lot of experts told us that the Falcon V-8's, untried as they were, could not hope to finish the Rallye with the best of weather. But not only did two Falcon Sprints finish, they placed first and second in their class. But there were more surprises (for everyone) in store. Against all competition, regardless of class, the lead Sprint went on to take first in the final six performance legs.

We honestly didn't know the Falcon Sprint would do this well. But it showed us a Falcon with our new 164-hp V-8 is a car that can perform with the best of them. So a lot has happened to Falcon, and yet . . .

A six-cylinder Falcon has just finished the Mobil Economy Run and finished first in its class. It had to take a lot of punishment, too . . . 2,500 miles from Los Angeles to Detroit over mountains, deserts, and long stretches of superhighways. But the nickel-nursing ways of the all-time Economy Champ took all comers in its class.

So you see something has happened to the Falcon. It can be what you want it to be . . . a V-8 that travels in the same circle as Europe's performance kings . . . or a Six that can travel cross-country on a budget. There's something to put into your compact.

Communion Breakfast

The final activity for the old Congress was the Student Council Communion Breakfast held in Dougherty Hall last Sunday.

Father Appicci addressed the gathering, followed by basketball Coach Jack Kraft.

In his talk Mr. Kraft thanked the Congress for helping to support the team and gave a resume of the season.

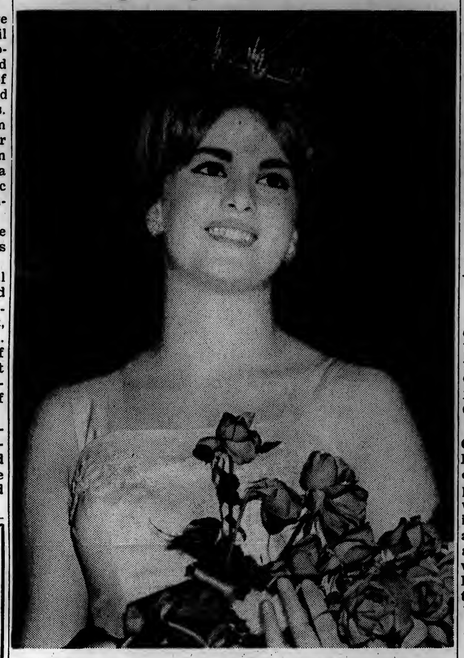
Concluding the proceedings, outgoing chairman Joseph Tate and Father Appicci presented keys to outstanding members of the old Congress and certificates to students who have been outstanding in their contributions to Villanova during the past year.

Sophomore Spring Day Entertains Orphans

The second annual Sophomore Spring Day was held on April 27. This project of the sophomore class is unofficially listed among the social traditions of Villanova. It is always devoted to the entertainment of orphans.

This year 96 youngsters from St. Mary's Orphanage in Ambler and St. John's Orphanage in Philadelphia were treated to a tour of the campus, a picnic lunch, and various athletic contests.

Members of the sophomore class and their dates served as hosts to the children.



Co-chairmen of this successful affair were John Calabria and Bob Spellmeyer who were assisted by publicity, entertainment, athletics, and tours committees.

Charles Zaccaria, chairman of organization, commented that the sophomore nurses were particularly helpful in all phases of the event.

Benediction, which was officiated by Father Thomas C. Kenny, OSA, class moderator, ended a most enjoyable and worthwhile day for the sophomores and their guests.

A meeting will be held for the editors and staff of the 1964 Belle Air on Monday, May 13, 6:30 p.m. in The Belle Office.

Unemployment

it a servant rather than a master. Ways have got to be devised whereby individual freedom can be maintained in an automated world.

Fear Nothing

We have nothing to fear in the possibility that machines might control our need for food, put clothing on our backs, or build our shelters. But we do have a good deal to fear in the possibility that machines might be used to control our minds.

Ingoring the trends and failing to question a long-range solution can only result in chaos.

Youth Conservation Corps, reduction of taxes, education, and so forth, are essential in terms of holding back the tide of unemployed at present, but are inadequate in terms of a long range solution.

It might be valuable to begin consideration of the problem with a little more candor and to stop considering drugs as solutions. Automation looms as the most potent benefactor of man's material well being—or its most hostile foe.

Regional Appointments

Villanova Senior Delegate John Neary also announced at this time the appointment of two additional regional delegates. Appointed were Dennis Narowski and Bob Dean. The appointments were the result of legislation presented by Neary to the region asking that the larger schools, paying proportional dues, be given more representation.

The final reports of all the outgoing officers were included in the election meeting. The reports generally emphasize the progress of the region and recommendations for its future.

Lacrosse Team Victorious As White Tallies Four Goals

Villanova's lacrosse team edged Dickinson College last Friday by an 8-7 score. Bill White was high scorer for the locals as he turned in four goals, Shep Shephard had two while Charlie Hilgarten and Mike Sweeney had one each.

The score was tied at halftime, 5-5, but Villanova took a commanding 8-5 lead into the fourth quarter. The upstaters came roaring back scoring two goals six minutes apart from one another, but Villanova used their good ball control to hang on and win.

The Wildcats capitalized on a big opportunity as they scored four goals when the opposition was one man shy. On three different occassions, Villanova was a man down, but Dickson could only tally one goal.

Tomorrow the stickmen close out their home season with a match at 3:00 p.m. next to the baseball field and end the season the next day in a tilt at Bucknell.

Rowley Rolls 1545 Gains Quarter Finals In Brooklyn Matches

Villanova's bowling team has recently completed another successful year, and the standout performer for the keglers was freshman Jim Rowley. Rowley, who is also on the swimming team, is in the running for a national championship.

Jim was the only member of the Wildcat squad to qualify for the quarter-finals of the National Individual Match Games. In the opening round held in Brooklyn he rolled a total of 1545 for eight games.

As a result of this performance he was ranked among the top thirty collegiate bowlers in the East.

Rowley is slated to compete against these thirty bowlers in the quarter-finals in New York. A good showing there will boost him into the semi-finals against eight opponents. If he bests these eight men, he moves into competition against a bowler from the West for the national title.

Sailing Club Takes Eliminating Regatta As Bellwoar Stars

The Villanova Sailing Club recently captured the 1963 Associate Number Elimination by a one point margin. There were ten races held on the choppy, windswept Shrewsberry River and, at the end of nine, the score was tied. Villanova won the last race for the title.

Dan Mullray, a freshman, skippered in one first place, three second places and one third place while Bob Bellwoar, a senior, scored four firsts and a second to clinch the regatta. In addition to Villanova, Monmouth College, Queens College, Iona College, and St. Joseph College also participated. The final championships to be held in the next few weeks, will be followed by a regatta in Detroit.

Underclassmen Win Seventeen Medals In Intramural Meet

by Jim McGarvy

The intramural track meet was held on Thursday, May 2. It seemed more like an interclass track meet, than an intramural meet. The Freshmen and Sophomores handily romped the esteemed upper classmen by winning 17 medals out of 22.

Joseph Horn '64 won the 100 yard dash in 10 seconds flat. David Jonik, '66 and John DeMarco, '65 placed second and third respectively. The aforesaid gentlemen also won the 220 yard dash in the same order of Joseph Horn, David Jonik, and John DeMarco. The winning time was 24 seconds.

Don Fox, '65 took the laurels in the 440 yard dash. John Evans, '66 took second place with Bob Zucker, '66 a close third.

The mile run was won by Frank Clancy, '65 in 5:30. Jim Prant, '66 and Steve Richardson, '66 took second and third places. The "Hammers" won the mile relay in 3:51.7. Jack Cooney, Joe Daly, Joe Horn, and Don Fox are the illustrious members of the "Hammers."

Fields Events

Tony Bianni, '63 won the shot-put with a heave of 42'8." Second and third place were taken by Bill Cheney, '65 and Al Decotiis, '65 respectively.

George Conway, '66 cleared the bar at 5'8" to win the high jump event. John Gonzales '66 and Steve Sawyer, '65 placed second and third.

George Conway also took the honors in the broad jump with a leap of 19'10." Tony Carbone, '66 and Ted Hack, '66 were a close second and third.

Volleyball

The volleyballs have taken an exceptionally hard pounding this year with 24 teams flailing and pummelling them down the throats of their opponents. Team captains are asked to turn in their scores at the completion of each game to Steve Abbott at 103 Sullivan Hall.

There will be an intramural council meeting on Thursday, May 9 at 7:00 p.m. Anyone interested in making application for membership on next year's council should attend this meeting.

Golf Team Blanks Seton Hall But Drops 4-3 Match To Hawks

Villanvo's varsity golf team split a pair of matches this week, bringing then season's record to 4-7. The Cat linksmen drubbed Seton Hall 7-0, but earlier in the week dropped a 4-3 decision to St. Joseph's.

In the Seton Hall match, played last Friday at the Aronomink Country Club, seven Villanovans turned in fine performances to register the Mainliners first shutout of the season. John Driscoll, Bob McMahon, and Scott Schwartz all turnesl in 5 and 4 wins.

Ben Kenny then continued the 'Cats on their winning way by a 3 and 2 win. Bill Lotze then went 2 and 1 to give Villanova a 5-0 bulge. Pete Cassidy and Joe Patterson each turned in 4 and 3 triumphs to complete the whitewash job on the Pirates.

In Villanova"s 4-3 loss to crosstown rival St. Joe's Schwartz won his match 6 and 5 McMahon triumphed 2 up, while Driscoll won 3 and 1 to give the 'Cats their three wins. However, Kenny lost 1 up in ninteen holes while Patterson was dropping a 4 and 3 decision. Steve Milazzo and Cassidy rounded out the days action, each taking a 3 and 2 loss.

McDonough, Joe And Knecht Win Medals In Pan-American Games

Villanova had three medal winners in the recently completed Pan-American Games held in Brazil. In the shot-put, Billy Joe collected a silver medal as he sent the shot 58' 10½" to finish behind Dave Davis, also of the United States.

Dick McDonough, the Main Lines Contributions to the U.S. swimming team, was on the 800 meter freestyle relay team which captured its event with a 4:15.7 time.

Dick McDonough

In addition to these two men, Villanova had an alumnus participating, Bill Knecht. Knecht of Haddenfield, New Jersey, teamed with Bob Lea of Wayne, Pa. to capture the men's double sculls.

Knecht, who graduated from Villanova in the early fifties, is now a three time gold medal winner in this intercontinental classic. In 1955, he rowed for the Vesper Boat Club and teamed with Jack Kelly in the double sculls to win again in 1959. Knecht also saw action in the Olympic rowing trials dating back to 1948, but until 1960, he had never made the Olpics, themselves.

The win over Textile brough the Wildcats over the .500 mark for the season. It was the ninth victory against eight setbacks for Art Mahan's sophomore-studded squad.

Wildcats Defeat Navy, St. Joe's And Textile While Losing Three

by Dennis Gildea

Villanova's baseball forces under the tutelage of Art Mahan, Sr. took the field on six separate occasions in the past few days and came out even in the win-loss department. The Wildcats lost to Penn, Seton Hall and Lafayette, but rebounded to cop decisions from Navy, St. Joe's and Philadelphia Textile.

Split with Penn and Navy

The Cats started it all off by hitting the trail to Penn. The Quakers won the game 6-2, but Mother Nature was actually the deciding factor in the contest.

In the top of the sixth Mike Kiley unloaded with a grandslam home run which knotted the score at six apiece. At this point the VU squad had their hot bats cooled off by a deluge of rain.

A few minutes later things warmed up again, but this time the heat was generated by Villanova players incensed by the fact that the umpire had decided to call the game. The score reverted to the previous inning, and the Cats and starter Andy Candelmo were tacked with a 6-2 defeat.

Additional note: the sun came out a short while later.

The Villanova team found things more to their liking down at Annapolis. The Midshipmen bowed to the Cats 6-2.

Bill Smith held the Middies in check from the mound, and he received valuable assistance from Kiley who had a four for five at the plate.

Lose to Pirates and Lafayette

Seton Hall put the chokers on the Mainliners by clubbing them 8-3. The Villanova batsmen failed to produce the base hits needed to power them to victory.

Andy Candelmo, who was relieved by Wayne Walls, was charged with the loss for the visiting Cats.

Another road trip, this time to Lafayette, proved to be an unhappy one. The Leopards nipped VU in eleven innings 3-2.

In the eleventh frame Bill Smith, who worked the entire game, got himself in trouble by walking two opposing sluggers and allowing a third to reach base on an error. With the bases jammed the next Lafayette batter slapped a singled scoring the winning run.

Shortstop Jack Lynch collected three hits to lead the Villanova batting atack.

Cats Hammer Hawks

Next on the agenda for the Wildcats was a home date with arch-rival St. Joseph's. In this one the Cats revenged a previous defeat at the hands of the Hawks by trouncing them 6-2.

The big blow in the tilt was a long home run by first sacker Richie Richman. Base hits rang out all afternoon as all the Cat sluggers had a good day at the plate.

Vic Majewski looked sharp on the mound for VU and went the route to pick up the victory.

Textile Blasted

Philadelphia Textile was next to succumb to the Wildcats. They were the victims of a sixteen hit attack and the fine relief work of Don Albino. Andy Candelmo was the starter.

Textile had a 5-3 lead in the fifth inning when Villanova exploded for four runs. Sophomore Bob Hall pounded a double.

The next inning saw the Mainliners put the game on ice with a torrid hitting exhibition which resulted in five more runs crossing the plate. Jack Lynch's booming double did the most damage in an inning which saw the Wildcats boost their lead to a 12-5 count.

Julian Pinelli and Joe Ryan smashed four-baggers for the visiting Textile nine, but these blows were more than offset by the Villanova bombers. Five VU men had two hits apiece, and Bob Hall took the honors for the day by lashing out three drives which fell in for base hits.

Cats Triumph At Quantico After Poor Penn Relays

by Larry Everling

The Cat cindermen came back last weekend at the Quantico Relays to help erase some of the disappointment left over from the Penn Relay Carnival. Led by the smooth running Irishman, Noel Carroll, Jumbo Elliot's charges won both the distance Instructed to take it easy on medley and sprint medley relays, the leadoff leg of the distance medley because he had to run a good half-mile in the sprint medley less than an hour later, Carroll ran a sharp 1:51.2 half. Later he ran a 1:51.4 anchor half with a great sprint at the end to overcome St. John's Tom Farrell and lead the sprint medley team to a record-tying 3:-22.1.

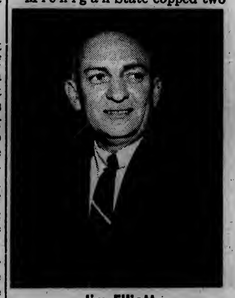
Don Webster, Ron Hangey, Marshall Uzzle and Carroll ran the sprint medley and Carroll, Stan Kozlowski, Tom Sullivan and Pat Traynor composed the distance club.

Close but. . .

Georgetown's Ed Duchini out lasted Carroll on the last lap of the two-mile relay running a blazing 1:49.1 This is the best time ever in the East. Carroll's was the start of a disappointing day for the Wildcats, which also lost a hairline decision in the 880 relay to North Carolina College in 1:26.2 Soph sensation Norman Tate held off the strong challenge of Wildcat soph sensation, Don Webster, to ice the event.

Rolando Cruz, the most consistent vaulter around, won the slingshot contest at 15-6. He missed three tries at 16 feet later. Ex hero John Ueles es couldn't qualify for anything for the second week in a row.

Cary Weisiger and the Maryland State mile relay were the overall heroes. Weisiger ran the first sub-4 minute mile in the East in 3:59.2 and the Maryland crowd cracked the relay mark in the very fast 3:08.3.



Meanwhile back at home, a clever sophomore from the University of Washington captured the yes and the trophies of the 29th annual Penn Relays. Brian Sternberg was the culprit as he soared to 16-5 for a new world's record in the pole vault. Sternberg played down the feat by saying that it might not last 24 hours and he was almost right as it lasted 72 hours.

Otherwise, the smoothrunning carnival held a few set back for the Cat harriers. Only a record breaking 3:21 by the sprint medley prevented a shutout for Villanova from the medals. Webster, Hangey, Uzzle and Carroll led from start in this one.

Steeplechase

As usual "Goose" Traynor fought his way to a win in the 3000 meter steeplechase with Owen Macguire finishing a strong fourth. Traynor was passed about halfway through the race but this only encouraged the former Monsignor Bonner star to turn on the steam and establish a new collegiate record, 8;57.1.

Michigan State copped two

titles, the 440 and 880 Championships of America. In the 880 relay, the team of John Parker, Walker Bevely, Sherman Lewis (an All-Big Ten halfback) and Bob Moreland withstood a strong challange by the Cats. Coach Elliott said that this setback was a big psychological blow to the mile relay efforts.

Distance Losses

A serious injury and a stirring upset marked a black Friday on the Villanova track books. Vic Zwolak was gashed on the instep (a wound requiring 17 stitches) after Fordham's four-mile relay team ran the race of their lives and defeated the favored Wildcat squad. Zwolak's absence was felt in the distance medley later in the afternoon as Boston College won the event in 10;01.3.

Morgan State

Morgan State won the mile relay. Hubert Brown's third leg of the relay gave the Marylanders a seven yard lead and Don Webster couldn't catch Nick Lee. The time was a good 3;12.4.

Chris Stauffer, with a beautiful style, led the University of Maryland to an upset win over Winston Salem in the 480 shuttle Hurdle Relay Championship. The Penn Relays were, as usual, run with complete efficiency by Ken Doherty. As testament to this, 35 individual mile relay events were run in the morning, one every minute and they finished ahead of schedule.

The cindermen are in action this Saturday against Quantico at Virginia. On May 18, Villanova meets St. Joseph's College in a dual meet, at St. Joe's. The IC4A Championships will be held at Randall's Island, New York, on May 31 and June 1. On June 13-15, Villanova will participate in the NCAA championships at Albuquerque, New Mexico.

Ruggers Dropped By Virgina 9-5 After High-Scoring Tie And Win

The Villanova Rugby team limped home from Virginia last weekend after a rugged meeting with the University of Virginia Rubgy team in 90 degree heat.

They encountered a rather strange example of Southern hospitality on the field Saturday as they were roughly handed a 9-5 loss.

The team was handicapped from the start since they were playing without the services of Captain Luke St. Onge and other key players due to injuries.

The Virgina Club's size was one of the biggest factors in the game since they were able to control the ball in most of the scrums and lineouts.

Villanova soon found that they were in for a rough time when their opponents displayed some of the finest open field kicking encountered all year. Time after they would advance the ball thirty or forty yards on beautifully placed kicks, keeping the Wildcats with their backs against the wall constantly.

With Virginia's big forwards controlling the ball, Villanova was unable to mount an offensive and the score stood at 6-0 at the completion of the first half. The The trend of the game did not change until late in the second half when scrum-half Jon Galante left the home town fans gaping with a surprising thirty yard run. The conversion was made by Bob Shayer, bringing the score to 6-5.

From that point on it was a race against the clock for Villanova but with two minutes left Virginia wrapped up the game with a three point penalty kick.

Two weeks ago, against the undefeated club from Baltimore, Villanova played to exciting 16-16tie. The home town boys came from ten points down in the second half and were near a score when the game ended. Scores for Villanova were Bob Wilkinson, George Tongring, Bert Lambino, and Don Crouthamel who had one try each. Rich Guinan made two conversions.

Against the University of Pennsylvania, Villanova rolled to a neat 19-0 victory with Catain Cuke St. Onge breaking loose for three scores. Dick Gove and Rich Guinan also scored with Guinan again adding two conversions.

In the First Troop game, Villanova lost a heartbreaker in the last wto minutes on a penalty kick, with the score 6-5. Bert Lambino made the only score for the home team and Guinan made the two point conversions.

One of the bright spots on the rugby horizon this spring has been the Villanova "B" team which has shown great power and potential in their performances thus far. Their latest dazzling scores are the 20-0 victory over Baltimore and the 19-0 frolic over St. Joseph's.

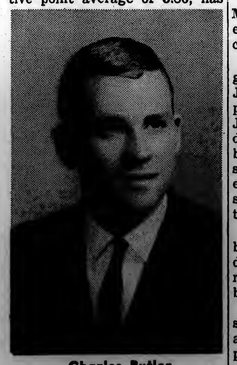
President's Senior Message

Dear Graduates of 1963:

I am happy to congratulate you in the name of the administration and faculty of Villanova University as you proceed into the world with your well-earned degrees. You feel deservedly proud at this time, as do your parents, relatives and friends. Yours is a distinction still reserved to a very small portion of the world's youth.

As you rejoice today and are about step out into your career your cannot imagine what your future holds in store for you. One can only promise that there will be many surprises both pleasant and otherwise. Be assured that if you have done your work well at Villanova you are prepared to do day by day what will be demanded of you. And if you will do day by day the little tasks that befall you, and do them responsibly, you can be certain that your life ahead will be a happy one.

This then is what we ask of God for you as we bid you farewell. God bless you always.



Sincerely yours,

Rev. John A. Klekotka O.S.A.
President

Charles Butler Chosen As 1963 Commencement Speaker

Charles J. Butler, Jr., a biology major from Ardmore, Pennsylvania was chosen the student commencement speaker for the graduating Class of 1963.

Butler, with a present cumulative point average of 3.86, has also taken part in many extra-curricular activities. He was a member of the Student Council in his freshman and sophomore years and a member of the band for three years.

Currently, he is a member of the arts honor fraternity, Delta Epsilon Sigma and the pre-med fraternity Lamba Kappa Delta.

This year he was editor of the Mendel Bulletin and was also elected to Who's Who in American colleges.

Butler was chosen from a group of six finalists by the Rev. Joseph W. Kemme, OSA, vice-president for student affairs and Joseph H. Nevins of the speech department. Their decision was based on the commencement speech of each finalist. Considered was the overall topic, presentation and overall effect of the address.

The finalists were nominated by their individual deans. Each department submitted four names; with this original number being cut to six.

The deans were asked to consider the cumulative average, activity on campus, and overall presentability of their choices.

When asked how he feels about being chosen Butler said, "I am very happy, but there are a number of other students who were more worthy of it."

Seniors' Final Event Scheduled For May 25 Three Groups Featured

The final social function of the year for the class of '63, The Last Blast, Senior Parting Festival, will be held May 25 at Fisher's Pools near Norristown.

Tickets for the affair are on sale in the Pie Shoppe, The C&F and Mendel cafeterias and Room 107 Sheehan Hall at five dollars per couple. Directions to the festival area will be given with the purchase of tickets.

Seniors are asked to bring their own lunch and refreshments will be provided by the senior class. The festival will begin at 2 p.m. with a picnic. Fisher's Pools is equipped with a baseball field, basketball courts and a swimming pool.

The main entertainment for the day will be Johnny and the Hurricanes. Also featured will be Screamin' Jay Hawkins Jr., and Little Pal and his Pals.

General chairmen for the event, Joe Tate and Leo Rattigan, are looking forward to enthusiastic participation by the class in this final social event.

Thirty Senior Nurses To Be Pinned Sunday At Chapel Ceremony

Next Sunday, May 19, will see the emergence of some thirty-three happy senior Villanova nurses from the Villanova Chapel. They will have received their university pins, indicative of successful completion of Villanova's four-year nursing course.

The pinning ceremony, initiated in 1961 by Dean Marion Schrum of the Division of Nursing, will begin at 2 p.m. with the Very Reverend John A. Klekotka, OSA, University President, conferring the honors.

Father Kletkotka will bless the pins and proceed to place one on each nurse's uniform. The Girls' Glee Club will provide the music for the occasion.

Others are: Margaret M. Kinlan; Mary J. Kirk; Dolores T. Klouder; Walter C. Knepley; Annette C. Liberto; Suzanne M. Mahoney; Patricia A. Massi; Dolores D. McCormick; Margaret N. McGeehan; Joanne C. McHenry; Cecile M. Mugnier.

Also receiving pins are: Mary M. O'Leary; Michele A. Osiewicz; Carolyn M. Quency; Anna L. Sartomo; Hilda A. Savery; Elsie L. Sensi; Barbara D. Smith; Mary P. Stroud; Joan E. Tattersall; Linda R. Vettese; Marian C. Wagner; Barbara M. Watson; and Julianne M. Mattimore.

Snedeker Scheduled To Speak At June 3 Commencement

by Bob Dean

Approximately 1050 Villanovans will receive degrees at this year's Commencement Exercises on June 3. The number constitutes one of the largest classes ever to pass through the University's "treasured halls."

Lt. General E. W. Snedeker, Commandant of Marine Corps Schools in Quantico, Virginia, will be the feature speaker. He will address a crowd of more than 10 thousand persons who are expected to jam the Villanova stadium for the event.

Snedeker will later receive an honorary Doctorate in Military Science, which will be presented to him by Father Klekotka.

Four other honorary degrees are to be conferred. Among the recipients will be Mr. James B. Donovan, prominent New York attorney who negotiated the release of over one thousand prisoners-of-war from Cuban dictator Fidel Castro. Donovan will be present to receive an Honorary Doctoral Degree in Human Letters.

An Academic Procession of all graduates will precede the event, beginning at 10:30 A.M. from Dougherty Hall.

The Very Reverend James A. Donnellon, Chairman of the University Board of Trustees, will preside at the ceremonies which will begin at eleven o'clock.

Figures which are now available indicate that approximately 900 of the prospective graduates will receive Bachelor Degrees. This includes about 40 students who will graduate from the school's part-time evening program. Of these, about 200 will have completed courses in the field of Arts and Science, 325 in Commerce and Finance, 190 in Engineering, and about 35 in Nursing.

In addition to this, about 125 students will receive Masters Degrees, while 49 persons are expected to graduate from the University's Law School.

Another highlight of the event will be the presentation of the Lindback Teaching Awards. The Award, which carries with it a stipend of $500, is presented annually to two members of the faculty who are selected as outstanding in their field by fellow professors and certain prominent members of the student body.

Shortly after the exercises, 50 of the new graduates, who have completed four years of courses in the NROTC, will be commissioned as Naval or Marine Corps Officers.

Others to receive honorary degrees are the Very Reverend Francis J. Cavanaugh, OSA, Provincial of the Augustinian Mid-West Province, prominent laymen Mr. John C. Connelly, President of the Crown Cork and Seal Company and Mr. DeHaven Develen, President of the Bryn Mawr Trust Company, and prominent alumnus John J. McAndrews.

Senator Thurmond Expounds On Muzzling Of The Military

by Michael A. Magro

A sizable assembly of students from Villanova and other colleges turned out last Friday to hear Senator Strom Thurmond (Dem., S.C.) air his views on the controversial subject of the "muzzling of the military."

Martin McQuinn, President of the Student Council, began the night by introducing Bill Williams, chairman of the Conservative Club. Williams, after a short summary of what Strom Thurmond did before he became South Carolinas Democratic Senator, introduced the distinguished Senator.

Senator Thurmond began his talk by pointing out to the assemblage that this country had run deficit budgets for the majority of the past thirty years. But he also emphasized that the Soviet Union still could not match or stand up to the United States.

The Russians thrive on conformity and in Washington, says Senator Thurmond, there are those who seek to make the American society one of conformity. In the Soviet Union, the individual does not make any decisions. The state plans their entire life.

Another characteristic of the Soviet Union is that the state controls the military and so also, states Senator Thurmond, does the U. S. government control its military. The Senator then elaborated further on particular and ducumented instnces when U.S. military men had been censored in their speech.

Senator Thurmond commented further that some years ago military men wer encourged to tell in publicized seminars what they thought of the Soviet threat, but now they are tied to the Washington censor. In short, he stated that " the military is being given a back seat to a bunch of whiz kids." Further, these government censorers were not permitted to testify in front of the Senate commitee invesigating the muzzling of the military.

Student Congress Stages Finale; Executive Positions Appointed

Last Wednesday evening, May 8, the curtain fell upon the activities of the Student Council for another year. At the outset of the evening, Rev. Richard A. Appicci, OSA, Dean of Student Activities, was presented by the outgoing Congress with a tennis racquet and an assortment of tennis balls.

Various executive vice-presidents for the coming year were announced. Jim McErlane will be the Vice-President for Student Affairs, Neil Stoneback for Educational Affairs, and John Hagarty for Student Government. The new Parlimanterian, George McKeon, was also appointed.

Next in import at the meeting was the election of the Villanova officers of the National Federation of Catholic College Students. Terrence J. Cooney was named Senior Delegate by acclamation, as was Barbara Grubb, the Junior Delegate.

Under the general business of the evening, Maurice McCarthy spoke on spirit procedure. In the future, emphasis will be placed on inner. feeling over outward show.

The Field House will possibly be used for future rally rather than the Quad, and there will be special note placed on the functional men on campus.

Orientation for next year's freshmen was also mentioned with three important changes noted: a reception for the parents in the Dougherty Hall cafeteria; benediction for parents and sons; and cultural tours conducted by the Blue Key.

A request was made by Fr. Appicci that all campus organizations forward to him a listing of their new officers as soon as possible, so that a comprehensive directory could be published by September.

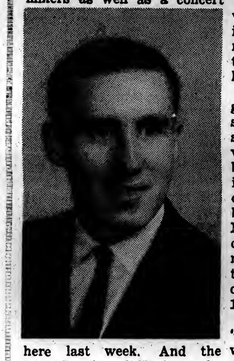
Neal Stoneback, Alumni Representative, reminded the seniors that a reception was being held for them on Wednesday, May 15. Refreshments will be served, and the affair will last until 7 p.m.

Acting on motions brought before it the Council unanimously passed a motion by Pat Mahady and Jim O'Conner concerning a proposed Student Directory. The Student Activities Committee will work on the motion's investigation and implementation.

At the same time a motion by Dennis Addonizio was roundly defeated. The motion called for a minimum average of 2.0 for participation in extra-curricular activities.

At the close of the meeting the delegates were given the opportunity of choosing the committees they wish to participate in next year.

Chairman Marty McGuinn brought the session to a close expressing the hope that all sixty-five members of the Council will do their utmost to make the 1963-64 year a success. He also threatened impeachment for any miscreant on the Council who didn't live up to the duties expected of him.



PORTRETTE

Riding The Crest

Currently riding the crest of the rising wave of jazz excitement on campus is senior Chris Clark, drummer and leader of the popular quintet named after him.

A four-year member of the University band, this avid musician from Philadelphia has been student conductor of the band for the past year.

His jazz quintet has played at numerous area college mixers as well as a concert here last week. And the smooth voice of Clark can be heard every Thursday evening on the 9:30 WWVU jazz spot.

Whereas all know of Chris' proficiency and interest in music, few realize that he is very much taken with writing closely related poems, some of which have appeared in various issues of the Lynx.

A company commander of the NROTC, Clark has recently been assigned to duty in the gunnery department of the USS Canberra, a guided missile cruiser.

Honored by his selection to Who's Who in American Universities and Colleges, Chris is still undecided on his long-range future plans. Music and the Navy, however, loom as his greatest hopes.

Concerning the band, the generally softspoken social studies major is quite outspoken: "This year the University marching and concert bands have experienced an improvement in the quality of their music. Under the baton of their new director, Mr. Joseph Colantonio, I am confident that an even more noticeable metamorphosis will take place between June and our first football contest of 1963.

"Our cherished sobriquet, 'the Pride of the Main Line,' will be reinforced by top quality performance next season and I only wish I could remain a part of this growing vehicle of favorable representation for Villanova."

English Major George Welch To Be Given Madaleva Medal

The Rev. John M. Quinn, moderator of the Lynx, has announced that senior English major, George Welch, will receive the Madaleva Memorial Medal for poetry.

The Madaleva Medal is awarded annually by the National Catholic Poetry Society of America to one student each from ten select Catholic colleges and universities. This is the first year that Villanova has been among the ten.

Welch will be presented the award by the Rev. Joseph J. Gildea, OSA, vice-president for Academic Affairs, at the senior commencement exercises on June 3. He is also to receive a one year subscription to Spirit Magazine, the Poetry Society's organ, wherein one of his poems will soon be published.

Any graduating senior who has had a poem printed in one of the eight issues of the Lynx published while he was in school was eligible for the medal.

The decision to award Welch the medal was made by a committee of the faculty and editorial board members of the Lynx.

McCarthy Given News Grant By Wall Street Journal Fund

Joseph A. McCarthy, a Junior Arts major at Villanova University, has been awarded a $500 scholarship grant, and assistance in finding a summer newspaper internship, by the Newspaper Fund, Inc. of the Wall Street Journal.

He was the second student from Villanova to be so honored in the past two years. Last year the editor-in-chief of the campus newspaper, Daniel G. Grove, participated in the program.

McCarthy is presently the ranking Sports Editor of the Villanovan and has participated in many of the other phases of publishing a college newspaper. He was also the Parliamentarian of the Villanova Student Council during the past year.

The program endeavors to give promising young men an opportunity to broaden their knowledge and experience in journalism. The $500 scholarship is granted to approximately 100 college students who complete the work program.

The internship program is designed for those who are interested in newspaper work as a career. Applicants accepted as Newspaper Fund interns will work in the newsrooms of participating newspapers.

VU's Marching Band To Increase Number, Improve Its Quality

Ross Anzaldi, President of the Villanova University Band, has announced the names of the officers for next year, along with some tentative plans of the band of 1963-64.

Anzaldi, a senior, will leave the office of president in the hands of Art Chappell. Other officers for next year's band include Joe Rink, vice-president; Vince Cardinal, secretary; George McKeon, Student Council representative; and John Calabria, student director and drum major.

Anzaldi predicts a sizeable increase in membership next year. Of the 44 students in the band, only four are seniors and will not return.

Joseph Colontonio will continue as band director. Mr. Colontonio is distinguished in having been one of the four directors in the United States who received an invitation to travel to Paris.

Mr. P. J. Dougherty and Mr. William Henry of the Finance and Genral Business Deparments respectively — are sponsoring a party to honor Fr. Barrett after his first year as Dean of theC & F Division. — Monday May 20 — 4:00 to 7:00 at the Conestaga Mill — (For the C & F faculty).

Chairman's Report

Year's Planning

by Marty McGuinn, Chairman, Student Congress

The first meeting of the 1963-1964 Student Congress was concerned primarily with plans for for the coming academic year. Three matters, revision of the constitution, spirit, and a lecture series, have been listed as business of the highest priority.

Members of a Constitutional Convention were named and charged with responsibility of making certain changes and bringing the document up to date, and then presenting it to the Congress for ratification late autumn.

Recognizing the recent lack of spirit at our athletic events, the duties of the Spirit Committee were assigned to Maurice McCarthy and Ken Cronin who will assume the lead in a concerted effort to overcome student apathy.

The past few years have seen few outstanding speakers on the Villanova campus, and this Student Council contends that the continuation of such a situation would be a gross remission in our duties.

Not only do we have certain service commitments to the student body, but as a University, we have a responsibility to the local community. Such a co-curricular endeavor will be in the form of a lecture series featuring top people. from a variety of fields.

The names of speakers will be announced in the fall by the committee, under co-chairmen Ed Coffey and Jach Hohenadel, and the series itself, will be titled after Edward A. Dwyer, an Augustinian and past college dean.

Grants Bestowed To Science Departments Of EE And Chemistry

The Electrical Engineering Department and the Chemistry Department of Villanova havo been awarded grants by the National Science Foundation for undergraduate instructional scientific equipment.

The Chemistry Department received a grant of $15,150 and the Electrical Engineering Department grant totaled $10,000.

The object of the program is to assist colleges and universities in the crucial task of meeting the nation's requirements for competent scientists and engineers. The grants are given on a matching fund basis. and are used for instructional equipment.

Commenting on the Chemistry Department grant, Dr. Bernard Downey, chairman, said the funds will be employed to complete modernization and make more adequate provision for chemistry laboratories for undergraduate students, primarily at the Junior and Senior level.

St. Mary's Seminary Expected To Be Finished By January

by Matt Roche

The new St. Mary's Seminary is expected to be completed on approximately January 1, 1964. The Very Reverend James A. Donnellon, OSA, broke ground at the dedication on September 10, 1961, commemorating 165 years of Augustinian service to America. The dire need for expansion is evidenced by the cramped, crowded condition in old St. Mary's Hall.

His Eminence, Richard Cardinal Cushing, Archbishop of Boston, commented on the Catholic motive: "The Augustinians trained . . . men to be saints as well as scholars; loyal citizens of the City of God as well as the City of Man."

The seminary will be constructed of granite, enriched by handsome limestone panels and carved limestone trim. The building will be topped by a spire, a traditional Villanova landmark.

Taking advantage of the natural slope of the land, the seminary will be three floors in height at the chapel end of the building and five floors at south end.

The auditorium's sloping floor and 252 seats will be ideal for lectures and oratorical classes.

Another wing will contain a recreation room, a hobby and repair shop, and a barber shop.

Also on the ground floor will be fully equipped laboratories, including a language laboratory, a sound proofed music practice room, a stock room for the library, a book store, and a mimeograph room.

The first floor will contain the chapel, classrooms, library, kitchen, dining room, and common room. The wing nearest to the chapel will be a priest-faculty residence.

The middle wing will consist of the common room and the wing nearest to the gymasium will be dining room. They will be joined on the inside by a long corridor and linked on the outside by covered cloistered walkways.

Stained glass windows will flood the three story nave with light and illuminate the 186 seminarian choir stalls and the 246 visitor pews.

The 176 private seminarian rooms will be located on the second and third floors.

These facilities will make the seminary a self-contained unit; or, as the Prior Provincial, Very Reverend Donnellon, OSA, wrote; "The seminary is our lifline to all our works of charity."

In the 1963-1964 Student Handbook the following statement will appear:

The grade N (incomplete) denotes work that is only partially completed. Until it is converted into a passing grade N is included in the average as if it were an F. It automatically becomes F within a month's time after the end of the term if the work is not completed by then. Without the approval of the professor, his department head, and his dean, no grade higher than C can replace the grade N.

Year-End Chemistry Awards To Be Given To Three Seniors

As the end of 1963 scholastic year approaches, various students are preparing to receive the chemistry awards.

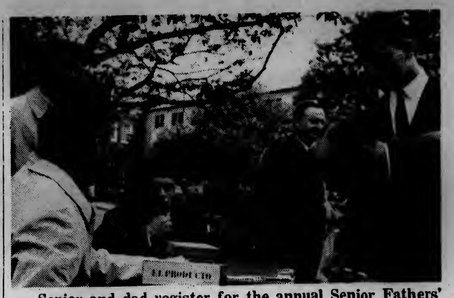
The three recipients of this year's major awards will be Christopher Uzelmeier, James Schmitz, and John Pio. All three students are seniors at their respective schools.

Christopher Uzelmeier of Case Institute of Technology will receive the American Chemical Society award which is presented by the Philadelphia section of the A.C.S.

To James Schmitz, from the University of Rochester will be awarded the American Institute of Chemists award. This is given by the Philadelphia chapter of the A.I.C.

John Pio of Syracuse University will receive the Merck award which is offered by Merck, Sharpe, and Dohme.

In addition to these awards, assistantships were granted to the following seven chemistry students who will graduate next month.



The recipients were Richard Brumbaugh of Ohio University, James Johnson of Seton Hall University, Robert Keil of Temple University, John Maroski of New Mexico Highlands University, as well as the three aformentioned students, John Pio, James Schmitz, and Christopher Uzelmeier.

Two other students who received assistantships were Joseph Donahue and John Brokars of Villanova University.

Golding Is Chosen As Next Year's Subject Of Literary Society

At a recent executive board meeting of the Literary Society, it was decided that a symposium on the contemporary British novelist, William Golding, would be held early in October.

The symposium, announced vice-president Frank Sauers, moderator of the Golding panel, will be the third in a series of symposia sponsored by the Society. The works of J. D. Salinger and the utopian novels of Aldous Huxley and George Orwell were discussed at the two meetings.

Belle Air Gets New Format Tucker Named 1964 Editor

The format of this year's Belle Air will be entirely different from that of any previous year. Photography is highly emphasized in this issue with the concentration on natural light and diffuse background themes.

One of the new features accented this year will be group shots of faculty; that is, the faculty members of each department are photographed together. In this way there has been a larger turnout for the photographs.

Along with the names of the faculty members will be a listing of their degrees, the schools from which they were received, and the years they have been at Villanova. On-location shots are also emphasized.

The Belle Air will be distributed to seniors only on Tuesday, May 14, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on the second floor of Dougherty Hall. They will be distributed to the underclassmen on May 15 and 16, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Richard Tucker, a junior political science major, was appointed to the post of editor-in-chief for the '64 Belle Air. Among the officers which Mr. Tucker appointed are: Robert Cardone, assistant editor; Donald Nicholas, business manager; Robert Williams, divisions editor; Tim Flanagan, fraternity and underclass editor; Particia Berry and Robert Stockinger, senior co-editors; Richard Carona, sports editor, and Richard Stoughton, photography editor.

The moderator of the Belle Air is Mr. Thomas Linahan of the Mathematics Department. This year's edition has been described by the newly appointed editor-in-chief, Dick Tucker, as one of the finest ever published.

A Final Comment

This issue of the Villanovan is the last of the current academic year, a year which has seen triumphs and failures for our weekly newspaper.

We consider among our achievements the publication of the first Villanovan to be printed in two colors, the most number of issues to come out on schedule and an increased coverage of major campus events.

Among those points which we will try to improve upon next year are the general style of writing and the coverage of over all campus events.

We hope that the student body has gained somewhat of an insight into the operation of the University through our weekly news media. If not perhaps it is the student's fault; perhaps it is ours.

We hope that our editorials have been interesting and provocative. However, the only true indication of the student body toward our editorial policy, and for that matter, toward the paper in general is the letter to the editor column.

Through these letters we can acquire an insight into how the student body is reacting to the paper.

The letters this year have, in general, been good, both in quantity and in quality. However, Considering the number of students and the number of publications, there were still potentially many more letters and comments which we could have received.

We hope that next year the student body will be more responsive in letting us know what they think of the Villanovan. Perhaps then we can improve our opus even more than in the past.

Counterpoint

Disinterest Is Uselessness

Frank J. Sauers

"We alone," said Pericles, "regard a man who takes no interest in public affairs, not as a harmless but as a useless character."

Interest in public affairs here at Villanova is being discouraged outright by a barrage of extra-curricular organizations with long names, short meetings, mediocre membership, and unusually unimaginative programs.

Worthwhile extra-curricular programs aimed at broadening the educational base of the student body largely have been lacking at Villanova this past year. Few prominent guest lecturers have been invited to the campus, and campus organization leaders have been discouraged by the poor attendance at the lectures that have been held.

Not So Dumb

Many have suggested a serious lack of effective communication between organizations and the student body and between organizations themselves, resulting in frequently conflicting lectures and meetings and a subsequent drop in attendance.

The 10:30 a.m. Thursday hour, when most organizations meet, has been sharply criticized as a factor that precludes an individual from becoming a worthwhile member of more than one organization.

Auallable Media

Certainly the existing means of promoting campus events, publications, etc. could be improved.

"Campus Calendar" if comprehensive and distributed widely can be immensely effective, as can the public service announcement service and bulletin boards, when used descriminately and with good taste. WWVU radio offers free time to campus organizations with something to say for special programs as well as publicity and has a regularly schedule "Calendar" program.

And the "Villanovan" also publishes announcements of upcoming events. But these media often have to go hunting for events to publicize. Either the leaders of campus organizations don't feel the publicity will help or they don't feel that the events are worth publicizing.

Perhaps the system used of placards placed near the Annex during election campaigns could be retained in a more limited way to publicize campus activities.

Preserve Our Unity

by Jan Dyroff

Today in the southern states of our Union we see a spectre that has not raised its ugly head for nearly a century, that of civil insurrection.

On one hand we have governors and other duly elected public officials, not to mention retired army generals, all of whom at one time or another have sworn to uphold and defend the Constitution, defying it.

On the other hand we see powerful minority groups and members of the lunatic fringe of the citizenry in almost as blatant defiance.

Noble Threesome

Count Lev Tolstoi, Mahatma Ghandi, and Jesus Christ all, it is felt, would have approved of passive resistance, but there is a limit. That limit has been more than reached in Birmingham and other areas.

What do the Negroes hope to gain by having their clothing torn away by high-pressure fire hoses, their arms and legs mauled by police dogs, and their children thrown into jail? This may be resistance, but how passive is it? How effective is it?

Instead of gaining prestige for the Negro, it only lowers it. Instead of benefitting the white, it degrades him and holds him up to the world-wide ridicule.

Strife

What is the source of this discontent? Of course, the obvious answer is that the strife comes about from long standing prejudices dating back to the Jamestown Colony days.

One little old lady was even brave enough to suggest that the Negroes bore the mark of Cain and hence would always cause trouble. But she went out with the KKK!

To no small degree the source of the current discontent might be laid on the doorstep of a certain Havana lawyer. There are at present Voice of America transmitters in Marathon, Florida, beaming anti-Communist propaganda into Cuba.

Two-Way Street

But it is a two-way street and there are equally powerful stations in Cuba returning quid pro quo with anti-American propaganda in English and aimed for the American Nergo.

A station called "Radio Free Dixie" is engaged in the pleasant task of stirring the Negro to open rebellion and to arm against the white-supremacists led by "America's answer to Adolf Eichmann, Bobby Kennedy.

The danger is there now. It is more real than it has ever been. We must preserve our unity, for a house that is divided against itself . . .

Villanova Merry-Go-Round

Radical Racism Rampant

by Michael A. Magro

Representative Adam Clayton Powell, (Dem., N.Y.), a Negro, stated before a congregation of the Washington Baptist Church on May 5 that unless full equality is given to the Negro community in Washington, D.C., the city will witness the "worst race riots in history."

Some months ago a race riot did explode at a high school football game in the city's new stadium. The situation in Washington has been described as critical. Racial troubles have been prevalent in the southern portion of the country. Oxford, Mississippi, and, more recently, Birmingham, Alabama, have been the scene of numerous racial demonstrations.

Martin Luther King

This increased agitation by the Negro communities of the country has been instigated largely by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and such "forthright" individuals as Martin Luther King.

The fact that the Negro is being deprived of his civil rights in many sections of the country cannot be denied. But are mass demonstrations, flagrant disregard for the law, and outright threats by the Negro, the only ways to accomplish this end? It would seem that the abuse of civil rights is no method to impress people that what the Negro needs is more rights, even though they are due him.

Needless to say, the Negro will gain some concessions from the employers in Birmingham as they have received in other cities which they have assaulted. But what of the temperament of the rest of the city? The Negro will have gained his goal for the present time.

But what of the future? Will the employer hire more Negroes? Will he keep a few Negroes on hand to satisfy the NAACP? What will be the relationship of the Negro to the rest of the people with whom he will work?

Danger, Danger

It is probably a good guess that the employer will hire no more than the token amount and turn away all others who apply without even evaluating them. It is also probable that the Negroes who are employed will stick together as a group within the organization and alienate themselves from the rest of the employees. This type of arrangement is a danger to the Negro as well as the employer.

To be in a society and to be a part of it are two different things. If the Negro is content to have civil rights at the expense of losing any hope of respect and co-existence with the white population, then racial demonstrations in every city is the answer. But if the Negro wishes to live as any other American in this nation, less violent action and more pressure along with co-operation with the authorities is the solution.

Of Prose And Non-Prose

by Paul DeMuro

The Spring Lynx is out and if you are taking time to read this article why don't you buy a copy and see—or should I say enjoy—it for yourself.

As in any review of this type it would be impossible to comment on every single contribution; yet in this edition there is much material worthy of praise.

Philip Phaul's "Of Fog . . . And Eggplant" should be listed as a prerequisite to all of the poetry in the Lynx. If definition of poetry, whatever it may be, is certainly not the negation of prose. That is to say that poetry is something more than non-prose. In addition to this, true poetry has to be something more than verse everything that rhymes is not poetry.

The Lynx abounds in non-prose poetry, i.e., "XX" by Dennis Maderos and "Barren Seeds" by Garrett V. Smith. It also has its share of verse—i.e., "Don't You Ever," by Peter Schmidt and George Welch's "A Gentle Rib."

Happily enough, however, the Lynx also has its poetry. Brian Daniel McCarthy's "Rising Late in Me" although not totally understandable definitely arouses poetical feelings in the reader.

Much the same can be said for Brian Gallagher's "Poet or Not." I find myself in the same position as Mr. Gallagher who doesn't know whether or not he is a poet; I don't know whether or not the poetry of the Lynx can be classified as actual poetry.

However poems such as Sallee Horhovitz' "Reflections on 'Sculptures for the Blind'", Mr. Welch's "A Quiet Light Memoriam," and Brian Gallagher's" Poet or Not" come closer to being poetry than any other of the so-called poetry in the Lynx.

Enough of poetry—Over all the fiction in this edition of the Lynx is good. Richard M. Seethaler in his "The Concrete Abyss" reminds us that twisted bodies can feel, love, and desire just as intensely as healthy ones. Frank Murphy's "Cigarettes" is a well constructed short story which holds the readers attention; read it and then tell me what you think cigarettes symbolize, or better yet, tell Frank.

The only story I didn't enjoy was E. Quentin's "The Man in Room Sixty-Five." Perhaps I have too much admiration for Nat King Cole's record of Nature Boy.

Always save the best to last—in my opinion Norm Harvey's "Quest" is just that—the best contribution on this edition of the Lynx. It's deceptively informal style never lets down throughout the whole piece. Norm cuts to the core the prototype of the campus intellectual.

Perhaps I enjoyed this story most because I have known Norm for four years, and I sympathize with the way he feels, but I suggest that you read the story and see if you don't sympathize with him too.

The two interviews in the Lynx neither add to nor subtract from the total worth of the magazine. I think the idea of personal interviews in the Lynx is valid but I would prefer to read the interviews of two people a little more controversial than Mrs. Carlisle and Mr. Williams—perhaps someone like Norman Mailer or Rev. Martin Luther King.

TILL WE MEET AGAIN

With today's installment I complete my ninth year of writing columns in your college newspaper for the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes. In view of the occasion, I hope I may be forgiven if I get a little misty.

These nine years have passed like nine minutes. In fact, I would not believe that so much time has gone by except that I have my wife nearby as a handy reference. When I started columning for Marlboros, she was a slip of a girl—supple as a reed and fair as the sunrise. Today she is gnarled, lumpy, and given to biting the postman. Still, I count myself lucky. Most of my friends who were married at the same time have wives who chase cars all day. I myself have never had this trouble and I attribute my good fortune to the fact that I have never struck my wife with my hand. I have always used a folded newspaper—even throughout the prolonged newspaper strike in New York. During this period I had the airmail edition of the Manchester Guardian flown in daily from England. I must confess, however, that it was not entirely satisfactory. The airmail edition of the Guardian is printed on paper so light and flimsy that it makes little or no impression when one slaps one's wife. Mine, in fact, thought it was some kind of game, and tore several pairs of my trousers.

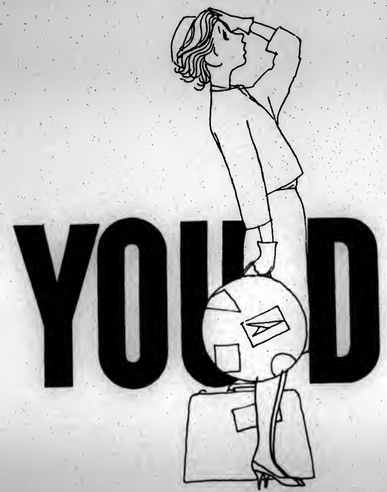
But I digress. I was saying what a pleasure it has been to write this column for the last nine years for the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes—a fine group of men, as anyone who has sampled their wares would suspect. They are as mellow as the aged tobaccos they blend. They are as pure as the white cellulose filter they have devised. They are loyal, true, companionable, and constant, and I have never for an instant wavered in my belief that some day they will pay me for these last nine years.

But working for the makers of Marlboro has not been the greatest of my pleasures over the last nine years. The chief satisfaction has been writing for you—the college population of America. It is a rare and lucky columnist who can find an audience so full of intelligence and verve. I would like very much to show my appreciation by asking you all over to my house for tea and oatmeal cookies, but there is no telling how many of you my wife would bite.

For many of you this is the last year of college. This is especially true for seniors. To those I extend my heartfelt wishes that you will find the world outside a happy valley. To juniors I extend my heartfelt wishes that you will become seniors. To sophomores I extend my heartfelt wishes that you will become juniors. To freshmen I extend my heartfelt wishes that you will become sophomores. To those of you going on into graduate school I extend my heartfelt wishes that you will marry money.



To all of you let me say one thing: during the year I have been frivolous and funny during the past year—possibly less often than I have imagined—but the time has now come for some serious talk. Whatever your status, whatever your plans, I hope that success will attend your ventures.

Stay happy. Stay loose.

We, the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes, confess to more than a few nervous moments during the nine years we have sponsored this uninhibited and uncensored column. But in the main, we have had fun and so, we hope, have you. Let us add our good wishes to Old Max's: stay happy; stay loose.

Complaints Remain Most Effective Way To Get Things Done

by John Roberts

Has the young generation of today lost the ability to express its displeasure with a situation? No one seems to use the standard means for the expression of dissatisfaction anymore — the complaint.

This effective and time honored means of correcting a difficulty seems all but forgotten. People are no longer willing to stand up and speak out for what they think is right.

Too many of us today, when we are taken advantage of, mildly abused, or just plain treated unfairly, merely accept it.

Complaint stimulates action, action often merited; but without the complaint to instigate the action, the situation will never change.

How many times have you heard or seen something which did not meet with your approval and remarked that you were going to write your Congressman or so-and-so about that. Its better than even money that you never wrote.

Recently I had the experience in a local eating establishment of being served an end piece of cake which was cut very small and in such a manner that it amounted to not much more than a plate of crumbs with an excessive amount of frosting.

To me this was very unappetizing, yet, when I informed the waitress that I didn't want the piece of cake she became angry and offended. What ever happened to the old business axiom that the customer is always right?

¾ Cup Coffee

I recently heard of a restaurant manager who told all of his waitresses to fill coffee cups no closer than an inch from the top. This was, in actuality, a ¾ cup of coffee, but it stimulated very few complaints from customers and subsequently, in the course of a year, his savings on coffee ran into four figures.

The point here is that the menu stated the price for one "cup of coffee", meaning that the cup would be filled as close to the top as was practical and reasonable. Yet, when customers did not receive this, most said nothing.

The fact that all of these people were cheated out of a small amount of coffee meant little to them and is insignificant until all of these people are taken collectively.

Then this multitude of small savings represent a substantial amount of money which was cheated out of customers.

A or B Tops

Another case closer to home is the teacher who refuses to conform to the University's grading system. In effect, this destroy the university's grading system because to this teacher a grade of D+ is average. This may be his way of doing things but his student may find it hard to explain this to a prospective employer.

Yet, we continue to be gypped, cheated and abused without uttering a complaint! Let's stop being martyrs and start complaining when its necessary!

Book Review

No Kudos For J. D. S.

by Bill McCloskey

"Jerry is very good at hanging people on things,' says J. D. Salinger's brother-in-law.

And, so, the author who went to school just down the block from Villanova has endowed the most hung generation ever, ours, with a new testament (Vol.II), to go along with the Genesis of Catcher In The Rye.

The new offering voiced by Buddy Glass, Salinger's alterego, is a hard backed edition of two not so very recent excerpts from the New Yorker, Raise High the Roofbeams, Carpenters and Seymour, and Introduction.

Both of the offerings take a long look at Seymour, the most revered and eldest son of Les and Bessie Glass. In the first tale he is verbally hacked by relatives of a girl he has left standing at the altar. He is absolved at the end, when it is learned that the pair have eloped.

In the second part S. is virtually canonized by brother Buddy, who catalogs him in a painfully slow way that is reminiscent of a high schooler padding a composition that has to be 350 words.

The finished product proves that his autumn would never measure up to the Kennedy standards, except possibly the verbiage necessary to say little or nothing.

Promising something new, soon, Salinger has not allowed spokesman Buddy to unhang Believers, regarding Seymour's surfside suicide. Comment is limited to cryptic musing on Buddy's part: "If suicide isn't top on the list of compelling infirmitics for creative men . . ." This statement leaves some wondering about the possibility of Salinger's own (as TIME so aptly puts it) "martyrdom."

Presumably the next offering from Cornish, N.H.'s most publicized recluse will be something new. Salinger has lived in his block house on a fabulous collection of royalties from our pockets since 1959.

That was the year he first published, for his readers and analysts (he feels there is a difference), Seymour, an Introduction, to analyze the elder Glass, whose own suicidal shot shattered the Glass idol at age 31.

Looking into the Glass ball of the future we see, still unrattled, the Cages of Waker Glass, a Catholic monk; Walter Glass, who, after World War II, gave his mother an opportunity to join the Gold Star Mothers, and Boo Boo who has given Bessie the chance to be a grandmother.

These are alledgedly next on the rostrum as Salinger takes advantage of what is looking more and more like a freak start. It is doubtful that he will ever the Salinger that portrayed Holden Caulfield in Catcher.

Villanovans Salute Blind Bud Kennedy As Courageous Student

by Joe McGill

Many men are praised for courage and high spirit in events through their college life. Many others, however, are unfortunately ignored or only passively recognized for certain deeds of menit.

At Villanova this situation is apparent. We honor athletes, scholars, and other students in various ways. Yet, in our midst are students who are only partially recognized for their outstanding determination. In using one student as a symbol we would like to make known the high spirit and resolution displayed by these Villanovans.

William "Bud" Kennedy is an intelligent, good-natured senior who has been blind since birth. Bud, however, like other students with physical limitations, has not allowed this defect to hamper him in his pursuit of normal school life.

This student is at Villanova as a National Merit Scholarship Winner from North Catholic where he graduated eighth in his high school class. He is now studying Math.

Without assistance Bud walks throughout the campus to all his classes. His astounding mobility is the result of unusually-sensitive ears and highly-developed memory.

Bud, who frequently dates, can be seen at most school functions, including dances. Besides attending school activities, he also plays certain sports. His friends say he excels at shuffleboard and also wrestles and plays miniature golf.

Bud manages a baseball team after school for which he recently received an award as the "Student Coach of the Year" from the Sandlot Baseball Association.

This truly amazing individual has been isolated as a symbol of the courage displayed by handicapped people on our campus.

They are certainly aware of their difficulty, but firmly and resolutely strive to surmount the obstacles in defense of their as human beings. They are indeed deserving of a salute for courage.

The Rising Curtain

Last Look At Past Productions

by Paul Norton

"Here we go 'round again . . ." Back to that old bone of contention of what is wrong with campus theater. Well, I'll tell you what is wrong! It's too traditional—too avant garde. It's too slapstick—too subtle. It's too noisy.. too quiet. See what I mean?

Graduate and undergraduate theater at Villanova has had an interesting and varied year. We started in a barroom and wound up with the Nazi army tying for position with Dogpatch-type moonshiners.

Looking over the year piece by piece, we emerge under a potporri of good shows, bad acting; bad shows, good acting; hard seats, stuffy rooms and Vasey Hall—above all, Vasey Hall. In reality, though, things weren't all bad. Actually there were many bright spots.

First Production

The truth or consequences atmosphere of Vasey Hall with its built-in ventilation and callous-raising seats held William Saroyan's Time of Your Life back in the fall.

This production gave us fluctuating moments of emotional impact portrayed by a montage of individual characterizations. Ken Resinski and Jeanne Burke were the highlights of the show.

In the early spring, Belle Masque presented a loud and slapstick rendition of Moliere's The Imaginary Invalid. The show was lively and an interesting cast headed by Jim Mason kept the action moving. Unfortunately, some of the subtlety was lost in removing the script from its usual formalized presentation.

Graduate Theater

The Graduate Theater Department opened the year with Jean Giradoux's The Enchanted. The technical aspects of the production held up some of the weightier lines as did a warm and convincing performance by Chris Assini. Needless to say, its overall effect was emptied on Vasey Hall.

Come the New Year and Villanovans had a chance to see theater-in-the-round with the construction of the new Playbox in the Classroom Annex. After its initial South Seas island production of Kataki, one wondered if it should have been renamed the Sandbox. Children playthings, however, did not concern the directors, Richard Duprey and George Herman, as they managed to round out the serious dramatic season with a selection of sophisticated dramas.

Three Playbox Shows

The first, the aforementioned Kataki, was a difficult piece of theater, well acted by Richard Harshberger and David Rabe. This two man show was well adapted to the close quarters of the Playbox.

The next show was George Bernard Shaw's Don Juan in Hell. Although reasonably well acted, it proved too wordy and became a sleeper in the end.

Bertolt Brecht's The Private Life of the Master Race closed the year with an intresting array of vignettes about Nazi life. Carol Schmenkel and Wendy Sommerville, both Rosemont imports, gave mature and poised performances.

The whole production promises exciting things come for next year. This type of play could open new door for the students involved in working on these shows as well as for those students who witness them.

This year's Turf and Tinsel show, Jessica James, was funny, in parts, but it lacked that magic which a stronger book and a more coordinated cast could have provided.

So, that's the year! The outlook for the future, though, is good and with the gradual erodus from Vasey Hall and each year bringin us closer to an honest-to-goodness theater, things are definitely on the upswing.

Does a man really take unfair advantage of women when he uses Mennen Skin Bracer?

All depends on why he uses it.

Most men simply think Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the best after-shave lotion around. Because it cools rather than burns. Because it helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Because it helps prevent blemishes.

So who can blame them if Bracer's crisp, long-lasting aroma just happens to affect women so remarkably?

Of course, some men may use Mennen Skin Bracer because of this effect.

How intelligent!

CAMPUS NEWS BRIEFS

The Mendel Bulletin, the Undergraduate Science Publication of Villanova will be available tomorrow, May 16.

This year, under the editorship of Charles Butler, a senior pre-med student, the issue is the longest and most complete to be produced since its resumption after World War II. It consists of fourteen articles and a total length of 84 pages.

Assisting Mr. Butler in this publication is Joseph Leone as associate editor; Charles Myer as business editor; Adam Myers as circulation editor; and Peter Arquin as photographer.

Special mention should be allotted to the moderator, Dr. John A. McClain, Chairman of the Biology Department. Because of the preponderance of research in biology, 13 of the 14 articles are concerned with biology. The other deals with chemistry.

The Political Science Department announced that Dr. Fritz Nova has been granted a scholarship by the Inter-University Committee on Israel.

The award will consist of a 28 day study tour through the biblical and historical sites of Israel. During the last week the partakers will be enrolled as seminar students in the Hebrew University. The return trip will be via Paris and Rome.

Special study will be of the Israel government institiutions and meetings are scheduled with government leaders. An inspection of the community farms, hospitals, universities, and the new harbor at the Red Sea will also be conducted.

Dr. Nova's trip is being made possible by the university's releasing him from his summer duties.

Thurmond Speaks To Assembly On Controversial "Muzzling"

military muzzling, Senate Thurmond lapsed into a discourse on U. S. foreign policy in relation to the Soviet Union. Our relations with the Russians, stated the Senator, has been one of containment, evolution and escalation." He went on to elaborate on just what he meant by these terms.

Disarmament; on-Sight Inspection

On the subject of nuclear disarmament, he stated that it is nearly an impossibility without on-sight inspections. These inspections would have to be frequent and the three or five now proposed would be entirely too little.

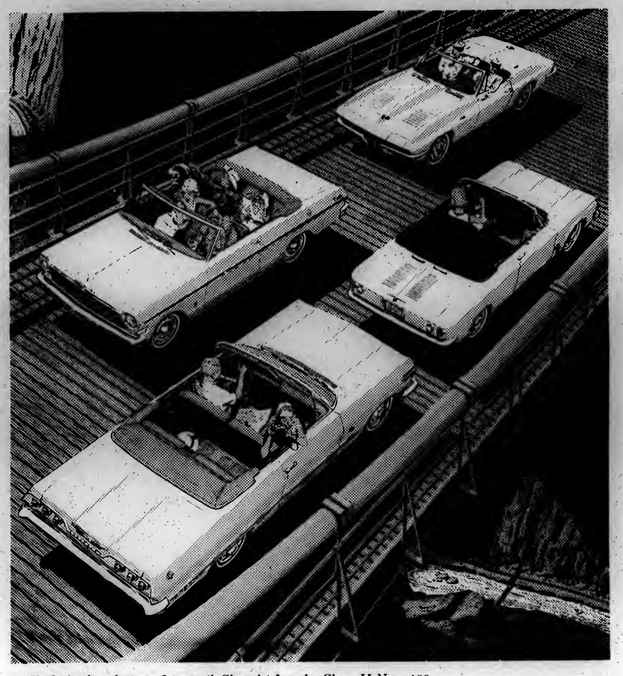
Senator Thurmond also stated that we should give the Russians a certain amount of time to get out of Cuba and if they don't comply, then we should cease diplomatic relations with them.

Toward the end of his talk the Senator again turned briefly to the subject of the muzzling of the military. Following his speech, which was received well by those attending, Senator Thurmond only had time to answer two questions. He then thanked the audience and said a few words of encouragement to those students who are thinking of politics as a career.

Simpson Hall Prowler Pursued By Students Through Parking Lot

A prowler, lurking about Simpson Hall at 3 a.m. on May 9 was forced to abandon his interests by a few alert Villanovans led by Don Hazen.

Hazen summoned three fellow students; Mike O'Neil, Brian O'Neil, and Jim Portock.



They confronted and chased the culprit to the rear of the university parking lot. Brian O'Neil returned to summon the Radnod Police, while the others continued chasing the suspect into the woods.

The searchers covered the wooded area and found no trace of the prowler. Radnor Police Seargent William Cody stated that under the conditions created by the thick wooded area darkness, it would be impossible to find the man.

Summer's coming, get going!

If this isn't a great time to get yourself a new Chevrolet—well, we just don't know when is. Why, you'd almost have to be anti-summer not to let one of these four convertibles get to you. Or any of Chevrolet's sedans, wagons, sport coupes and sport sedans, for that matter.

And there are a lot of other buy-now reasons besides the season. Like the carefree feeling you get on a long vacation trip in a brand-new car. And it's a smart time to trade, what with your Chevrolet dealer all stocked up for a busy summer. Chances are, he has just the model and color you want—be it Chevrolet, Chevy II, Corvair or Corvette—ready to go right now.

So maybe now you're all wound up? Then spring into summer at your Chevrolet dealer's.

New Reading Courses Begin In September For Honor Students

Dr. W. Porter Swift, Director of the testing of the Psychological Services office, has announced the courses which will be offered next year. A reading and study improvement course and the Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics course will start in September.

The first was formerly two separate courses; the new course will have the advantage of running two days longer. It will stress improved speech of comprehension, study habits, and ability.

Beginning Monday, September 30, the reading and study improvement course will run for ten weeks, twice a week. The sections and times are Section A, Monday and Thursday at 10:30 p.m. and Section B, Tuesday and Thursday at 1:30 p.m.

The Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics course is open only to those students on the Dean's List, in addition to those who have received special permission. This course stresses development of speed as well as comprehension.

These courses are free, noncredited, and open only to undergraduates.

Four Years -- Famine To Harvest

by Larry Everling

Four years ago there were apprehensions concerning the future of Villanova athletics. The football team had a disastrous 1-9 record and the basketball squad, although 20-6 overall, had a penchant to drop the 'big ones.'

Only the baseball and track teams continued their winning traditions. The 'minor' sports languished in the squalor of inattention. Apathy among the student body was the rule rather than the exception.

Policies needed to be changed and definite goals with capable coaching and an Athletic Council featuring sports minded members were the outcome.

Resurgence

Since that bleak period, sports at VU have become much more than an afterthought. Football is now on a par with any non-state supported school in the East. Basketball has risen and will rise even higher with the 'big ones' now won.

Track could hardly be better, and baseball is holding its own. Those so-called 'minor' sports are quickly reaching 'major' status.

Swimming, bowling, rifle and rugby especially have grown enormously. Spirit has become a by-word and attendance is ever increasing.

Fall

Former Wildcat end, Alex Bell, and a great coaching staff took a talented but uninspired group of ballplayers three years ago and made them a good football team. Utilizing a wing 'T' offense and a two unit system, quarterbacked by Richie Richman and Ted Aceto, the Cats became an independent powerhouse.

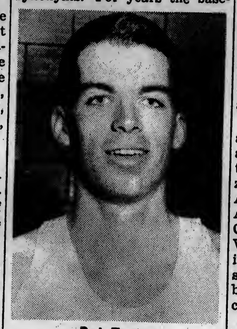
Back to back bowl bids make any career. The great Sun Bowl win and the heartbreaking loss at the Liberty Bowl can always be remembered with pride.

The individual stars were made by the team but who will forget Larry Glueck, Billy Joe, Lou Rettino and Charley Johnson. The following players made these shine: Armstrong, Barbaro, Buben, Calligaris, Ceppetelli, Cutroneo, DeLone, Kowalski, Kropke, Merenda, and Reinoso.



Spring

As usual, coaches 'Jumbo' Elliott and Jim Tuppeny have developed the top-notch talent of their recruiting machine to late season peaks and IC4A titles. Last spring was especially successful as the cindermen won the IC4A Outdoor title and came in second in the NCAA meet.

Pat Traynor has been the outstanding distance runner on the squad for the last three years. His national record in the steeplechase is an amazing feat when you consider the serious neck injury which he had to overcome due to an accident.

Owen Maguire, Jim Purcell, Al Jackman, Doug Kerr and Charlie Hammock each have added to the lustrous stature of Villanova track.

Baseball and Art Mahan are synonyms. For years the baseball team at Villanova has been a strong asset to the athletic program. Pete Connors, Jack Lynch, Mike Kiley and Wayne Walz represent the class of '63. Also there is some guy named Richman who looks like a bonus prospect. While this year's club is playing about .500 ball, in two of our four years here we won the City title and went to the NCAA regionals.

This recapitulation wouldn't be complete without praising the 'forgotten' sports of Lacrosse, Bowling, Hockey, Swimming and Rugby. Luke St. Onge in Rugby and Al Hicks in Swimming have emerged over the last four years as outstanding competitors.

The overall improvement in athletics reflects the initiation of a practical policy necessary to the success story of any organization. Under the guidance of Art Mahan as Director of Athletics and Father Curran as Chairman of the Athletic Board, Villanova has continued to grow in the eyes of the rest of the sports world as an institution to be reckoned with on any field of competition.

To add a personal touch to this resume, we would like to single out as the outstanding student-athletes Richie Richman and Pat Traynor. They combine the three great assets of scholars, gentlemen and athletes necessary for any ideal man.

Wildcat Sports Roundup

By Jack Duffy and Jim McGarvey

Basketball

The overall picture of Villanova basketball for the past four years, indeed for quite a while now, has ranged from good to excellent. But more recently, it has also been one of changing faces.

Only one of many Wildcat ballplayers has been with the team for all four years, Guard Jim O'Brien. The only other familiar faces belong to Trainer Jake Nevins and managers Denny Corcoran and Jack Duffy.

The most significant change was the retirement of the silver tongue orator, Al Severance, and the subsequent appointment of Jack Kraft as Head Coach. Severance called it a career only after 25 years and 416 victories.

.702 Percentage

Kraft after two seasons as mentor now has one-tenth of his total with a 40-17 won loss record. The past two years have also seen Villanova in the national limelight with NCAA and NIT bids.

And in 1960, Severance guided the team to a 20-6 state and a another bid to the National Invitational Tournament. There, they defeated Detroit and lost to Utah State in the second round.

A year later the scene was mediocre but nonetheless they managed to defeat such tournament teams as Detroit and West Virginia. But it was the 1961-62 squad that electified the Palestra and the nation with a 21-7 record, a 16-0 record at home, the Big-Five title, and the finals of the Eastern NCAA Tournament.

This past season at the halfway mark the 'Cats were 6-6 and apparently headed nowhere in particular. But then under the guidance of Jack Kraft, his two sophomore starters, jelled and the final count was won out the last 15 games.

This finish garnered the Main Liners a bid to the National Invitational Tournament in New York. Once on the boards of Madison Square Garden, the 'Cats ran off two straight victories, one over Wichita (ranked sixth nationally) and into the semi-finals where Canisius and Marquette proved to be difficult obstacles to overcome.

To pick an All-Villanova is difficult. But Jones and White are shoe-ins with George Leftwich the third choice because of his brilliant play with both.

LaCrosse

In the late spring of 1960, the Villanova Lacrosse Club formed and had its first game. The '61 and '62 seasons each had a schedule of six games, and while only winning two of these games, the scores were not indicative of the team effort displayed by the members. The team's perseverance finally paid off, as this year's squad hit paydirt with a record of six and five.

Led by Captain Gene Melcher, the stickmen got the season off to a good start by defeating Georgetown 14 to 4. In next three frays, the Blue and White bowed to Bowdoin College, C.W. Post College, and Bucknell.

Four Straight

But with the team at full strength, they handily copped the next four games against Cattonsville, University of Pennsylvania's "B" team, Fairleigh Dickinson University, and Dickinson College.

Franklin and Marshall College and Nichols College of Massachusetts nipped the 'Cats in two close contests.

Dunn Praised

Jack Smythe, the competent mentor of team, picked Dave Dunn as the best all-around player. Bill White, Mike Sweeney, and Mike Shepard were the high scorers for the season.

Jim Burke is the Bob Cousy of this club with the highest number of those little-noticed, but highly-appreciated assists. Goalie Jack Wehrum did an outstanding job this year defending himself and the goal against the onslaughts of the hard-rubber white ball.

Graduating this June are Gene Melcher, Jim Burke, and Charlie Roberts.

'Cat Mermen Complete Year With 4 Named All-American

by Jim McGarvy

A little praise and respect is now due Villanovan who has four All-Americans on his squad and a Pan Am gold medal winner.

This man should receive a bit more credit than the other Wildcat coaches, mainly because no scholarship bonus babies are over handed to him. He works with boys who are almost as dedicated as he is, boys who practice assidusly with no scholarships attached.

This portly mentor is none other than Ed Geisz, Villanova swimming coach. His assistant, Jack Lumsden is also worthy of plaudits.

Eight-Two Record

Both have piloted the Wildcat mermen to a winning record of eight wins and two losses this year. Lossing only to Yale and Army, the team handily trounced West Chester, the University of Pennsylvania, N.Y.U., American University, LaSalle, Lafayette, Rutgers and Navy.

Besides the outsanding record during the regular season, they were carried to national prominence at NCAA championships, held at North Carolina State College.

In this meet, Jack Geoghegan, Rick Girdler, Dick McDonough, and Paul Winn earned for themselves the highly-coveted title of All-American by placing third in the 400 yard freestyle relay with a time of 3:14.4 The team, as a whole, did well, gaining seventh place in the nation.

Pan-Am Games

Dick McDonough put the finishing touches by representing the United States in the Pan American Games at Sao Paulo, Brazil. He won a gold medal by swimming on the winning 800 meter relay team.

Setting new records is commonplace for McDonough. He has set eight new records during the season against stiff competition.

Mr. Geisz had the following comments to make about this year's team: "I do not know of any team in the country who would at its own expense and time stay at school between semesters to work out."

Two Workouts

"Let's face it, our boys for the most part are inexperienced and do not have help like other schools. They do have intestinal fortitude enough to make up for this inexperience by extra hard work and fight. Result: we are termed a power in swimming." Incidentally, both squads work out twice a day at 7:00 a m and 3:00 p m.

Three senior members, Jim Grimm, Al Hicks, and Al Nencetti deserve applause for their loyalty and leadership. Led by co-captain, Dick McDonough and Jack Geoghegan, next year promises even better results.

OPPORTUNITY. . .

One of the nation's leading department store organizations, in the midst of a dynamic expansion program, will be opening other new stores in each of the next two years. This rapid growth has created a number of outstanding career opportunities in merchandising management for well-qualified college graduates.

Wilcat second baseman, Tom Marziaz, vainly tries to tag out a LaSalle baserunner but ball can be seen dropping to the ground. Error, however, proved meaningless as the 'Cats trounced the Explorers in a City-Series clash 13-9. Shortstop Jack Lynch backs up the play.

Diamond Squad Takes Two Victories During Three Nip And Tuck Contests

by Dennis Gildea

Villanova's baseball club was involved in three nip and tuck contests this past week, and they came out victorious in two of the the battles. Scranton and LaSalle fell to the Wildcats, but Seton Hall was once again too much for the Villanovans.

The week's activities bring the Mainliner's season mark to 11-9. Only three more games remain on the schedule with Delaware slated for tomorrow, being the lone home attraction.

Rally Sinks Scranton

Bill Smith fired the full nine innings to gain a hard-earned 6-5 decision over the invading University of Scranton nine.

Two Scranton home runs provided the Royals with a 5-2 bulge in the last inning, and it looked like curtains for the Wildcats. However, with Tom Marziaz and Jack Lynch on second and third, Bob Hall rose to the occasion by singling to right scoring both runners.

Richie Richman followed this up with a double advancing Hall to third. After Mike Zaia was given an intentional pass, Mike Kiley smashed a liner down the right field line which brought Hall and Richman home with the winning tallies.

Cats Dump Explorers

The hits really exploded from the Villanova bats Friday as they unleashed an eighteen hit attack to down LaSalle 16-9. The Mainliners needed all the hits they could get as their Big Five rivals put the pressure on early in the contest.

In the fourth frame the Explorers had built up a 5-0 lead. Then the Cats put on their batting shoes and blasted four runs across in their half of the fifth.

At this point Coach Art Mahan called on senior Wayne Walz to come in to put down the LaSalle attack. Walz came through beautifully, and he was backed by a twelve run binge to win it.

Pirates Slam Wildcats

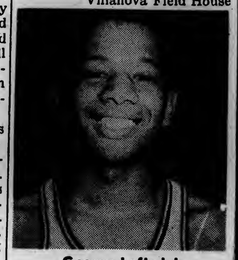
Seton Hall moundsmen Bill Henry and Larry Falcon held VU to three hits on Saturday afternoon, and they all came in the first inning. Marziaz, Lynch and Richman were responsible for the blows which brought in two runs.

After this the game was all Seton Hall. A double and single in the last frame proved to be the fatal blows to pitcher Vic Majewski as the Pirates eked out a 4-3 victory.

Basketball Slate Highlighted By Invite To ECAC Tournament

by Joe McCarthy

Villanova Sports Publicist, Ken Mugler, today announced the completion of the 1963-64 varsity basketball schedule. The feature attraction of the new schedule is the appearance of the hardcourt quintet in Madison Square Garden for the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference Christmas Festival.



Of the twenty-five contests, twelve are scheduled for enemy courts, nine for the Palestra, and four for the University Field House. The opening contest will be against the Ivy League defending champion, Princeton, in Princeton New Jersey on December 4, a Wednesday evening.

Included in the three months of competition are the four City Series games against Penn, LaSalle, St. Joseph's and Temple. The 'Cats will also play squads from Niagara, Xavier, St. Bonaventure, Canisius, and Marquette, each of whom participated in post season tournaments this year.

Slated to return to action for the Wildcats are Senior Wally Jones, Junior Jim Washington, Junior Eric Erickson and Junior George Leftwich, who will make his debut after a season of inactivity due to a post season injury. The other starting position appears up for grabs.

Coach Jack Kraft can also boost of depth next season when he assumes charge over last year's freshmen. The frosh in their initial encounter with collegiate ball, closed the season with a 10-2 record and the City-Series title.

Everling Named Outstanding Senior Intramural Athlete

By Roy Baron

The announcement of the outstanding intramural athlete and the appointment of next year's Intramural Council officers were made last week by Intramural Director Mr. Edward Geisz.

Larry Everling

Larry Everling was named outstanding athlete. This award is given annually to a senior who has distinguished himself in intramural athletics for four years.

Everling merits this award on the basis of captaining the Rejects to two straight football titles. He also has led an unbeaten softball team, the U.S. Bonds of the 4:30 Mendel league, into the playoffs.

Bob "Bulldog" Shayer has been appointed President of the Intramural Council for the coming year. His chief assistant will be Raymond Curran, the Commissioner of Sports.

Also appointed were five student directors. They are Paul Schmidt, Charles O'Reilly, Phil Gormley, Jack Peters, and Jim Murphy.

In preparation for the first intramural activity in the fall, Muff Day, John Graziano has been appointed director of the soph team. The incoming freshmen will be organized by John Fenlon and Robert Biese.

The Class of '66 will be looking to avenge the defeat suffered at the hands of the Class of '65 last fall. The afternoon of sports activities is scheduled for Monday, September 23.

Softball playoffs will begin this Thursday, May 16. The eliminations will continue the following day, Friday, and on Monday, May 20, and Wednesday, May 22. The Playmates, the 65ers, and the Drama Boys are the qualifying teams from the 3:20 Austin league.

The Blades, the Alumni Aces and a third team yet to be named will be the representatives from the 4:30 Austin league.

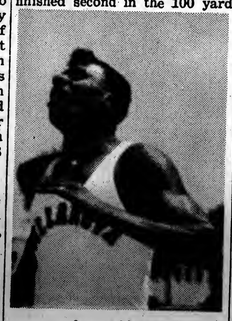
From the 4:30 Mendel league, Phi Kappa Pi, the Cobbies, and the U.S. Bonds have qualified. Only two of the three berths om the 4:30 Simpson leagu had been filled at this writing.

'Extra Margin' Vanquishes Quantico In Closely Contested Track Battle

by Tom Bruderle

A well-known cigarette company uses the phrase "an extra margin" in its advertising. Villanova's track team could well have borrowed these three words as they defeated the Quantico Marines before 2000 fans at Villanova Stadium last Saturday.

Going into the final event of the day, the mile relay, Quantico held a 73-70 lead. As the relay went on, it began to look as if the Marines were going to get these final five points. Don Webster, anchoring Villanova's all-soph quartet, took the baton from Noel Carroll and found himself five yards behind former Big Eight Champion Jim Heath despite Carroll's fine :46.8 quarter.



Close Battle

Both men battled it out for the entire 440 yards with the lead going back and forth. Finally, Webster won the event by an "extra margin" of a few scant inches. Identical 3:11.2 times were turned in by both teams.

Earlier in the afternoon, Webster won the 220 and the 440 with times of :21.5 and :47.4, respectively. Larry Livers won the high jump with a 6' 1" effort and won the 120 and 440 hurdles with times of :14.7 and :53.6. Charlie Hammock and Al Jackman both finished second in the 120 and 440 hurdles.

Pat Traynor, as usual, turned in two fine performances as he won both the 3000 meter steeplechase (9:10.7) and the two mile run (9:05.8). Soph Dave Hyland finished third in the former race while Vic Zwolak and former Villanovan Allen Breckenridge finished second and third in the latter event. Bill Bills won the mile with a 4:09.9 and was followed by Tom Sullivan and Zwolak.

In addition to leading off the mile relay, Marshall Uzzle finished second in the 100 yard dash and third in the 220. In other events, Doug Kerr and George Reynolds finished second and third the javelin and Dick Ambron placed third in the broad jump.

Noel Carroll's good 1:50.3 won the 880 and Jim Orr came in third. In the hop-step and jump, Jim Purcell placed third and Rolando Cruz won the pole vault with a catapult of 15' 8¾". This Saturday, Villanova meets St. Joseph's at the City Line campus.

The IC4A Championships will held on May 31 and June 1 at Randall 's Island, N. Y. It is still too early for assistant Coach Jim Tuppeny to name the participants and their events for Villanova since he would like to see the results of Saturday against the Hawks. Nevertheless, he does have a tentative starting lineup that could change at any time.

Doug Kerr and George Reynolds will probably toss the javelin and Larry Livers could be in high jump, 120 high hurdles or 440 low hurdles. Al Jackman and Charlie Hammock will probably be entered in the hurdles. Any one of the mile relay team could see action in the 440, but the nod will probably go to Don Webster.

In the mile, Tom Sullivan, Vic Zwolak, or Pat Traynor will run, but it seems likely that it will be the former two. Traynor is the IC4A champ in the 3000 meter steeplechase and, in addition to possibly another race would defend his championship. Dave Hyland could also see action in one of the long distance events. In the 880 it looks to be Noel Carroll.

Rolando Cruz will be in the pole vault, and it isn't unlikely that he'll do 16 feet. At this time, the mile relay team will be Uzzle, Stan Kozlowski, Carroll and Webster. Coach Tuppeny was very pleased with this quartet's performance last Saturday against Quantico and they should be at or approaching their peak.

Catholic Clergymen Hold Vatican Talks In Lecture Series

Three Catholic clergymen distinguished by their studies or experience to speak about separate phases of the Second Vatican Council participated in the fourth annual series of lectures on the afternoons of July 16, 17 and 18. In conjunction with the overall theme "The University Scholar and the Christian Tradition" Reverend Maurice B. Schepers, O.P., Professor of Ecclesiology at the Catholic University of America took the scholarly approach by discussing "Some Aspects of the Nature and History of Church Councils."

Council to Schism

Introduced by Reverend Louis A. Rongione, O.S.A., Librarian, who appropriately referred to the slogan "E Pluribus Unum" (One Out of Many), Father Schepers said that a study of the councils is "a practical necessity." The greater part of his explanation showed the relationship of a council to schism. When a person or group of persons 'go it alone', he said, "it is not necessarily violent; it can be ominously quiet."

He referred to Pope Pius XII in discussing where unity resides. Our Holy Father said that the unity of the Church transcends all; every member retains his independence because of his personality. Within the dogma of the Mystical Body all have meaning for each other.

Then Father asked, "How does the Holy Spirit produce this unity? He then explained the relationship of the Pope and Bishops who "are not delegates of a local church."

In the Question and Answer period Father's reply to a request regarding changes in religious life was that in the future religious will be put more at the "disposal of the Church."

The Most Reverend Francis J. Furey D.D., Auxiliary Bishop of Philadelphia, was introduced by the very Rev. John A. Klekotka, O.S.A., President of the University. Bishop Furey has served as president of a college, director of a seminary, and pastor of a parish previous to his appointment to the episcopacy. Having actually attended the opening session of the Second Vatican Council he was eminently qualified to give the practical side of the meetings.

Most Rev. Francis J. Furey, Auxiliary Bishop of Phila. (extreme left), principal speaker for a Vatican Council Seminar at Villanova, Wednesday, July 17th, discusses visit to Rome with Sister Mary Virginie, O.S.P., of Baltimore, Md. and Sister Mary of St. Bernadine, R.G.S. of Norristown. Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, O.S.A., University President looks on. Vatican Council Seminar held in connection with the Summer session began on Tuesday and ended Thursday, July 18th.

Alumni Association Awards Medals To Six At Annual Weekend

Medals for Distinguished Service were presented to six Villanova University Alumni during the Annual Alumni weekend held on Friday evening, June 7th.

Nearly 1,500 former Villanova students returned to the Main Line campus for the three day reunion.

Distinguished Service Medals were presented to Jacques E. Mauch, '43 of Rosemont, Pa.; Matthew A. Lynch, '23 of Carbondale, Pa.; Augusta A. Baron, '27 of Ho Hokus, N.J.; Rev. Carl Cummings, '28 of Scranton, Pa.; James P. Leaming, '14 and William H. Vincent, '28 both of Philadelphia.

Presentation of the Medals was made during a banquet on Saturday evening, June 8th. Rev. John A. Klekotka, O.S.A., University President, made the presentations.

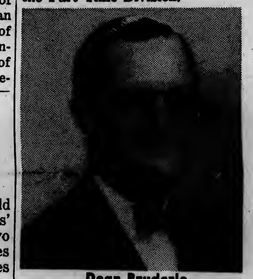
Alumni activities began early on Friday evening as Father Klekotka served as host for a private dinner attended by the Presidents of Villanova's 30 Alumni Clubs from throughout the nation. Club Presidents reported on the progress and status of their respective clubs.

Following the President's dinner a huge reception, open to all former Villanova students, was held in the Area of the Alumni House, across the street from the campus proper on Lancaster Avenue. Large tents were constructed to house this event which had the greatest attendance of the three day reunion.

The banquet and dance highlighted the many Saturday activities.

Mass was celebrated for returning Alumni on Sunday morning, closing the annual weekend for the "old grads".

Divisions Renamed Colleges; Bruderle Appointed As Dean

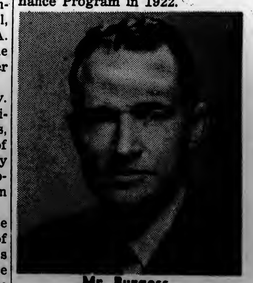


The four major undergraduate programs of study at Villanova University have been renamed "College" replacing the title of "Division" by order of the University's Board of Trustees it was announced June 20 by the Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, O.S.A., Villanova's President.

Changed also in the name of the University's Part Time Undergraduate curriculum to "University College".

Father Klekotka also announced the appointment of Mr. Charles P. Bruderle as Dean of the "University College". Dean Bruderle has been a member of the Villanova faculty for seventeen years. He is a graduate of New York University and received his Master's Degree from Georgetown.

Dean Bruderle did further graduate work at the University of London and at the University of Pennsylvania. He has been serving as Acting Director of the Undergraduate Part Time Division and Director of the Summer Session.



Mr. Frederick Burgess has been named Associate Dean of the "University College." A ten year member of the faculty Burgess has been Assistant Director of the Part Time Division.

Dean Bruderle

Villanova's four full time undergraduate programs are: Arts and Sciences, Engineering, Commerce and Finance and Nursing. Their new designations will be "The College of Arts and Sciences", "The College of Engineering", "The College of Commerce and Finance" and "The College of Nursing".

The Arts and Sciences program was begun with the establishment of the institution in 1842 when it was founded as a Liberal Arts College. The Engineering curriculum was added in 1905 and the Commerce and Finance Program in 1922.

Mr. Burgess

The Nursing curriculum was begun in 1953. It brought women students on a full time basis to the University for the first time. The Part Time Program was inaugurated in 1918 to satisfy the demand for education by those who could not attend day classes.

Vocation Institute Held As Seven Directors Gather

The Second Annual Religious Vocation Institute was held on July 15 in Vasey Hall Auditorium and in the Day Students' Dining Hall in Dougherty Hall. The discussion involved two topics: the intellectual, physical, moral and familial qualities of the candidate and the psychological testing of candidates which concerns emotional qualities.

Reverend Joseph A. Duffy OSA, the Vocation Director for the Eastern Province of the Augustinian Order, was the Moderator of the talk on "Psychological Testing of Candidates".

The panelists included Rev. Edward J. Thompson, the Vocation Director of the Archdiocese of Philadelphia, Mother M. Claudia I.H.M., Vocation Director of the Sisters of the Immaculate Heart of Mary, and Mr. Thomas N. McCarthy, Ph.D., a member of the Psychology Department of LaSalle College.

"Qualities Necessary in Candidates" was the topic for consideration in Dougherty Hall, moderated by Rev. Alfred A. Smith, OSA a member of the faculty of Monsignor Bonner High School in Drexel Hill.

The Panelists were the Rev. John Lawlor, C. M., Vocation Director of the Vincentian Fathers, Rev. Harry Degnan,, Dean of Students at St. Charles Seminary and Brother G. Henry, F.S.C. Vocation Director for the Christian Brothers.

The purpose of the Institute was to allow a greater sharing of knowledge and experiences between the Sisters in attendance in the summer session and the panelists and moderators concerning the treatment of vocations.

200 Undergrads At VU Summer Session From Other Schools

Of the more than 2600 students in attendance at Villanova's day and evening summer sessions, nearly 200 are undergraduates from other schools, colleges and universities besides VU. There are a total of one hundred two different schools represented at Villanova and the numerical breakdown is as follows:

Seventy schools have one representative. Fifteen schools have two, five schools have three, one school has four, five schools have five, and one school has six.

At the conclusion of school next week, student grades will be sent as far to the west, and south-west as the Universities of California and Arizona, respectively and as far north as Bowdoin College in Maine and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Seminary Leads

St. Charles Seminary, with seventeen students, is the largest delegation to Villanova, closely followed by the University of Notre Dame with thirteen and the Pennsylvania Military College with ten. Immaculata College with nine students is a not too distant fourth.

National Science Foundation Awards Villanova Two Grants

Two separate grants totaling nearly $37,000, have been made to Villanova University by the National Science Foundation it was announced by the Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, O.S.A., University President.

A grant of $25,350 has been made for the purpose of conducting an In-Service Institute for high school teachers of Science and Mathematics beginning with the Fall semester. Villanova will offer courses in Electronics, Astronomy, Geology, and Mathematics.

Participants will pay no tuition. A special faculty committee at Villanova will select the applicants. Rev. J. Bernard Hubbert, O.S.A., Assistant to the Dean of Arts & Sciences at the University, will administer the In-Service Institute.

Courses will be held on Saturday to avoid interference with the teacher's regular duties.

A grant of $10,320 was also received by the National Science Foundation to strengthen college and university science activities. Funds totaling more than seven million dollars will go to 397 colleges for this purpose according to the NSF.

Although the use of the grants is restricted to the direct support of scientific activities, institutions may decide how best to apply the funds for such purposes. The object of the grants is to improve the ability of institutions to create new scientific knowledge and to educate scientists and engineers essential to national well-being.

'47 Grad Receives ASEE's McGraw Award At Annual Meeting

Dr. Thomas J. Hanratty, a graduate of Villanova University in 1947 with a Bachelor of Chemical engineering degree, has received the Curtis W. McGraw Award for outstanding early achievements in engineering research.

Sponsored by the Engineering College Research Council, the award, consisting of $1,000 in cash and an appropriately engraved certificate, was presented at the Annual Banquet of the American Society for Engineering Education held during the week of June 17-21. The presentation was part of the Annual Meeting of the society at the University of Pennsylvania.

Dr. Hanratty received an M.S. degree from Ohio State University in 1950 and a Ph.D. degree in 1953 from Princeton University. He is presently serving as an Associate Professor of Chemical Engineering at the University of Illinois.

Villanova's Past And Future Discussed At Report Dinner

A new five year, seven million dollar Development Plan was outlined by the Rev. William E. Farrell, OSA, Assistant to the President for Development at Villanova. The Report Dinner was held on May 24 on campus at Dougherty Hall.

The new five year Development Plan, as outlined by Father Farrell, calls for $7,000,000 to provide for a General Fund for debt reduction, a Scholarship Endowment Fund, Faculty Improvement Program and for improved library facilities.

Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, President of Villanova University, reported on a "decade of progress" during the dinner which observed the tenth anniversary of the University's Development Program and provided a kickoff for a new five year campaign.

The University President, in his report, noted the increase in enrollment during the past ten years from 5,512 to upwards of 10,000 students and the lay faculty from 94 to 292 members. During the same period, undergraduate course offerings rose from 255 to the present 562.

Faculty salary averages have increased nearly 100 per cent since 1953 until the present rate exceeds the national average for private institutions, the report continued.

"Rising costs, ever increasing pressures of enrollment and expanded programs have forced us to run faster if only to stand still," Villanova's President said.

Two huge dormitories, a heating plant, a student union building, new structures to house the College of Commerce and Finance, the Villanova School of Law and a mammoth new science and research center have been added to the Villanova campus since the Development Program began in 1953.

Villanova's President expressed his appreciation to all who had played a part in the University's "Decade of Progress" and voiced the hope "that all of you will now look forward with us optimistically to the years ahead, providing us the same assistance to continue to expand with the times."

Other speakers during the Development Report Dinner were Harry R. Halloran, Chairman of the Advisory Board of Lay Trustees of the University; Jacques E. Mauch, Chairman of the Alumni Annual Giving and Mr. Louis C. Stengel, Jr., President of the Manhattan Shirt Co., who is Chairman of the Villanova University Parents Committee.

Teachers Extoll A-U Aids As Way To Better Learning

Sister Mary Joanelle, CSB

The last week of the first half of the University Summer School Session of 1963 was climaxed by the Audio-Visual Workshop. It was co-sponsored by the Falvey Memorial Library and the CAVE (Catholic Audio-Visual Educators) on July 9, 10, and 11. All sessions were held in Mendel Hall of the Science building.

Rev. Louis A. Rongione, OSA, University Librarian, commenced each workshop period with a brief talk.

The topic "Survey on A-V Aids in Education", ably presented by Leo M. Zuchowsky, Ph.D. of the Department of Education of Villanova, highlighted Tuesday's phase of the convention. Sister Mary of the Angels, IHM of St. Madeline School, Ridley Park and Rev. Joseph A. Coyne, OSA, Vice-President of CAVE from Cascia Hall, Tulsa, efficiently demonstrated the use of A-V aids in particular subjects, the former concerned with Religion and the latter with Physical Sciences.

Wednesday's stage of the assembly first featured Benjamin W. Barkas, Ph.D., Assistant Director, Division of School Extension of Philadelphia Public Schools. Mr. Barkas developed the timely issue of "Programmed Learning". Thomas Boyle, M.S. Principal of Marple Newtown Elementary School, continued with an excellent display of A-V techniques in Mathematics and Science in the Elementary School. Simultaneously in Room 117, Richard J. Leiser, General Electric Manager of Communications and Personnel Development at the Space Technology Center gave a fine explanation of a subject revelant to his position.

The next day Father Rongione played a double role, first as Chairman and then as substitute for Mrs. E. Walsh who was attending a convention in Chicago. Father capably reported on "Audio-Visual Aids and the Library". The use of A-V aids in teaching the Language Arts was exhibited by Sister Mary Anita, IND of Notre Dame High School, Greenboro while Sister William Mary, MSBT of the Blessed Trinity Juniorate of Philadelphia did likewise for the teaching of English Literature.

The rich information reaped throughout each day's sessions was impressed most forcefully by the displays of equipment in operation. The persons responsible for this were Rodman Metzler of Kodak Film of Rochester, Frank Wright of Williams, Brown and Earl of Philadelphia and Paul J. Costello, Branch Manager of the Philadelphia Area Training and Service Center Techifax Corporation of Holyoke, Massachusetts.

We can only attempt a brief general summary of the educational treasures gained from this great event. Thirty per cent of the cities in the United States have A-V departments. They are constantly increasing in our nation's schools. The necessity of A-V aids in our classrooms depends upon the teacher and her use of them. The wise teacher, doubly armed with a keen understanding of the study guide and with thorough preparation realizes that the climate of an A-V classroom provides an enforcement and an enjoyment of learning on the part of her pupils. The high school teacher especially will be mindful of the basic equation: A-V aids + lecture = better learning.

We all realize that the A-V aids can never truly replace the teacher but they help to attain an end and make education a joyful, rewarding and impressive experience.

In conclusion then let us be broadminded in accepting A-V materials and equipment for it is in building on the past while hoping for the future that we can improve the present.

Lindback Foundation Awards Go To Driscoll And Mitchell

William G. Driscoll, 120 Barcladen Road, Rosemont, and James J. Mitchell, 1105 County Line Road, Bryn Mawr, members of the faculty at Villanova University, have been named winners of the Lindback teaching awards at the University.

"The Christian F. and Mary Lindback Foundation Award" is presented annually for distinguished teaching to two members of the Villanova faculty.

Presentation of the award was made at the commencement exercises on June 3 by Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, O.S.A., President of the University, to Professor Driscoll, Chairman of the Department of Physics at Villanova and to Professor Mitchell who is a member of the English Department.

A check for $500.00 accompanies each award. Candidates are selected primarily by fellow faculty members and leaders of the student body.

Professor Driscoll is Chairman of the Department of Physics and has been a member of the Villanova faculty since 1933 He earned the Bachelor of Civil Engineering Degree at Villanova in 1932 and was awarded the Master of Science Degree from the University of Pennsylvania in 1938. Mr. Driscoll is a specialist in the field of nuclear physics.

Professor Mitchell is a Villanova graduate, class of 1949. He received his Master's Degree from the University of Pennsylvania in 1951, and has been a member of the Villanova faculty for thirteen years. Mr. Mitchell is presently working on his Doctor's Degree. He is highly regarded by both his colleagues and members of the student body.

The Last Notes Of Summer

PEACE

I have found it
In shaded vistas
Of green and blue,
In those endless fields
Where wild flow'rs grew,
In a time—sweet face
In child—light grace.
I have found it
In a silence deep
After—storm calm
That seemed to leap
Faun-like into view,
This golden peace
I found in You.

Sr Inez, O.S.F.

NEWNESS

We come here—apart.
Intellect, Heart
Take on new youth.
Can it be truth
That rejuvenates?
Or wisdom that waits
In stillness-like night
So that we might Accept with joy
Pure love—no alloy,
New knowledge, new life,
Reward after strife?

Sr. Inez O.S.F.

LOVE

In childhood's' day
When love smiled
And laughter gay
Rippled like happy steams
It seems . . . . . .
God crowned each day
With sun-lit dreams.

Sr. Inez, O.S.F.

I'm certain
That curtains
Reflect a personality
Or some potentiality akin
The gay ones
Or gray ones
Are certainly indicative
Of non or con-templatives Within.

Sr. M. Euphomia, S.S.N.D.

ANTITHESIS

He loves to live
Pursuing life
Relentlessly
To the end—
Earth
And thus
He dies.
He lives to love
Exultantly
Raised above self
To the heights—
God
And so
He lives.

Sr. Daniel Marie, C.S.C.

On nights when stars by wispy clouds are hid,
And Orion sleeps silently in his deep dark lair
When all trace of movement ceases, and the earth lies still There comes on cobweb wings of wind a sound of distant singing.
A sound, a woefull wail, a symphony of all the sorrows of the world
It slowly rises and steadily does the tempo of its beat increase.
Its rhythm spills throughout the dark of mortals minds
Louder, louder, until into the very soul it bores
'Tis there it finally rests and gnaws on inner bonds of human feeling
It is the inescapable melody of our lives
It is the psalm of loneliness; it plays the tune to which we all must listen, until a sweeter melody by morn is brought.

COLOR HIM FUSCIA

by Walter FeHeser

For he is our leader,
Adamant and tall,
Red-blooded hero stug he.
Rents in the skein of sanity
Enrage him not, but Lend him an air;
Like, color him fuscia.
In the pink,
Sure he'll be Amalgamated,
Funky, too, in fuscia
Is our leader, to him go
New-stampt honors
Kudeos and white whales.

LET THEM GO

Laugh and sing,
Let go each thing;
Unkind words and untold sorrows,
Cast them to unknown tomorrows.
The hurt, the hard regret,
Let it go—and just forget;
Take each cross that comes your way,
Pick it up just for the day.
Laugh when trials prevail,
Sing to God your every tale;
Let them go—it's worth the try
Upward, heavenward up to the sky.

The Most From Ghost To Ghost

by Liz Kovoch

The following conservation was heard while eavesdropping on a conversation between a couple of Villanova spirits.

"Wait till I tell you what I have seen and heard during this summer."

"Well, do some talking! I have heard that this campus is not as quiet as it seems. Is that true? Come on, Spectra, tell me. You women never change—dead or alive you always manage to know about everything that happens."

"Now look, if you start insulting me I will not tell you a single thing and you can go back and haunt Bryn Mawr," flared Spectra.

"Even when a man is a ghost he is not free, there is always some woman he must please or apease! Alright, sorry. NOW TELL ME ALL!"

"Although I have been floating all over the campus, being an intellectual spirit I spent most of the time in the Villanova Library . . ."

"Stop praising yourself!"

"Don't be rude! Now, the library staff spent about two weeks putting everything in order for the summer school students. After the first class was over, scores of students descended on the library searching for books. Remember the Alamo! Whoops wrong battle cry, but same effect. The students were in the stacks, in every conceivable nook and all around the main desk. Not one empty plot of ground was free and the astonished librarians fled behind the desk to escape the mad stampeed for books.

One slaving librarian was carrying an enormous pile of books down some stairs, when suddenly they all toppled from her hands right on the head of a very surprised sister.

Another library slave went to fill a request for "a" magazine, but when she looked closer the seemingly innocent request was for all of the volumes of Life Magazine in 1938. After some time the puffing and slightly unhappy librarian appeared at the desk dragging the pile of enormouse volumes.

In the stacks one can hear numerous comments such as "The Lord be praised, I, finally found one I need!" This, of course, was said by an extremely happy sister after a search of at least two hours.

The library is not only the home of countless volumes (which never seem to be at home) but also an air conditioned building (in name only). Nothing is as tempermental and unreliable as that air conditioner which doesn't.

Mendel Hall Cafeteria seems to be a much frequented place around noon. As one swoops about there are scenes of very healthy appetites, displayed by the usual three or four sandwiches, a couple of peaches and so on. Inevitably someone is running about frantically asking for change of $1 to $10; or else someone burns their sandwich in the infra-red-ray oven. After lunch some people occupy themselves in various ways, from the mild groan about the heat to fuming rage over a nickel lost in one of the machines.

When the burnt repasts are consumed, many wander outside to enjoy nature. Some watch the squirrels, birds, and other sights; and others sit in the shade and wonder if they should call the little men in white coats and tell them about the baseball players dashing about before them in the 96° heat.

Soon the afternoon is over, and it is time to climb into broiling cars and join (or at least attempt to) the seemingly endless snakelike thing known as rush hour traffic (that is if they didn't find a flat tire waiting for them)."

Sisters Shoot Up A Storm As They Invade Man's World

It may be "a man's world", but every Tuesday afternoon during the summer session, sisters demonstrate that women can master one of the so-called "manly" arts. For the past five summers sisters of various religious orders studying as resident students at Villanova have participated in a series of pistol and rifle instruction classes.

The rifle range is located in the basement of Commodore John Barry Hall, center of Villanova's NROTC activities during the regular school year. Accoustical tile has improved the appearance of the range and muffled the sharp retort of the firing.

Most of the credit for the program rightfully goes to Master Sergeant John J. Reilly who has been the instructor for three of the past four summers. One year a member of the Villanova pistol team substituted for Sgt. Reilly. A native of New York, Master Sergeant Reilly has served for twenty years with the Marine Corps and his appointment to Okinawa via California will be effective this fall.

Instructions First Offered

When instructions on the handling of weapons was first offered the sisters, members of the Dominican order responded in relatively good numbers. Since then a variety of Orders have come and with more publicity the total number of participants has grown considerably.

Last year was the best to date with out forty sisters coming weekly during the latter part of July. Thirty-one sisters have signed up for the 1963 session and more are expected as the season progresses.

According to Master Sgt. Reilly, July 30 has been tentatively set as the date for competition. Each sister will fire ten bullets with both the Colt "Match target" pistol and the Mossberg rifle; each is a 22-caliber weapon. For scoring purposes an overlay is used, centering "clusters" of shots. No sight changes are made.

At this time certificates will again be awarded to all who have taken part in the weekly practices. Sister Paul Francis C.S.J. of Flushing, New York and Sister Anne James, O.P. of Camden, New Jersey were top scorers last summer in the rifle and pistol matches, respectively, and were pictured receiving desk set awards in the daily local papers.

An outsider might think a nun firing a gun a bit incongrous, but to the veteran markswomen, handling these weapons is almost as easy as wielding a pen or ruler.

Synge's 'Saints' For Summer

by Toni D'Alecy

Cardboard, rope, large rocks, tweedy caps, ragged clothes and G.I. shoes — what does all this mean? — the stage setting for our summer school production of THE WELL OF THE SAINTS. A folklore atmosphere gives flavour to this rustic comedy of J. M. Synge. The opening date is Tuesday, July 23. Other performances are Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday.

There will be no matinee, and no performance that Friday. Although general admission is free, it is also limited, so tickets should be picked up at the Playbox. There, at the experimental theatre, formerly room 101 of the Annex Building, the show will go on.

THE WELL OF THE SAINTS was first performed at the Abbey Theatre, Dublin, in 1905. The scene is a lonely mountainous district in the east of Ireland, one or more centuries ago. We can see in this play that characteristic of Gaelic life, delight in vivid personality. The integrity of the character study give it coherence and strength. These characters are part and parcel of the poetry of the earth.

Some may think this is not a comedy at all, but the subject matter is the true stuff of comedy. Synge gives two views of the characters: the characters own view, absurd though not quite baseless, and the spectators privileged view from the outside.

Mr. Richard Duprey, who is directing THE WELL OF THE SAINTS, will be available along with the actors when the play is over. The audience is invited to stay for a critque and interview.

Ed Weinhein, a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania and teacher in the suburban high schools plays the lead of Martin Doul, weather-beaten blind beggar. Irene Walsh, a grad assistant from Marywood College plays the wife, a weather-beaten, ugly woman, blind also and nearly fifty. Jerry Paonessa, who holds a B.S. degree from Villanova is in this play, the Saint. Frances Kruegar, of Quincy College in Illinois is a bride, and Kathy Crane of Rosemont plays another fine-looking girl, Molly. Two undergraduate students, Mike Donahoue and Bill Byrne complete the cast.

Feeling of Brotherhood

A strong feeling of Brotherhood went over the vast assembly, said Bishop Furey, when the Holy Father opened with the words, "My fellow bishops." He gave a dual spiritual motive for the convening of the council: 1) the bringing of the Catholic Church "up to date" and 2) internal renewal of the Church.

Where John XXIII's predecessors hesitated, he stepped over all obstacles to open the Council. Comparing the meeting to a jet plane, he called the Holy Ghost the "pilot", the Pope was "co-pilot" because of his infallibility, made the Bishops the crew members and the all important fuel consisted of the prayers and sacrifices of Catholic and non-Catholics. Bishop Furey cited the Council of Trent in 1563 which called for the establishment of seminaries.

Before this the training of young men for the priesthood followed no definite pattern, but depended upon the individual priest who taught him Latin and other essentials.

Preparation for the Council took about two years. Whenever a Bishop spoke at a formal session he was limited to ten minutes and "a bell would ring if he spoke too long", reported the Bishop. "The Public Address system was perfect", he added, "and after the Bishops signed in each morning, an IBM machine tabulated the information.

2,380 Bishops

The Holy Father was most interested in knowing who attended and with 2,380 registered, only a small percentage were absent. Pope John always chose feast days of the Blessed Mother in connection with the Council — on February 11, 1962 (Our Lady of Lourdes) announcement concerning the Council was made.

The feast of the Maternity of Mary was the date for convening the Council (October 11, 1962). It closed on the feast of the Immaculate Conception, December 8, 1962 and was scheduled to re-open on the Nativity of Mary, September 8, 1963. However, with the death of Our Holy Father in June this date has been changed to the feast of St. Michael, the Archangel, September 29.

At the conclusion of Bishop Furey's talk he answered questions about the attendance of non-Catholics at the Council and pointed out instances in which erroneous ideas were given by some members of the secular press.

Fr. Murphy Speaks

The Reverend Francis X. Murphy, C.S.S.R., Professor of Church History at the Accademia Alfonsiana in Rome concluded the series of lectures by speaking about "Prospects for the Second Session of the Council." Doctor Albert H. Buford, Dean of Graduate Studies introduced him.

"The Church," said Father Murphy is not a set of truths to be believed, but an experience to be lived." In applying these truths each age renews them; we do this by accommodation, not compromise," he said. His remarks concerning our Holy Fathers, both past and present embraced John XXIII's expression of tremendous satisfaction at the end of the sessions and the then Cardinal Montini's part in the Council.

Villanovan

Vol. 39—No. 1 VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY, VILLANOVA, PA. September 25, 1963

President's Welcome

Dear Students of Villanova:

In the name of the administration and faculty, I bid to all of you young men and women of Villanova of all classes and all departments welcome to our campus for the new school year, 1963-64. It is our earnest hope that the summer months have enabled all to have sufficient refreshment that you may be able to pursue your studies and your education for life with renewed resolution and energy.

The signs of the world about us testify how urgently needed are men of intelligence, good sense, industry, character and dedication. While much has been happening throughout the history of the world, and with even more intensity in the past few decades, it is obvious that you college men and women of today shall live your lives and careers in situations far more complex and interesting and demanding than were faced by those who have gone before you.

It is all the more incumbent upon you, therefore, that you make yourselves ready for the requirements that are facing you already. I would particularly urge each one, while fulfilling the obligation of his chosen program of studies, to familiarize himself as completely as possible with the situation about him. Your world is already upon you. You must know it if you would hope to deal with it wisely and effectively.

In all the complexity of life today many forget their primary aim in life, the aim imposed upon them by their Creator. Without that aim life is meaningless, as many have found to their dismay. But if we will keep our ultimate goals always in clear sight and allow these goals to characterize our daily lives, then these lives will be rich with meaning and joy despite the turmoil that surrounds us.

May God bless all Villanovans in their endeavors through the ensuing years.

Sincerely yours,

Rev. John A. Klekotka, O.S.A.
President

Car Privilege Applications Available In Council Office

Applications for Senior Parking Privileges, a service of the Student Council, will be available at the Student Council office September 26 through October 2. Applications will be distributed by Joe Tysowski and Pat Mahady, Co-chairmen of the Student Activities Committee.

In order to be considered, an applicant must have a cumulative average of 2.00, a good chapel attendance record, and the approval of the Rev. George J. McLaughlin, OSA, dean of men.

The Student Council has spent considerable effort securing this privilege and each senior is expected to comply with the necessary regulations.

A specific area has been reserved for the purpose of senior parking. This area is located in the extreme rear of the main lot, just opposite Dougherty and Austin Halls. Yellow lines have been painted on the lot surface to aid the students in parking correctly.

Parking permits will be issued and they are to be displayed in in a conspicuous place on the parked automobile.

The parking area is designed to accommodate 106 cars, and it is imperative that day-hop students refrain from using senior car space.

Parking privileges will con-

McErlane, Hagerty, Stoneback Named Executive Heads

Marty McGuinn, president of the Student Council, announced the appointment of his three executive vice-presidents: James McErlane, Neal Stoneback, and John Hagerty, who will head Student Affairs, Educational Affairs, and Student Government, respectively. Appointed as Parliamentarian was George McKeon.

The three vice-presidents, in turn, announced their appointments of the committee chairmen.

McErlane appointed Pat Mahady and Joe Tysowski to head the Student Activities Committee. Ed Wielle and Denis Addonizio will lead the Student Union

'Fantasy' Is Apropos Theme For Homecoming Weekend

by Mike Ferrara

Homecoming Weekend, a traditional celebration at Villanova, will be held this year on Friday and Saturday, October 4 and 5.

The Nick Basca Dance begins the festivities on Friday evening at 9 p.m. Longtime Field-House favorite, Paul Judge and his Orchestra, will supply the music.

'Cinderella' Theme

Tickets for three dollars per couple are now on sale in the Pie Shoppe. "Cinderella" is the theme of this year's dance in keeping with the Fantasyland theme of the weekend.

The charming princess who will be crowned as Villanova's 1963 Homecoming Queen will be selected during the dance by eight judges.

A pep rally in the quad will precede the dance at 8:15 p.m. The selection of the best decorated dorm and a huge bonfire on Mendel field will color the eventful evening.

At Halftime

The Queen and her Court will reign for the entire weekend and will add beauty to the Homecoming Parade during halftime of the Buffalo game. Also, the most outstanding float will be selected at that time with various classes and organizations competing for prizes.

The football game with Buffalo, whom Villanova defeated last year, 36-6, serves as the focal point of the weekend. Alumni from all parts of the country return to campus to watch the Wildcats once again.

Saturday evening at 8 p.m. folk-singing comes to Villanova in the persons of the Chad Mitchell Trio. This lively group has been featured on ABC's Hootenany many times.

Concert Innovation

A concert on Saturday night is new this year and should prove more desirable than previous ones on Sunday afternoon. Tickets for the concert are now on sale from 10:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. in the Pie Shoppe and 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. in the C & F Cafeteria.

Seniors Produce

The entire Homecoming Weekend is being produced by the Senior Class for the first time this year. Senior Class President Jim Murphy, who heads the weekend, has appointed Jerry Campana and Joe McGill as general chairmen for the dance and concert respectively.

Jim O'Connor, Don Nicklaus, John Sperger, Bob Cardone, and Sue McDonald are the committee chairmen for the dance, while Tom Stanley, Rich Monks, Bill Madden, Bob Strong, Rich Stoughton, Rich Kennedy, and Barry Thornton head the concert committees.

Ed Hallahan is in charge of the dorm decorations and Dick Syracusa the float contest. Pat Blake, Marti Podolsky, and Marianne Ortepio, as well as the Belle Masque Society, are in charge of decorations.

Prexy Praises

Jim Murphy summarizes the feelings of all associated with the production of the weekend: "Noting the enthusiastic responses of the Class of '64 and the school in general and also the imagination and initiative of those chairmen who head the weekend, I believe it will be the best Homecoming Weekend in the past ten years and a fine beginning for the new social season."

Graduate Theatre Opens Fall Season With Original Script

The Graduate Theatre Department of Villanova opens its unique Playbox on Friday, September 27, with a new script, The Broken Doll by Etienne Robert.

David Rabe, a graduate of St. Ambrose College, Davenport, Iowa, plays the leading role of a Confederate Army Captain, Harry Clayton, who has deserted his unit. This is his second year as a graduate assistant.

Irene Walsh, a recent graduate of Marywood College, Scranton, Pennsylvania, plays Grace Boisveit, a blinded girl who is standed in the forest by her peddler father.

The peddler is played by Edmund Weinheim, a graduate student is also director of dramatics at Interboro Senior High School

Chad Mitchell Trio Promises 'Mighty Day' At Senior Concert

It will be a "Mighty Day on Campus" when the Chad Mitchell Trio entertains at the Villanova Field House for the annual Senior Concert on Saturday, October 5.

Tickets for the affair, announced concert chairman Joe McGill, are still on sale in the Pie Shoppe and the Student Council office, at $2.75 for orchestra, $2.25 for balcony. The two-hour performance begins at 8 p.m.

The Trio, one of the rapidly-rising vocal groups in the land, combines the finest folk songs of the past with pungent musical satire on contemporary society. Proof of their success with the latter is evident in the tremendous popularity of their recent hit single, "The John Birch Society."

Already these spirited young songsters have left a wide wake of critical acclaim behind them, as they scored markedly at such top spots as Hollywood's Crescendo, Minneapolis' The Padded Cell, Chicago's Palmer House, and New York's Blue Angel.

Their college concert appearances have been nationwide, and they have given special concerts at Carnegie and Town Halls, and at Orchestra House in Chicago. Also on their recent itinerary was a fifteen-week tour of Latin America for the State Department.

Feeling their way through a musical satire on the contemporary world, the Chad Mitchell Trio loosens up at a top night spot for the Senior Concert.

Portrette

Confusion Minimizer

Descriptions of orientation at Villanova range from "mass confusion" to "organized confusion." SC's, OC's and a host of others joined forces to transform Frosh into true-blooded Villanovans.

Amid the hustle, bustle and activity of Orientation walked a talented, conscientious and levelheaded Villanovan who was responsible for making this year's organization more effective and keeping confusion at a minimum.

Tom Furst, General Chairman of Orientation, combined his organizational talent and dedication in the performance of a Herculean task. As General Chairman Tom was responsible for coordinating the efforts of various organizations involved in Orientation and arranging the many conferences for Freshmen throughout the period.

Commenting on this year's Orientation Tom said: "The Blue Key has done an excellent job on the two main aspects of Orientation, the Area Tour and the reception for parents of Freshmen. Generally, things went very well and on schedule."

Tom is not a stranger to this type of work. He served on the Student Council last year as Resident Representative. In addition, he was a member of the Student Co-Chairman of the Academic Affairs and Publicity Committees and Chairman of the Religion Poll.

In the line of class activities, Furst was head of his Freshman Dorm Decoration Committee and last year participated in the Sophomore Orphan's Outing.

For the current year Tom has a full schedule with his position as Vice-Chairman of the Student Council, Chairman of the Student Cabinet Committee and membership in the Blue Key.

Discussing possible action by the Student Council this year, Tom mentioned Constitutional revision as a major issue.

"The Constitution is too long and awkward. The functions of the Council have been enlarged and the Constitution is not adequate. Amendments added in the past years should be compiled. I feel sure the Convention accomplishments will be highly successful."

Despite his many activities, Tom carries a very respectable average as an economics major. He is directing his efforts at Villanova toward graduate school and a career in business.

Friendliness, devotion and hard work describe Tom Furst. And if the present is any indication of the future, the coming years hold much promise for this spirited collegian.

National Science Foundation Awards Villanova Two Grants

Two separate grants totaling nearly $37,000, have been made to Villanova University by the National Science Foundation it was announced by the Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, University President.

A grant of $25,350 has been made for the purpose of conducting an In-Service Institute for high school teachers of Science and Mathematics beginning with the Fall semester. Villanova will offer courses in Electronics, Astronomy, Geology, and Mathematics.

Participants will pay no tuition. A special faculty committee at Villanova will select the applicants. Rev. J. Bernard Hubbert, OSA, Assistant to the Dean of Arts & Sciences at the University, will administer the In-Service Institute.

Courses will be held on Saturday to avoid interference with the teacher's regular duties.

A grant of $10,320 was also received by the National Science Foundation to strengthen college and university science activities. Funds totaling more than seven million dollars will go to 397 colleges for this purpose according to the NSF.

Although the use of the grants is restricted to the direct support of scientific activities, institutions may decide how best to apply the funds for such purposes. The object of the grants is to improve the ability of institutions to create new scientific knowledge and to educate scientists and engineers essential to national well-being.

Variety Show, Football Head Event Schedule At Parents' Weekend

Students will have a chance to host their families on campus during Parents' Weekend, October 18, 19, 20.

This Blue Key-run affair will kick off with a welcoming address by the Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, University President. Immediately following the talk will be the annual Variety Show. M. C. Pete Smith promises a new format this year.

Saturday's activities begin with registration at the Field House at 9 am. when favors will be bestowed upon the mothers. Shortly thereafter all will have a chance to meet the deans of the various colleges.

Afternoon and evening will be highlighted by the VU- George Washington pigskin contest and a concert by the American Symphony Orchestra, Leopold Stokowski conducting, respectively. Students are urged to purchase tickets for these events early.

Closing the weekend, Father Klekotka will say Mass in The Field House on Sunday morning.

Ruane Announces Plan To Resume Publication Of Campus Calendar

Eugene J. Ruane, director of public information, has announced that his department again plans to publish a weekly calendar of events.

As in the past, the calendar will include all those activities which are not part of the regular class schedule. Among these are special lectures, field trips, forums, dances, seminars, sports events, concerts, debates, plays, ticket sales, intramural activities, and sorority and fraternity activities.

Each issue of the calendar will appear on the Monday morning of the week to be covered. It will be necessary, therefore, to receive information by 5 p.m. on Thursday of the preceding week for listing in the calendar.

Any material received after that deadline cannot be included. Please notify the public information dept., Austin Hall, or phone extension 309 with details of any activities which your group may be planning for the week beginning Monday, September 30.

Class Steering Committees Meet, Plan Year's Activity

The Senior Class Steering Committee met last Thursday for the first time this year. It was announced at the meeting that Joe McGill has been appointed to head the concert committee with Jerry Campagna chairing the dance committee for this year's Homecoming Weekend.

Senior Class President Jim Murphy announced that the steering Committee will be reorganized this year and divided into investigation, education, and social subcommittees.

He noted that, since only fifteen men will be assigned to each committee, the entire steering committee should be able to function more effectively.

The Junior Class Steering Committee will hold its second meeting of the year tomorrow. The chief order of business will be discussion of plans for the Homecoming float, the Junior Class contribution to Homecoming Weekend.

At their first meeting last week, the Rev. James Ryan, OSA, the new Junior Class moderator, was introduced to the committee. Father Ryan succeeds the Rev. Thomas Kenny, OSA.

Appointed as co-chairmen of the Junior Ring Mass Committee were Tony Pennachia and Dennis Driscoll.

Whitcroft Announces Postal Box Filling

Postmaster Whitcroft has announced that all post office boxes in the Tolentine Post Office are now filled. Students without one are required to share a post office box with a student who already has rented one. The student who has the rented box must go down to the main post Office with his receipt in order to validate the rental.

The postmaster stressed the fact that mail will not be received unless a student has a post office box. It should be rented immediately to avoid confusion.

Mr. Whitcroft asked that students notify magazine and newspaper publishers of the change of address. The main post office is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Villanova Journalists To Host Myriad Youth At Annual Conference

The sixteenth annual Publications Conference at Villanova University will be held on October 12. About 5000 high school students and teachers from eight states are expected to attend.

Registration for this event begins at 8:30 a.m. The director of the conference is the Rev. Louis A. Rongione, OSA, Villanovan moderator and University Librarian.

At 10:30 a.m. the Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, President of Villanova University, will give the welcoming address. The main speaker this year is John A. Schneider, Vice-President of C.B.S. and General Manager of WCAU television.

The conference will be held in the Field House and the Commerce and Finance Building.

Other scheduled speakers are: Eugene Moore and Samuel Boyle of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin; Leonard McAdams of the Philadelphia Inquirer; Thomas A. Cooney of the Philadelphia Daily News; Rev. Francis E. Keul of the Catholic Standard and Times; John J. Liney, originator of the "Henry" cartoon; James F. Haughton, Publicity Manager of T.V. Guide; and Father Rongione.

These gentlemen will participate in a series of panel sessions and meetings concerning the technical aspects of newswriting and yearbook publication.

This conference is one of the largest of its kind to be held.

Sophomore Blazer Orders Taken Oct. 8

Mr. John A. Bauman, proprietor of the University Shop, has announced that upperclassmen, particularly sophomores, may be measured for their class blazers on October 8, 9, and 10. The fittings will take place in the center lounge of Dougherty Hall between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m.

The price of the blazers is $29.95. A ten dollar deposit is required at the time of measurement.

The blazers will be delivered in December, just in time for Christmas vacation.

This will be the only time during this school year that students can purchase their class blazers.

Field House Rocked By Freshman Mixer

The Villanova Field House rocked to the music of the Del-Fi's last Saturday night as the Second Annual Freshman Mixer was held. It signaled the opening of the fall social calendar here on campus.

The large representation of schools included Rosemont, Bryn Mawr, and Cabrini, and Fitzgerald Mercy School of Nursing.

Sophomore Class President George Valva heralded the affairs as a complete success. Around 1000 students attended, which is quite impressive considering that upperclassmen were not allowed to attend the dance.

This was only the second year of the event designed primarily to aid freshmen in meeting girls and making new friends. Judging from the crowds of the last two years, it will continue to be a highly successful social function in the years to come.

Shot from a low-flying helicopter within the roomy Field House at the annual Freshman Mixer, this rather intimate photo shows a pair of unevenly matched freshman couples preparing to embark on a wild, tribal excursion into the land of the Strand, or the Watusi, or the Hully-Gully, or . . .

Three Hundred Frosh Participate In First Blue Key Area Tour

Recently the Blue Key Society held its first annual area tour to Philadelphia for the freshmen class.

Three hundred frosh took part in this sightseeing excursion. The first point of interest was Saint Charles Seminary of the Diocese of Philadelphia.

Other points of interest included: Boathouse Row; Fairmount Park; the Philadelphia Museum; the Franklin Institute; Independence National Historic Park, Christ Church; Curtis Publishing Company; and Washington Square.

The highlight of the trip was a guided tour through Independence Hall.

On the return trip the frosh passed the campus of the University of Pennsylvania and its

University Bands Formulate Schedule For Fall Semester

As the 1963-64 school year begins, the Villanova University Bands have outlined the schedule for the coming semester.

Under the direction of Mr. Joseph Colantonio, the marching band will be present at all home games, the Boston College game, and all sports rallies.

On the weekend of October 19, the Villanova Bands will hold their first annual Villanova University Bands Day which will consist of six outside bands.

The Concert Band will appear with the Glee Club at the annual Christmas Concert to be held in the Field House on December 13.

Applications are still being accepted for entrance into any section of the bands.

It is to be noted, however, that in order to join any of the bands it is necessary for the applicant to join the marching band before gaining entrance into any of the other groups.

Anyone interested in joining can see the Bands President at any one of the practices from 6 p.m. until 8 p.m. on Monday and Wednesday nights in ahe Classroom Annex.

VUPU President DeLiberty Announces Annual Activities

One of the campus' most active political organizations, the Villanova Political Union, will begin this year's activities with a general business meeting on Monday, September 30, at 4:30 p.m. in 110 Commerce and Finance.

Last Monday, September 23, the Union held its first executive meeting at which plans for the coming year were finalized. Peter DeLiberty, president of the organization, announced that a list of prominent speakers was in the formal stages of arrangement.

A membership drive has also begun for qualified underclassmen interested in politics and government. Underclassmen can contact the Union by acquiring an application from one of the Union members or from the V.P.U. box in the Student Council office.

Plans for a Union newspaper are now being rapidly made and its first publication is expected to emerge late next month. Union members who wish to apply for the paper should contact the editor, Michael A. Magro, at one of the business meetings or debates.

Under the direction of its moderator, Mr. John Logue, of the Villanova Political Science Department, the Union is looking forward to a year as successful as last year's which was highlighted by a televised debate on WRCV-TV's Concept program at which the former mayor of Philadelphia, Richardson Dilworth, spoke.

SENIORS!

Last ditch effort in getting about 300 of our straggling Seniors to get their pictures taken. These Seniors are to make appointments in the Pie Shoppe October 2, 3, and 4. Photographers will be in the basement of Vasey Hall, Yearbook Office October 7, 8, and 9.

New Shows, Format, Update Stimulus Mark Campus Radio Return

Villanova's radio station WWVU, returns to the air on September 30, offering FM quality and format at 640 on the AM dial.

Programming in general will be similar to that of the past, but with significant changes. Music, news, features, and up to the minute sports will fill the broadcast day.

Popping Pops

Signing on at 2 p.m., Upbeat will offer the newest in pops until 5 p.m., when Showtime takes over with the best of Broadway. The dinner hour is occupied by serious classical offerings.

From 6:30 p.m. to 7, Terry Cooney, news director, and Bill McCloskey, campus news, fill the time slot with the news gleanings from around the University and around the world. A campus hot line and the UPI wire make for sources of pertinent data.

Mood Music

The evening hours are devoted to music. Mood music from Encore fills the evening air as the day wanes into night. When deep into the Stygian realm, Ride Thru the Nite takes the day home to a jazz beat.

Significant in the intellectual growth of the campus radio outlet are the Stimulus programs on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Stimulus I with Jan Dyroff on Tuesdays will take the listener through an aesthetic potpourri.

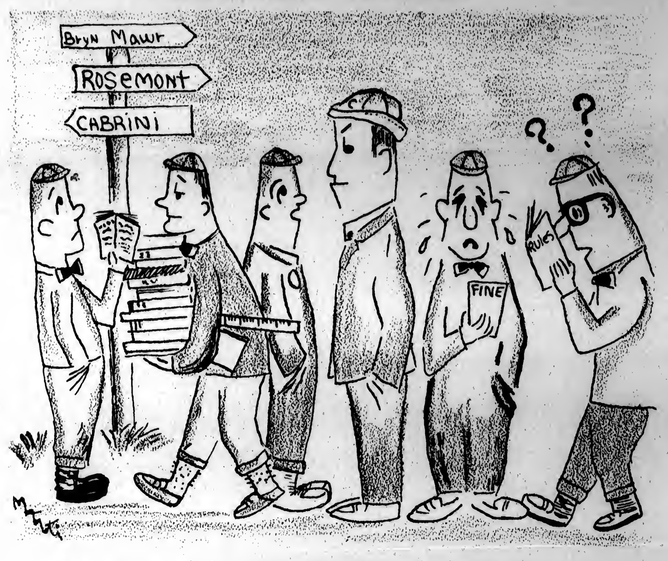
Sauers Stimulus

Frank Sauers' Stimulus II on Thursday aims at the heart of intellectual stagnation by introducing controversy in the fields of politics, religion, current events, and everyday daily living.

Two news specials, Review and Preview, will be presented weekly. They will cover campus events in depth with interviews and discussion. The first in the series, spotlighting Frosh Orientation, can be heard October 1, at 5.30 p.m.

Elaborate Plans Made By Resident Students For Homecoming Days

Edward J. Hallahan has been appointed by the Senior Class as Chairman of the Committee for the Homecoming Weekend Dormitory Decorations Contest. The date for the contest has been set at October 4-6 and the final judging is to be made at 7 p.m. Oct. 4.



Any kind of decorations are permitted except those involving live animals, fireworks, or power operated devices.

The theme of Homecoming is "Fantasyland" but the dorms need not follow this theme. A popular theme in the past has been the "Wildcat's" football opponent, this year represented by the University of Buffalo's "Bisons."

Decorations may be set up at any time prior to judging but must be in good taste. The decorations are to be financed by collections taken up in the individual dormitories and there is no limit as to the amount of money to be spent.

Judging is to be made on the basis of originality, effort, appropriateness, and meaningfulness.

Trails and Travails

When Irresponsibility Reflects . . .

Since the publication of the 1963 edition of the Villanova yearbook, the Belle Air, questions have been raised as to the overall quality of the edition in the face of glaring, and apparently unnecessary, errors, misrepresentations, and deletions.

The most perceptible fault was the omission of 167 senior portraits. Granted that some of these deletions can be blamed on the individual seniors themselves, the fact remains that responsibility for too many omissions rests with the staff itself.

It is unclear whether part of the blame rests with the printer or some other factor. Nevertheless it is evident that the staff had ample time to correct so blatant an error.

Perhaps not as conspicuous as the three page list of senior deletions were pictorial misrepresentations of organization membership. For example not one of the individuals pictured as members of the Literary Society was actually a member of that organization. There were indications of similar irregularities elsewhere in the edition.

Perhaps the most unpardonable blunders were the purely technical mistakes. Certainly no yearbook of a major university should contain more than a few typographical errors. But when the name of the drama fraternity, Alpha Psi Omega, is spelled two different ways on the same page, the yearbook fails to meet the standards that such a publication should maintain.

The photography ran to extremes. There were several exceedingly imaginative photographs, but there were too many shots that would be rejected by a publication with even the least demanding standards.

Difficult as it may be to imagine, lack of humor appeared to be a matter of policy. A yearbook without humor is like Linus without his blanket.

The yearbook has the responsibility to accurately reflect the standards of the University. Did the 1963 Belle Air meet its responsibility in this respect? We think not.

Regs to Ready

It's a long way to Tipperary, but it's an even longer and rougher road to travel from the stage of freshman to senior. Every era has its wars, and today the struggle for existence may depend on how well the frosh with the 'regs' can make a knowledgeable progression to things of a higher order.

It's a hard and expensive road to education today. What was required of a freshman in past years seems almost negligible in comparison with modern day complexities in technology and world conditions.

All too soon the 'regs' will be supplanted by the cap and gown of graduation, and one might find himself asking, "Am I ready?" In too many cases that same question, if only asked when one is a freshman, might have been answered in the affirmative by the senior year.

The moment a frosh dons a cap and is put through the seemingly foolish antics by his uppperclassmen, he wonders if college is not just one complete ball. With the removal of 'regs' on muff day, he will have realized what college is, and what it is not. With the end of orientation and the rolled-up trousers the freshman will have learned how to be ready.

The freshman is expected to learn much in this brief period. Just as he prepares himself for recognition by the rest of the student body, so also must he prepare himself for the challenge to our contemporary society. Life and orientation are one continual 'muff-day' — the freshman must be prepared for both.

Tax Relief, Now

Seldom has a major legislative proposal been as popular as the tax revision bill. Yet seldom has Congress moved so slowly on a measure asked by both houses and labor as an aid to the national economy. The bill, after delay in the House Ways and Means committee, will come before the full House near the end of September.

The main purpose of the bill is to induce a more rapid growth rate of the economy and consequently fuller employment. Moderate gains in activity have occured of late in spite of the delay and uncertainty about tax revision. Whether these gains will continue far into 1964 without tangible tax relief is highly doubtful. Therefore, time is of the essence.

However, assuming passage, at least in main outline, by the House, the bill faces double jeopardy, and the Senate Finance Committee will probably conduct long hearings concerning the bill, covering again the ground already covered by the House. Second there is the hazard that the Senate may get involved in a filibuster over civil rights legislation before the tax bill is reported to it. This would mean that action on the tax cut would be impossible before the end of the year.

This would be very unfortunate, for the enactment wouldn't be possible until early in next year's session and would probably be made applicable to all 1964 income. This is not so effective as to let business know what it can count on before adjournment. Therefore, actual economic effect through change in the withholding tax would be postponed.

Letter to the Editor

To The Editor,

During the Orientation period a group of ninety Blue Key, Student Council, and Orientation Committee members attempted to turn 1180 odd individuals into a closely knit class.

The primary function of the Student Council personnel was to help register the Frosh on the first day, and the smoothness of this operation puts their success beyond question.

What of the "OC's"? After a not so successful Truth or Consequences night much criticism arose over the lack of respect shown by the Frosh for the Orientation Committee. The spirit shown by the frosh at rallies, however, and the large meeting attendance during the balance of the period indicated that control had been regained.

For the Blue Key personnel who handled a reception for parents, and the Philadelphia tour, I have nothing but praise.

As chairman of Orientation I extend my thanks to all those who helped to make it a success.

Toward a New Awareness

by Martin McGuinn
Student Congress Chairman

Establishing a clear line for communication between administration and students and acting as an efficient liaison is an important responsibility of any Student Council. For this reason it shall be the purpose of this column in the future not only to report pending business but also to stimulate an awareness and interest in affairs and legislation affecting everyone as a Villanovan.

The Student Council in its attempt to present a varied and more extensive extra-curricular program is engrossed in finalizing plans for the current semester. Many of these activities will be of a co-curricular nature supplementing the University's aim of educating the "whole" man.

In this context, a cultural series beginning this semester with the American Symphony Orchestra conducted by Leopold Stowkowski and a lecture series with William Buckley, author and editor of the National Review, as the inaugural speaker, have been prepared.

The famous conductor will appear on Saturday night, October 19, while Mr. Buckley will deliver his speech in the Field House on the night of October 17.

Richard Connors, Blue Key President, has been appointed chairman of Parent's Weekend and with the members of his society will be responsible for arranging the activities of this traditional occasion.

The Spirit Committee is under the direction of Ken Cronin with the emphasis on creating competition among the classes and providing the athletic teams with increased support from the Student Body.

The Student Council Spirit Committee will be the coordinating group but responsibility for the individual rallies will fall to the respective classes in the hope of engendering innovation and imagination to maintain a high

On Campus with Max Shulman

(By the Author of "Rally Round the Flag, Boys!" and, "Barefoot Boy With Cheek.")

ONCE MORE UNTO THE BREACH, DEAR FRIENDS

Today I begin my tenth year of writing this column in your campus newspaper. Ten years is a long time; it is, in fact, what some scholarly people like to call a decade—from the Latin word decum, meaning the floor of a ship. It is, to my mind, remarkable that the Romans had such a word as decum when you consider that ships did not exist until 1620 when John Alden invented the Mayflower. Alden, a prodigiously ingenious man, also invented the ear lobe and Pocahontas.

Ships were a very popular mode of travel—especially over water—until 1912 when the Swede, Ivar Krueger, invented the iceberg. Krueger also invented the match, which is a good thing, because without the match, how would you light your Marlboro Cigarettes? I cannot overstress the importance of lighting your Marlboro Cigarettes, for Marlboro Cigarettes, unlighted, provide, at best, only limited smoking pleasure.

You might even call it the limp or spongy sell

I mention Marlboros because this column is an advertisement, brought to you through the school year by the makers of Marlboros. Marlboros come in soft pack or Flip-Top box. The makers of Marlboros come in dark suits with thin lapels —except on weekends when they come in yoke-neck jerseys and white duck trousers. White ducks come in flocks. They are primarily fresh water dwellers, although they have been successfully raised in salt water too. Another salt water denizen I'm sure you will find enjoyable is plankton—a mess of tiny organisms like diatoms and algae and like that which float sluggishly near the surface of the sea. It is ironic that these creatures, microscopic in size, should supply the principal source of food for the earth's largest animal, the whale. Whales, I must say, are not at all pleased with this arrangement, because it takes the average whale, eating steadily, 48 hours to gather a day's meal. This leaves them almost no time for water sports or reading Melville. It is a lucky thing for all of us that whales are unaware they are mammals, not fish, and could, if they tried, live just as well on land as in water. I mean, you add ten or twelve million whales to our Sunday traffic and you would have congestion that makes the mind boggle.

But I digress. Today, I was saying, I begin my tenth year of writing this column for Marlboro Cigarettes in your campus newspaper. I will, in each column, say a few kind words about Marlboros—just as you will, once you try that fine tobacco flavor, that pristine white filter, that supple soft pack, that infrangible Flip-Top box. These references to Marlboro will be brief and unobtrusive, for I do not believe in the hard sell. What I favor is the soft sell—you might even call it the limp or spongy sell. I hasten to state that the makers of Marlboro in ten full years have not once complained about my desultory sales approach. Neither have they paid me.

But that is of small consequence. Aside from fleeting mentions of Marlboro, this column has another, and more urgent, mission: to cast the hot white light of free inquiry upon the vexing questions that trouble college America—questions like "Should the Student Council have the power to levy tariffs? and "Are roommates sanitary?" and "Should housemothers be compelled to retire upon reaching the age of 26?"

Perhaps, reasoning together, we can find the answers. Perhaps not. But if we fail, let it never be said that it was for want of trying.

I thank you.

The makers of Marlboro are happy to bring you another year of Max Shulman's unpredictable and uncensored column—and also happy to bring you fine filtered Marlboros, available in pack or box, wherever cigarettes are sold in all 50 states.

Dear Mother:

You said to write every week. That's all for now. Your son, Willy

P.S. Everything is all right, so don't worry. (a lot of good that will do.) after all you're a professional worrier. you're supposed to worry! you're my mother! I'm your son. Well, that's the breaks.

"I am."

Dear sweet loving, Irma, baby (my girl friend)

It has been a full day and a half since I last saw your loving smile. You are always near my heart, right next to my matric card. I will always be faithful. (I wear your picture in my dink.) I'm still going to be an engineer although I have been Nursing an impulse toward medicine.

Your poochy poo (don't show this to anyone) hot lips (cold hands) Willy.

Dear diary: I ain't sure about this college stuff. I got that line from a college book, Catcher in the Rye.

Thursday Sept. 12

"Attention all freshmen, Tonight at 8:00.

Behind the stadium, Frosh. Don't forget, Frosh."

("If I could I'd get fined or something collegiate like that.")

"O.K. Frosh. This is Truth or Consequences, Frosh. Tonight you really become—hey!—Frosh —now quit it!

Com'on, no more water balloons, or we'll stop right now—hey!—HEY—quit with the shaving cream! What kinda stuff is this?"

"Mennen's."

Dear Jack, you old son of a teatotaler.

Listen. I got it made! You know I was telling you of the tremendous opportunities for better education on the weekends here? I was right! Their names are Janis, Phyllis, and Mary Ann! And a cast of thousands are premiering at Rosemont next week! The great collegiate biology class down the Pike! Man, this is the life! I am taking engineering but certain aspects of medicine are quite attractive. Their names are Betsy, Joan and Louise. Well, listen, babe, I got to go, go, go now. There's a research project going on at Bryn Mawr, too. Their names are Mary, Lucy and Joesy. There's a spear head movement for friendliness and companionship going on here at V.U. His name is Willy.

Your man in Villanova

Willy

Dear Diary,

I haven't met a bad guy yet. And he was an O.C. and he didn't count anyway. I'm tired as usual. Good night . . . good riddance . . . (boy, if I get fine again . . . snore!).

. . . Hats! Tip your hats, Frosh! That's a nurse, Frosh? ("I don't know about O. C.'s fella but Freshman aren't that uneducated!).

Friday Sept. 13

Friday the thirteenth is right! I spent two hours getting into class, three hours once in, an hour and a half getting names of books; followed by three hours waiting for them at the book store, $2.50 in fines for the privilege of being around an O. C. Total: innumberable hours on the hoof, a couple of thousand dollars worth of books (it seems) including such gems as Grace Wilson's Anthology of Ancient Greecian Nursery Rhymes, cheers and yells (p.74), and $43.50 in O.C. fines. Good day! Good work! Good grief!

A Day-Hop's Plight

by Chuck Lombardi

This writer is a member of that very small, but very fortunate minority of "day-hops" (two or three out of a thousand) whose home is close enough to allow walking to and from school. Now, walking is not necessarily the best or the safest way to commute (the Spring Mill, Sproul Road, Lancaster Pike intersection is like a Spanish Bull Ring, where pedestrians are either fast or dead), but walking certainly beats driving and parking in "that place."

Ten years ago, Villanova's parking lot was a little lot across the Pike from the chapel. In the ensuing years, however, it greedily guzzled land and burped cars until it became the huge mess that it is today.

The administration can not be commended for making the driving lanes and parking spots like "eyes of needles," through which students must thread their twenty-foot Belchfire V-16's, but it probably (and perhaps rightly so) figures that larger lanes and parking spots would only give the students more room to roar down the lanes in the wrong direction and to park illegally in such convenient places as:

1. the end row where the white lines indicate no parking so that cars will have room to turn;
2. the access road directly in front of the chapel;
3. "smack dab in the middle" of a lane;
4. not fully in a parking spot, so that passage through the driving lane is prevented or limited to small cars.

Those guilty o fthe latter three offenses are particularly odius, and they show a blatant lack of intelligence and courtesy for others. They apparently arrive late for their classes, and knowing that the proper spots near the chapel and Commerce and Finance are gone, and not wishing to waste their "valuable" time or energy by a longer walk they park illegally, and inconvenience those who arrive after them and those who leave before them.

As a pedestrian, I've never considered motorists to be a patient group, but I am certainly amazed by the year in and year out patience of the "day-hop" drivers in putting up with the "Me first, damn the rest" members of their group. It would seem that such a larger majority of the student body would have long ago raised their voices in furious protest, but they sit in mute silence . . . and wait . . . and wait . . .

Bryn Mawr Tea Room Should Become Favorite Of Students

by Liz Kovach

Once in a while the gourmand will find a haven where he may indulge, without damaging his palate. The newest of such places is the Garden Terrace Tea Room in the back of the Page and Biddle Gift Shop at 1038 Lancaster Avenue in Bryn Mawr.

Upon entering, one finds a gift shop in which every item is displayed to its best advantage, without appearing cluttered. If browsing is desired, one isn't hurried, but when one requires service it is very prompt and efficient.

It may appear to be a shop for only the elite, but whether the usual or unusual is sought, the expensive or inexpensive gift, one is sure to find something — even for the person who has everything.

Fashion Department

An interesting section of the shop is the fashion department. Clothes of the finest materials can be purchased there.

Each Wednesday, selections from the fashion department are modeled in the Tea Room.

No matter how tense and tired one may be, upon entering the Tea Room the outside world seems to slip into oblivion. The delightfully unusual garden-terrace decor and the soothing music in the air calms and relaxes, while one receives swift and courteous service.

Inexpensive Meal

An entire meal — which includes either a hot or cold main dish, dessert and all the coffee you desire (or, if you prefer, tea or milk) can be had for $1.50. Faultless service and excellent cuisine is the keynote of the place.

If treating your mother or impressing a girl, inexpensively, is the order of the day, then drop in anytime between 12 and 2 Monday through Saturday and enjoy the royal treatment of Mrs. Hill and her daughter, Sandy.

THE RISING CURTAIN

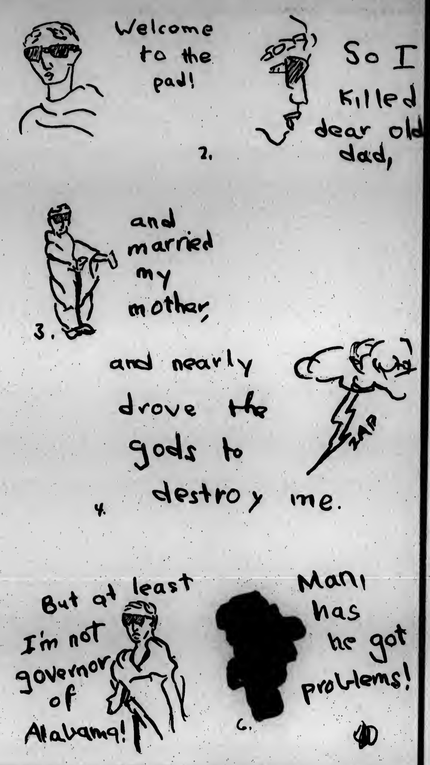
The New Theater Season

by Paul Norton

Theater buffs all over the country are looking again to this season for an imaginary bright array of glittering musicals, powerful dramas and rib tickling comedies. Following the relative luster of only a few productions of last year and the swamp of second and third rate shows, they may continue in their disappointment if the producers don't exercise their imaginations and use some worthwhile scripts in order to present saleable material at the box office.

This is, of course, no small task and as it is increasingly difficult to find shows of the dramatic force of last season's dynamic "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf" and even tougher to sell them. The same also holds true for musicals. Certainly, few combinations of talent are available to produce in exact measure anything equal to the proportions of "Kismet", "My Fair Lady", or one of the more distinguished Rogers and Hammerstein shows.

Audience



One major problem now is the diminishing taste of the audiences as the shows are made more available throughout the country. Native New Yorkers usually hail the better productions with no little literary and dramatic sophistication.

However, the producers and backers of new shows must also consider their appeal to tourists, visiting conventions, and to audiences treated by the road companies. Overcoming this job of supplying a show with l've universal appeal, there is always the prospect of turning it over for an extraordinary sum to the Hollywood factory which is beginning to depend solely on outside sources for its scripts.

All this could lead to a lessening of dramatic values and in more than one case has done just that. Recent comedies have tended to become sleazy and suggestive and the dramas approach stages stacked with Freudian filled confusion. Producers have presented a potpourri of musicals to assuage the public. These have ranged from fine shows to trite low dimension extravaganzas usually marked by weak plots, undistinguished lyrics and tea for two music. One exception by one of the assembly line producers, David Merrick, was "Carnival!".

Now Play'ng:

The mention of this entrepreneur brings to mind the new season again. Th's for the most part is still in rehearsal stages and romping through try-out cities. Philadelphia will play host to many of these as it is now to "Luther." This is a Merrick show as is "110 In The Shade" which will arrive here soon from a highly successful Boston preview. Also opening last week was Meredith Wilson's "Here's Love" which received the critics warm regards.

First Day Frustrations — or — Frosh Are A Necessary Evil

by Hillary Russell, Jr.

This thing about the joy of returning to college has gotten a bit out of hand. Certainly it's fine to see old friends, discuss summer things . . . but the frustrations! Wow!

When I found myself bobbing about in a sea of frosh caps Monday I felt like quitting right there. Have you ever tried to find someone in the Pie Shop on the first day, even the first week of school? You can not do it. They won't be there. You'll only find Freshmen caps darting past you like stars in those space movies.

Freshmen

Another thing, Freshmen just don't know what to do. It seems that they can't even walk. They are always bumping into you. And they've got that "Hello Habit" too.

You're crammed in some corner of the Pie Shop. You haven't been able to find the friend you were planning to meet. You're just about to take you're first sip of some of that wonderful gumbo soup when a skinny little face pops in between you and your soup. "Hi" it says, "I'm Bill. Is this chair taken?" You suggest that he should confer with the person sitting in it. He blushes. You tell him not to feel badly, and give him a couple of tips on the "ins" and "outs" of the Student Handbook.

Nurses

Well most of the best people in the world can't walk and so I'm surely not down on Freshmen. In fact the most obvious improvements in Villanova are to be seen in the Freshmen nurses. There are lots of pretty ones? Never seen so many pretty nurses! They seem to be different too. I mean they just don't look like nurses. I even saw one with long, sort of "beat" hair. Would you believe it? A hippie nurse.

Profs

First day frustrations are more subtle, but felt for sure in the classroom. Figuring out your prof is what I'm thinking of. What a task that is! They are clever too. We can never forget that.

Take the one's that come in, smile, and assign the first 200 pages for the next day. They say they believe in "diving right into the course." You felt like diving right out of the window. But then they might be old softies underneath it all. Yet who is to say?

Soft Sellers

The one's that I'm particularly suspicious of are the "soft sellers," the cheery one"s that assure you that they will spend AT LEAST the first two weeks talking, getting aquainted ,you know! By the middle of the period you are half expecting them to have each student stand, tell the class his name and recount his summer experiences. Don't be taken by these devils. Expect a quiz the next class. The best thing to do is read the first 200 pages.

Suggestions

This tenseness will pass. Seniors, remember your place. There's no more card playing, dart throwing, TV watching for you. Get out there and stabilize this campus. Juniors, you should be a personage by now. Let those freshmen know who you are. Snear at them. Stick your tongue out at them if you must. If you don't they'll be sitting down next to you all year.

Sophs, try and find some O.C. friend to escort you until things settle down a bit. And freshmen, stop bumping into people. It's a sure sign of insecurity. Oh, profs, be straight-arrows. Your students wil love you for it.

Survival Tips For Freshman

by Jerry Bruderle

Once again around the campus sounds of Autumn can be heard; sounds like, "Hello, Sir", "Another quarter", "....OC's" and "When the twilight shadows" etc., come at you from all sides. These, of course, are from Freshmen. Face it Frosh you need help and that's why I'm here. First I would like to welcome the Class of 1967 (that's the year not the enrollment), to Villanova. Although this is not meant to be a "Dear Pie-Shop" column, I do come to give you advice. Just a few tips to make it a sucessful stay. You might call it " How to Sieze Power in the Dormitory." Advice on all fronts:

On Attending Football Games:

Go always except, Boston College, (if you go to Boston, you won't get to the game anyway), and bring an ample supply of toilet paper. Most guys take a date or a six-pack or both to the game. Some guys take a date and a sixpack and don't go to the game. But if you happen to take a girl from Bryn Mawr, take one without a beard. If your Logic Prof sees you with a bearded date — forget it!

On Campus Dress:

Don't wear a dress. Your high school outfit, (Black jacket with black buttons, black tie, black khakis, black T-shirt, black Flagg Flyers and sweat socks), won't do either. Dress conservatively to class, but after class wear something that sets you apart like a pair of Harcum sweat pants and wear them continuously. Don't wear your eighth grade safety belt. I'm sorry, fellas, rules is rules.

On Attending Lunch:

It's best to eat in a quiet place like the Boiler Room of the Annex, but the Residents Dining Hall will have to do. Wear a jacket with a bullet-hole in it and when they ask you tell them you can't explain it. Be mysterious.

On Attending Classes:

Use up your cuts in the first two weeks. When you finally come in the Prof will think you're someone else and you'll get 15 more. Play the Escape Artist role.

On Joining Activities;

Join some but criticize all you join. Join the Belle Aire and have your picture on every other page of the yearbook. Join the Rugby team, (just for kicks), the Hockey team, (a cool bunch of guys), and take up the drums, (to get even with your roommate). Don't join offbeat organizations like the Chess team or the Faculty. Never read the Villanovan.

This isn't much but it should get you through Armistice Day, and by then you'll be on the way out anyway. Fret not, for I can get you a job selling coat hangers in a Nudist Camp. Until then, stay sober and don't lose your dink.

Okay, who goofed? Which one of you Frosh threw his pie back?

Over-Due Books A Perennial Problem For Students,Library

by Rusty Miller

"Yeah, out of nine books they only had one." Strike a familar note? Remember last year when you had that term paper to do? You went over to the library . . . You know, that building with the front porch and flowers . . . at the other end of the campus . . . That's it!

Well, you went over to the library and spent half an hour going through the card catalogue. You found several books that looked like they were just what you needed. Right? Then you spent fifteen minutes filling out withdrawal slips. The third and final ordeal was waiting for ALL the books to be brought out from the stacks. I did say ALL, didn't I?

Private Library

Well, funny thing! They didn't have all of them, did they? What do you mean they didn't have any of them? Oh, they had a couple, but they weren't the ones you really wanted. Funny thing about that. They still didn't have them two weeks later, eh? I thought the books had to be returned in two weeks. Yeah, really burns you doesn't it. Guys don't return books . . . then, when you need them the library doesn't . . .

Say that's a nice little private library you have there. Books from home, eh? What do you mean, not exactly . . . VILLANOVA COLLEGE LIBRARY? Ummmm . . . you didn't get a chance to take them back . . . and you didn't think they'd be missed . . . with ALL those books that library, like the ones you tried to get that weren't there, eh?

The Big Joke

Yeah, that really burns you doesn't it? Guys who take books out and don't give a hoot about anyone but themselves. They got the information they were after, so the heck with the next poor sap who needs those books. After all, they're important men and important men can't be bothered with trivialities like returning borrowed books.

Come to think of it, it is pretty funny, you know, being so cool and pulling a stunt like that. Think about it next time you're over there in that building with the front porch and flowers, when you have two weeks left to do your term paper. Think about it when the lady says she's sorry, but none of the books you want are there. Think about the other big man who took out those books you need. Funny isn't it? Haha! Right?

Solution

Seriously, think about it. No, don't think about it. Do it! Return the books when you're through with them. If everyone got into this habit, made that little extra effort and returned the books when they were finished with them . . . instead of letting them lay around for a couple of months—this includes faculty members — everyone would get a lot more work done, A LOT EASIER.

Should the library start a get-tough policy? Should the student be called into his dean's office when a book has not been returned after a prompt notice and a few days grace? Must it come to that?

CAUGHT IN PASSING

Listening We Have Liked

by Jan Dyroff

Ever since Newton Minow came out with now-famous "vast wasteland" statement, the communication media under the FCC have received their fair share of flak. Most of it was not undeserved and some of it is still warranted, but then that is a reflection on popular taste.

On the other side of the coin, there is much around today that is praiseworthy, particularly on the radio. Not everyone is aware of this fact, due in no small part to the predominance of TV.

Better Sounds

The better sounds can be found mostly on FM because there are few standard broadcasters who are willing to take the little extra risk necessary to provide better than average fare. To be a line straddler contents them.

There are, however. a few significant exceptions. WRCV with its good music policy has a solid winner all the way around; the same goes for WCAU's DJ-ess Sylvie. For those who like to dig just a little bit there are two stations that come in only at night which have a better-than-average musical format and they are Richmond's WRVA and New York's WNEW.

Local Lights

To turn the spotlight purely local, we must shift to the higher, megacycle band. From 88 to 108 a whole spectrum of musical colors is presented. WFLN presents mostly classical music, and good contemporary classical can be found on WXPN.

In the FM band there are two DJ's of, well, different taste, Harry Prime on WPBS, and Joe Zawacki on WHAT. One is general and the other is specific to a degree.

Prime's Prime

Harry is an alumnus of the Ralph Flanagan group and so he knows the music industry from the inside out. He builds a show around his good and surprising taste. He presents a varied and knowledgable selection of, not only swing era tunes, but also more recent selections.

Drawing on his knowledge he adds bits to the music, like who the arranger was, or who a certain soloist was, something missing in liner notes that only a good ear or a great memory can supply.

Homegrown Joe

Joe, on the other hand, is an alumnus of Villanova, if that means anything. He can be caught in his Sunday night stint at 96.5. His subject is classics in jazz, and his philosophy is "It's gotta swing." And swing it does.

Where else in the course of one evening can a listener go from a Paul Mares solo made back in the days of when to a hard bop piece? That Joe's taste is good goes without saying.

Hippies Only

Joe delights in playing the things that nobody else is playing. If you aren't hip enough to catch what's going on, he'll explain it either after the set on the air or personally on the phone.

Well, as Washington bureaucrats change, "the vast wasteland" becomes "the unknown quantity", but here and there are a few known and knowing quantities. Harry and Joe are two of them. Listen to them, why don't you? You'll be doing yourself a favor. I guarantee you.

Smile Frosh, this is the closest you'll get to real food for a while. Enjoy yourself while you can.

Down With Everything!

Villanova's newest political group, the Anarchist Union, will meet on the Green during the activities period of September 26.

This group is expressly designed for all political malcontents regardless of actual affiliation. It is non-almost everything. This is the most appealing aspect of the organization.

V.A.U. is a study group, not an action group. It will not actually do anything, which is perfectly in keeping with the tradition of Villanova undergraduate organizations. This fact will also keep the House Un-American Activities Committee happy.

Plans are being formulated for a publication to be put out by the V.A.U. Being realistic, the editor promises only sporadic issue of the V.A.U. literaro-political effort.

A unique feature of the V.A.U. is that there will be no officers, elected or otherwise, as this is only fitting for an organization of this type. It is also planned to completely ignore the Student Council as an official policy.

De Facto heedlessness of the Student Council seems to be a policy of many activities but the Union will pioneer de jure heedlessness.

All interested students, faculty members, and anyone else is invited to attend the first meeting. No invitation in general is to be issued for future meetings as there may not be any.

1963 Freshmen Orientation Sees Introduction Of Tour

Burdened with baggage and ominous expressions, the Freshman Class of over 1180 members arrived on Tuesday, September 10, for the start of orientation and their first contact with the OC's.

While waiting on line for registration, the Class of '67 was introduced to the spirit at Villanova by chanting members of the Orientation Committee. During this period the parents of the frosh were given a reception in the C & F cafeteria.

The frosh were treated to movies on Wednesday and Friday nights.

The highlight of the week's activities was "Truth or Consequences Night" on Thursday.

Area Trip

An innovation this year was the area tour of Philadelphia sponsored by the Blue Key.

The following week a pep rally was held on Thursday night behind the stadium.

A mixer was held for the frosh on Friday evening. Invited to this were girls from many of the area schools.

The game with West Chester saw the Class of '67 attired in white shirts and blue "dinks," seated together in a block.

Seven PhD's Head New Faculty List

New members of the Villanova faculty for the fall term have been announced.

The new members of the College of Arts and Sciences include the following: Dr. Robert H. Davis, Associate Professor of Biology; Dr. Robert L. Grob, Associate Professor of Chemistry; Dr. William B. Langan, Associate Professor of Biology; Dr. Francis D. Lonergan, Assistant Professor of Mathematics; Dr. Jagdis L. Nanda, Associate Professor of Mathematics; Dr. John Riva, Assistant Professor of Geology.

Others are: Dr. August A. Sardinas, Associate Professor of Mathematics; Mr. Edward M. Bell, Instructor of Modern Languages; Mr. James M. Bergquist, Instructor of History; Mr. Daniel B. Carroll, Instructor of History; Mr. John R. Cassidy, Instructor of Philosophy; Mr. Edward A. Kopper, Assistant Professor of English.

Also included are Mr. Lawrence J. McGary, Instructor of Sociology; Mr. James J. Murphy, Instructor of English; Mr. Jay D. Strieb, Instructor of Physics; Mr. James Wesolowski, Instructor of Speech and Mr. Barry S. Young, Instructor of Sociology.

The College of Engineering has three new members: Dr. Yasuo Yamaji, Associate Professor of Electrical Engineering; Mr. John A. Myers, Assistant Professor of Chemical Engineering; and Mr. Anthony J. Zygmont, Instructor of Electrical Engineering.

Mr. Gerald A. Dougherty, Instructor of Accounting, joins the College of Commerce and Finance.

There are three new theology teachers; the Rev. Nicholas T. C. Chang, OSA, Rev. Joseph Papin, OSA, and the Rev. Rudolph J. Hrascanec, OSA.

The following are new members of the School of Nursing: Miss Constance L. Ferris, assistant Professor; Mrs. Eileen M. Hoffman, Instructor; Mrs. Margaret M. Starznski, Instructor; and Mrs. Edith L. Thornton, Instructor.

The Office of the Post Graduate Study Advisor has moved from Gallberry Hall to 208 Tolentine.

Astronomy Dept. Schedules 3 Shows For Current Semester

The Villanova Astronomy Department, headed by the Rev. Edward F. Jenkins, O.S.A. has announced a schedule of planetarium shows for the current semester.

There will be three presentations of each of the three programs planned. Two shows will be given on Friday evenings at 8 p.m. and 9 p.m., followed by a matinee on Saturday afternoon at 3 p.m.

The three productions to take place on the fourth floor of Mendel Hall will be: "The Brightest Star in the Sky" on October 18-19; "The Fourth Dimension" on November 22-23; and "The Star of Bethlehem" December 20-21.

There will be an admission fee of 25 cents, and those attending will be obliged to make reservations. Reservations may be made between 1 p.m. and 4 p.m. at the office of the Astronomy Department on the fourth floor of Mendel Hall.

Following the shows, the audience will be permitted to use the observation deck if the weather is favorable.

The very successful Intercollegiate Jazz Festival will be a Student Council function this year and has been assigned as a Presidential Special Committee under Eddie Bride as chairman. Plans for making the weekend of this festival which will be held on Friday, Feb. 7 into a Mardi Gras weekend are being contemplated.

The Student Council can only be as effective as those it represents and therefore invites and encourages the expression of your suggestions or opinions through your elected delegates. Only as an effective body representing interested students can student government meet the needs of its constituents.

Editor Barry Thornton Requests Material For Fall 'Lynx' Issue

Barry Thornton, editor-in-chief of the Lynx, is requesting contributions for the fall issue.

Material in the form of humor, short stories, essays, poetry, and creative art is being sought by the staff. All undergraduates in the university are welcomed to submit their work.

Members of the editorial board include: John Sargent and John Ryan, associate editors; Hillary Russell and Bill Hart, poetry editors; Jim Murphy, layout editor; Rich Connors, business manager; Peter Murphy, copy editor; Andy Lovas, art editor; Dennis O'Hara, publicity director, and Bill Vaughn, circulation manager.

All matter may be left at 243 Sheehan Hall, 447 Tolentine Hall, or with any staff member.

Any student who is interested in joining the Lynx staff may consult one of the respective editors. No previous publication experience is necessary.

Croney Appointed Commander Of Midshipman Battalion

The Villanova NROTC battalion of midshipmen recently started its training schedule with appointed seniors filling the top billets.

The following men, having shown varying degrees of achievement were awarded positions as midshipmen-officers within the battalion structure.

Midshipman J. Kenneth Croney, a senior majoring in electrical engineering, is the new Battalion Commander.

J. Kenneth Croney

As a student in Villanova's College of Engineering, he has made the Dean's List for six consecutive semesters with a present cumulative average of 3.46.

Aside from his NROTC pursuits, Midshipman Croney is a member of WWVU, The Villanovan, Villanova Engineer, A.I.-E.E., Eta Kappa Nu, The Electrical Engineering Honors Fraternity, and Phi Kappa Pi.

Upon graduation, he will receive his commission as a Second Lieutenant in the United States Marine Corps.

Staff

Midshipman Croney's staff will consist of John R. Hagerty, Executive Officer, Victor R. Urbanski, Operations, Richard G. Shiavi, Personnel Officer, R. C. Fitzgerald, Supply Officer, John P. Leidy, Adjutant, William F. Malloy, Public Information Officer, Daniel J. Seltzer, Education Officer.

Recently, a "Big and Little Sister" picnic was held on the grounds of St. Francis Convent. The affair which occurred on Thursday, September 12, was a gathering of the sophomores and their little sisters, the freshmen.

On the following day, the Annual Tea and Fashion Show presented by the sophomore members of Pi Theta Chi Sorority ended Orientation Week activities for some 60 freshmen women. The program was presented at the Sixty-ninth St. branch of the Arnold Constable department store under the direction of Elinor Wasileski, chairman.

All sorority members as well as freshmen were welcomed by Margie Stupak, president. Judy Mindnick followed and explained the significance of the uniform and cap of the Villanova nurse.

the engineering-science line rule

The trend to DECI-LON is easy to see... easy to understand. This newest concept in slide rule design and operation has won enthusiastic approval among slide rule users.

Good reasons why: greater computing capacity, greater logic, greater consistency, greater everything important to efficient slide rule operation.

NEW! Now there's a DECI-LON 5" for your pocket — a convenient auxiliary to the DECI-LON 10" for your desk. 4619

Mr. Hagerty handed over the helm of the Social Affairs Committee to the team of John Roberts and Jack Ryan.

Chad Mitchell

Adequate exposure on prominent television programs such as the Bell Telephone Hour, the Pat Boone and Bob Newhart Shows, and Hootenanny, has done little to diminish the popular image they created through their Kapp albums, "Mighty Day on Campus" and "The Chad Mitchell Trio At The Bitter End."

In a recent interview with WWVU's Mike DiBenedetto at St. John Terrell's Music Circus at Lambertville, the Trio explained their affinity for folk-singing.

DiBenedetto learned that the Trio never claimed to be folk singers, although they have carved a deep niche for themselves in the folk and popular music world.

They believe that a folksinger is one who has experienced the things about which he sings and has intimate knowledge of the areas from which his music springs.

The Chad Mitchell Trio, nevertheless, makes ample use of folk material, feeling that the folk idiom conveys, in the most artistic and effective manner, those ideas with which the Trio identifies and wishes to express.

Dilworth Lecture Cancelled By ICG Chairman Cardamone

The Villanova Chapter of the Intercollegiate Conference on Government yesterday confirmed a report that the scheduled Richardson Dilworth lecture for October 8 in Vasey Hall Auditorium has been officially cancelled. The ex-mayor of Philadelphia was slated to address the entire student body.

Chairman Jerry Cardamone, a senior English major, disclosed that all the final preparations had been called off due to the pending address by Dilworth to the Law Forum in November. He noted that the action taken was with the advice of the Dean of Extra-curricular Activities Fr. Richard Appicci, OSA.

Arrangements for the lecture had been under the supervision of Frank Sauers, Chairman of the Activities Committee. It was originally hoped, Sauers pointed out, that the lecture by a major figure was the first to be offered this fall on the campus and would serve to strenghten the club. This is especially necessary in view of the several other politically orientated organizations on campus.

Sauers did however appear optimistic when it was asked whether the club had other plans for speakers. He said that the club would attempt to offer several other lecturers before the end of the semester, possibly in conjunction with the I.R.S.

Cardamone also announced that the first meeting of the club membership and all interested applicants will be held tomorrow at 10:30 a.m. in 106 Vasey Hall. He particularly stressed that the club is always willing to accept qualified individuals.

The ICG is a non-partisan political organization that is statewide and includes about sixty of the colleges and universities in Pennsylvania. It endeavors to have the member learn not through instruction but rather through practice and experience.

To achieve this end the club involves itself in a strict adherence to parliamentary procedure and the social activities of the region.

The program for the current year will include several other prominent speakers, and the regional and state conventions.

McCarthy Announces Formation Of Council Secretarial Staff

The Secretary of the Student Council, Joe McCarthy, has announced the expansion of the Student Council Secretarial Staff. The first meeting of those who have already expressed interest in this organization and any others who might have an interest will be held tomorrow at 3:30 in the Student Council Office.

The staff will be set up under the supervision of McCarthy for the first semester and would serve the Council members and authorized personnel in matters pertaining to the usual duties of a paid secretary.

The schedule will be established so that each member of the staff will spend some time in the office during the week.

At the beginning of the second semester, McCarthy plans to let the staff hold its own elections. He has also suggested the office hours when the office would be open and manned by the staff would be between 11:30 and 1:30 and 2:30 and 5:00 each class day.

Anyone interested in joining the staff is required to attend the meeting scheduled for tomorrow or to contact the Secretary of the Council immediately. Applicants may either be male or female.

Foreign Trade Expert William P. Cochran To Give Interviews

Students at Villanova University interested in foreign trade, international relations, and political science, will have a chance to discuss current events and opportunities in the foreign trade field when Professor William P. Cochran, Jr. of the American Institute for Foreign Trade comes to the campus on October 8, 1963.

Professor Cochran has been in the United States Foreign Service from 1928 to 1961, officiating as Vice Consul, Deputy Chief of Mission, Consul General. He also has held the rank of minister.

Students interested in going into the field of foreign commerce are urged to make an appointment through Mr. John A. Moritz, Director of Placement, for an interview with Professor Cochran on October 8.

Activities Office Names Moderators

The Office of the Dean of Student Activities has announced the following appointments as class moderators.

Rev. James Ryan, OSA, has been appointed as moderator of the Class of 1965 while Rev. Richard Appicci, OSA, will be moderator of the Class of 1966.

In other appointments, Rev. Marshall Halphen, OSA, has been named moderator of Belle Masque, while Rev. John O'-Rourke, OSA, will be moderator of the Spirit Committee.

Rev. George Riley, OSA, has been assigned as Director of Shamokinaki.

Wildcats Seek To Burn Rockets' Fuel After 21-9 Feast On Rams' Meat

by Tom Willson

Never was football fever so high as it is this season on the Toledo campus, a new coach and a new schedule are the results of the fresh outlook on football at the University. Tackling a tougher schedule, the Rockets plan to ambush any team that regards them lightly, for the new spirit has instilled a desire to win among the already rugged squad and Toledo fans look forward to a colorful and exciting season if this added incentive plays a major role in key conference games.

"Rebuilding Toledo" meets "Rebuilding Villanova" would best describe the clash of the two contestants. Villanova intends to preserve its reputation as an Eastern collegiate football power and will be battling to retain the prestige carried by the star bowl players of the '61 and '62 seasons. On the other hand, Toledo seeks to establish a name for the Rockets in the Midwest and will be a hungry and hard-playing ball club.

Competent Coach

Frank Lauterbur, so the experts say, is a capable and competent coach who fits neatly into the Toledo quest for gridiron glory. Lauterbur was a top-flight assistant at Army and Pitt and is installing the wing-T attack at Toledo; with emphasis upon passing and a wide open game, spectators will get more than their share of thrilling football.

In a recent press conference, Coach Lauterbur cited the possibility of disregarding the 2 unit system. "I'm certain now that some of our boys will go both ways. I'm not going to use two units for the sake of saying we have two units. We've got to keep our best football players in the game." Thus, lack of depth appears to be Toledo's major problem.

Field General for the Toledo squad will be Dan Simkell along with Phil Yenrick, a versatile quarterback who likes to run as well as pass. The Rockets hope to confuse enemy defenses with a speedy, elusive backfield, which includes Jim Gray (165) at left half, Don Baker (190) at right half, and Dave Danield (177) at fullback.

The bulk of the offensive chores will fall on the tricky trio. Villanova's backfield outweighs the Toledo backfield, 192.0 to 176.3.

Across the line it's Junior Jeff Martin at left end, senior Bob Hozniak at left tackle, senior Chuch Weaver at left guard, Ron Dandurand at center, sophomore Fred Zimmerman at right guard, senior Wynn Lembright (man to watch) at right tackle, and senior Dave Rhoades at end. Villanova's line also outweighs the Toledo line 222.0 to 209.8.

The Rockets are anxious to get off the launch-pad and are hoping that the Villanova anti-missle system is inadequate to stop the nuclear warheads from Toledo, Ohio. Nevertheless, Villanova fans are more cautious this year as a result of the Massachusetts upset and will not overlook a strong Toledo squad in view of conquering a mighty Buffalo.

YEAR OF THE COLLEGE QUARTERBACK!

This season, college football fans will see fast-moving action by the best quarterbacks in ten years! And no two are alike: some have quick arms, others quick minds —all have unusual talent! Intramural Activities Begin With Muff Day, Football Leagues

by Jerry Bruderle

Villanova's Intramural program opens its Fall schedule this week with the annual Muff Day activities and the opening of the Touch Football League today. Following the start of football, the dorm decorations for Nick Basca weekend, the Intramural Cross-Country run and the Swimming and Diving Championships will be held on successive weeks in October.

Flag-Tag

The Touch Football League inaugurates play with over 60 teams participating. Games will be played on Mendel and Austin Fields, Monday through Friday, starting at 2:30, 3:30 and 4:30. As was the case last year, the game will be Flag-Tag; that is, the yellow flag worn by each player must be grabbed in order to "tackle" the ball carrier, instead of the conventional two-hand touch. Copies of rules and technicalities are available in the Intramural office.

Homecoming

Nick Basca Weekend is highlighted by the Buffalo game on October 4, which is Homecoming. Separate awards are presented to the individual dorms and for float decorations. Eight members of the faculty have accepted positions as judges and will be driven around to the various dorms in cars supplied by the Intramural office.

Judging will be based on originality, execution, and presentation. Fedigan Hall received a plaque from the Intramural Department as last year's first place entry.

Summer Review

by Roy Baron

Chicago, New Mexico, California, Japan, Russia, Poland, Germany, England, Ireland, across the nation and around the world, during the summer the headlines were made by Villanova athletes. In N.C.A.A., A.A.U., and in international dual meets, and in the professional ranks, Wildcat starters continued their brilliant performances.

The Villanova trackmen, fresh from a fourth consecutive victory in the outdoor IC4A meet at Randall's Island, N.Y., headed toward Albuquerque, New Mexico, for the N.C.A.A. championships with high hopes of bringing home the national title. However, despite the 16-point performance of Vic Zwolak, the Wildcats were forced to settle for a fifth place finish.

Traynor Collapses

The difference was mainly caused by the high altitude of that southwestern city. In the 3000 meter steeplechase favored Pat Traynor was unable to acclimate himself and collapsed from exhaustion.

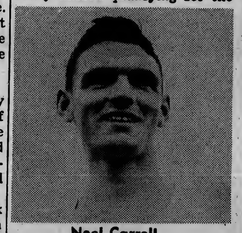
The more fortunate Zwolak was unaffected, finishing first in 9:10.1. The previous day he had garnered his other six points with a third place finish in the six mile run. Other Mainline point producers were Rolando Cruz with a second place finish in the pole vault and Noel Carroll, who ran third in the 880.

A.A.U. Meet

The next stop for some of the trackmen was the A.A.U. meet in California. There, Traynor had more success. He led teammate Zwolak in a 1-2 finish in the steeplechase. This earned for both boys the right to compete in the European meets.

Also at the A.A.U. meet former Villanovan Paul Drayton finished in a dead heat with Henry Carr in the 220. This assured Paul of a second trip to Russia.

Fourth Place



Don Webster finished a close fourth, only two-tenths of a second behind the winning time of 20.4. As a whole Villanova finished fourth in the team standings with a 26-point total.

On the European tour it was Zwolak who met with bad luck, as he pulled some back muscles shortly before leaving for Russia. Unable to train correctly, Vic had to settle for a fourth place finish in every race he ran, while Traynor was able to win the steeplechase in both Poland and Germany.

And In Britain

In Dublin and London at the same time, Noel Carroll was earning all the headlines. During summer competition in his native Ireland and in England, Noel won 14 of the 15 half-miles in which he ran. Only Canada's Bill Crothers was able to conquer Carroll, but Noel avenged that defeat two days later.

In the swimming world it was Dick McDonough who again carried the Villanova banner. In the outdoor A.A.U. meet in Chicago, Dick qualified for the U.S. team sent to Japan with fourth place finishes in the 100 and 200 meter freestyle. He also finished fifth in the 100 meter butterfly. Jack Geoghegan narrowly missed qualifying for the trip as he lost out in a swim-off for eighth place in the 100 meter freestyle.

In Tokyo McDonough was a member of the 400 and 800 meter freestyle relay teams, both of which set world's records. He also swam to an American record in the 100 meter freestyle with a 54.0-clocking, and finished second in the 200 meter freestyle. In Osaka, Dick finished first and second in the 100 and 200 meters respectively, and he also swam the anchor leg on the winning 800 meter relay team.

In the sport of sailing, senior Dan Hurley finished sixth in the North American Men's Single-Handed Championships held at Long Beach, California.

On the Pro Front

Billy Joe, Larry Glueck, and Richie Richman were the Wildcats to make good in the professional ranks. Joe, playing for the Denver Broncos of the American Football League, drew rave notices for his play at fullback throughout the exhibition season.

Glueck, Villanova's most valuable player last season, received several most valuable votes from the sportswriters viewing his play at defensive back in the College All-Star victory over the Green Bay Packers.

Richman, on the other hand, signed a baseball contract with the Phillies. Sent to Bakersfield in the California League.

Sophs Rout Frosh 120-75 In Annual Muff Day Debacle

by Terry Cooney

With cries of 'we'll win Muff Day" as their rallying song, a determined band of freshmen reported to Mended Field last Monday to enter into mortal combat with their sophomore oppressers in the annual Muff Day competition.

On Sunday, for the first time since the institution of Muff Day, the females of the freshman and sophomore classes battled enthusiastically in games that looked like basketball and baseball; however, any resemblance to these nationally-known sports was purely coincidental.

The frosh girls proved to be too much for their soph counterparts in basketball and pushed the Freshman Class to an early lead in the Muff Day score, 15 to 5. The femme fatales of the Sophomore Class fought back valiantly and, with the unusual pitching of Holly McLeese, triumphed on the softball diamond to tie the score.

The Muff Day activities opened Monday with the egg toss, a rather delicate game in which a team from each class play catch among themselves until the soft splat of a crushed egg declares the other team the winner.

The frosh proved to be the gentler of the classes and leaped into the lead, 30 to 25. This gentleness was to prove the downfall of the frosh, for the sophomore contestants — appropriately named "the animals" — were determined to live up to their nomer.

Spotting the freshmen the initial contest, the sophomores went on to sweep the remaining events with very little trouble. They almost met their Waterloo, however, in the pushball game but rallied behind what looked quite like football's illegal flying wedge and swept the game.

The final contest, the football game, held no meaning at all in this year's contest, as the sophomores held an insurmountable 105 to 70 lead. However, the battle cry of the upperclassmen must have been "no quarter," as they scored on the first play from scrimmage and went on to take the game, 13 to 0, and Muff Day, 120 to 75.

When it was all over, intramural director Ed Geisz expressed great pleasure at the enthusiastic turnout, and commented that the Sophomore Class deserved recognition for the way they organized the frosh to make Muff Day a success.

And so blue dinks, name buttons, and blue and white bow ties will still be the freshmen fashion until Wednesday.

Outlook — 1963-64

by George Nicolaus

Villanova's efforts to match the enviable athletic achievements of the past two years should provide many thrills for current Wildcat sports fans. All four major teams are enjoying two consecutive winning seasons along with many individual and team championships.

Football

Villanova football—1963 style — will bear little resemblance to the overpowering depth and crunching power which produced banner seasons and two straight bowl appearances.

If the Wildcats of Alex Bell are to maintain the winning tradition, it will be the result of a team which makes few mistakes while taking advantage of any opponent"s errors. This is a big order for a squad with three quarterbacks who have played ten minutes of varsity offensive football among them.

Bill Sherlock has plenty of game experience — on defense —as well as one bad knee. Dave Connell and Don Koshlap ran last year's freshman squad with Connell strong on the rollout.

Jim Thomas, team captain, and Jack Boyle are the only backs with experience to speak of, although Dick Sernyak and two sophomores, Tom Brown and Joe Santomauro , should provide help.

The White Unit will field a strong, experienced seven up front with Al Atkinson a standout at tackle, but the Blue line is an unknown quantity. Much of V.U.'s success this fall will depend on the development of these linemen.

Look for good, solid line play both ways by the first unit with the offense erratic at first while gradually gaining experience through the first three games. Taking all this into consideration, a 5-4 season (sorry no bowl bids) seems reasonable.

Basketball

Please do not confuse this year's Villanova basketball squad with the team. It's true that Walter Jones & Co. will do quite a bit of running up and down the Palestra and other assorted courts throughout the East this winter, but if you'll take careful notice every so often, the team in Blue and White will pause to set up Jack Kraft's still puzzling, fluid zone or gather in a rebound or stray pass before initiating the next dash downcourt.

Seriously speaking, it should be lots of fun. Jones, George Leftwich, Bill Melchionne, and Richie Moore are all death from 20 feet, excellent ballhandlers, and just love to fast break. Add 6-7 Jim Washington, 6-9 Al Sallee, and 6-5 Mike Trailes to gather in rebounds and Eric Erickson providing a good supporting performance and . . . Cave Ramblers . . . Cave Bearcats!

With a so-so schedule and crossed fingers this team should win 20 of 25 scheduled games, the City Series, and receive a tournament bid for the third consecutive year.

Track

The track squad which finished fourth in last June's NCAA meet at Albuquerque was hit hard by graduation (Traynor, Hammock, Kerr) and then dealt an almost crippling blow when Don Webster, Ron Hangey, and two outstanding freshman sprinters failed to meet the rising academic standards.

There are still some outstanding individuals around in Noel Carroll, Vic Zwolak, and Rolando Cruz; while juniors Tom Sullivan, Marty Ferko, Marshall Uzzle, Dave Hyland, Larry Livers, Stan Kozlowski, and Jimmy Orr should be ready to deliver on their tremendous high school promise. Prediction: A sweep of IC4A indocr and outdoor titles in close contests with Yale while insufficient depth will prevent us from being an NCAA factor.

Baseball

With five solid juniors returning from a surprising 13-9 1963 team, Art Mahan's 1964 baseball squad is ready to go places, namely the NCAA playoffs.

Mike Zaia, Andy Camello, Jack Emery, Bob Hall, and Art Mahan Jr. are all steady and experienced.

Sports Round-up

. The newly formed NROTC League of five football teams will play each Tuesday afternoon at 4:30 p.m. on Mendel Field as part of the Intramural program. One league champion will be selected to compete in the Intramural championships during the week of November 11.

Plans also include entries in the basketball, softball and volleyball intramural programs sponsored by the University.

Lt. Col. Johnson, Executive Officer of the NROTC unit has placed particular emphasis on this activity in recognition of the need for an active physical fitness program as a integral aspect of midshipmen training.

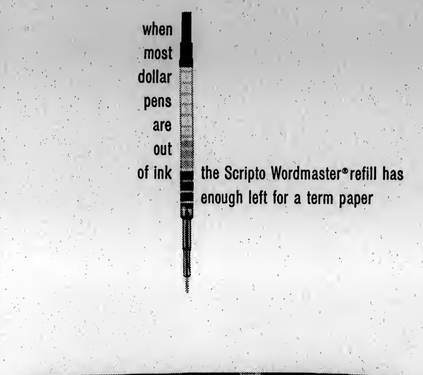
Villanova's rugby team, looking forward to one of its finest seasons, opened practice sessions in preparation for the opening game on September 28. The team is still looking for players to fill certain key positions on the roster.



No experience is necessary. Anyone interested in playing should report to practice, any weekday at 3:30, on the field accross the Pike from the Stadium.

The 1963 edition of the Villanova Sailing Team, led by senior Dan Hurley, will open its season on September 28 when the 'Cats face Penn in their first dual meet. The team has also scheduled fifteen regattas this fall against other members of the Middle Atlantic Sailing Association.

FRESHMEN Basketball Managers Wanted

Interested freshmen may submit names to Basketball Office in Field House any weekday after 2:30 p.m. Closing date October 15.

...and a couple of lab reports

Just about the time you figure your Wordmaster should be running out of ink, unscrew the cap. The new see-thru refill says in no uncertain terms that you've got enough ink left to go on writing for quite a while. You shouldn't be surprised. For even though Wordmaster is slim and streamlined, it has a much larger ink capacity than ordinary dollar pens. And that makes it just about the most inexpensive dollar pen around.

By the way . . . you can get a handsome matching pencil to go along with your Wordmaster. And that's only a dollar, too.

Villanova Kicks Off The Season With West Chester

Wildcats Defeat West Chester 21-9; Defense-Good And Offense-Weak

by Tom Bruderle

As 11,000 fans and an area-wide TV audience looked on, Villanova opened its sixty-ninth football season with a 21-9 triumph over a determined West Chester squad last Saturday.

A great deal of local attention was focused on the game, because for the first time in several meetings, West Chester had a chance of making the game close and possibly winning it.

Although lighter and faster than in recent years, the Wildcats had lost nearly all of their backs through graduation, and this year's hopes rested on a quarterback's questionable leg and/or his two sophomore replacements. West Chester hopes were on a team that had more overall weight than its predecessors.

Although the offense played well throughout the game, it was the defense that made the most noise, particularly in the first half. Bill Sherlock's fumble on the first play from scrimmage was recovered by West Chester. Five plays later, Tom Gray booted a field goal as the Rams drew first blood with the game 2:30 young.

However, with Al Atkinson, Chappy Moore, Jack Clifford and Jack McDonald causing the most havoc, Villanova's defense began to throw West Chester's Terry Eberly for huge losses. (At half-time West Chester was -13 yards in rushing.)

The effect of this pressure was suddenly realized when Bob Dunn, a 6-1 senior halfback intercepted one of Eberly's aerials on the Ram 40 and raced for the six-pointer. Jim Thomas's try for two points was no good.

Thanks to Eberly's arm, West Chester again threatened as they marched or passed to the Villanova 10. With second and goal on the locals ten, the seemingly omnipresent Dunn again swiped another Eberly pass, this time in the end zone and ran it out to the 23.

Shortly thereafter, following a fumble by Dick Sernyak, the Rams again moved to the Villanova one. On fourth down, Eberly tried to sweep left but was nailed for a big no gain by, of all people, Dick Sernyak.

Offense Jells

In the third quarter, the offense began to jell as Sherlock hit John Kelleher for six, culminating a 12 play 76 yard drive with 1:21 left. Mike Manger booted the extra point. Villanova's final score came on a one yard plunge by Jim Thomas. Don Koshlap came in and passed to Kelleher for two more.

Joe Santomauro's interception set up the score as he went 47 yards with the help of two fine side-line blocks. West Chester's only touchdown came on a fourth down pass, Eberly to Vince Grubb.

The 'Monster'

by Joe McCarthy

Open Letter to the 1963 Football Squad:

Last Saturday you defeated West Chester 21-9. It was the third consecutive opening game victory. If this is any indication of things to come, it could well mean a third consecutive bowl appearance.

In many ways you showed yourself capable of attaining this goal. We note especially the "monster" defense that allowed West Chester five yards in total rushing. Even the pass defense, which the post-game quarterbacks for the past two years have stoned, showed strength. This appeared mostly in the superb performance of your defensive right half Bob Dunn, whose two interceptions, one for a touchdown, sparked a somewhat weak offense.

The offensive difficulty Saturday was mostly inexperience. It will improve with each game this season as it did during the West Chester game. Next Saturday you will journey to Toledo where there will be new difficulties to overcome.

But with the things you will learn this week from your coaches, the flaws in the offense should disappear. And you should bring home your second triumph of the season Expect help from the bright spots of last Saturday's encounter. There were the hands and agility of Sophomore end John Kelleher, the speed of sophomore halfback Joe Santomauro, and the play of quarterbacks Bill Sherlock and Don Koslap.

The going won't be easy in the next three games. But you will find that there is a solid philosophy behind the scheduling of gradually more difficult games. This should work to your advantage.

But even now the post-game crew at Kelley's are pessimistic and cry that the best you can do is a five and four season. You've proved them and the pre-season experts wrong for the past two seasons. It can be done again.

As for support and spirit, unfortunately Villanova fans now have a sense of the future. This is a phenomenon resulting from the two consecutive bowl appearances. The spirit was not strong last week. The spectators came not so much as to cheer but more out of curiosity.

Neither you nor West Chester played at peak performances. Errors were made. But the important point is that the 'Cats continued their skien. Untested senior, junior and sophomore ballplayers shook off their butterflies and provided flashes of things to come.

You will, however, be criticized for the defensive letdown late in the game. But we think that this is just a normal reaction to the fact that you felt that the game had been won.

As far as the season is concerned, we feel that you might lose once but any other loss would be inexcusable. The material is there along with the talent. Whether you win the tenth game this season will be again up to yourselves.

'Cat Nips: Ram Coach Jim Bonder would provide quite a match for 'Cat tackle Jack McDonald with the little foray that took place on the sidelines Saturday . . . there were several occasions when the tempers nearly won out . . . watch for sophomore halfback Joe Brown to come into his own this season.

Basca Friday, Trio Saturday Spot Seniors' Stellar Weekend

by Mike Magro

Homecoming weekend, a traditional celebration presented by the Senior Class, will take place this Friday and Saturday, October 4 and 5.

Beginning the weekend activities will be the Nick Basca Dance on Friday evening at 9 p.m. in the Field House. The well known Paul Judge and his orchestra, and a female vocalist, will provide the music for the affair.

The Coventry Lads, formerly the Spires, will provide entertainment during the intermission of the four hour dance.

The Homecoming Queen will be selected by a panel of eight judges at a reception in the East Lounge before the dance.

The queen will be chosen in accordance with her appearance, poise and personality. Ed Geisz is the chairman of the Queen contest. The Homecoming Queen will reign over the entire weekend's activities.

Preceding the dance there will be a pep rally in the quad between Sullivan and Sheehan Halls at 8:15 p.m.

Student Council members who worked to make the dance a success were: Don Nicholas, ticket sales; Sue McDonald, the scroll-shaped favors; Pat Blake and Bob Cardone, decorations; John Sperger, band arrangements and Jim O'Connor, publicity.

The Saturday festivities will begin with the Villanova-Buffalo football game in the Villanova Stadium. Fraternities, classes, and organizations will present floats during the halftime ceremonies.

The theme of this year's half-time ceremonies will be "Fantasyland." The float best presenting this theme will be given an award. The Queen and her court will circle the field as the Villanova band presents their halftime demonstrations.

A concert will be presented Saturday evening at 8 p.m. featuring the lively and popular Chad Mitchell Trio.

Tickets for the concert are presently on sale from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. in the C&F cafeteria and 10:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. in the Pie Shoppe.

This year's Homecoming weekend is entirely the function of the Senior Class headed by Jim Murphy. Co-chairmen for the affair are Jerry Campana and Joe McGill.

Weaver To Lecture On Urban Difficulties At First Law Forum

The Law Forum series for 1963-1964 has been announced by Harold Gill Reuschlein, Dean of the School of Law at Villanova.

Cognizant of the current urbanization of the United States, that is, the transition from a predominantly rural society to a predominantly urban society, the Forum has scheduled three meetings addressed to the subject, "The City Faces its Problems."

A fourth meeting will discuss the place of Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes in our juristic history.

The public is invited to attend the Forum sessions which take place at 8:30 p.m. in Garey Hall.

The Law Forum program was arranged by Professor Donald W. Dowd, chairman of the session.

As in past years, the presentation is again made possible through the generosity of Thomas J. Reilly of the Delaware County Bar.

On Friday, October 18, Robert C. Weaver, Administrator of the Federal Housing and Home Finance Agency, will speak.

Richardson Dilworth, former Mayor of Philadelphia, will give his address on Friday, November 15.

The Mayor of Chicago, Richard J. Daly, will give his dissertation on Thursday, February 27.

Speaking on Friday, April 3 on Oliver Wendell Holmes, will be Mark DeWolfe, Professor of Law at Harvard University.

William F. Buckley To Open Villanova Forum On Oct. 17

The Student Council announced that the first Forum in its lecture series for 1963-64 will be held in the Villanova Field House on Thursday, October 17.

Featured Speaker for the opening lecture will be William F. Buckley Jr., noted novelist and editor of the National Review. His topic will be "The Aimlessness of American Education".

Work for the program is headed by Ed Coffey and Jack Hohenadel, co-Chairmen of Cultural Affairs. The Forum is under the direction of Father George P. Lawless, Moderator.

Other speakers have been contacted for future lectures. Definitely slated for a future date is Sean O'Phealin, noted author, and critic. Throughout the year, the Forum hopes to present such speakers as Barbara Ward, Hubert Humphrey, Ted Kennedy, and James Michener.

The lectures are open to the public and admission is free.

NOTICE!

Rev. Joseph J. Gildea, OSA, Vice-President for Academic affairs has announced that October 11, 1963, is the last day for approved withdrawal from a class. After that date the grade WX (not included in the average) ceases to be applicable. Later W's are included in the average with no quality points added.

Previously the mid-term was the cut-off date.

Conductor Stokowski To Appear On Campus For Parents' Weekend

An added highlight to Parents' Weekend this year will be a concert conducted by Leopold Stokowski of the American Symphony Orchestra. This will be Mr. Stokowski's first appearance in the Philadelphia area.

The concert will be given at the Villanova Field House on Saturday evening, October 19, at 8:30 p.m.

Tickets prices are $3.00 for the orchestra and $2.50 for the balcony. They may be purchased at the Pie Shoppe on or before October 11.

Students should obtain their tickets early as a capacity crowd is expected at this concert.

William E. Schubert Chosen Alumni Head In Recent Election

William E. Schubert, class of '43, has assumed the position of President of the Alumni Association, filling the post left vacant by Edward J. Donahue, class of '33.

Presently employed in the law firm of Broderick, Schubert, and Fitzpatrick, Mr. Schubert has been the chairman of many committees in the association. He has also been active as chairman of similar committees in the Philadelphia Club of the association.

An experienced leader, Mr. Schubert proposes to engender a successful year for the association.

President-elect by succession is Dr. Patrick J. Romano, class of '30, of Orange, New Jersey. Also elected to office was Jacques E. Mauch, class of '43, who is now vice-president, filling the post vacated by Dr. Romano.

Mr. Donahue, the past president, will remain on the Executive Committee. This committee consists of the president, the president-elect, the past president, and the chairman of the association.

McGuinn Addresses Congress On 'State Of The Council'

The first session of the Villanova Student Council for the new scholastic year was keynoted by the State of the Council address by its Chairman, Martin McGuinn.

Rev. Richard Appicci, OSA, Council Moderator, opened the meeting with a general address to the Congress.

McGuinn, in his address, announced the following appointments: Rich Connors, Parents' Weekend Chairman; Ed Bride, Intercollegiate Jazz Festival Chairman; and Tom Stanley, Constitutional Revision Chairman.

NFCCS Bid

He also reported on the bid for the National Federation of Catholic College Students' Secretariat which Villanova made during the National Congress meeting. Although Villanova was defeated by Notre Dame, he did suggest that Villanova rebid next year.

Also announced by McGuinn was the rescheduling of the Student Senate meeting to nine days previous to Congress meetings. It is hoped that this new action will give all representatives the opportunity to consult their constituents about upcoming legislation.

Vice-President John Hagerty reported that among the activities scheduled in his committees are: the Leopold Stokowski Concert, October 19; the Student Council Dance, November 1; and the Student Council Mixer, December 6. Each of these activities are under the direction of the Social Affairs Committee.

Vice-President Jim McErlane noted in his report the scheduling of seven movies by the Movie Committee for the first semester. He also announced to the Congress that the Student Activities Committee has published the Student Activities Handbook and is presently accepting applications for the Senior Car Privilege.

Neal Stoneback, Vice-President for Educational Affairs, praised the work of the Cultural Affairs co-Chairmen Jack Hohenadal and Ed Coffey for their work in setting up the Student Council Lecture Program that will feature William F. Buckley on October 17.

Treasury Balance

The status of the treasury was announced by Bursar Jim O'Connor as being a balance of $1248. The Secretary Joe McCarthy reported on the advances made by the newly formed Student Council Secretarial Staff.

Neal Stoneback concluded the meeting with an Alumni report that stated the possibility that seniors might be invited to the Alumni cocktail parties after the football games.

Literary Club To Plan Golding, Albee Talks At Meeting Tomorrow

There will be an important meeting of the Literary Society tomorrow morning, Thursday, October 3, at 10:30 in 204 Vasey Hall.

Details concerning the forthcoming symposium on William Golding's best-selling novel, Lord of the Flies, will be finalized at this time. The Golding Symposium, announced moderator and club Vice-President Frank Sauers, will take place at 7:30 p.m. on Monday, October 21.

A tentative informal program on playwright Edward Albee, author of Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?—winner of the New York Drama Critics Circle Award for 1962—has been planned by President Frank Quattrone. The date of the discussion will be decided at tomorrow's meeting.

Programs of this type will be held at regular intervals during the course of the fall and spring semesters.

Seniors Can Sign Now For Remunerative Jobs

Placement Director John A. Moritz reports that the Placement Office is currently open for senior registration in preparation for job interviews.

The Placement Office located in the East wing of Sheehan Hall arranged job interviews for seniors and graduates with more than 200 companies and government agencies.

In 1963, 547 seniors registered for interviews. Of these, 248 registrants accepted jobs. On-campus recruiting was responsible for 187 of these acceptances. Of the remaining seniors, 15% entered military service, 19% pursued graduate studies and .9% pursued futures in the Peace Corps.

Seniors are urged by Mr. Moritz to secure their resumes in the Placement Office in preparation for the 1963 recruiting season extending from January through March.

Blue Key Plans For Parents' Weekend Include Variety Show, Football Game

Students will have a chance to host their families in the traditional Villanova manner during Parents' Weekend, October 18, 19, and 20. Plans are well under way for this Blue Key sponsored affair, according to Rich Conners, General Chairman.

The weekend will begin Friday evening at 8 p.m. with an address by the Rev. John Klekotka, OSA, President of the university. Immediately following the talk, parents will be entertained by the Annual Variety Show in the Field House.

Featured in the show will be the Villanova Band, the Spires, Turf'n Tinsel, folk singers, and a variety of other entertainment.

On Saturday, weekend events will continue with the registration of parents in the Field House at 9 a.m. Favors will be distributed to the mothers of students as a remembrance of the weekend.

Shortly after registration, parents will have the opportunity to meet with the deans of the various colleges in the C&F cafeteria.

The highlight of the afternoon will be the Villanova - George Washington football game in the stadium. At half-time, Marty McGuinn, President of the Student Body, will give his official welcoming address to the parents.

Following the game, several fraternities plan to hold cocktail parties for the parents.

To complete the day, the American Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Leopold Stokowski, will appear that evening in the Field House. This is the first in the concert series presented this year by the University.

The weekend will conclude on Sunday with a Mass celebrated by Father Klekotka at 11 a.m. in the Field House. Students and their parents are cordially invited to attend.

Kuehnelt-Leddihn To Address Conservative Club Members

A multilingual humanist, author, teacher, and traveler, Erik Ritter von Kuehnelt-Leddihn will be the guest lecturer of the Conservative Club on Tuesday, October 15 at 5:30 p.m., 110 C & F.

He counts French, English, German, Hungarian, Russian, and Japanese among his languages. Since receiving his doctornate degree from the University of Budapest, Mr. Kuehnelt-Leddihn has taught at Fordham, Georgetown, Chestnut Hill, and St. Peter's College; where he formerly was head of the Department of History and Sociology.

Prolific Author

This prolific author has written novels, among them Gates of Hell, which was confiscated by the Nazis, theoretical books, treatises, philosophical and theological essays. His magazine articles in the United States have appeared in such Journals as The Commonweal, The Critic America, The National Review, and The Journal of the History of Ideas.

Dr. Kuehnelt-Leddin wrote, "My studies in political theory have been largely directed toward finding ways to strengthening the great estern tradition of human freedom."

Freshman Enrollment Tops Twelve Hundred In Four Major Colleges

The Public Information Office has recently announced that the freshmen class enrollment is approximately 1,200 students from 23 states and eight foreign nations.

Many Villanovans come from the East coast. This year however, there is an increase in the number of students from distant areas. The class of 1967 has members from the states of Texas, California, Hawaii, and Louisianna.

Among the midwestern states represented in the freshmen class are Wisconsin, Oklahoma, Michigan, Ohio, and Illinois. New Villanovans also hail from West Virginia, Kentucky, Virginia, Florida, and Georgia.

Belle Masque Elects Jim Mason President, Sets First Play Date

Belle Masque, the Undergraduate Drama Society, has elected new officers for the 1963-'64 season. Assuming the position of president is James Mason. Other officers include Trinket Grubb, secretary; William Burns, social director and Peter Smith, Student Council representative.

The group's first production of the year, Inherit the Wind, by Lawrence and Lee, will be presented on Nov. 20 in VHA.

Tryouts for Belle Masque will be held in early October. Interested students should contact the various officers for further information. Club meetings are held every Thursday at 10:30 a.m. in the Classroom Annex.

First In Space, First In Peace

To-date the United States has spent billions of dollars on the exploration of space by both manned and unmanned vehicles. In the coming year the National Aeronautics and Space Administration plans to spend as much as twenty billion dollars.

There have been many different views as to the importance of the United States being the first to reach the moon. Former President Eisenhower has stated that anyone who would spend billions of dollars in a race to the moon for national prestige is nuts. There have been others, from both political parties, who have expressed the same opinions.

Those who make such statements would be the first to criticize the administration (as they were in 1957 when the Soviet Union launched Sputnik I) after a Soviet Space achievement. Further, national prestige would be a byproduct of a successful moon shot, not its primary objective.

Whether skeptics realize it or not the next war will be fought in space. This is not as fantastic as it may seem at first. The Soviet Union and the United States both realize that a total conflict between the two would result in the devastation of each nation. Barring brush-fire wars the next great war will have to be fought in the deep reaches of space.

Therefore it seems that it would behoove the United State to establish a commanding lead in space travel and adaptability. This assumes that the U.S. and the Soviet Union are exploring space separately. But what if the U.S. and the Soviet Union decide to explore space together as President Kennedy has suggested?

Some senators seem to think that a joint space venture is just the answer to the problem.

This would all be fine if the Soviet Union had made some indication that it would be willing to go along on such a venture. Even if the Soviet Union should accept, there is no guarantee that she would not still try to beat the U.S. to the moon while holding the joint project behind.

Unfortunately the Soviet Union has too much of a reputation of breaking promises and agreements with the United States and other nations. This is another reason why the United States should not hold back its space program.

As stated above therefore, the so-called race to the moon is not a matter of national prestige but rather a matter of national security.

There nothing stopping the Soviet Union from also putting up satellites which contain nuclear bombs (if they have not already done so.) The military advantages of putting an armed force in space are enormous.

While the United States may not wish to put bombs in space, the Soviet Union may, and this is another reason for the United States to continue its program of space exploration so that twenty years from now we do not find ourselves in the same position that we were in October of 1957.

Dedicated Do-It-Alls

There is on campus a small faction which decries the generally accepted philosophical credo of the typical student of Villanova — apathy. This unheralded, unsung minority has been aptly deemed "The Dougherty Hall Do-It-Alls."

And why not the criticism? Those resident students, whose second dorm (Floor Two, Dougherty Hall, of course) is also a second home to certain day-hops, harbor a genuine indignation toward their blind, unfortunate classmates who fail to advantage themselves of those practical and theoretical activities which are unqualified requisites for a well-rounded education.

The same individuals who put together a first-class college weekly (say the National Collegiate Press Service) are those who cast the deciding votes as members of an ever-expanding Student Council . . . are those who decide and execute the radio station's news and music policies . . . are those who handle audio and lighting at various campus concerts . . . are those who care about and mean something to the concept of Villanova.

Hail, Confusion!

Work expands to fill the time available. An apt corollary to this age-honored law is the one that states, confusion expands in commensuration with the number of people involved.

The government of the United States proves the rule rather than the exception. Too much confusion exists and a lot of it can be cleared up. A little domestic checking could easily rectify situations such as those that allows Estes to get where he did.

A little checking into inter-governmental relations and transactions can make such boondoggles as losing a few million dollars worth of wheat in transit a thing of the glorious past.

But the two above mentioned situations are significant mainly to the internal workings of the government, even though they be international in scope. The frightening immensity of the situation becomes clear when this incompetency infiltrates into the sphere of national security.

A few miscalculated judgements by the Rand Corporation nearly escalated a war with the Soviet Union in 1957. More judgments by this concern resulted in the scrapping of Skybolt, the manned bomber, and their computer only knows what else.

This confusion in federal dealing must be cleared up before an irrevocable situation is precipitated, either at home or abroad.

Flag And Motherhood

by Joe McCarthy

There are two types of rah-rah editorial. In most times little can be said or done about either to treat them in a different light and with literary freshness. The two in mind are Motherhood and the Flag.

We have no cry against the former (yet), but of late, there has arisen a strange spectacle on our own, the Villanova, campus. Disrespect for the Flag of the United States of America has been observed in several quarters. To all lovers of the flag and what it stands for, the present situation looms almost as soul-rocking to the American individualist as Marx, Lenin, and Stalin.

One of the two points in mind is the marvelous exhibition of brute strength and calisthenics that both football squads displayed during their opening game at Villanova this year. Both squads could be seen playing catch on the sidelines, doing various types of pushups, and generally disassociated with the fact that the National Anthem was being played.

The other point is even more salient. An organization, that bases its existence on the fact it is one of the Armed Forces of America, has displayed to the public eye on Tuesday afternoons during its Drill a laxity and disregard of the obligations that they are sworn to uphold. Those members of the Villanova NROTC within the immediate eye of their superiors do maintain the proper military decorum and respect for the flag and National Anthem. But those in the rear consider the time ripe for discussion of the vital Villanova interests such as statistics, hangovers, free love and sundry daydreamers.

Rather than conclude in the typical tripe, let it be said that the Villanovan strenuously urges action by the responsible authorities in both cases

Counterpoint

Equality?

by Frank Sauers

The fiery and impassioned defender of human toleration, Clarence Darrow, was once asked about his plea for equality of the races. The questioner wondered about the purity of the Anglo-Saxon race.

"Purity of the Anglo Saxon race," retorted Darrow, "the greatest race of sons of b... that ever infested the earth. Mind you, if there is such a race, I am one of them, because my ancestors lived in this country for nearly three hundred years. But I do not brag about it; I apologize for it."

Pathetic Tide

The pathetic tide of events in both north and south this past summer has caused all but the most emotionally passive non-white to feel a just inner compulsion to publicly apologize in some way for the insidious actions of individuals obviously ridden with a cancerous mental derangement.

But responsibility rests with more than a few. Blood drips from the hands of a minority, but the stain imprints the character of an entire people. It is a wonder Negro resentment has not shown itself sooner or been more violent in nature.

Unusual Revolution

These Negro revolutionaries are peculiar. They are non-violent. They seek no overthrow of the government. They seek not to desert, but to join. They simply demand a redress of grievances, a shattering of the fetters that have forced almost an entire people to content themselves with squalor, ignorance, and a deep sense of alienation. It is a moral disease that erupts on the surface as a blemish, as in the case of the Governor of Alabama. Fools bend to kiss the feet of an obscene tyrant who stands knee deep in the mire of his own hate. He is a pretender to the cause of freedom, yet ironically imposes on the people of his own state the most stringent denial of personal liberty in the nation's history.

Men of similar thinking decry the awesome power of the "encroaching central government." It is preposterous, they say, to dare to force a southern white to eat breakfast in the same room, possibly only fifty feet away from another person not of his color.

This, they say, is a dangerous tampering with the entire emotional complex of the southern white. His temperament is not used to it. Why, it just might shatter his whole physio-psychological makeup.

It is time for change. It is time to stop worrying about the horrible effect being in the same classroom with a Negro might have on the emotions of a young southern white student, and to begin worrying about the harm society inflicts on a Negro youth by crippling his intellect and spirit through inferior education and less than human treatment.

It is essential and just that the vice which has ensnared and thwarted development of the mind and spirit of an entire segment of the American people for centuries be removed, and their simple right to be practicing human beings recognized.

THE DEAN YOU SAVE MAY BE YOUR OWN

Colleges are complicated and bewildering places, filled with complicated and bewildering people. Today let us examine one of the most complicated and bewildering—yet fetching and lovable—of all campus figures. I refer, of course, to the dean of students.

Policeman and confessor, shepherd and seer, warden and oracle, proconsul and pal—the dean of students is all of these. How, then, can we understand him? Well sir, perhaps the best way is to take an average day in the life of an average dean. Here, for example, is what happened last Thursday to Dean Killjoy N. Dumper of the Duluth College of Belles Lettres and Pemmican.

At 6 a.m. he woke, dressed, lit a Marlboro, and went up on the roof of his house to remove the statue of the Founder which had been placed there during the night by high-spirited undergraduates.

Dean, Policeman, Confessor, Shepherd, Seer...etc.

At 7 a.m. he lit a Marlboro and walked briskly to the campus. (The Dean had not been driving his car since it had been placed on the roof of the girls dormitory by high-spirited undergraduates.)

At 7:45 a.m. he arrived on campus, lit a Marlboro and climbed the bell tower to remove his secretary who had been placed there during the night by high-spirited undergraduates.

At 8 a.m. he reached his office, lit a Marlboro, and met with E. Pluribus Ewbank, editor of the student newspaper. Young Ewbank had been writing a series of editorials urging the United States to annex Canada. When the editorials had evoked no response, he had taken matters into his own hands. Accompanied by his society editor and two proofreaders, he had gone over the border and conquered Manitoba. With great patience and several Marlboro Cigarettes, the Dean persuaded young Ewbank to give Manitoba back. Young Ewbank, however, insisted on keeping Winnipeg.

At 9 a.m. the Dean lit a Marlboro and met with Robert Penn Sigafoos, president of the local Sigma Chi chapter, who came to report that the Deke house had been put on top of the Sigma Chi house during the night by high-spirited undergraduates.

At 10 a.m. the Dean lit a Marlboro and went to umpire an intramural softball game on the roof of the law school where the campus baseball diamond had been placed during the night by high-spirited undergraduates.

At 12 noon the Dean had a luncheon meeting with the prexy, the bursar, and the registrar, at the bottom of the campus swimming pool where the faculty dining room had been placed during the night by high-spirited undergraduates. Marlboros were passed after luncheon, but not lighted, owing to dampness.

At 2 p.m., back in his office, the Dean lit a Marlboro and received the Canadian Minister of War who said unless young Ewbank gave back Winnipeg, the Canadian army would march against the U.S. immediately. Young Ewbank was summoned and agreed to give back Winnipeg if he could have Moose Jaw. The Canadian Minister of War at first refused, but finally consented after young Ewbank placed him on the roof of the metallurgy building.

At 3 p.m. the Dean lit a Marlboro and met with a delegation from the student council who came to present him with a set of matched luggage in honor of his fifty years' service as dean of students. The Dean promptly packed the luggage with all his clothing and fled to Utica, New York, where he is now in the aluminum siding game.

Years First Theatre Production — 'Broken Doll'— A Qualified Success

by Paul Norton

Theatre at Villanova kicked off the season last Friday night with a new original play The Broken Doll. Under the nebulous pseudonym of Etienne Robert, the author presented us with an evening of confused emotion embodied in an unbalanced production.

The setting is the Civil War and the story is told through the eyes of two actors about to partake in the drama as principal performers. A Yankee and a Rebel soldier meet in the Virginia hills and the Confederate is captured. The two come across a peddler and his blind daughter and the drama begins to trace the characterizations of each individual. We see a starry-eyed boy, and a cynical school teacher in the soldiers and a hardened merchant and an abused girl in the peddler and his offspring.

Diction

The language of the show is quite beautiful and approaches an almost lyrical quality. The opening description of the first scene rings with a poetic eloquence and although the playwright maintains the colorful rythm of the dialogue he becomes bogged down and loses his sense of direction.

By the close of the first act we have become lost in a series of sketches which have only slightly advanced the story line. In some ways this first act serves only to set the scene and mood of the whole evening.

It might be noted here that the temperature in the Playbox had risen considerably during the first act and by the intermission the small area was insufferably warm. This caused much discomfit for the audience and served to lengthen the already weighty first act.

Second Act

The second act began with a folk song completely out of context with the story line. Although it may have been better incorporated into the show, at this point it only served to display the admirable talent of a young lady unmentioned in the program.

Remainder

The remainder of the second act was not unlike the performance of the Villanova's football team last Saturday. The production pulled together; "The plot had more direction; and the characters were better defined.

The lack of significant conflict in the first act righted itself in the second by way of a magnificently staged fight scene by the two principals. It amazed this reviewer to see the realism of the action which was confined into such a small area.

Well Acted

On the whole the acting was carried off with polish and discipline. Occasionally Jim Mason in the role of Tim Boyle lost his control but this may have been a script or directorial defeat, rather than a personal one. In the same way Irene Walsh as the blind girl appeared a bit too bland. However, her role was no less than a melange of emotions and reactions and she carried herself beautifully.

David Rabe as Clay and Ed Weinheim as the peddler handled themselves with professional finesse in very difficult parts. Both portrayed roles of complex personalities with deep conviction.

Direction

As the director, Richard Duprey deserves a great deal of credit for his handling of the script. In more than one instance he pulled the show out of difficult moment. The limitations of the Playbox pose many problems but these seem to have been easily overcome by the direction.

Thomas Nevin's sets and lighting are well adapted to the arena and create a successful illusion of a forest clearing.

This show points to a good start for this season here at Villanova. The use of original scripts while increasing the value of experimental theater certainly will present a diversity of attractions for the coming year.

Caught In Passing

Laughter Spells Success

by Jan Dyroff

Two successive Monday evening openings set for later this month promise much for the theatre-goer as two brilliant comedies bow upon the Philadelphia stage.

The first is "Seidman and Son" which Sam Levine decided to take on tour after a successful season run at the renowned Balasco Theatre on Broadway.

Summer Run

A summer run in the playhouses surrounding the metropolitan area was decided upon before launching the play in its national orbit. The producers set the comedy in Nyack, Minneola, Westport, and the Paper Mill Playhouse before bringing it to town.

Their move was more than justified for they were treated to the gratification of seeing the play being received by capacity houses and the cast working as smoothly as a stellar symphony.

Laughs and Howls

Laughs exploded, guffaws filled the air and the box-offices were kept open far beyond the normal closing time.

The new "Seidman and Son" will be seen at the New Locust Street Theatre for two weeks starting October 7. In addition to its distinguished star and director, the Elick Moll comedy contains as merry a band of troupers as ever carried an Equity card.

They are Janet Ward, who will be seen here in "Fail Safe," Liz Fleming, the star of many important dramas, Chet London, Abe Vigoda, and Morris Strassberg — a performer who traces his career back to the days of David Belasco, forty-two years.

"Seidman and Son" is a selection of the American Theatre Society, and if its Broadway and summer record is any kind of an indicator it should be the highlight of the Philadelphia season.

Second Smash

Next "A Thousand Clowns", a two season Broadway smash, is coming to the Forrest Theatre, Monday, October 14, for two weeks through Saturday, October 26.

Top stage and screen luminaries, Dane Clark and Margaret O'Brien, will be starred in this exciting Broadway cast, co-starring with Barry Gordon, Paul E. Richards, Marc London, and Conrad Fowkes.

Sassily Fresh

When "A Thousand Clowns" burst uproariously on the New York scene the critics cheered for one of the freshest, sassiest comedies in years and for the brilliant new playwright, Herb Gardner (already famous as the creator of the Nebbishes).

"A Thousand Clowns" is the story of a willfully unemployed television writer (Dane Clark) fighting a last-ditch stand against re-employment by a syrupy TV kiddie show. He resists the urging of his young nephew and ward (Barry Gordon) and a lovely case-worker (Margaret O'Brien) who comes to investigate the lad's environment and falls in love with the uncle.

Critics far and wide hailed "Clowns". Time voting it "the freshest comedy of the season" and Life acclaiming it as "irresistible!"

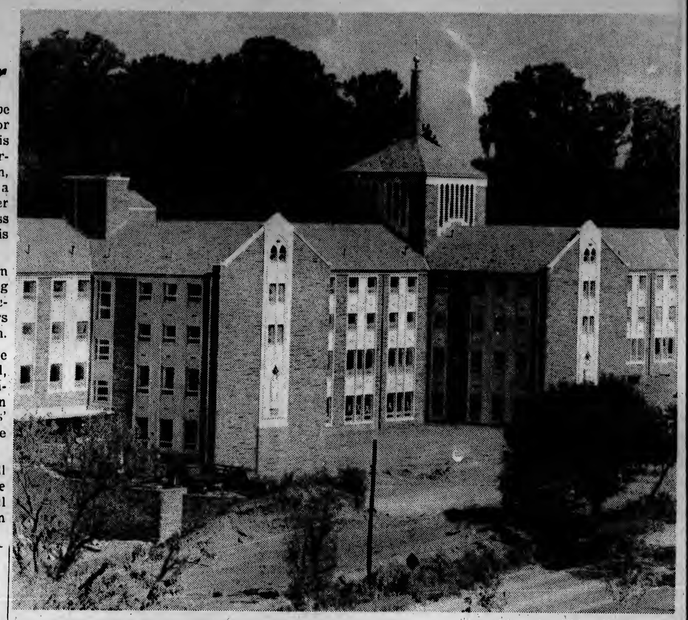
Collegiate-Styled Seminary To Be Occupied By December

Two years ago this month the Father Provincial, the Rev. James A. Donnellon, OSA, broke ground for the new St. Mary's Seminary. Today the exterior of the collegiate-styled building is finished and the seminarians are expected to be living there by December.

The building itself is constructed of granite and conforms in style with the other buildings on the campus.

The three-story high nave of the chapel will have 186 individual choir stalls as well as pews to accomodate 246 people. The priests who will form the faculty of the seminary will be able to celebrate Mass in 10 private chapels.



The main entrance to the seminary will be through the wing at the chapel end of the building. There will be three floors at this end of the building and five floors at the opposite end.

On the ground floor will be an auditorium with space for 252 seats. The sloping floor is suitable for lectures and oratorical classes. A recreation room, a hobby and repair shop, and a barber shop will be in another wing. There will be easy access to the gymnasium from this wing.

Also this floor will contain equipped laboratories, including a language laboratory with electric transmitters and receivers and a sound-proofed music room.

The necessary units of the seminary such as the chapel, classrooms, library, kitchen, dining room, and common will be on the first floor. The priests' faculty residence will be in the wing nearest to the chapel.

The second and third floors will have 76 private rooms for the seminarians. The seminary will have all the facilities to function as a self-contained unit.

CAMPUS NEWS BRIEFS

Beta Gamma, Villanova's debating society, is launching the 1963-64 season on a note of optimism. Mr. Richard McDonough, debate moderator, has announced the addition of Mr. James O'Toole to the staff, thus enlarging the scope of the debate program.

In discussing the society's plans, David Galie, President, said that the debate team will represent Villanova at major tournaments in the East and will host the annual Villanova Invitational in November. During the coming months, members will debate this year's question: Resolved; that the federal government should guarantee an opportunity for higher education to all qualified high school graduates.

In addition to the officers of Beta Gamma, the President and the moderator, are: Carl Green, Vice-President; Carole Toczylowski, Recording Secretary; Eugene Fitzmaurice, Secretary-Treasurer; and James Griffin, Student Council Representative.

These officers invite all students to join the debate team and enjoy a rewarding intellectual activity. Previous experience in debating is not required of prospective candidates, since a thorough training program for novice debaters is planned.

The meetings of the society will be held weekly at 10:30 a.m. on Thursday in 105 Class Room Annex. Those students wishing to join, or desiring additional information, are urged to attend an early meeting for further details.

The Student Council will sponsor its annual dance, November 1, in the Field House from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

John Roberts, chairman of the dance, stated that entertainment will be provided by the Concert Band of the Villanovans, with the Spires, the folk singing contingent of the Glee Club and the T-Tones, a vocal group from Rosemont College appearing, as added attractions.

In past years, the Student Council has experienced great success from this annual affair.

According to last year's statistics, the dance grossed $1,800 profit while over 725 couples participated in the festivities. The price of tickets this year is $3.00 per couple.

The money received from this affair is the main source of the Student Council's income.

The Student Council Movie Committee has arranged a program of film entertainment for the first semester. Denis G. Addonizio, Chairman, reports "an unusually fine crop of motion pictures will be seen this year."

All movies will have two showings at 7:30 and 9 p.m. in Vasey Hall Ahditorium. As a new feature, three movies will be shown in Cinemascope.

Some of the films to be presented, with their dates, are: Sink the Bismarck, October 7; The Enemy Below, with Robert Mitchum and Curt Jurgens, October 16; 300 Spartans, a Cinemascope production, with Richard Egan, October 23; and The Hustler, also in Cinemascope, starring Paul Newman and Jackie Gleason.

The others are: Four Horseman of the Apocalypse, featuring Glenn Ford, November 26; Quo Vadis, with Robert Taylor, December 3; and finally on December 17, in Cinemascope, Home from the Hill.

An admission price of 25 cents will be charged for all of the movies, except Quo Vadis and The Hustler, each of which will cost 50 cents due to increased costs.

Rugby Captain Ed Wilkinson Anticipates Best Squad Yet

The quality of the rugby at Villanova this year, it is predicted by Captain Ed Wilkinson, has the potential to become the best the Main Line has seen since the adoption of the game at Villanova five years ago.

Last spring's squad compiled a record of 7-4 in capturing the runnerup slot in the Middle Atlantic Rugby Conference.

The team shows strength in two departments—fast in the backfield and rugged in the scrum. Disbarring injuries, the 'Cats could field one of the fastest backfields in the Eastern Rugby Union. New players have also given the team more depth to bolster the returning lettermen.

Bob Shayer, Bert Lombino, and Ed Kurek will head the backfield lineup. In the scrum are scrum leader Tim Buckley and Dick Gove.

Also among the returnees are stalwarts Denny LeHeff, Hal Canty, Jim Seaburg, Pete Niolo, John Camiolo and George Tongring.

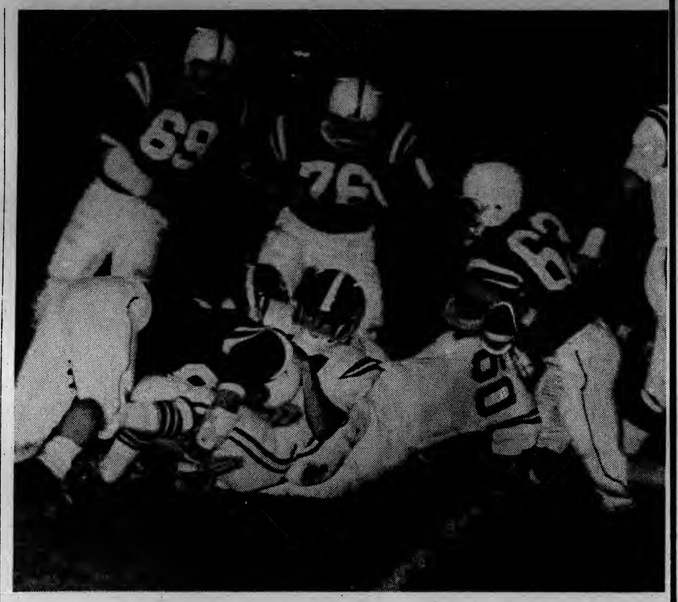
Opening game for the 1963-64 campaign is at home this weekend against the Philadelphia Rugby Football Club. The Philadelphia squad boasts several recent Villanova graduates.

Coach Frank Coglan of the History Department has expressed optimism about the coming season. Wilkinson a senior English major, commented hopefully that "the key to the season will be in the team's spirit. The talent is there. If they can jell into a solid 15 man unit, there will be no stopping the Wildcats this year."

Wildkittens Kick Off Four Game Schedule Against West Point

Villanova Freshman football team has been steadily practicing under Coach Eddie Michaels for it's opening game on October 12 against the Army Plebes at West Point. Coach Michaels is aided by the addition of graduated Villanova quarterback Ted Aceto in the task of preparing the team.

Following Army on the schedule, the Wildkittens play Navy on October 25 and West Chester on November 2, both away, before the final with Bullis at Villanova on November 9.



The squad, which has been practicing since September 10, cannot carry more than 27 of it's 40 rostered players to the first 2 games, although there will be no restriction on the number dressing for the final 2 games. Coach Michaels has said that each boy trying out will be afforded the privilege of dressing for one game at least.

Individual capabilities are yet to be determined but lineman George Hunt from Atlanta, Al Stopko from Connecticut, and Tom Flandera from Cleveland have gained coaches' notice. Backfield men in this category include Richie Green and John Kolmer.

Villanova Sports Round-up

Coach Jim Tuppenny's major task for the coming cross-country season will be filling the void created by the graduation of three time all-American Pat Traynor. The Villanova harriers have been undefeated in the last three years of meet competition.

Leading the cast of seven returning lettermen are two other all-Americans, Captain Vic Zwolak and Junior Tom Sullivan.

Zwolak, who placed fourth in last year's NCAA championships in Lansing, Michigan, will be this year's number one man, with Sullivan now close behind. For the remaining berths, there will be a mad scramble.

The brightest prospect from the freshman team of last year is Noel Carroll who led his squad to first place in the IC4A championship. Pushing him hard will be Bob Cubbin and Steve Witham, both up from the freshman squad.

Despite this formidable lineup, Tuppenny does not feel too optimistic about the 1963-64 season. He says that hard work now and for the remainder of the year, will result in a gradually improving squad which should reach its prime by the IC4A meet.

He thinks that the absence of Traynor could well spell failure in the varsity's bid to retain its IC4A championship of 1962.

The team's strongest competition should come against Notre Dame, Michigan State, and Seton Hall in the IC4A's. The first of six scheduled dual meets will be held at home, October 12, against St. Joseph's.

Seventy-six hopeful candidates attended the initial tryouts for the 1963-64 varsity pistol team. It is hoped that the group might provide sharp-shooters of varsity calibre.

Captain George Sinclair, an all-American for the past two years, disclosed that in addition to competing in a 14 game schedule, the team will also make a New England tour including matches with West Point, the Coast Guard Academy, M.I.T., and the University of Massachusetts.

The slate will be rounded out by participation in the Delaware Valley League, an organization composed of local gun clubs, in which the Wildcats finished third last year.

The 1963-64 Swimming Team hopes to present to the Villanova scene a new star, sophomore Ray Donnelly, who showed good promise as a frosh.

If Donnelly, who broke Captain Dick MoDonough's freshman one-hundred yard free-style record, with a fantastic time of 48.05, wins a berth on the All-American relay team, this group could encroach upon world records.

Captain McDonough, a two-time All-American himself, is the team's greatest asset with his formidable endurance and versatility. Having recently returned from Japan this summer, where he was a member of the American-AAU 800 and world record-making 400 meter relay team, he is in fine shape, and optimistic over this year's chances.

Backing up McDonough are three more All-Americans, Co-Captain Jack Geoghagen, Rick Girdler, and Paul Wynn. This could amount to one of the best teams in the history of Villanova. The important dual meets of the coming season will be with Princeton, December 4; Yale, December 7; and West Point, January 31.

Oh, Zeus

On A Flying Gazelle

by Joe McCarthy

Oh, Zeus, it's that time again. The be-spuckled New York Yankees make their annual appearance against a competitive club from the senior circuit in another World Series clash.

Riding into their fourth consecutive post season gala on a flying gazelle, the Yanks' only real threat this year were the shadows of the Great Stadium. And they never affected the result of the games.

And over in Warren Giles' "call zillions of balks the first half season" and "none the second" league, the Los Angeles Dodgers cast off the "choke" label and earned a hard-fought series appearance.

And today everyone makes their pick. O.K. kids, we'll go out on a limb and pick the Dodgers in six. Why? Fleet feet, reliable relievers, and a better scale of competition and spirit in the National League.

The Yanks start two sick men, Mickey Mantle, a great performer, but now plagued by physical handicaps, and Roger Maris whose eyes will never recover from the glare of sixty-one homers in a single session.

And the others that teamed up to foster a pennant winner? With three exceptions, Whitey Ford, Jim Bouton, and Al Downing there's nothing special. Ford's the man to watch.

Bouton has come a long way and will continue to look good. Despite his occassional wildness, Downing is one of the finest young pitchers to appear since the incomparable Sandy Koufax of the challenging Dodgers.

National League hitters will tell you that their best days were on the Jewish holidays. Even on other days, the clutch finger-snapping of Perranoski, Drysdale, Podres, and Miller were "golden." Don't look at the records, but rather at the strike-outs per inning pitched and the earned run averages.

For example, Koufax (1.88 and 306 K's), Perranoski (1.67 and 74 K's), Drysdale (2.70 and 249 K's), Miller (2.87 and 122 K's), and Podres (3.20 and 132 K's). The Yanks might be strong but not this well-stacked.

This staff is all the more remarkable when one considers the wealth of hitting and pitching talent now concentrated in the senior circuit.

The old Ebbetts Field Bums have the spirit and desire. They were burned badly last year when the Giants toppled them in the closing moments of the season. They're too confident to "choke" now, especially after the sweep of the Cardinals series that decided the National league winner.

As for the Yanks, this could be the last of fifteen years of greatness. The boys recruited and trained by the old Yanks, George Weiss and Casey Stengel are growing older and disappearing. But there are no more from where they came from.

The days when Yankee fans dropped into the local gin-mill for a couple of drafts and re-play the games with "ifs" and "buts" are dying.

The thinking here is that the Big-City has seen its last pennant winner for some time. The team this year just couldn't compare to the ones of the past. It was by many standards a makeshift alignment of battle-scarred and carefully iced rookies. But why did they win the pennant?

The answer isn't simple. They walked in of course, but it was from the lack of solid, balanced squads in the American League more than anything else. Next year the scene will change.

Look for the White Sox, the Twins, the Orioles and the Red Sox to strengthen their hitting and pitching dilemmas and make a run for the flag. Each made the try this year.

In the National League the future is still with the Dodgers but there still are four or five teams that even this year could have stopped the L. A. pennant search with a little luck. And so it will be next year.

Where's Our Spirit?

by Roy Baron

A crowd of 14,200 enthusiastic supporters turned out last Saturday night to watch their two touchdown underdog Toledo University eleven clash with our Wildcats. The Rockets had lost most of their stars from a team that only managed to post a 3-6 record last fall.

A new coach (Frank Lauterbur) with new offensive and defensive systems installed should have given these Ohioans even less hope for pulling an early season surprise.

Bob Dunn

Yet the Rocket supporters echoed the enthusiasm of their team. This was one of the main factors in carrying the host team to a 14-0 halftime lead.

Many different things have contributed to this enthusiasm. First, the coach came up with a "gimmick" to stimulate fan interest, plus desire among his players.

First unit players wear a Rocket decal on their helmets. Others wear only the first stage. Also, each player who recovers a fumble or intercepts a pass will get a star put on his helmet for each fumble recovery and interception.

Another innovation is the Rocket Quarterback Club which meets in the student union building every Thursday night. At this time the coaches are on hand to review the game of the previous weekend and to discuss scouting reports with the students and interested outsiders. Films and refreshments are included at no cost.

A stimulant to spectators to come from out of town is a buffet dinner which is served on campus the night of each home game. Added to all of these is the tremendous support being given to the newly formed marching band.

What have we done at Villanova? Well, we had less than one percent of the student body show up to send the team off to Toledo last Friday afternoon. We also had many students sitting in the dormitories or at home in their living rooms the previous Saturday, watching the West Chester game on television.

The reason for this is unexplainable. The Wildcats have participated in bowl games the past two years. They have a new, more exciting offense, with more passing, more reverses, in general, more daring.

There are many new stars — Dunn, Sernyak, Smith, Connell, Kelleher, Santomauro, Brown, and more. All this adds up to more excitement on the football field weekend after weekend. It should add up to a homecoming sellout at the stadium this Saturday.

'Cats Hope To Bull Way To Victory In Homecoming Hunt Against Buffalo

by Tom Willson

A herd of Buffalo Bulls from the plains of New York State will stampede into the Villanova Stadium this weekend. Buffalo looms as one of Villanova's toughest opponents this season, as they entertain dreams of becoming one of the East's top independents at the expense of spoiling the 'cats homecoming weekend.

Sportswriters across the nation have praised the Bull's current edition, and opposing coaches shiver at the prospect of playing the "Bruisin' Bulls". Another winning season would catapult them into the national limelight.

Revenge will be the Bull's theme in the Villanova-Buffalo battle. They have been bombed by the Wildcats in previous encounters. The Mainliners have rolled up a total of 64 points against a mere 12 by the Bulls. The 'Cats team is one of the few over which Buffalo has yet to score its first victory.

Fiery Dick Offenhamer, ex-Colgate star, enter his ninth season as Buffalo's football coach. Recognized as one of Colgate's all-time- great backfield stars, Offenhamer was a unanimous choice to succeed as football's chief-of-staff on the Buffalo campus.

Buffalo has already moved into the victory column with two straight victories. The first one saw Gettysburg trounced by the aerial and ground attack of the Bulls. The next encounter saw the Bulls travel to Xavier and upset the strongly favored Musketeers.

Thus, Offenhamer's optimistic outlook can be justified. "We have visions of becoming a top Eastern independent." Recently interviewed by the Villanovan, Offenhamer jokingly remarked of the Villanova-Buffalo series, "The association is wonderful, but the results thus far are unpleasant."'

Calling signals for the Bulls will be John Stofa (200 lbs.), a brilliant tactitian who excels in clutch play. Just as Villanova fullback, Jim Thomas, spends his summer driving, so Stofa keeps in shape driving a beer truck. Flanked by tailback Tom Butler (196 lbs.), second in '62 scoring, and speedster wingback Gerry Ratkiewicz (195 lbs.), Stofa's plays will click.

Fullback workhorses are Jim Burd (210 lbs.), Buffalo's leading rusher, who crashes opponents' lines like an express train, and John Cimba ((196 lbs.) who specializes in pass protection and was only 2 yards behind Burd in '62 rushing yardage.

Right guard is held down by "Mouse" McNally (206 lbs.) and Edgar Poles (210 lbs.) who wrestles in the off-season just as well as he blocks in football games. At right tackle will be "Big Leo" Ratamess (260 lbs.), and at right end, All-East Larry Gergley (220 lbs.), a ferocious defender and a bruising blocker.

Renewed Defense Launches 'Cats To Third Period Surge Over Rockets

by Roy Baron

A capacity home-opener crowd of 14,200 watched their fired-up Toledo eleven roll up 188 yards in taking a 14-0 halftime lead over the visiting Villanova Wildcats last Saturday night. But the favored Wildcats came alive in a third period surge that brought them 18 points in just over ten minutes.

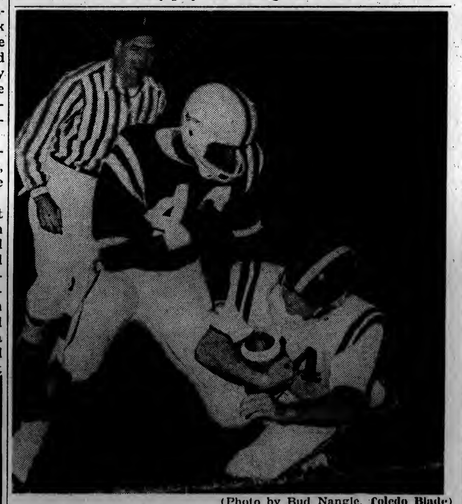
Dave Connell, sophomore field general, taking over for Bill Sherlock, directed the attack with the skill of a veteran.

After captain Jim Thomas had returned Toledo's second half kickoff to his own 40, the Villanova offense got moving. It took just seven plays, all on the ground, before Thomas plunged the final yard for the score. Key contributions to the drive were made by Thomas and Dick Sernyak, each of whom made a sixteen yard run.

The two point conversion attempt, with Sernyak running, failed. It was the first of three such failures.

The second touchdown was set up on Bob Dunn's 59 yard return of a punt to the Toledo 9 yard line. Key blocks were supplied by Al Atkinson and John McDonnell. There the Rockets' defense tightened up. But on fourth and three Connell rolled out to his right. Running into a tackler at the one, he pitched back to Sernyak who scampered over.

Villanova made its own break in setting up its final touchdown. With the ball on the Toledo 20, Rocket quarterback Gerald Baumgartner went around his own right end. After he had picked up 11 yards, Wildcat guard Jack McDonald stole the ball from him, falling at the home team's 34 yard line.



Connell stayed on the ground in using nine plays to go the 34 yards to paydirt. Soph Joe Santomauro took the pigskin over from the three. The key play was Connell's 14 yard keeper on a fourth and seven situation which brought the ball to the five.

The Toledo scores came on a six yard roll out by quarterback Dan Simrell in the first period and a thirty yard run by Rocket speedster Jim Gray in the second quarter. Baumgartner added both extra points.

During most of the second half the Wildcat defense was able to hold their opponent in check. Particularly outstanding was the defensive secondary which did not allow a pass to be completed during the entire second half.

Prime Minister Sean Lemass To Be Given Honorary Degree

The Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, University President, has announced that Sean Lemass, Prime Minister of Ireland, will receive an Honorary Degree during exercises at the University on Saturday, October 12, at 11:00 a.m.

The Irish Chief of State will be honored during an assembly of more than 5000 high school journalists attending the 16th annual Catholic School Publications Conference.

The event, described by the Chairman for the Conference, Rev. Louis A. Rongione as one of the largest of its kind in the country, will draw students from a five-state area and will be represented by nearly 200 high schools.

Registration for the conference will begin at 8:30 a.m. At 10:00 a.m., the Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA. President of Villanova, will deliver the welcoming address to the conference.

The bulk of the day will consist of talks and panel sessions by prominent professional journalists, who will address the students on various aspects and techniques of journalism, concentrating on such subjects as newswriting, editorial policies, headline writing, reporting, layout administration, photography, and other related topics.

These lectures are designed to aid the high schoolers with their school newspapers, magazines, yearbooks, and other publications.

Cartoons, an ever - popular facet of journalism, will be represented by John Liney, who is the creator of the nationally circulated cartoon character "Henry." Mr. Liney's discussion will be entitled "Henry and I."

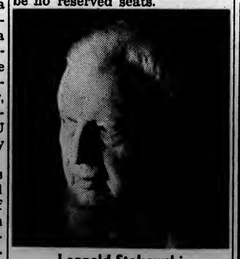
Carl Wolf, a prominent Philadelphia photographer, will speak on the importance of photography to any school publication and will discuss candid photography in journalism.

The key speaker of the day will be John A. Schneider, Vice-President of the Columbia Broadcasting System and General Manager of Philadelphia station WCAU-TV. He will address a general assembly of the young journalists in the University Field House. Mr. Schneider, a graduate of Notre Dame University, has been with WCAU since 1958 and is active in many Philadelphia affairs.

Other distinguished speakers at the conference will be Samuel Boyle, Assistant City Editor of the Evening and Sunday Bulletin in Philadelphia; Leonard McAdams, reporter for the Philadelphia Inquirer; Thomas Cooney, Assistant City Editor of the Philadelphia Daily News and the Rev. Francis E. Keul of the Catholic Standard and Times.

The official sponsors of the Publications Conference are the Villanovan and Belle Air. Members of both staffs will participate in the panel discussions of the day.

Stokowski Orchestra To Appear October 19 In First Local Concert



On October 19, in the Villanova Field House, Leopold Stokowski will conduct the American Symphony Orchestra in its first Philadelphia appearance. This program is under the direction of the Student Council as a feature of Parents' Weekend and is the first of a series of musical programs which have been arranged for the academic year.

Concert Program

"Of New Horizons" — Kay
"Die Meistersinger" — Wagner
"Symphony No. 10" — Mahler
"Amaryllis" — Handel
"Concerto Grosso in D Minor" — Vivaldi
"Passacaglia and Fugue in C Minor" — Bach

Tickets are available daily in the Pie Shoppe between 11:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. until October 11. Ticket prices are $2.50 for balcony and $3.00 for orchestra.

Jack Ryan, chairman of the affair, states that it would be wise to purchase tickets early since a capacity crowd is expected to attend. The same seating policy will be followed as in the past. thus, there will be no reserved seats.

Leopold Stokowski

Leopold Stokowski was born in London of Polish origins. He studied music in London, Paris, Munich, and Berlin.

He made his debut as a conductor in Paris in 1908. The next year he became an American citizen. From 1912 to 1938 he was the musical director of the Philadelphia Orchestra.

C and F Rededicated

The Rev. Philip F. Barrett, O.S.A., Dean of the College of Commerce and Finance has announced that the name of the College will be changed to the Rev. Joseph C. Bartley, O.S.A. College of Commerce and Finance. The late Father Bartley was the Dean of the college for forty years.

The rededication of the college is to take place on Sunday, October 20 at 3 p.m.

Political Critic Buckley To Open Council Lectures

William F. Buckley Jr., one of the nation"s leading political critics, will be at Villanova on Thursday, October 17, to speak in conjunction with the Student Council lecture series.

Born in New York in 1925 Buckley, a Roman Catholic, graduated with honors from Yale in 1950, and studied a number of years in England and France. While at Yale, he was chairman of his college paper. In the period 1944-46, Buckley served as a second lieutenant in the infantry.

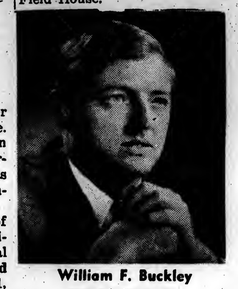
He has been the author of several books, concerned principally with conservative-liberal conflict. His first book, God and Man at Yale, published in 1951, presents a critique of academic freedom at Yale while Buckley attended school there.

It raised quite a furor on the Yale campus. A widely reviewed book was his McCarthy and His Enemies, co-authored with L. Brent Bozell, an erudite examination of loyalty and security practices in Washington.

His latest books are: Up from Liberalism, written in 1959, and Rumbles, Left and Right, published in 1963. Buckley has been editor-in-chief of the National Review, a leading conservative magazine, since 1955. In organizing the National Review, he brought together the greatest conservative writers in America.

Buckley, a renowned speaker and debater, has lectured widely over the United States, and has appeared on many television and radio programs.

Key's Rich Connors Announces Program For Parents' Weekend



Parents' Weekend sponsored by the Blue Key Society, will take place on October 18, 19, and 20.

Rich Connors, President of Blue Key and Committee Chairman, has outlined the weekend's events and assures a good time for all parents and students who attend.

Parents' Weekend will be opened by a welcoming address by University President, the Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, on Friday night, in the Field House. Father President's address is to be followed by a variety show, featuring Peter Smith as Master of Ceremonies.

Registration will begin Saturday morning between 9 and 10 a.m. in the Field House. Favors will be presented to mothers at this time. At 10:15 a.m. all parents are invited to meet the deans of the respective colleges at various locations throughout the campus. The Villanova Wildcats will oppose George Washington University at 1:30 p.m. in the University Stadium.

A concert featuring Leopold Stokowski conducting the American Symphony Orchestra will be presented at 8:30 p.m. in the Field House.

The Active "Elf"

Planning and organizing a special weekend-for-two at Villanova is no easy task. But consider the task of preparing a weekend for which plans must be made and events organized for several thousand Villanovans and their parents.

Consider further that to be successful in such a venture, the planning must be made along tried and tested lines, while the events must reflect a newness and a dynamism which will provide both students and parents with an unforgetably interesting time.

Where do you look for a single individual with the talent, brilliance, and enthusiasm to qualify for such a responsibility?

For Marty McGuinn — whose job it is to make the appointment — few Villanovans could fill the position of Parents' Weekend Chairman quite so perfectly as a 21 year-old, East Haven, Connecticut, History major — known throughout the "Treasured Halls" as Rich Connors, affectionately entitled by his closer compatriots, "the elf."

As a student, Rick ranks unquestionably well above average in scholastic standing and in study interest. As an individual, he might be described as a combination of paradoxes. He is both shy and aggressive, easy-going and intense, frivolous and deeply earnest.

The handsome, blond-haired senior would qualify easily for the chairmanship solely on the basis of his activities record. He applied and was accepted in the Blue Key Honor Society during the second semester of his freshman year — the first year of its existence. He is now President.

He was elected Student Council representative for his fraternity, DPM, and was subsequently elected, by the Congress, to the Student Senate. He is Business Manager for the Literary Publication, the Lynx. And he is Treasurer of the Class of '64.

Why has he been so active — Blue Key,et al.? Rich will tell you he has a lot of faith in VU, in its records and in its potential. "It's really a thrill," he says, "to take a prospective student and his parents around the campus and 'sell' Villanova to them."

And for his own future, Rich hopes to attend law school, to go into practice, and eventually enter the realm of politics.

Local Governmentals Debate Civil Rights, PUL's Freeman Guest

President Kennedy's Civil Right's Bill will be the subject of the first fall debate of the Political Union in 110 C&F this Monday evening at 7:30 p.m. Andrew G. Freeman, Executive Director of the Philadelphia Urban League will be the evening's guest speaker.

The Urban League is one of the five major Negro organizations which sponsored last summer's march on Washington.

The text of the debate resolution is "Resolved: that this house supports the Administration's Civil Rights Bill." The resolution is expected to divide the house, although not necessarily along party lines.

Leaders of the Union's three parties, Conservative, Liberal, and Moderate, are recruiting new members and, at the same time, are helping members prepare for Monday's debate. Peter Deliberty, President of the Political Union, stresses that any undergraduate may apply for membership in the Union by contacting one of the party leaders.

Mr. Freeman has a B.S. degree from Alabama State College and an M.A. from Ohio State. He has contributed many articles to professional journals and has received awards for his work with the Urban League.

VUPU Initiates 'Politico' To Fill Existing Vacancies

The Villanova Political Union will initiate a publication in its second year on campus, which will be called Politico. In this paper, there will be articles of political comment on current international and domestic topics.

Featured in each issue will be commentary written by members of the three parties of the Union—the Conservative, the Moderate, and the Liberal Parties. Also writing for the paper will be faculty members and contributing journalists.

The purpose of Politico is to stimulate political though on campus. The paper has been organized under the aegis of Michael A. Magro Editor-in-chief.

Magro, in discussing the new journal stated: "The campus has been lacking a true political paper!"

Politico will be published at the end of every month under the supervision of John J. Logue, Professor of Political Science, and moderator of the VUPU. Also assisting will be Peter De Liberty, VUPU president of the Union. The officers include: Greg Leonard and Jim Clark, associate editors; Ray Ritter, exchange editor; Dennis McNenny, circulation editor; Jim Mitchell, Union news editor; and Victor Umpire, Joe Petratis, and John Clark, copy editors.

Any Union member interested in writing for the paper should contact the editor at one of the business meetings or debates. Applications will also be accepted in the Union box in the Student Council Office.

Bernard L. Bonniwell First Of Five Talkers, Address Campus SAM

Dr. Bernard L. Bonniwell, the first of five scheduled speakers for the coming academic year, will address the Society for the Advancement of Management on October 10, 1963 at 10:30 a.m. in 214 C.F. His topic will be "Industrial Administration and Industrial Psychology."

Ray Ritter, vice-president, announced that future events will include two management films, field trips to Scott Paper, Alan Wood Steel, Schmidt's of Philadelphia, and the Stock Market in New York.

This year's dinner dance will be held on November 2, the weekend of the Villanova-Holy Cross game. The climax of the year will be the traditional spring picnic.

It was also announced that the deadline for membership will be October 24.. All industrial administration majors and any other interested parties are urged to join.

Erik Von Kuehnelt-Leddihn Opens Conservative's Season

The Villanova Conservative Club will begin its activities this year with a lecture by Erik Ritter von Kuehnelt-Leddihn, multilingual humanist, author, educator and traveler on Tuesday, October 15, at 7:30 p.m., 110 C&F.

Mr. Kuehnelt - Leddihn will speak to the members of the Conservative Club and the general student body on "Colonialism: Myth and Reality." Also on the agenda for the coming year will be a seminar at Fordham University given by three professors.

Anyone interested in this seminar should contact the President of the Conservative Club, Jack Ames, in 252 Sheehan Hall.

As a continuing service to its members the Conservative Club will again distribute this year's literary pamphlets and books setting fourth the Conservative philosophy. One book already scheduled is de Touqeville's Democracy in America.

Libertas, the official organ of the Conservative Club, will again be presented to the student body to stimuate their awareness of the "conservative movement" sweeping the campuses. Co-editors for this year's paper are Gary Smith and Donald Franz.

The paper will essentially have the same format that it had last year with more articles from the faculty and students along with a wider scope of articles.

Any students interested in writing for Libertas should contact Gary Smith in 122 Sheehan Hall. Anyone interested in joining the Conservative Club should contact Ames.

Golding's 'Lord Of The Flies' Subject Of Literary Symposium

"Symposium: Lord of the Flies," the first in a series of symposia to be presented by the Villanova Literary Society, will be held at 7:30 p.m., Monday, October 21, in 110 Bartley Hall.

Significant aspects of William Golding's magnum opus will be discussed by the three student speakers. The novel concerns the moral deterioration of a band of young boys who are stranded on an uninhabited island during a fictional war.

A queston and answer period andopen discussion will follow the talks, announced Vice-President Frank Sauers, moderator of the symposium.

The first informal discussion program scheduled by the Society will take place at 10:30 a.m., Thursday, October 17. The topic will be playwright Edward Albee, author of the highly regarded, contoversial play Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf? The room will be announced shortly.

Does a man really take unfair advantage of women when he uses Mennen Skin Bracer?

All depends on why he uses it.

Most men simply think Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the best after-shave lotion around. Because it cools rather than burns. Because it helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Because it helps prevent blemishes.

So who can blame them if Bracer's crisp, long-lasting aroma just happens to affect women so remarkably?

Of course, some men may use Mennen Skin Bracer because of this effect.

How intelligent!

Area Lawyers Address Law Students Concerning Various Bar Topics

In Garey Hall last Wednesday evening, Villanova law students heard talks by five locally prominent lawyers on the general topic, "Placement in Law."

The panel, representing five different job categories in the legal field, was sponsored by the Vocational Guidance Committee of the Junior Bar Council of the Pennsylvania Bar Association.

Chairman of the panel was William Toal, Jr., Assistant District Attorney of Delaware County. He spoke on the practice of an independent lawyer in a small county.

H. Thomas Felix, a graduate of the Temple Law School and presently a member of the law firm, Obermann, Rebmann, Maxwell and Hippel, was second speaker. His topic covered the advantages of working for a large law firm.

John F. Gough then compared the small law firm to the large firm. Mr. Gough is a graduate of Yale Law School and Treasurer of Philadelphia Junior Bar Association.

Philip Burnaman, who is associated with Scott Paper Company and a graduate of the Harvard Law School, was the fourth speaker. He spoke on the characteristics of his field of work.

Final speaker of the evening was Richard Walker, a graduate of Georgetown Law School and a member of the Department of Justice Anti-Trust Division He spoke on the opportunities of a government job.

The session was then open to questions by the audience.

Delegate Reports

NFCCS Has Proved Itself The Rest Is Up To Students

By Terry Cooney
NFCCS Senior Delegate

A few years ago there was a rumor going around Villanova that the following statement had appeared in the latest issue of Ripley's Believe It or Not: "Strange as it may seem, there really is an NFCCS at Villanova University."

Since that time, of course, the National Federation of Catholic College Students has gained a certain amount of notoriety around this campus if only from a move to abolish the Federation.

To those, however, NFCCS still remains masked in an aura of secrecy and mysticism. To those who wonder if it really exists, we answer "yes." To those who wonder what it is, we will try to explain.

Most importantly and basically, it is a federation of Catholic College Students. I'm sure that this is a surprise to many, that you, as students of Villanova, are members of the Federation, and only the qualification was that you be a matriculating student no harassing or pledging — a sort of painless initiation.

As members you share the distinction of being part of the only nationally organized Catholic student voice in America. For just as your Student Council stands between you and the administration, so also your Senior Delegate stands between you and Catholic colleges nationwide ready and willing to act as your voice on religious, social, and student problems.

But therein lies the catch; for Villanova can have no voice, unless you as students take an active interest in NFCCS. Your Senior Delegate cannot speak for you unless you give him something to say.

The effect of such an organization was brought out most recently during the March on Washington. The Philadelphia branch of NFCCS issued a statement backing any peaceful, lawful, and orderly demonstration such as the March.

This bit of information was immediately picked up by the wire services for as it turned out this was the first statement issued by any Catholic organization in the world either for or against the demonstration. So you see, your voice can be heard; it is but up to you to take an active interest and it will be heard.

Roberts Announces Council Dance Set

The Student Council Dance will be held this year on Friday, November 1st.

John E. Roberts, chairman of the event ,announced that plans for the dance have been completed.

Music for the occasion, Roberts stated, will be provided by the new Villanovans' concert band and appearing as added features will be two vocal groups, the "T-Tones" of Rosemont College and the "Spires" of Villanova University.

Crack Drill Team BeginsYear'sPractice Under John J. Nelson

Prepping for the beginning of another year as the representatives of Villanova University, the NROTC Drill Team, better known as Whiskey Company, can be seen practicing until the wee hours of the morning on Mendel Field.

The team, under the guidance of Major R. T. Anderton and Sergeant Magliacci, USMC, is preparing for its traditional half-time appearances on Parents' Weekend and at the Quantico game.

Marching on display at football games is not the real work of Whiskey Company. The important task is organizing the newly expanded 24 man team into a sharp, cohesive unit capable of providing the best in competition on a local and national level.

During the first semester, the team will sponsor the Fourth Annual Villanova Invitational Drill Meet which will be held in mid-November. From initial replies it is indicated that the meet will draw competing teams from all parts of the Eastern United States.

This year's team will march in competition under the command of Midshipman Lieutenant John J. Nelson. Nelson, a Marine Option student, is a senior Electrical Engineering major who has spent three years on the Varsity Drill Team prior to assuming command this year.

Also holding officer billets this year are: Frank M. Dirren, Executive Officer; Frank Driscoll, Supply Officer; Ed Hallahan, First Platoon Commander; Edwin Frankel, Second Platoon Commander; Dick May, Freshman Drill Team Commander, and Terry Cooney, Chief Petty Officer.

On Monday, September 16, it was announced that the Soviet Union had purchase 250 million dollars worth of Canadian wheat. This huge purchase by a Communist nation from a non-communist state caused comment in this country in the form of two questions: is the Russian wheat crop in serious trouble and, if so what of the American wheat surplus?

Although the Soviets like to blame their wheat shortages on the weather, their wheat crop has, in fact suffered sharp reverses According to American experts, it was estimated that the Russian wheat crop would fall ten per cent off its expected and hoped for harvest. After the Russian purchase from Canada these figures have been revised to 40 or 50 percent.

The answer to the second question is much more complex. There are those who advocate the sale of American wheat to the Soviets. They argue that the Federal Government now owns 1.1 billion bushels of wheat with the same amount expected following this year's harvest. By selling to the Soviets, the U.S. could cut down on the serious dollar drain by asking for cash. Sergei Borisov, a Russian trade official who signed the pact for the Russians has indicated that the Soviet Government may be interested in purchasing more Western wheat.

Those against such a sale contend that it would go against the stiff United States policies which forbid sales that may aid Communist nations, Yugoslavia and Poland excluded. Persuing the subject, Senator William Proxmire of Wisconsin argues that 33 million dollars of the recently purchased Canadian wheat will go to Communist Cuba. Other Russian satellites, particularly in Eastern Europe, are expected to receive large quantities of wheat.

A purchase of American wheat by the Soviet Union, if proposed will be steeped in controversy and will surely grow deeper, yet both sides deserve equal attention and consideration.

Why Folk Music Has Become

By Ray Ritter

Students of Virginia University have set themselves the task of predicting why folk singing and Hootenannys have become the biggest rage on all college campuses.

One reason they advance is that nearly anyone can perform folk music of one type or another.

Singing is something that everyone does and guitar playing is relatively easy if you want to learn the chords for only one song. After learning one song, you innovate.

Learning folk music is an easy task. Just turn on a radio or your record player and you are sure to hear folk music sooner or later.

Folk music has also become popular because it says something about social and political issues. It often pokes fun at something serious. An example of this is the Chad Mitchell Trio's recording of "John Birch Society."

To sum it up, the students said that folk songs are nothing more than music written by the folk for pickin' and singin' by the folk — namely us.

All I ask is how the students of Virginia explain the years of hard work by Peter, Paul, and Mary to attain that folk music's magic touch.

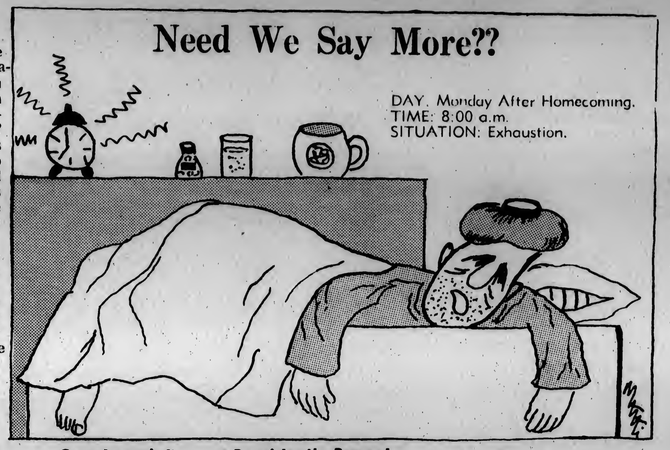
Williams College has announced a unique series of plays for the coming year. The program will be initiated with Andreyev's "He Who Gets Slapped" and will conclude with Edward Albee's very popular "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf."

Xavier University's Student Council President has announced that he would propose a bill which would abolish the student government at Xavier if council officers, and students in general did not take a greater interest in campus affairs.

The statement was released after Sunday's meeting which unexpectedly turned into an executive session when it was discovered that there were not enough members present to establish a quorum.

Heated by the standstill caused by the absence of fifteen councilmen, President Rudolph Hosl declared that he would initiate impeachment proceedings against any officers who amass more than the two unexcused absences allowable.

* * * *



The Buffalo "Spectum" reports that it is rather a pity that Irma La Douce did not turn out to be the comedy that the combined talents of Billy Wilder, Shirley MacLaine, and Jack Lemmon were capable of producing.

Instead, for one reason or another, it is an occasionally pleasant and frequently obvious series of all-too predictable gags, leers, and in-jokes.

Actors and actresses are very limited and the lame lines they deliver are duds. I agree with them one-hundred per-cent.

Madame Flu

By Frank Sauers

Many of us here in the United States have been concerned recently with the obvious attempt of the U.S. press to viciously smear the reputation of South Nietvams Madame Outgo Flu. We decided the other day to begin setting things right.

Madame who is a devout Catholic, is currently in Rome refusing to see the Pope, although the Pope hasn't requested to see her, which means of course that the Pope is obviously bitterly anti-Catholic. There are rumors that Madame Flu is considering a visit to the U.S. soon.

Delighted with the news, we hurried to the student council office to inquire as to the possibility of having the gracious lady speak here at Villanova. "How much is she charging," they asked. "Absolutely nothing," I said, with a confident smirk, "she'll speak for free!" "Sorry," they said, "that settles it, it is completely out of the question."

Discouraged, but not dismayed, we went to the office of the "Lynx," campus literary publication, and inquired as to the possibility of Madame Flu submitting her views in poetry or prose. After all, it was better than nothing. The editor said, "You know of course that we are very demanding. Can she have her copy in by six tonite?" "Well, when is your next date of publication," we asked. "December, 1973," he said. Feeling that it might be a little late to do any good, we forgot about it for the time being.

No sooner had we left the office than the idea occured to us that perhaps we could have Madame Flu named Playboy Magazine's "Playgirl of the Month." But Harry Heffer, the publication's editor, put a damper on the suggestion immediately, decrying it as an obvious violation of good taste.

Yet fear not! All is not lost. A national toy manufacturer, who used to manufacture caddy on the side, has joined our valient cause and is preparing a Madame Outgo Flu doll for the Christmas market. You simply wind it up, and it knocks over 300 wooden Buddists.

President's Report

A Service Organization

By Martin McGuinn
Student Body President

Is student government ineffective on the Villanova campus? Is The Student Council only a service organization existing for the purpose of providing extra-curricular entertainment for student body? A brief glance at the council's responsibilities and achievements would quickly sustain negative answers to these questions. Cultural pogams of a co-curricular nature, representing student opinion to the faculty and administration and governing all student organizations are important areas which necessitate a central and representative student government.

Those who hasten to condemn student government should realize that only through the interest and cooperation of the students can such an endeavor be successful. Students who have justifiable compliants concerning any segment of student life should voice these to their representatives so that these ideas may be implemented rather than dying in the vacuum of idle conversation.

Proposals for course and professor evaluations, re-alignment of semesters, initiation of cultural and social functions can become realities when they are the result of an intelligent and combined student effort.

The Student Congress convenes at 6:30 in the East Lounge Dougherty Hall, tonight and every other Wednesday night. All students are welcome to attend.

Among legislation to be consdered at this evening's meeting is a motion to post Student Council minutes in Mendel and Bartley Halls. A motion for the Student Council to declare the Monday following St. Patrick's weekend as its annual free day will also be considered.

Harry Golden, noted author and lecturer on contempory American life, has been engaged to participate this fall in the Student Council Lecture Series. William Buckely will begin this series on October 17 in the Field House. There is no admission charge to the Lecture Forum.

WORDS: THEIR CAUSE AND CURE

Today let us take up the subject of etymology (or entomology, as it is sometimes called) which is the study of word origins (or insects, as they are sometimes called).

Where are word origins (insects) to be found? Well sir, sometimes words are proper names which have passed into the language. Take, for instance, the words used in electricity: ampere was named after its discoverer, the Frenchman Andre Marie Ampere (1775-1836); similarly, ohm was named after the German G.S. Ohm (1781-1854), watt after the Scot James Watt (1736-1819), and bulb after the American Fred C. Bulb (1843-1912).

There is, incidentally, quite a poignant little story about Mr. Bulb. Until Bulb's invention, all illumination was provided by gas, which was named after its inventor Milton T. Gas who, strange to tell, had been Bulb's roommate at Cal Tech! In fact, strange to tell, the third man sharing the room with Bulb and Gas was also one whose name burns bright in the annals of illumination—Walter Candle!

The three roommates were inseparable companions in college. After graduation all three did research in the problems of artificial light, which at this time did not exist. All America used to go to bed with the chickens, and many fine citizens were alas, severely injured falling off the roost.

Well sir, the three comrades—Bulb, Gas, and Candle—promised to be friends forever when they left school, but success, alas, spoiled all that. First Candle invented the candle, got rich, and forgot his old friends. Then Gas invented gas, got rich, bankrupted Candle, and forgot his old friends. Then Bulb invented the bulb, got rich, bankrupted Gas, and forgot his old friends.

Candle and Gas, bitter and impoverished at the ages respectively of 75 and 71, went to sea as respectively the world's oldest and second oldest cabin boy. Bulb, rich and grand, also went to sea, but he went in style—as a first-class passenger on luxury liners.

Well sir, strange to tell, all three were aboard the ill-fated Lusitania when she was sunk in the North Atlantic. And strange to tell, when they were swimming for their lives after the shipwreck, all three clambered aboard the same dinghy!

Well sir, chastened and made wiser by their brush with peril, they fell into each other's arms and wept and exchanged forgiveness and became fast friends all over again.

For three years they drifted in the dinghy, shaking hands and singing the Cal Tech rouser all the while. Then, at long last, they spied a passing liner and were taken aboard.

They remained fast friends for the rest of their days, which, I regret to report, were not many, because the liner which picked them up was the Titanic.

What a pity that Marlboros were not invented during the lifetimes of Bulb, Gas, and Candle. Had there been Marlboros, these three friends never would have grown apart because they would have realized how much, despite their differences, they still had in common. I mean to say that Marlboros can be lit by candle, by gas, and by electricity, and no matter how you light them, you always get a lot to like—a filter, a flavor, a pack or box that makes anyone—including Bulb, Gas, and Candle—settle back and forswear pettiness and smile the sweet smile of friendship on all who pass!

Villanovans March On Beantown Hope For B.C. — Banned In Boston

By Rusty Miller

This week-end will witness the first of the annual Villanova "invasions." Like the "Golden Hoard," the Wildcats will surge over the quiet unsuspecting town of Boston. By every conceivable means the Cats will infiltrate, taking over all major arteries and hotels. (If they can get rooms.)

"Yes sir, and you'd like special student rates . . .

And you're from what university? VILLANOVA! Aghhh!

They're back! Quick, spread the word! It's them!" Then, suddenly, at the appointed hour on Friday night, the signal will be given "Pop, Pop, Pop, Pop" (new flip-top cans), and within a short time the town will be the hands of the Main Line forces. THE CATS ARE BACK!

The conquering heroes will undoubtedly demand tribute and human sacrifices from the inhabitants. Now there are several possible sources for these sacrifices: Radcliff
Mount Ida
Sacred Heart
Emmanual
Regis
Regis.

Citizens of Boston, hear me out. This will happen to you. Close your doors. Bar your windows. Bar your bars! Close down the "Jungle." Let the "Hoffbrau" beware.

"But, nobody from Villanova drinks."

"Hey, that's right! Good thing too. Right?"

Saturday morning will bring the reason for this mass exodus. The mob will:

(1) walk....
(2) crawl....
(3) be carried....(check one) to the B. C. stadium to cheer-on wildly the dauntless Blue and White. The Cats face their toughest opposition in B. C. but they can be assured of fanatical support from the Villanova fans.

"Say, it's a good thing that nobody stole that eagle from in front of the B. C. student union building last night."

After the game, the fans will

(1) walk.....
(2) crawl.....
(3) be carried.....

back to their sources of merriment of the preceding night.

"This is merriment? Back in Rome they had another name for it."

Come Sunday morning the once peaceful hamlet of Boston will again be returned to the control of the local inhabitants. The "Hoard" will slowly but triumphantly filter out of town. Accompanied by cries like, "Hey, you better put back our eagle!" Well, there's always a couple of poor losers.

By Joe Morrison

Dollars to Doughnuts: the next guy you see wearing suspenders will be on the portly side.

In spite of the fact: that Ian Flemming is a favorite of the avant-garde, I don't think James Bond will ever replace Ahab as the great American hero.

Literary scene: James Baldwin's Another Country must be one of the most widely read novels on campus. If you haven't read it yet, borrow a copy. It just might increase your ability to use four letter words in contemporary style.

Now take John Updike, a fast rising contemporary, who has a beautiful way of saying things but who docs not have much to say.

What has happened to the shining white knight in literature? The modern hero is most likely to be insecure, introverted, intrinsically dishonest and perverted. I guess Tom Jones was the last hero on a white horse. Pardon me; I forgot about Hopalong Cassidy.

Interesting note: In 1884 the New York Mets made the World Series. Sorry, Met fans, 1963 was not the best season in Met history.

Suprised to see: that citadel of amateur theatre is being revamped, roof-wise that is. Pretty soon it might get a name and the classroom annex will be no more.

Injustice: It now costs eight cents to read about the latest crimes.

Doubtful; Joe Valachi will live to a ripe old age.

Good thing: Resident students finally got heat. The common cold was on the rise and so were handkerchief sales in the University Shop. Rumor has it that the infirmary was running out of their panacea — that little package of pills.

Have you ever: sat on one of the tributes of past graduating classes? Well I'm afraid that's all they are, tributes. No one can sit comfortably on those scenic benches.

Too Bad: poor Lil Reis might move to Florida, maybe The News will send a reporter with her. They better otherwise pages three and four will be all ads.

Out of Place: Paul Hornung is making the tour again, inspiring young kids with the old morality of sports pitch. No wonder kids are confused these days.

Notice: how different guys refer to girls. For instance "I met this — chic, babe, broad, gal, doll, beast, moose, or girl (this type is not too sure of himself).

The Rising Curtain

Yes, Yes, Virginia

by Paul Norton

The question of the hour is "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" This provocative bombshell is not the sweet lady of English letters but rather a detonator of explosive reaction from New York to Philadelphia and, within the next few months, no doubt throughout the country.

A play as powerful in language and effect as anything seen on the stage since Eugene O'Neill, it is often compared with his "Long Day's Journey Into Night."

Whether or not this is a valid comparison in terms of psychological depth is another matter but it does hit with the same dramatic punch that holds the audience spellbound. The total effect was so startling in Boston as to silence the opening night audience for a second before bringing down thunderous applause.

Dramatic Plot

As constructed by Edward Albee, a young playwright of deep insights, it presents two people in battle for the gradually sinking illusions of a tormented married life. Through the evening they whip at each other with invectives so strong as to strip their partner and themselves bare of all sense of social protection.

The language and occasionally their actions range from obscene to just plain vulgar. Even the more mundane of theater-goers are apt to blanche at some of the epithets. While much of this is in keeping with the mood set by the opening lines we would be apt to question the use of this profanity by such educated people as a college professor and his wife.

Dialogue Controversy

The language problem raised controversy in Boston when the city censor requested the management of the theater to ask the playwright if he would delete some of the dialogue once the tone of the play had been established.

Following much discussion Albee removed some of the lines, particularly those references to the Lord's name which in the mind of this reviewer were among those least offensive. However, they were removed with apparent little loss to the show's dramatic structure.

Now the question arises that if there was no damage done in this expurgation then what was the necessity of including these expletives in the first place. Certainly the author couldn't have stooped to place them merely for shock value or petty theatrics.

Well Acted

In the primary roles of George and Martha, Shepard Strudwick and Nancy Kelly turn in performances of such fantastic energy and overpowering emotion that following the precedent set in New York, a different set of principals play the matinee performances.

Both parts, particularly that of Martha, call for long speeches of sustained emotion. Never once did either Miss Kelly or Mr. Strudwick falter in maintaining a fever pitch of excitement.

The overall effect of this play on the audience is one of complete hypnosis. It provokes deep thought while posing disturbing questions on two peoples' reactions to life and each other. This is "theater of the absurd" at its finest, well written, well acted, and emotionally dynamic.

CAMPUS NEWS BRIEFS

The Pre-Law Society started its 1963-64 functions last Thursday with a lecture by the Assistant Dean of Duke University.

They have arranged for Dean Reuschlein of the Villanova Law School to address the membership on October 10, at 10:30 a.m. in 204 C&F. All members are encouraged to be present and new members are welcome to attend.

The National Security Agency's Professional Qualification Test will be administered on the Villanova campus on December 7, 1963. Applications are now available from the Placement Director or the Chairmen of the Departments of Education, English, History, Library Science, and Modern Languages.

Unusual and challenging careers for college graduates, in the liberal arts field, and at all levels from baccalaureate to the doctorate, are offered by the National Security Agency.

Any U.S. citizen who has or will hold a bachelor's degree by September, 1964, is eligible to take the Professional Qualification Test. Because of the classified nature of NSA operations, all applicants for employment are subject to a thorough background investigation.

The deadline for receipt of applications is November 22, 1963.

An organizational meeting was recently held by the Philosophy Club, its purpose being to coagulate the officers for the year.

John Brown, president and discussion chairman, promises a full and active program for those interested. Plans are now being made for a guest lecturer this semester.

Also in the offering is a series of symposia and informal conversational meetings to cover the many aspects of contemporary philosophers. Such thinkers as Camus, Husserl, Marcel, Heidder, and Wittgenstein may be featured.

Also to come is a joint venture with the Literary Society into the realm of the world of arts inhabited both by Philosophy and Literature. Such men as Camus and Kafka will be spotlighted then.

All persons interested in joining are requested to contact Brown or to watch for announcements concerning a meeting to be held in the near future.

The Villanovans, a new dance band on campus, will make their first appearance this year at the Student Council Dance, on November 1. The new band led by Richard Pease, a junior Marketing major, is composed of 15 members.

Last year the Villanovans played at various activities in several states. They recorded an album on the RCA Victor label.

Many of their arrangements have been scored by Marscal Brown, Viel Hefti, and Ralph Flanigan. The tunes vary from all-time standards to the current popular songs.

The band is available for dances or social events of any nature and may be contacted at either 135 Sheehan Hall or Box 78, Villanova, Pa.

Taylor Interviewed On WWVU Favors Socialism For USA

Mr. George S. Taylor, leader of the Socialist-Labor party in Southeastern Pennsylvania guested last Wednesday night on WWVU radio's new program "Just This Side of the Fringe," with host Frank Sauers.

Taylor portrayed the capitalist system as a stage in the evolutionary economic development of the United States. He said that though capitalism has industrialized the U.S. to a point where material goods produced can more than supply the needs of all the people, there still exists widespread poverty, misery, and even starvation in many parts of the country.

Widespread Ills

He called for a Socialist reorganization of the nation's economic structure, one that would place all means of production into the hands of all the people. This, he said, would result in a more economically efficient society in which a more equitable distribution of abundance would enable every citizen to live commensurate with his needs.

No State Control

Taylor noted that Socialism does not mean "state control" over every aspect of a person's life. The state would in fact be in favor of an economic apparatus elected by the people which would manage the distribution of goods. All individuals in a particular industry ,such as teachers, mechanics, and artists, would elect representatives from their field to administer the industry. Taylor noted that it is only common sense that the teaching industry should be under the direction of teachers, engineering under the direction of engineers, and so forth.

Unusual Ideas

Sauers, the program's host, noted that the program will be devoted to presenting interesting and divergent views, and actually anything that might be unusual, and different.

Tom Thomsen wanted challenging work

He found it at Western Electric

T. R. Thomsen, B.S.M.E., University of Nebraska, '58, came to Western Electric for several reasons. Important to him was the fact that our young engineers play vital roles right from the start, working on exciting engineering projects in communications including: electronic switching, thin film circuitry, microwave systems and optical masers.

Western Electric's wide variety of challenging assignments appealed to Tom, as did the idea of advanced study through full-time graduate engineering training, numerous management courses and a company-paid Tuition Refund Plan.

Tom knows, too, that we'll need thousands of experienced engineers for supervisory positions within the next few years. And he's getting the solid experience necessary to qualify. Right now, Tom is developing new and improved inspection and process control techniques to reduce manufacturing costs of telephone switching equipment. Tom is sure that Western Electric is the right place for him. What about you?

If you set the highest standards for yourself, enjoy a challenge, and have the qualifications we're looking for—we want to talk to you! Opportunities for fast-moving careers exist now for electrical, mechanical and industrial engineers, and also for physical science, liberal arts and business majors. For more detailed information, get your copy of the Western Electric Career Opportunities booklet from your Placement Officer. Or write: Western Electric Company, Room 6405, 222 Broadway, New York 38, N. Y. And be sure to arrange for a personal interview when the Bell System recruiting team visits your campus.

Player of Week

Brightest Moments

by Roy Baron

Having been stunned by the 95 yard return of the opening kickoff by Buffalo's Jim Ryan, Villanova's hopes soon began to rise. Midway through the first period, Jim Thomas' line smashing brought the Wildcats into Bull territory. However, just as toward a touchdown, the Cats' hopes received another stunning blow. Fullback Thomas, the team captain, had to be helped from the field with a painful rib injury.

The man called upon to replace Thomas was a seldom used junior Mike Manger. In a game that proved to be a heart-breaking defeat for the homecoming crowd on the Main Line, Manger provided Wildcat rooters with some of their brightest moments.

It was his conversion, following the touchdown pass from Don Koslap to John Kelleher, that stood as Villanova's potential margin of victory for better than half the game. It wasn't until there was only 1:34 left to play on the scoreboard that Manger's kick lost its significance.

More impressive than his kicking, however, was his play at fullback. Always regarded as a first-rate defensive performer, the 5-11, 205 pounder showed that he could also run with the pigskin.

The first time he carried the ball, Manger picked up 20 yards on a draw play. This brought the ball to the Buffalo 13 yard line. It was the big play in the Wildcat drive that was stymied when a Koslap pass was intercepted in the Bull's endzone.

Later, in the third period, the junior from Asbury Park, N.J. again played a key role in a Villanova drive. In this series he picked up two successive first downs. The first came on a smash off left guard. Then he showed his versatility, when, on a fourth and four situation, he received a Don Connell pass on the flat and carried to the Buffalo 20 yard line. However, on the next play, this threat was ended by a pass interception.

Wildcats Kick Off Decisive Victory To Win Rugby Game

by Bob Skinner

The Ruggers won their first game of the 1963 campaign Saturday in a convincing style, smothering the Philadelphia Rugby Club, 26-0.

Fielding a better-organized and more powerful squad, the Wildcats controlled play from the start, and left little doubt as to the ultimate outcome.

After receiving the initial kick-off, Philadelphia could not move out from its deep position. The first Villanova score came shortly as the wingback recovered a loose ball, lateralled to Captain Ed Wilkinson, who drove around the end for the try.

The conversion attempt by Hal Cante failed, and the team led, 3-0, with the tone of the match quite clear.

The next score was carried across by Burt Lambino, on a lateral from the scrum-half. The kick was good and the Blue and White led 8-0.

With time running out in the first half, Ed Kurek scampered on a forty yard scoring run, to make it 11-0. However, Philadelphia roared back after the kick-off, and the half ended as the Wildcats stove off two furious Philadelphia attempts to get on the score-board.

The second half was closer, despite the fact that Villanova tacked on fifteen more points to its intermission lead, while holding the opposition scoreless.

Sailing Club Hopes To Gain Phila. Championship At Navy

by Jerry Bruderk

Since its beginning, the Villanova Sailing Club has won for Villanova the respect of the Eastern sailing powers. Last Saturday Villanova dropped a close decision to a powerful University of Pennsylvania Club, three races to two despite two, individual first places by freshman Jay Hollenback.

Dan Hurley

It is to the Club's credit that they have done so well under serious handicaps.

The Sailing Club was founded in 1959 by Joe Ciddle and Bob Connel who had previous racing experience. With the permission of the Very Rev. Joseph Kemme, OSA they formed a club and joined the Middle Atlantic Intercollegiate Sailing Association.

Lack of Boats

Despite their membership, Villanova could not purchase a boat and they entered each race using an opponent's boat. This, plus the fact that each meet was away put the team at a disadvantage.

Fine performances in subsequent meets kept the Club from being dropped from the Association.

Later that year, Villanova won the Philadelphia Area Championships over such powers as Georgetown and Navy.

The following year, disorganization had resulted in wasted funds and a group of freshmen elected frosh Dan Hurley to take over the leadership of the Club. Now a senior, Hurley has been Captain for three years. Hurley has hopes of going to the 1964 Olympics under the Mantoloking Boat Club. Elections for Captain, recently vacated by Hurley are scheduled for this week.

In 1961 the Sailing Club again participated in the Philadelphia Area Championships and last year finished third when the boat representing Drexel Technology hit the Locals' boat on a turn.

Penn, the eventual winner was the home team and the home team arbitrates all rule infractions. Thus Penn had the right to ignore the Villanova protest and claimed victory for themselves.

The Sailing Club is composed of 20 to 25 members who compete in approximately 15 regattas in the fall and 10 more in the spring. Each regatta has 12 races in which 6 schools put in two crews to man the boats.

This weekend, the crew will again attempt to capture the Philadelphia Championships against favored Georgetown and Annapolis at Annapolis.

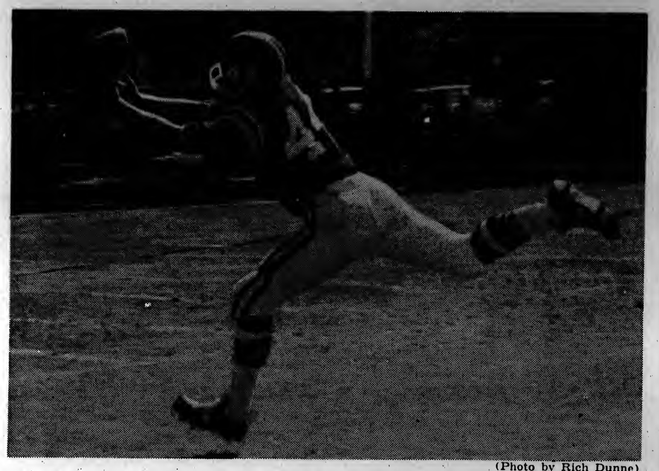
SPORTS ROUND UP

The Intramural Football League is off and running with competition in its third week. The fifty-six teams are now vying for the honored position of school champion.

A new attraction in this year's competition is the five team Navy league. The champs of the John Barry unit will challenge the regular league to a school championship. Games are played thirty-six times a week on either Austin or Mendel field.

On the tenth of this month the swimming and diving championships will take place in the field house. Applications will be accepted up and until the championships begin. The events scheduled are the 50 meter breast stroke, 50 meter freestyle, 50 meter butterfly, 50 meter back stroke, and the relays.



A main purpose of the mermen competition is the hope that new talent will be discovered for the powerful team of coach Ed Geisz.

BC's Offense Anticipates Victory Using Traditional Passing Attack

by Tom Willson

Led by All-American candidate, Jack Concannon, the explosive Boston College Eagles have wrought havoc and destruction on many opponents possessing the most devastating air attack in the East. B. C. is tough in close games and murder while pulling away. Quarterback Jack Concannon is mainly responsible for the reputation Boston College now enjoys as an offensive powerhouse.

Rated as one of the best quarterbacks in the East and selected as '63 cover-man for the NCAA football guide, Concannon can only be described in superlatives. Sensational and spectacular are the feats of the "big gun."

Concannon tied Heisman Trophy winner, Terry Baker, for the nations TD-tossing title with 15; was 5th in total offense with 1745 yards; was 11th in passing with 97 completions in 181 attempts for a .536 mark and 1,452 yards and all with only 6 interceptions tossed the entire season.

Coach Jim Miller has worked many wonders since he assumed the head coaching duties at Boston College in 1962. After Niagara dropped football, Miller coached at Buffalo, Purdue and Detroit before his arrival on the B. C. campus.

As he toured the beautiful 200 acre campus in suburban Chestnut Hill, a dark cloud hung over the 1962 edition of the Maroon and Gold. The experts had predicted another dismal year for the Boston College Eagles.

But Miller had already knuckled down to a massive rebuilding job that was to reverse the dire pre-season predictions and make the experts look like incompetent statisticians.

Boston College soared high in the 1962 campaign, losing only to Syracuse and Navy. The Eagles scored at will against nearly all the opposition and their deadly passing attack was the scourge of Eastern defenders.

In their closing games of the '62 campaign, the high-flying Eagles rolled up 42 points against Boston U's 25 and 48 points against Holy Cross's 12 a crushing display of offensive power.

With 22 lettermen returning while losing 29, Boston College expects to be strong again this year. The 6-3, 200-pound Concannon has a fine corps of receivers.

Ace pass-catchers are Jim Whalen, possibly the best end in the East and Joe Lukas, a defensive stalwart. The fleet-footed backfield is literally loaded with talent as Pete Shaughnesy and Bobby Shann return at halfback; Walt Dubzinski and Don Moran Share fullback duties.

The Eagles' excellent pass defense will again be sparked by defensive back Jim McGowan whose seven interceptions saw the BC Bombers lead the nation in that category last season.

Dropping the opener to a solid Syracuse Squad, the Eagles bounced back to rip Wichita 22-16 as Concannon tossed for three TD's. In last year's clash with the Cats, BC chalked up No. 16 against Villanova's 10 in their traditional rivalry.

This year, the Cats seek vengeance as BC has drawn blood on both our bowl teams. The Wildcats defense will be out to check Concannon before he buzzes the air with bombs that could only spell trouble to Villanova fans. Our forward wall will seek to ground the BC-Bombers before they take to the air-waves while our own air and ground attack takes its toll among BC defenders.

Miller's Candid Comments

by Tom Willson

Despite the optimistic Boston College articles in sports columns across the country, and the high spirit that permeates the B. C. campus, Coach Jim Miller sounds a cautious note in his interview with the Villanovan. The following is a text of that interview.

Q. Losing 29 lettermen would seem to seriously handicap your squad; would you care to comment?

A. Yes, our big problem seems to be the lack of an experienced senior squad. We have a lot of work to do especially in our line.

Q. Have your sophomores figured big in line play this year?

A. Yes, we have two sophomore guards on the first string.

Q. Are you pleased with your overall defense?

A. I am pleased thus far and they did a good job against Syracuse.

Q. Is Jack Concannon as deadly as he was last year?

A. Well, he was rushed a lot in the opener against Syracuse but still managed to score a couple.

Q. Are you pleased with his performance so far?

A. Yes, and it will improve.

Q. Do you agree with the sportswriters that Jim Whelan will be one of the best ends in the East?

A. There's no question about it — if he's not, I'd like to see a better one.

Q. Is your pass defense as tight as it was last season with Jim McGowan back there?

A. This should be our strong point because we have experience there. But everybody's throwing the ball more and we'll really be tested.

Q. Do you think you'll come close to matching last year's 8-2 record?

A. It will be difficult to do for several reasons. We lack the experience of last year's team and we'll play some tough teams.

Witchcraft

A Large Legend

by Joe McCarthy

Notes made while miandering about the Villanova athletic scene for a week.

Through years now we have all marveled at the heroic achievements of one of our stellar Intramural greats. Standing out in the twilight of Mendel and Austin Fields is that noted umpire, referee, and general arbiter of all things but disputes, Jim Moran.

A Villanova tradition, Jim has made many decisions in his stay on the Main Line. Many will never have an equal, but we still can't forget the National League umps during the balk dispute. Although many of his noted decisions have met with unfavorable comment, we still owe a debt of gratitute for his dedication.

We see many sports on the Villanova campus and many others in areas removed from the campus such as Kelley's and Rosemont. There are bowling, sailing, la crosse, rugby, swimming, baseball, golf, and football teams, just to mention a few.

But we can't understand why wrestling, boxing, and tennis are ignored. In the past, these sports have been a part of the Villanova life. Even now, there are several ex-high school wrestling champions on the campus.

Perhaps, a horse track might also answer the problems of some students.

The most wonderful thing about the Dodgers winning the World Series in four games was Yankee announcer Mel Allen during the closing innings. Poor Mel really choked up with tears of sorrow and grief when his heroes met their destiny.

Two Philadelphia area quarterbacks fell into oblivion last Saturday. The Eagles' Sonny Jurgeson and the Wildcats' Bill Sherlock both saw the game from the sidelines. But the results of the games were different. The Eagles somehow won and the 'Cats somehow lost. We wonder who commented the most.

Everyone hates to see their quarterback caught in a blitz, but the way of thinking here is that it would be far preferable to "eat the ball" than to throw to hostile hands.

The halftime show by the Villanova band was again impressive. The floats also represent a great effort on the part of many. But there were many other classes and organizations that should have been represented that were not.

Defense again shined during the entire game. Just costly mistakes in the pass defense resulted in the winning touchdown. But look to improvements and perhaps a surprise in the Boston College game Saturday.

Fumbles And Interceptions Hand Buffalo Saturday's Win

by Joe McCarthy

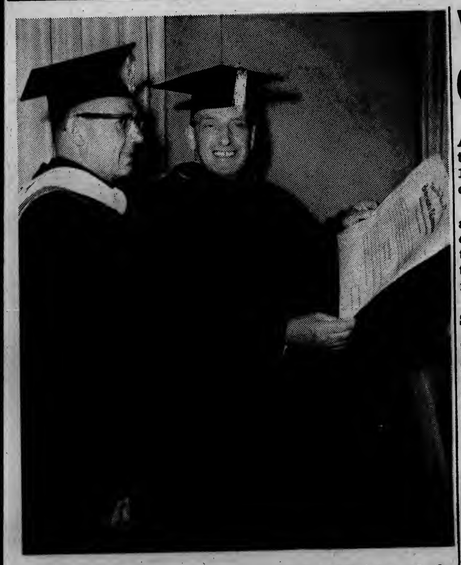
Five interceptions and two lost fumbles spearheaded last Saturday's 14-7 Villanova loss to Buffalo before a homecoming crowd of 12,500 listless spectators.

The Buffalo scores occurred at the very beginning and the very end of the game. The decisive score was the result of a John Stofa to Tom Butler pass for 36 yards with 1:34 remaining in the game. The first score was a 95 yard kickoff by Bull Jim Ryan with just 13 seconds elapsed on the clock.

A 24 yard pass from sophomore quarterback Don Koslap to end John Kelleher accounted for the lone Wildcat touchdown. Both Koslap and Kelleher excelled in their specialties, Koslap with accurate and deadly passing and Kelleher with his sure hands.

Koslap's big mistake was more of inexperience than anything else when he attempted to pass from the Buffalo three while slipping off balance. The pass was intercepted by a Buffalo defender and stymied in the end zone, a Wildcat drive that started from the Villanova 42.

Still the Wildcat defense managed to hold the 7-6 lead until the late fourth period clutch tally. The 'Cat offense however, did not fare as well with every drive of consequence being short of a score.



Sophomore quarterback Dave Connell again looked great on roll outs as he rushed for 77 yards in 16 tries for a 4.8 average. Fullbacks Jim Thomas and Mike Manger both showed good power. Thomas rushed for 25 yards in 4 attempts while Manger, replacing Thomas who suffered bruised ribs early in the game, ran for 29 in 5 tries.

Post-Game Notes: If memory serves us right, the 'Cats have tried only one field goal (Sun Bowl game) in the past four years . . . Can it be because no one can kick or that three points wouldn't help? . . . Second string tackle Tom Smith, bouncing back from his demotion of a week ago made several key tackles while throwing Buffalo ballcarriers for losses . . . Smith was also the only lineman in hot pursuit of Stofa in the fourth quarter when Stofa faked a punt and then passed for a first down in Villanova territory . . . The play eventually resulted in the winning score.

'Cat Nips: Five passes thrown into enemy hands do not enhance the work of the Villanova Spirit Committee in their tries to arouse a laconic (maybe blase) Villanova cheering section . . . We don't know which is to blame more but spirit is something that neither the crowd nor the team really displayed Saturday . . .

Variety Show, Football, Concert Comprise Annual Parents' Fete

The Blue Key has noted the Annual Parents' Weekend in the three day space of October 18, 19, and 20 as the biggest on-campus event of the month.

Kickoff event for the affair is an address by University President John A. Klekotka, OSA, in the Field House at 8 p.m. On the heels of the formal welcome is a lighthearted note.

Under the direction of Pete Smith the annual Variety Show will spark into the evening. Featured groups performing are the Villanova Band, the Spires, Turf 'n' Tinsel, and an assorted aggregation of folk singers and amateur showmen.

Next morning at 9 a.m. the parents register in the Field House for the rest of the weekend activities. At this time the students' mothers will receive a favor as a remembrance of the weekend.

Immediately thereafter all will convene in the basement of newly named Bartley Hall to meet Deans. The parents will have a chance to discuss things with the heads of their offspring's respective colleges.

Afternoon will feature a gridiron competition between Villanova and George Washington. Student Council President Marty McGuinn will welcome all on behalf of the student body as a part of the half-time.

Evening Concert

Highlighting the waning hours of the day Leopold Stokowski brings his American Symphony Orchestra to the band shell in the Field House at 8:30 p.m. He will feature a variety of classical pieces.

Sunday morning at 11 a.m. the curtain rings down on the whole festival with a solemn Mass and address by Father Klekotka. The rest of the day is free to the imaginative wanderings of the students and their parents.

WEEKEND SCHEDULE

October 17—Buckley Lecture, Field House, 8.30 p.m.
October 18—Law Forum, Garey Hall, 8 p.m.
October 18—Parents' Weekend Welcome, Field House, 8 p.m.
October 19—Parents Register, Field House, 9 a.m.
October 19—Villanova vs George Washington, 1:30 p.m.

Sean Lemass Given Honorary Degree At Sixteenth Annual Press Meeting

Sean Lemass, Prime Minister of Ireland, was presented with an Honorary Degree by the Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, University President, during exercises of the Publication Conference on Saturday, October 12.

Nearly 5000 high school journalists attended the affair as guests of the sixteenth annual Catholic School Publications Conference. Approximately 200 schools from a five-state area were represented in what the Conference Chairman, the Rev. Louis A. Rongione, OSA described as one of the largest of its kind in the country.

The conference began at 8:30 a.m. with registration in the Field House. Father Rongione delivered the welcoming address. Most of the day was taken up with talks and panel sessions led by prominent professional journalists. Topics ranged from editorial policies to photography.

It is hoped that these lectures have taught the high schoolers how to improve their newspapers, magazines, and yearbooks.

John Liney, creator of the nationally syndicated comic series "Henry" presented a talk on cartoons in journalism entitled "Henry and I."

Prominent Philadelphia photographer, Carl Wolf, spoke on the importance of photography in school publications and also discussed candid photography in journalism.

John A. Schneider, Vice-President of the Columbia Broadcasting Company and General Manager of Philadelphia station WCAU-TV was the keynote speaker of the day.

Conservative Critic Buckley Speaks On Aimless Education

by Tom Krause

William F. Buckley, Jr., editor-in-chief of the National Review, will appear at Villanova on October 17 as the first speaker in the Student Council Lecture Series. His role as a leading conservative critic should illustrate the significance of his visit to our campus.

He was first thrust into the public eye, in 1951, with the publication of his first book, God and Man at Yale, a searching probe into the issue of academic freedom.

His McCarthy and His Enemies, which he co-authored with L. Brent Bozell, in 1954, was a scholarly examination of loyalty and security practices under the late Senator Joseph McCarthy.

Best Seller

Up from Liberalism was his third best-seller. In it, Mr. Buckley documents the paradoxes of a bankrupt political tendency. He was then engaged in editing and contributing to The Committee and Its Critics, a symposium on the House Committee on Un-American Activities. Mr. Buckley has recently completed his latest book, Rumbles, Left and Right, published in July, 1963.

An obvious affinity with President Kennedy can be seen when comparing the two men. Both men are young, handsome, highly articulate Roman Catholics with an Ivy League background and a high-society foreground.

Their political differences are quite evident; Mr. Buckley is far to the right of Mr. Kennedy.

Leopold B. Stokowski and the American Symphony Orchestra will be the first guests of the Villanova Musical Concert Series. The Student Council will sponsor the concert which begins at 8:30 p.m., October 19, in the Field House.

Mr. Stokowski studied at the Royal College of Music, Oxford, and made his debut in Paris in 1908. From 1912 to 1938 he was music director of the Philadelphia Orchestra. In 1962 he organized the American Symphony Orchestra, the first American orchestra in 25 years.

A pioneer in contemporary music, the "Maestro" has introduced to the United States the compositions of Mahler, Stravinsky, Schonenberg, Satie, and Prokofiev. For his Villanova program Mr. Stokowski will conduct selections from the works of Kay, Wagner, Handel, Vivaldi, and Bach, as well as Mahler, whose music he introduced to America.

Besides having honorary doctoral degrees from the University of California, and the University of Pennsylvania he is also the holder of the Order of Polonia Restituta, Poland; Office of the Crown, Rumania; Chevalier of the Legion of Honor, France; and the Gold Medal of the City of Philadelphia.

Mr. Stokowski has appeared in four pictures: The Great Broadcast; 100 Men and a Girl; Fantasia; Carnegie Hall. He has made two motion abstract color

C&F To Be Designated Bartley Hall Oct. 20 Honoring Former Dean

The name of the College of Commerce and Finance will be changed to the Rev. Joseph C. Bartley, OSA, College of Commerce and Finance at 3:00 p.m., Sunday, October 20.

Father Bartley was the first Augustinian priest in America to study for a doctorate. After receiving his Ph.D. in Economics in 1922, Father Bartley was placed in charge of the new curriculum of economics, commerce and finance.

From 1930 to 1950 he also directed the summer session, the evening and graduate schools. Under Father's guidance the enrollment rose from 30 students to nearly 1300 students in 1958 when the new Bartley Hall was completed. At that time, the enrollment was second in size in

Coffey Stimulator

The idea that the intellectual aspect of community life needed stimulation led to the forming of the Villanova Forum of the Student Council—so stated Ed Coffey, one of the originators of the Forum.

He asserted that the Forum was the outgrowth of a debt which he felt was owed to the student body, the faculty, and the area communities by the Student Council.

Ed believes that the stimulation of the intellect is the primary goal of a university and that the Villanova Forum was the Student Council's way of kindling this intellectual activity.

The first speaker in the Forum series will be William F. Buckley Jr., who will speak on "The Aimlessness of American Education." Coffey, who obtained the services of this controversial critic, said that the topic was agreed upon by mutual consent.

Coffey anticipates that this and the forthcoming talk by the noted humorist Harry Golden will be the first of many successful presentations by the Villanova Forum Series.

A native of Wilmette, Illinois, Ed is a senior political science major. His extra-curricular activities include membership in the Sanctuary Society and co-chairmanship of the Student Council Cultural Affairs Committee.

Coffey also served as chairman of last year's Charity Ball and of the Junior Mothers' Day. He is a member of the NROTC and commander of Alpha Company.

Upon graduation Coffey hopes to serve with the Pacific fleet aboard a destroyer-type vessel.

Philosophy Club Discusses Autumn Semester Activities

Villanova's resuscitated Philosophy Club held its first meeting of the academic year last Monday in Vasey Hall. Plans for the first informal discussion meeting were formulated.

Heading the semester's activity is an investigation of the impact of existentialism on modern life, with its concomitant influence on the realm of literature.

Edmund Husserl and Gabriel Marcel, philosophers extreme, Albert Camus and Franz Kafka, philosopher-novelists of the other, and a thinker of the middle Henri Bergson, form the heart matter of the controversy.

Purpose of Club

John Brown, club president, extended to all Villanovans an invitation to join the organization, with the observation that their purpose was "to try to make the Villanova student aware of his relationship to philosophy and of philosophy to him."

Peter Kreeft, the faculty moderator, suggested that interest in the program of the group was already being stimulated both off and on campus. He intimated the possibility of outside speakers at formal meetings.

The Villanova Philosophy Club is an activity open to any man or woman with an open and inquisitive mind. It s purpose is to provide an intellectual outlet for the philosophico-literary energies of the undergraduate.

Join Now

Any student is welcome to join and may do so, either by contacting John Brown, Mr. Kreeft, or Jan Dyroff, the Student Council Representative.

Forthcoming functions, including cooperative actions with other campus organizations, will be announced by poster, bulletin board, and other communication media.

Literary Symposium On Golding's 'Flies' Follows Albee Talk

The Literary Society of Villanova will hold its first major program of the year on Monday, November 4, at 7:30 p.m. in 110 Bartley Hall.

The topic of discussion will be William Golding's perennial best-seller Lord of the Flies. The program, "Symposium: Lord of the Flies, will be a discussion by club members on the pertinent aspects of Golding's novel.

A question and answer period will follow the disscussion. Also included will be a taped interview with the author.

In commenting on the symposia, chairman Frank Sauers explained: "The make-up of the Symposium affords the audience an opportunity to participate fully in discussion of the topic."

On Thursday, October 17, at 10:30 a.m., in 204 Vasey Hall, the first in a series of informal discussion programs on significant authors and literary trends will be held. The topic will be contemporary playwright Edward Albee, author of Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?, The American Dream, The Zoo Story, and many other successful plays. The chairman of the discussion will be Barry Thornton.

Club president, Frank Quattrone, has stressed the fact that these meetings will be open to all faculty members and students at Villanova.

VUPU Shows Growth By Recent Disclosure Of 'Politico' Paper

In recent years such political organizations as the Conservative Club and the Villanova Political Union have grown considerably in size and campus activity. But until now there has been no organ of political communication to the general student body.

This then is the purpose of Politico, the new political paper. Coverage in this periodical will include both national and international events. It is hoped that the publication will stimulate intelligent political interest on campus.

With the encouragement of the union moderator, John J. Logue of the Villanova Political Science Department, and Peter De Liberty, President of the Political Union, Politico will be presented to the student body at the end of every month, beginning in October.

Heading the staff is editor-in-chief, Michael Magro. The staff hopes to present clear and concise views of the membership of the union.

Student Congress Declares March 16 As Annual Free Day

The Villanova Student Congress last Wednesday evening declared Monday, March 16 as the annual Student Council Free Day, subject to administration approval.

The showdown on the resolution submitted by Council Secretary Joe McCarthy came on an amendment that would have added a day to the Easter vacation. The amendment was defeated. The major reason for passage of the March 16 date was that it would give Villanovans an opportunity to attend either the National Invitational Basketball Tournament in New York or the NCAA Basketball Tournament in College Park, Maryland, assuming post-season participation in either.

NFCCS Bid

The Congress also rendered approval to a request by NFCCS Senior Delegate, Terry Cooney that Villanova bid for the Regional Student Affairs Secretariat which would, for the most part, concern student government. The Vice Chairman of the Council will be responsible to the Philadelphia Regional NFCCS for the Secretariat.

Chairman Marty McGuinn announced that Spirit Committee Chairman Ken Cronin has resigned due to academic pressures. Brian Banmiller of the Class of 66, has been appointed to the position for the remainder of the year.

New Senior Rep

Nominations and elections for the vacant Senior Resident Engineering post were held. Jack Burt will assume the seat, since the only other nominated for the office, Clyde Keyton, later withdrew from the race.

Notes: minutes will be published and posted on Mendel, Tolentine, Vassey, and Bartley Hall bulletin boards in the future . . . Making a bid for a seat on the Congress will be the Political Union and Concept . . . NFCCS dues for the coming year will be $200 dollars lower than last year due to new legislation sponsored by Villanova and Notre Dame this summer.

Pre-Law Society Hears Law Career Address By Dean Reuschlein

The Villanova Pre-Law Society heard their second guest speaker of the year last week. He was Dean Harold Gill Reuschlein of the Villanova Law School.

Speaking to an attentive audience of students planning a law career, Dean Reuschlein immediately open the floor to questions, feeling that a question and answer period might prove more worthwhile than merely a speech on law schools.

One of the first questions posed and one which was troubling most of the audience concerned the effect of the law boards on admission to a law school. The Dean explained that because of the wide variance in college grading standards, the law boards were necessary in judging each application on an equal basis.

He stated that every school sets a specific level which they expect their candidates to attain, but also added that Villanova and many other of the better law schools often drop below this minimum to accept a candidate whom they feel has the potential.

He cited as example cases at the Villanova Law School where students who were barely able to gain admittance are now leading their classes. However, the Dean emphasized the fact that this was an exception.

Other questions concerned the status of the Villanova Law

'Who's Who' Selection Method Announced By Student Council

The Student Council of Villanova University has announced the procedure for selecting the nominees from the Senior Class for Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities.

Nominations will come from three committees, the student committee, headed by the Rev. Richard Appicci, OSA, Dean of Student Affairs, will submit a list of eligible nominees. The Dean of the various schools will comprise the second committee and will submit a list of eligible nominees. The third committee will be made up of the moderators of each recognized campus organization, who will submit two senior members of their organizations.

The final selection will be made from the list of nominees by a committee composed of five faculty members and two students. The five faculty members this year are: Father Appicci; the Rev. Joseph W. Kemme, OSA, Vice-President of Student Affairs; the Rev. George J. McLaughlin, OSA, Dean of Men; the Rev. William Hopkins, OSA, Chaplain; and Miss M. Dorothy Boyle, Dean of Women. The two students are James Murphy, President of the Senior Class and Marty McGuinn, President of the Student Body.

In order to be eligible the nominees mlust have a minimum scholastic average of 2.5, be active in recognized campus activities, and be in good standing with the authority of the University.

The names of those chosen will be submitted to the National Organization on October 28, and will not be announced until a notice is received from them.

Aerial Photography Is Subject Of Talk To Sigma Xi Members

Sigma Xi, national honor society for scientists and engineers, sponsored a talk by Robert N. Colwell, their national lecturer, last night in Mendel Hall.

Doctor Colwell in his topic "Aerial Photography — A Valuable Censor for the Scientist," stressed the point that the amount of useful information obtained from aerial photography is largely dependent upon the quality of the photographic images, the mental and physical capabilities of the scientist who examines the photographs, and the techniques and equipment he employs.

Doctor Colwell in his topic B.S. and Ph.D at the University of California and served in the Second World War and the Korean War as a photo interpreter.

Since joining the forestry service of the University of California, he has taught courses in photo interpretations and photogammetry and has conducted research in civil use of aerial interpretation.

Law Forum Presents Robert C. Weaver Speaking On Urgent Urban Problems

The Villanova Law Forum will present the distinguished Administrator of the Federal Housing and Home Finance Agency, Robert C. Weaver, on Friday evening, October 18. His talk will be given at 8:30 p.m. in Garey Hall. It is the first in a series of three lectures, entitled "The City Faces Its Problems", which is sponsored by the Law Forum.

In the series, the outstanding phenomenon of the last four decades, the urbanization of the United States—will be discussed. This urbanization is reflected by the transition from a predominantly rural society to a predominantly urban society.

Robert C. Weaver

Mr. Weaver has been concerned with housing and urban problems for 25 years. A native of Washington, D.C., he first entered government service in 1933, as Advisor on Negro Affairs in the Department of Interior.

He also served as a consultant with the Housing Division of the Public Works Administration.

Federal Post

One of Weaver's important Federal posts was special assistant to the Administrator of the U.S. Housing Authority.

This federal office has evolved into the present Public Housing Administration — one of the operating constituents of the Housing and Home Finance Agency which Mr. Weaver heads.

He left Washington in 1944 to become Executive Director on the Mayor's Committee on Race Relations in Chicago, and later served the city of New York as Deputy Commissioner of Housing and as Administrator of State Housing Rent Commission.

Urban Planner

Prior to his appointment as Housing Administrator by President Kennedy in February, 1961, he was Vice-Chairman of Housing and Redevelopment Board of the City of New York. This board directs and administers the city's multi-million dollar urban renewal and middle-income program — the largest in the nation.

It will be remembered that he was prominently mentioned as President Kennedy's choice for Secretary of the proposed cabi-

Grad Theatre Plans 'Gay Burning Bridge' As Second Fall Play

The Graduate Theatre Department of Villanova will present as its second performance, The Gay and Burning Bridge, the story of a young man who experiences a dissolution of certain love affairs, on October 25.

The play is written by David Rabe, a graduate of Loras College, Dubuque, Iowa. Rabe, a graduate assistant, has written several plays for community groups and Macmillan Publishing House is interested in one of his novels.

Richard Harshberger who assists the Rev. Joseph J. Gildea, OSA, as coordinator of secondary school relations, directs the play. He is also an instructor of theatre.

The leading role of a twenty year old lover, Danny, is portrayed by Bill DiPaolo, a graduate of Villanova and past officer of Belle Masque.

Danny's boy friend is played by Peter Mocco, an economics major. Terry, the negotiator between Danny and Jake is Tom Grace who has also acted at Hedgerow Theatre.

Carol Schmenkle, past president of Rosemont's Jest and Gesture, takes the part of Karen, Danny's girl friend.

Performances will run on October 25, 26, 27; November 1, 2, 3; and November 8, 9, and 10. They will begin at 8:30 p.m.

The current play, The Broken Doll, will be held over to October 18 and 19.

Conservative Club To Attend Seminar Plans Fordham Trip

The Conservative Club will attend a seminar entitled "The Mainsprings of Economic Freedom" at Fordham University on Saturday, October 26.

Guest speakers will include: Dr. Sylvester Petri, professor of Law at New York University Law School; Dr. William H. Peterson, professor of economics at New York University; and Dr. Louis M. Spadio, professor of economics in the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences at Fordham.

All interested students should contact John Ames, 252 Sheehan Hall, as soon as possible. There will be a quota of 10 students that may attend.

On Negro Voting

One of the most fundamental demands made by Negroes, particularly those in the South, has been for the right to vote. Negroes have demonstrated and, in all probability, will continue to demonstrate against voting restrictions. Yet in Cambridge, Maryland, two weeks ago, Negroes had an opportunity to vote for integration but many, remarkably, stayed away from the polls.

The vote was on public-accommodations amendment to the City Charter, which had the backing of the city's professional, business, church and civic leaders along with the local press. The referendum was defeated by a scant 274 votes — 1994 to 1720.

The white voter turnout was eighty-three percent of the eligible white voters and, as expected, the great majority of them were against the measure. While these results were distressing enough, it was also noted that only forty-three percent of the city's 1535 eligible Negro voters registered their opinion at the polls. For nearly a century, Negroes have been suffering for their right to vote but in Cambridge, where this right is recognized and encouraged, less than half of the city's Negroes availed themselves!

If anyone is to blame, Mrs. Gloria Richardson, leader of the Cambridge Non-violent Action Committee is hereby nominated. She demanded that the City Council adopt a public-accommodations ordinance. The Council hestiated and asked instead, for a Charter amendment requiring a vote. Not willing to accept a compromise, Mrs. Richardson called for a boycott at the polls. Her reasoning: it would be wrong to submit "the constitutional rights of our people to the whims of a popular majority." Her statement may very well be true, but it is also true that the Negroes' rights, no matter how long overdue, will not be realized in their entirety overnight.

The referendum could have been a serious and practical first step in the fight of the Negro for recognition of his basic rights — but the effects of this one step will never be known because the Negroe refused to take it.

Alumni Report

Alumni-Senior Function Plans

by Neal Stoneback
Alumni Representative

Neal Stoneback, the current Alumni Association representative, has announced tentative plans for an Alumni-Senior function, following a meeting last week with the Student Liaison Board composed of Fred Clark, Peter Grossan, and Tom Boyle. Stoneback stated that a tentative date of Wednesday, November 6, has been arranged for the gathering.

The function will take place between the hours of 4:30 and 9 p.m. During this period all members of the Senior Class are invited and urged to visit the Alumni House, located across from the campus. A featured speaker as well as refreshments will be included.

It was also noted that, in discussing the function, an important goal of the Alumni Association is being realized, because a closer unity will be created between the Senior Class and the Alumni Association.

Steering Committee Meeting

Further plans will be discussed on Tuesday, October 15, at the Senior Class Steering Committee meeting at the Alumni House. This meeting will take place at 7:30 p.m. and all members of the Steering Committee should be present.

At this time the possibilities of an additional project in the spring will be discussed along with any additional points of interest.

Stoneback emphasized that the Alumni Association is more than willing to create a congenial and beneficial atmosphere between the seniors and themselves.

A Welcome To Bumpy

by Frank Sauers

We were delighted the other day with the news that one of the most poular extreme preservatives of our time, Gilliam F. Bumpy, has been invited to speak here. This reporter was granted an exclusive advance interview with Mr. Bumpy the other day.

We asked whether he thought preservatism is the wave of the future. "Very definitely", he said. "You must remember that preservatism is based on the dignity and importance of the individual. Now, I think, and have said so for years, that it's about time we individuals banded together, which is what we preservatives have done. It's the only way we'll get anything done."

"Mr. Bumpy," we queried, "How do you view the Supreme Court decision banning prayer services in public schools?" "An absolute disgrace!" he retorted, "I think it's abundantly clear that we ought to take religion out of the churches and put it in the public schools where it belongs."

Current Conflict

"How about the current conflict between dictatorship and democracy in South America?" "Well, as you know, I am an enthusiastic supporter of democracy, except of course when the people think they can control the government. This is what is happening in South America. Now, don't get me wrong, I don't mind having a civilian president, but when he starts running the country, that's going just a little too far."

Mr. Bumpy, "What do you think of President Kennedy?" "A juvenile, conceited little rich boy", he snorted. "But weren't you born a millionaire," we asked?" "Definitely, and I also oppose Polish sausage." "We're curious," we asked, "why you have chosen to speak here?" "Because my father didn't give me enough allowance to go as far as Georgetown."

Mr. Bumpy has authored several books primarily concerned with the preservative - driberal conflict. Among his latest are Down with Driberalism, a condemnation of the detrimental effect of the socialistic tendencies of President Milliard Fillmore on contemporary society. Another is Joe McFrothy and His Friends. He began that one back in 1954 and is still working on the first page. He'll be looking for volunteers here this week.

Letter To The Editor

Dear Sir:

—Since Homecoming Weekend is fused so closely with the spirit and activity of football it seems essential that we make an analogy with this popular autumn sport to review the events of the two day span. Imagine yourself, therefore, in the coaches' briefing room. Our mild-mannered mentor is smiling a satisfactory grin as he relives the memories of the successful weekend on a game film.

In the opening quarter, the coach points out, Mike Quinn threw a crucial block to "spring" the weekend to its first score. Mike as class chairman for the Pep Rally and bonfire excelled in his new position. Later in the first period, Ed Hallahan, a veteran organization man, lead a fine defensive attack to completely "contain" the dorm decorations.

By the second period our offensive play really got underway as the films clearly indicate. With Jerry Campana calling the signals from his spot as dance

Unbearable Hour . . .

by Walt Bailey

The Pie Shoppe is actually the only student retreat of any consequence on the Villanova campus. There are others, but the Pie Shoppe is by far the most popular.

Now it is not always easy to find a place to rest your weary bones, but it still is the students' only place of retreat from the hardships of an acamedic life.

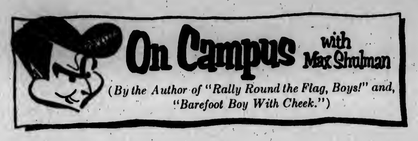
There is one time in particular, however, when the Pie Shoppe is unbearable. This is during the Activities Period at 10:30 a.m. on Thursday. Since no classes are scheduled as a rule during this time, all non-residents begin to congregate within the sacred walls of their retreat.

The line for food and drink is longer than the residents cafeteria line, and it is also impossible to find a seat, much less a table.

Now perhaps this situation could be alleviated somewhat if the doors to the day-hop cafeteria were opened at 10:30 a.m. only on Thursday. Since this cafeteria is normally opened at 11:30 a.m. anyway, the one hour difference should not burden anyone significantly.

The facilities of the day-hop cafeteria need not be put into operation until the normal time. The extra space and the greater number of chairs are the most important items.

The Pie Shoppe need not be a luxury lounge but there is no reason why one can't sit comfortably there.



Since so many students feel that joining some campus activity is not for them, a fact which is deplorable in itself, they thus find it necessary to congregate in the Pie Shoppe. Consequently, it is hoped that something be done to cope with the resultant problem.

On Campus with Max Shulman

(By the Author of "Rally Round the Flag, Boys!" and, "Barefoot Boy With Cheek.")

BOOM!

Today, foregoing levity, let us turn our keen young minds to the principal problem facing American colleges today: the population explosion. Only last week four people exploded in Cleveland, Ohio—one of them while carrying a plate of soup. In case you're thinking such a thing couldn't happen anywhere but in Cleveland, let me tell you about two other cases last week—a 45-year-old man in Provo, Utah, and a 19-year-old girl in Northfield, Minnesota. And, in addition, there was a near miss in High Point, North Carolina—an eight-year-old boy who was saved only by the quick thinking of his cat, Fred, who pushed the phone off the hook with his muzzle and dialed the department of weights and measures. (It would, perhaps, have been more logical for Fred to dial the fire department, but one can hardly expect a cat to summon a fire engine which is followed by a Dalmatian, can one?)

But I digress. The population explosion, I say, is upon us. It is, of course, cause for concern but not for alarm, because I feel sure that science will ultimately find an answer. After all, has not science in recent years brought us such marvels as the maser, the bevatron, and the Marlboro filter? Oh, what a saga of science was the discovery of the Marlboro filter! Oh, what a heart-rending epic of trial and error, of dedication and perseverance! And, in the end, what a triumph it was when the Marlboro research team, after years of testing and discarding one filter material after another—iron, nickel, tin, antimony, obsidian, poundcake—finally emerged, tired but happy, from their laboratory, carrying in their hands the perfect filter cigarette! Indeed, what rejoicing there still is whenever we light up a Marlboro which comes to us in soft pack and Flip-Top Box in all fifty states and Cleveland!

Four people exploded in Cleveland

Yes, science will ultimately solve the problems arising from the population explosion, but meanwhile America's colleges are in dire straits. Where can we find classrooms and teachers for today's gigantic influx of students?

Well sir, some say the solution is to adopt the trimester system. This system, already in use at many colleges, eliminates summer vacations, has three semesters per annum instead of two, and compresses a four-year-course into three years.

This is, of course, good, but is it good enough? Even under the trimester system the student has occasional days off. Moreover, his nights are utterly wasted in sleeping. Is this the kind of all-out attack that is indicated?

I say no. I say desperate situations call for desperate remedies. I say that partial measures will not solve this crisis. I say we must do no less than go to school every single day of the year. But that is not all. I say we must go to school 24 hours of every day!

The benefits of such a program are, as you can see, obvious. First of all, the classroom shortage will disappear because all the dormitories can be converted into classrooms. Second, the teacher shortage will disappear because all the night watchmen can be put to work teaching solid state physics and Restoration drama. And finally, overcrowding will disappear because everybody will quit school.

Any further questions?

Yes, one further question: the makers of Marlboro, who sponsor this column, would like to know whether you have tried a Marlboro lately. It's the filter cigarette with a man's world of flavor. Settle back and enjoy one soon

Caligula Complex

Cheerful Charlies Plan Action

by Prolificus Superbus

The Villanova Chapter of the Confraternity of Cheerful Optimists, the CCO, formerly the VAU, will meet on the green tomorrow morning during the activities period. The aggregation will convene in front of the statue.

High spirits, the unbottled kind, will be the order of the day and it is expected that a rollicking good time will be had by all.

Arvie Mastelwitypy, chairman of the publicity committee, would identify the saint on the statue but nobody at the meeting of the CCO ever noticed the name of St. Whateverhisnameis because they were unable to stop laughing long enough to decipher the inscription.

Cheer and order will reign and the CCO will not only plan to do something, but will actually do something, inasmuch as they are an action group. By so doing they uphold the tradition of an active alert Villanova.

A reading list will be furnished, directing the member to funny little bits in the world of books. To all those who become carried away, a set of monogrammed blue and white paper handkerchiefs will be provided by the Blue Key.

The basic philosophy of the CCO, a purely Epicurean group, is to make beknownst to all, the four, five, six, or more, years the average CCOer spends at VU are the swingingest in his life — like muchel happy.

Members realize full well this fact and are willing to share their glee, even to the extent of letting the Glee Club borrow on their concept of glee.

Fronwin Artoltnek, of the Mirth and Merriment committee, reports that suitable progress has been made in a comic rendering of the Latin inscription above the main entrances to the Library. The one over the back has been successfully rendered as "Service Entrance, Trucks Only."

All lighthearted members of the University Community are encouraged to join and support this worthwhile clan. The CCO, you must remember, is the logical contrary to the Cosa Nostra and, as such, is metaphysically good (approval of the Roman Rota pending).

Gimel al Hidaaut, publicity mongers, admonishes all to come early for good seats. Those who get their first get the best blades of grass. In closing, save your ticket stubs as there will be a prize drawing for $235,740,-987.25 in Confederate currency.

Locked Out By Self Doubt Confidence Key To Success

by Quentin Dougherty

Confidence, which is defined as the full trust that one places in his abilities, is a necessary factor in life. This holds true especially in the life of a college student. Throughout his course of studies a student is not capable of maximum effort and success if he does not feel that his proficiency warrants good grades. Now that we have realized that confidence is necessary for one's best work possible let us see how else confidence may be beneficial to us.

In the everyday life of a university student a need for confidence perpetually arises. Be it in the classroom or on the athletic field this trust in one's abilities is necessary to insure the best results possible. Where would a student or any person for that matter be without confidence? To say the last he would be lost. Without possessing even a small degree of trust in one's endowment a person would not be able to succeed in life much less work himself up to a responsible position in a firm or business.

Let us now take an example of a student and an athlete who are excellent in their respective fields, but lack confidence. First get the picture of an able student. He has all the mental talents which it takes to be a good student. During classes he shows all his capibilities but when an exam is in the wind he freezes up and does a poor job because he does not have the confidence in his mental powers, which is necessary to achieve good grades. Now try to visualize a big and powerful athlete.

He has all the physical characteristics to make him one of the best in his sport. Because he lacks a certain degree of confidence he does not exert his all during a game and consequently he does not place as high he he is capable. These two examples are relived every day and they could be overcome in all cases by belief in one's capabilities.

To sum up what I have said and what many experts in this field of psychology have said, confidence is a very necessary agent in success and mental advancement. If one lacks this factor, life will be full of many tough crossroads that will be very difficult to overcome.

A History Of The Villanova Forum

On May 10, 1963 Marty McGuinn, a native of Princeton, New Jersey and newly elected President of the Villanova Student Council sent a letter to the Very Reverend John A. Klekotka, OSA, President of Villanova University, requesting authorization for a Lecture Series featuring competent speakers who guarantee a high standard of excellence.

On June 4, Fr. Klekotka approved the measure and assured the students of his enthusiastic support. Work on the projected series for the 1963-64 academic year extended over the summer months and into the early fall.

At the present moment, William F. Buckley, Jr., editor-in-chief of National Review, noted author of three books, essayist and journalist is scheduled to present the initial lecture on Thursday, October 17 at 8:00 p.m. in the University Field House.

Mr. Harry Golden, author of Only in America; Enjoy Enjoy, For 2c Plain, and You're Entitled, will give a lecture on Monday, November 4 at 8:00 p.m. Barbara Ward (Lady Jackson) is tentatively scheduled to lecture on February 20. Sean O'Faolain, Irish author and literary critic will speak on May 6.

In order to make the series available to residents of the Main Line and the greater Delaware Valley area a committee of the following members has been formed: Mr. and Mrs. Davaid K. Biddle of Newtown Square, Pa., Mr. and Mrs. Birchard T. Clothier of Villanova, Pa., Mr. and Mrs. Frank N. Piasecki of Haverford, Pa., and Mr. and Mrs. Frederick P. B. Thornton of Villanova, Pa. Mr. Frank N. Piasecki received the Mendel Metal in science in 1954 for his pioneering research in the helicopter industry. The Piasecki Foundation has always listed Villanova University as one of its beneficiaries.

Other members of the committee have taken a similar interest in enlarging the scope of Villanova's influence in an effort to expand the University's service to both its students and the general public.

The committee, authorized by the Vice-president for Student Affairs, the Rev. Joseph Kemme, OSA, is working together with the Villanova Student Council, and its Cultural Affairs Committee, Neil Stoneback, Ed Coffey and John Hohenadel. The Rev. George P. Lawless, OSA Assistant Professor of Classics is Faculty advisor.

Caught In Passing

Stan Kenton: Man On The Move

by Jan Dyroff

A most distinguished and welcome guest, one Stan Kenton by name, paid a visit to our campus recently. He was here at the request of his friend Eddie Bride, noted WWVU jazz personality.

Kenton, if you know not and wish to, is a composer, leader, and pianist fronting his own highly successful band, which in itself is a tribute to him. A complete biography would take up one whole column, a project for the future perhaps.

Present Plans

When Stan settled down in his chair in the WWVU studio, the conversation first turned to what he was doing. At present he is on tour—a little on the east coast, a little on the west, and 'round and 'round in the midwest.

From the plains states he goes to England for a series of concerts. He was there last in 1956. Although he is well received in the misty isles, he doesn't particularly like them because the band has to work twice as hard there as here for equivalent amounts of money.

English Tour

Jazz in England is a funny thing, he pointed out. American artists are the big thing there and the Britons often overlook much excellent homegrown talent.

While Stan likes to be on tour, he expressed the regret that it took up so much time and that he couldn't write more than he does. He likes to experiment with time signatures, feeling that the average jazz fan can spot them, maybe not identify them, and enjoy them.

Colorful Beat

Much of the colorful rhythm he uses in his recording dates comes from an Afro-Cuban influence and from ideas picked while in South America a few years ago.

What about the bossa nova, we asked, now that it's been around a year or so? The answer was that Stan thought it to be a charming addition to his book, one of lasting significance that would rank with the other, more established Latin beats. It's something very easy to work with.

Time Lapse

While on the subject of recordings, Stan noted that it was a shame that so much time elapses between cutting a record and its release. When one is doing something like a show album it gets too dated.

Recordings mean record reviews. Too many times, he noted, reviewers don't understand what's going on. Moreover, they don't realize that it's a two-way street and that the artists review them.

Pop Tastes

But popular tastes are popular tastes. When asked how he accounted for the teenagers taste, he said that it was just a stage in maturity and that as they grow older, the teeners will turn to more serious music—jazz or the classics.

On the college level things are good. The people Stan's seen at his concerts have come to listen and know what's going on. They're good audiences.

Recent interest in jazz has been evidenced by collegiate festivals across the nation. Kenton maintains that Villanova's IJF is the finest to be found anywhere in the country (a point he made with another announcer on another station earlier in the evening).

The colleges not only appreciate jazz but also produce it, with a number of jazz labs being in operation.

Broad Views

Speaking of himself a little, Stan said that his tastes in music are pretty broad. The classics and jazz are about equal spacewise in his album library. Not everything in jazz he likes he plays. An example is Dixieland, he likes it, but doesn't play it.

Stan is always willing to try a new inspiration, some of which comes from his listening. "Song writing is a gift," he said, "it's not something you learn, it's got to be with you." Whatever it is, Mr. Kenton has it.

Literary Scene: this column is still awaiting a meritable arrival from Philip Roth. Letting Go fell far short of expectations, in fact it was over six hundred pages of drudgery.

Who said: "Speak not to me of blasphemy man, I'd strike the sun if it insulted me."

I wonder if the up-coming literary symposium, scheduled to discuss William Golding's Lord of the Flies, will examine it in the light of his other popular works, Pincher Martein, The Inheritors, and Free Fall, or will take the easy way out and compare him to 'old J. D.'. I hope the symposium will take the former course for by taking that way a greater insight can be made into the works of Golding. My comments on his book: Lord of the Flies—great not pessimistic as is often said; Pincher Martin—a fiasco, Christopher should have died even a third death; The Inheritors — perhaps even surpasses the Lord; Free Fall: I didn't read it yet.

Point to Ponder: are the pie shoppe commandos on the? I think so. One of these days I'm afraid the commandos will bar all male non-members from Dougherty Hall. Then they will conscript all females on campus. Watch it nurses or you may be a pie shoppe secretary.

Doubtful: in my college days someone will ask me what've I learned instead of what mark I got.

The Rising Curtain

"Luther" Powerful Production

by Paul Norton

We at Villanova had an opportunity early in this semester to see a play of more than passing interest to us as students of the Augustinians. We had the opportunity to see the man who upset the Catholic world a few centuries ago and whose powerful personage is often a grim reminder of the very human failing of those who are responsible for the administration of the Catholic Church.

John Osborne's Luther opened in Philadelphia a few weeks ago after a successful run in London and is now in New York reveling in the praise of even the more reserved of critics.

This is a play of such mixed emotional conflict that although controversy would seem almost inevitable, the audience and critical reactions have been in favorable accord.

Luther's Role

As written by the original "angry young man" (a title which Osborne firmly rejects), the play attempts to portray a man in his most tormented moments of doubt and confusion. Luther is throughout a man tormented by his own personality, dogmatically vocal in his opinions, and, then again, never quite sure of his final position.

From a religious standpoint, the play seems quite inoffensive to any group who might take umbrage were the production presented in a more subjective light. However some who might view it on a superficial basis may find a lack of sufficient motivation in the actions of Luther and particularly in his doctrine.

An amusing point arises here because many people have wondered were it not for the racking pain of Luther's constipation his whole doctrine might not have been loosed. This is not a facetious statement as it is the analogy Osborne himself uses to proclaim Luther's doctrine.

The structure of the play as a theatrical work is weighted with tricks for dramatic effect. This is not to say, however, that these are not carried off well and lend excitement to the movement of the play.

In fact, the tension of watching Luther writhing in agony of body and of soul under a large crucifix is overwhelming.

Albert Finney

Needless to say, a role of such constant emotion and intensity requires an actor of tremendous physical stamina, with all the discipline and force that such a demanding part requires.

He is not a raging fanatic nor is he a reactionary moved by wronged motives. Throughout, he plays the young priest and the middle aged man with equal conviction.

He is Luther as a man to the extent that one critic could not envision any other person in the part.

Fortunately the director has assembled a fine cast for the all-important supporting roles. Notable among these were Peter Bull as the raving indulgence peddler, Tetzel, and Frank Shelley as Staupitz, Luther's Vicar-General and friend.

This latter role is a key to the truth of the charges and countercharges of the Church.

Production

The overall production was in a simple setting of formal structure. This lent emphasis to the characterizations and did not take away from the movement of the plot.

The lighting by Jocelyn Herbert served only to heighten the more dramatic moments and lead the audience's interest to the prominent action.

Since the play is already on Broadway it is unnecessary to predict its success. The critics have assured it of a long run.

This reviewer does not feel, however, that this play is a great religious drama of the caliber of Robert Bolt's Man for All Seasons. It lacks the humor and the depth of the latter's script but it does compensate for this liability by Finney's powerful performance and by Osborne's dynamic dialogue.

Naturally I prefer the more sophisticated type of party. Penn is "nice", so is Princeton, but Villanova parties . . .

Silvered Words

by Art Molitierno

If words were silver dollars, then there would be some excuse for the noise in the reserve room of the library. Since there is such a blatant misuse of the freedom of speech, it would be appropriate if we all used a little common sense and manners towards our fellow students! Somehow I just cannot seem to concentrate on Platos Gorgias when someone is telling bland and feeble jokes.

If some students were not thieves and door space not rationed, then I could both tell the floor I was on in Mendel Hall and be able to exit within time for my next class. It seems an odd paradox that the largest building on campus contains the smallest doors—half of which read "Please use other door."

It would appear that since most college students act like animals that the university has decided to treat them in like manner. At the present time barbed wire is being spread to protect the land of the university—there are all indications that a full scale range war may present itself at any moment since the animals are accustomed to this land as open range, upon which they have been accustomed to ravage such grass that exists.

Since lights cannot talk and Villanova has no lights to speak of in the parking lot to mark the exits, both are non-existent. For the many students that have extra-curricular activities, getting out of VU's parking lot at night can be a real problem—even for the sober ones.

It appears that every weekday at about 8:30 there is a mass hysteria surrounding the corner of Ithan Ave. and Lancaster Pike. Student suicidal tendencies should be checked by a practical psychologist e.g. a policeman. Between the cars on the Pike and the cars coming up Ithan Ave. (on the opposite of the street) it's nearly impossible for any one to make a class on time. It seems that it would not be an impossible task to request the services of a patrolman to speed the flow of traffic during the morning rush outside the C&F Building. It could even (perhaps) increase class attendance!

Since two bodies can't occupy the same space at the same time it would be well if we were allowed to comply with this law of matter. As a matter of fact, it is impossible to get to the student lounges when the Dayhop cafeteria is closed from 11:20 to 11:30. All I'm asking for is ten minutes a day. Why not open the cafeteria at 11:20 each day so we won't also need barbed wire in the corridors of Dougherty Hall?

If the pen is mightier than the sword, then I hope I have not committed suicide. Some of the matters mentioned are important, others a matter of convenience. The university is now installing more lights throughout the campus, but the parking lot does deserve some consideration, as does the traffic problem at Ithan Ave.

Buckley Lecture

Buckley Buds

It is Mr. Buckley who provides the burgeoning conservative movement on many college campuses with an intellectual and philosophical platform from which to launch their political tirades on the New Frontier.

His views on the college student's disenchantment with liberals are expressed by these words:

"The student looks at the world and sees apocalypse on one side, and more appeasement, more federal aid programs on the other. He comes to realize that there are no new ideas left in liberalism."

As editor of the National Review, Mr. Buckley has led a team of the greatest conservative writers in America, including the late Whittaker Chambers, John Dos Passos, and L. Brent Bozell. In eight years of existence, the magazine has outstripped its left-wing counterpart, The New Republic, in circulation.

A well-known and challenging speaker and debater who has traveled widely throughout the United States, Mr. Buckley has appeared at many campuses in every state of the Union; such as, Yale, Harvard, Stanford, Norte Dame, and Penn.

Mr. Buckley will speak at 8 p.m., Thursday, in the Field House. His topic will be the "Aimlessness of American Education". All are invited.

General Chairman, the "standing room only" audience received a fine display of dance handling.

The coach pointed out that a great deal of pressure was taken off the signal caller by the men on the line, at decoration position was Bob Cardone, Pat Blake, Marti Podalsky and Phil Boshe; making a fine start as ticket chairman was Big Don Nicholaus and at publicity was Jim O'Connor; Sue McDonald handled the favor-program chore and John Sperger started at entertainment slot.

The entire halftime entertainment in conjunction with the University band was handled by the competent and conscientious Dick Siracusa.

Entering the final phase of the game the coach needed someone to ice the victory. He counted on the versatile veteran from Malvern, Joe McGill to do the job. Naturally he did just that. Leading a well trained Homecoming Concert unit, Joe proceeded to "call" a beautiful concert game. Aiding him in the back field were Rich Monks, Tom Stanley, Bob Modilin, and Bob Strong. Rich Kennedy was singled out for his fine work in the floorpatern department, and Barry Thornton for his "programming".

'Spooky Spectacle' Sets Scene For Student Council Dance

The theme of "Spooky Spectacle" has been selected for the annual Student council dance which will be held this year on Nov. 1 from 9 'til 1 at the Field House.

John Roberts, chairman of the event, announced that in trying something unique, all of the entertainment will be of a local flavor.

The music will be provided by the new Villanovans concert band, contracted after being auditioned at one of their rehearsals. It has also been announced that appearing as added features for the first time in the area this year will be two excellent vocal groups, the "Spires" of Villanova University and the "T-Tones" of Rosemont College.

The sub-chairman for the dance were selected at a recent meeting of the Social Affairs Committee of the Student Council and Roberts urges any students who wish to help with any phase of the dance to contact the following: Tickets—Bob Goldberg. Publicity—George Valvano and John Graziano. Decorations—Betty Kelly and Carol Egan. Technicalities—Lois Greyson.

The Student Council Dance traditionally the largest dance of the year, falls on All Saints Day and will be the kickoff of the Holy Cross weekend.

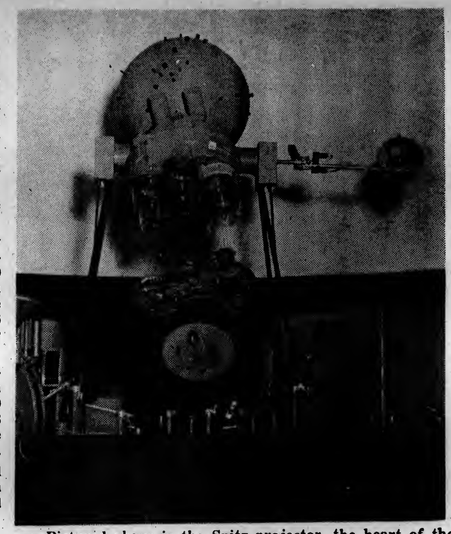
Astronomy Faculty Plans First Fall Show Brightest Star In Sky

The Astronomy Department will present its first Planetarium show of the fall series on Friday, October 18, at 8 and 9 p.m., and on Saturday, October 19, at 3 p.m.



The title of the show is "The Brightest Star in the Sky."

Reservations for this show may be made by calling LA 5-4600, between the hours of 9 a.m. and 4 p.m., Monday through Thursday, or by stopping by the Astronomy Department in 456 Mendel Hall. The admission for the show is 25 cents.

There will be two more presentations in this semester. On November 22 at 8 p.m. and 9 p.m. and on November 23 at 3 p.m., the presentation of "The Fourth Dimension" will be held.

"The Star of Bethlehem" will be shown in the Planetarium on December 20 at 8 and 9 p.m. and on December 21 at 3 p.m.

Weather permitting, the observatory will be open following the evening performances.

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANIES SALUTE: PAUL FORGIE

Since joining New Jersey Bell in 1960, Paul Forgie (B.S.M.E., 1960) has handled four important research studies to improve engineering techniques.

The first was a feasibility study to test the company's system of outside plant cable records. Paul investigated a new system of record-keeping that could greatly reduce engineering and drafting time required by current practices. Paul was invited to present his findings to the company's District Engineers.

On later assignments, Paul developed an engineering quality rating system, analyzed his company's ready access cable facilities, and conducted a cost study on conduit.

Paul's analytical approach to tough problems has opened up a bright future for him at New Jersey Bell.

Paul Forgie, like many young engineers, is impatient to make things happen for his company and himself. There are few places where such restlessness is more welcomed or rewarded than in the fast-growing telephone business.

Harriers Defeat St. Joe's, 18-91; Zwolak, Sullivan, Ferko End In Tie

One of the lone bright spots of last weekend for the Main Line athletic scene was a one-two-three sweep by the Wildcat Cross Country team in their first dual meet against St. Joseph's College. The final tabulation gave the meet to Villanova 18-41.

For the first half of the four and one half mile race, the St. Joe's athletes managed to stay within distance of the fleet Villanova harriers. But, during the remainder of the race the experience and conditioning of 'Cats Vic Zwolak, Tom Sullivan, and Marty Ferko overwhelmed their efforts. All three Villanovans posted identical times of 28:45.

All-Americans

For Zwolak and Sullivan, the meet was the first in their formal attempts to retain their All American status, attained a year ago in the NCAA Cross Country Championships. With the help of Ferko and Noel Carroll, whose top efforts were held back by coach Jim Tuppeny because of a weak ankle, the prospects of Villanova improving their second place finish of a year ago are now strong.

Vic Zwolak

Carroll did not participate on the varsity Cross Country team last fall, but he did show great potential during the Track and Field season by finishing strongly in the 880 and other events.

Frosh Romp

In the freshman meet between St. Joe's and Villanova. Steve Ball showed promise for the future by leading his team to a 15-48 triumph.

The upcoming meets for the Wildcat harriers are:

Oct. 19..Quantico (Cobbs) 11:00
Oct. 26..St. John's (Cobbs) 1:00
Nov. 2..American University (Washington) 11:00

Old Brown Magic Returns

by Roy Baron

Last year the situation was bleak. There was one Brown too many Browns for the other Browns. Thus, the Browns often saw brown.

This year there is one less Brown and Brown and the other Browns are seeing green.

To clear up matters a little, the Browns are the Cleveland Browns of the National Football League. The particular Brown is the incomparable Jim Brown, for years the backbone of the Cleveland Browns attack. The expendable Brown is Paul Brown, who was fired as head coach after last season.

The change is evident. Instead of having their faces in the brown dirt on many Sunday afternoons, the Cleveland players are looking up. What they are seeing is the green of championship dollars.

The green became much brighter last Sunday as the Browns crushed the Eastern Division's defending champions, the New York Giants, 35-24. This was in Yankee Stadium, just recently the scene of another disaster for sports fans of the giant metropolis — the first two World Series losses to the Dodgers by the Yankees.

The difference between this year and last is obvious. As Jim Brown goes, so go the Cleveland Browns. Last year Jim and Coach Paul were at odds. The results was that Jim had his worst season, and the Browns finished with a 7-6-1 record.

This fall the Browns have a new coach, Blanton Collier. The fact that Jim is pleased with the change is evident, as he is off to his fastest start ever. The 228 pound fullback has picked up nearly 800 yards in five games. The result is a 5-0 record to date.

Against his old nemesis, the Giants, Brown began by taking a screen pass and racing 73 yards for a touchdown in the third period. Later he twisted and fought his way for 32 yards through the entire New York defense for paydirt.

He finished the afternoon with better than five yards per carry on 23 attempts against the famed "Big Four" of Robustelli, LoVetere, Modzelewski, and Katcavage, and the linebacker who for many years has earned his bread by stopping Brown, Sam Huff.

One cannot help but wonder what might have happened to the Giant defense if Brown had as his running mate another great Syracuse All-American, the late Ernie Davis. Cleveland fans almost saw this team pair together, but leukemia took Davis before he ever had a chance to put on a Brown uniform.

Harvard Ruggers Top Cats; Hurley Scores Lone VU Tally

by Joe McCarthy

The Villanova Rugby squad met about the same fate as their American counterparts did at Boston College, last Saturday, by succumbing to a second half surge of Harvard College in Cambridge, Massachusetts. The final score was 16-3 in favor of the Crimson.

Captain Ed Wilkinson, a senior English major, attributed the loss to two major factors. First, he noted that the observation of the Harvard undergraduate newspaper that Villanova possesses good hustle and good ability but lack the finer points of the game, proved true to fact.

To Villanova went at least an equal or better edge in weight and speed, but the Harvard team had the overall advantage of better experience and better teamwork. Second the game was played in a stiff 30 to 40 mile an hour wind rising off the Charles River.

During the first half the wind favored Villanova. Harvard, none-the-less, was able to contain the Wildcat offense.

When the tables reversed themselves during the second half, Harvard took advantage of the wind and pulled away with an 11 point outburst to ice the game.

The 5-3 halftime score saw the Wildcats still in a position to claim victory. But, the superior forward play of the Crimson prevented any further scoring and effectively contained the explosive Villanova backfield.

Hurley Tallies

The lone 'Cat score belonged to Bill Hurley, a junior Commerce and Finance major. Hurley plays on the forward wall for the Main Line fifteen.

Bert Lombino sustained the only serious Villanova injury and will be out of action for at least a week. Among the minor injuries was one to back Bob Shayer who incurred an ankle injury that hindered his second half efforts.

The team will give an inter-squad exhibition for the parents next Saturday (Parents' Weekend) at 11:00 on the Villanova Rugby Field.

GW Coach Optimistic

by Tom Willson

Despite three straight setbacks, George Washington coach Jim Camp is optimistic about his current edition and considers the outlook much brighter than in '62 when his Colonials posted a 3-7 mark. The following is a text of his interview with the Villanovan.

Q. Reportedly, GW will field a bigger line this year with quite a few sophomores beefing up the squad; would you care to comment?

A. Well, we do have approximately 10 or 11 sophomores on the team, but due to injuries, we are now a much lighter team.

Q. Has the sophomore contigent filled the gaps created by graduation?

A. Positively, and they played very well in all conference games so far this season.

Q. Do the Colonials boast an exceptional soph quarterback?

A. Yes, upon Tom Branch's injury, Merv Holland filled in real well and is first in conference passing and second in total offense.

Q. Has all-conference back Dick Drummond performed as well this season as he has in the past two?

A. Well, not until our game with The Citadel did he regain his old form.

Q. Did Drummond have a big night against The Citadel?

A. Yes, he played a great offensive ball game and was named conference "Back of the Week" for his efforts.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

The Intramural Department recently disclosed to the Villanovan that the intramural fields and courts are for the use of Villanova University students only. No outsider is permitted to use these fields or courts. The Department was unavailable for further comment.

The results of the Intramural Swimming Meet are as follows: In the 50 yard free style, Joe Parell in :25.0; in the 50 yard backstroke, Tom Crossin in :34.4; in the 50 yard butterfly, Mike Keilar in :27.9; and in the 50 yard breaststroke, Tim Turvey in :31.6.

Also finishing first in their events were Greg Doyle (:56.3) in the 100 yard freestyle. Pete Ancora (1:07.5) in the 100 yard Individual Medley, Tom Crosson (37.8 pts.) in Diving. The 200 yard Medley Relay was taken by Doyle, Turvey, Keilar, and Desjardins in 2:02.1. Teaming up for victory in the 200 yard free style were Ancora, Musica, Parell, and Conlin in 1:49.9.

The office also pointed out that one of the touch football rules has undergone revision. Penalties that normally call for 15 yards have been reduced to 10 yards, due to the length of the field. There are only two exceptions to this new ruling. Personal fouls and unsportsman-like conduct remain at 15 yards.

The annual Intramural Cross Country meet will be held October 17 at 4:30. Interested harriers must report to the stadium and sign up at meet time.

Player Of The Week

A Trying Life

by Steve Freind

The life of a quarterback is a ying one. The fate of his team uetermined largely by his performance.

A campus demiged one week, can be quickly transformed to a campus goat by a stray ss or bad call.

Such is the life of Dave Conll, a 6-2, 195-pound sophomore om Havertown, Pa. A graduof Monsignor Bonner High nool, where he directed the iars to a city title, Dave is rrently the number one signal iler for the Wildcats.

Confined strictly to punting in e opener against West Chester, nnell blossomed forth against oledo as he engineered three cond-half touchdown drives at overcame the Rockets' fourn point advantage. This perrmance won him the starting d of Coach Bell.

Q. As a sophomore quarterack, Dave, what do you feel is ur greatest difficulty?

A. I would have to say that I have most trouble with my passing. Anyone who saw the Buffalo game can attest to that. My running on rollouts has been fairly good so far but my throwing still needs a lot of work.

Q. After two straight losses, how do you feel about the team's chances for a winning season?

A. Well, despite those two losses, I still feel that we have a good squad. The Buffalo game was just a bad break and the loss to B. C. was not as bad as the score indicated. If we can roll against George Washington this week, I think we can still have a good season.

Q. What do you think the strong point of the team is?

A. Definitely our line. The linemen are the boys who either put a back's name in the sports page or the obituary. We have some tremendous boys up front, especially Al Atkinson and Chappy Moore.

Freshman Gridiron Debut Thwarted By Late Army Score In 20-17 Loss

by Jerry Bruderle

The Villanova freshman football squad last Friday dropped a close decision to the Army Plebes 21-17 at West Point. Two quick scores at the end of the first half had given the Kittens a lead which they held until a fumble led to Army's final score, late in the final period.

The opening kickoff commenced an Army drive to the Kitten goal line that gave the Plebes a 7-0 lead. The lead held until late in the second quarter.

Pass Connects

The Kittens connected on a 55 yard pass from quarterback John Bilotti to end John Tallman to enter the Main Liners in the scoring column for the first time. After the conversion failed, Army took the kickoff but fumbled on their own 14 with Villanova recovering the lost ball.

After three rushes failed to gain a first down or a score, freshman Jim Case kicked a 10 yard field goal with just 15 seconds remaining on the clock. The score gave the Kittens a 9-7 halftime edge.

Fourth Quarter

After a scoreless third quarter, Army moved the ball effectively through the air in the fourth quarter to garner their second touchdown. The conversion was good and Army had regained the lead 14-9.

Goaded by the touchdown, Villanova retaliated immediately with quarterback Bill Kolmer leading the attack. Runs of 45 and 5 yards by Kolmer produced the score. Kolmer then hit Tallman in the end zone for a two point conversion.

Villanova then held a lead of 17-14 until halfback Tom Bender fumbled on the Villanova 35. With about five minutes remaining in the game Army capitalized on the opportunity and notched what turned out to be the winning tally.

Exceptional Poise

Both Villanova quarterbacks Bilotti and Kolmer showed exceptional poise as team leaders. Tallman exhibited good moves and sure hands as the number one end.

The surprise was the arrival of a Villanova kicker, Jim Case, who specializes in end zone kickoffs and field goals.

Pardon me if I sound as if the executive position I've landed deals with the whole future of the world.

It does.

Certainly, there's no organization today conducting more vital business than the business of the United States Air Force. And very few organizations that give a college graduate greater opportunities for responsibility and growth.

As an Air Force officer, you'll be a leader on the Aerospace Team—with good pay, a 30-day paid vacation each year, educational opportunities.

How can you get started? For many, the best way is through Air Force ROTC. But if you missed out on AFROTC, or if there's no unit on your campus, you can still apply for Air Force Officer Training School. This three-month course leads to a commission as a second lieutenant in the United States Air Force.

Letter To The Sports Editor

To the Sports Editor:

This letter is an answer to Mr. Joe McCarthy's article titled "On A Flying Gazelle," which appeared in the October 2, 1963 issue of the Villanovan. Mr. McCarthy is definitely off in his opinions and estimations of the New York Yankees. He gave the impression that the Yanks are lucky and fortunate when they play in that league. He gave a one-sided view, which really played up the Dodgers and berated the Yankees. Mr. McCarthy calls the Yankees "a makeshift alignment of battle-scarred and carefully iced rookies." I would like to inform Mr. McCarthy that these Yankees he is berating have won the AL pennant the last four years in a row and two world championships. This year this team had the best catcher in baseball, Elston Howard, who was the Major League All-Star catcher, and the best second baseman, Bobby Richardson, who was the Major League All Star second baseman. Joe Pepitone was acclaimed by rival coaches, players, and managers as a real good hitter and fielder and was selected for the AL All Star team this year. Kubek and Richardson make the best combination in baseball and Boyer has the surest hands in baseball. Tresh and Lopez played real fine ball particularly in the clutch. Mr. McCarthy did not mention any of the above facts and highly valued estimations in his article but just related the facts about the Dodgers. I would like to inform Mr. McCarthy that these Yanks of the nineteen sixties comprise one of the greatest teams of all time (an opinion held by many baseball experts) and that this team will win many more pennants in future years. The Dodger victory in four games of the series cannot be explained by me but the loss shouldn't take away anything from the great Yankees. Next time get a more informed and unbiased individual to write world series predictions and evaluations and run down of teams.

Hardhitting Colonials To Test Wildcats

'Rugged Raging Rival' Contains New Recruits To Bolster GW Squad

by Tom Willson

Riding into Villanova Stadium this weekend will be the hard-hitting Colonials from Washington, D.C. GW is considered a high-spirited and hard-playing club whose warriers refuse to call it quits until the final gun.

The spirit of '76 runs rampant in all their conference contests and all opponents view GW as the rugged and raging rival from the nation's capital.

New recruits swell the ranks of the army from George Washington and the Colonials hope to inflict damage on the opposition with this fine crop of young talent; for the Colonials will rely almost exclusively on sophomores in this campaign.

Most impressive among the promising soph prospects are Merv Holland, a superb quarterback, and the popular "Zier Twins" who carry impressive credentials at their tackle positions in any GW football game.

Experienced Backs

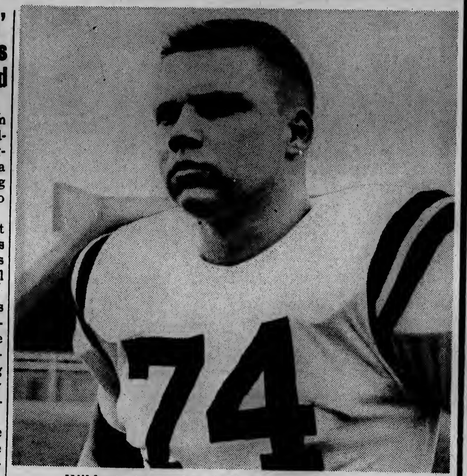
GW boasts of fast, experienced backs. First and foremost on this list is Dick Drummond who has won all-conference rating for two successive seasons. Other backfield bulldozers are Fred D'Orazio and Jim Johnson. GW has paid a heavy toll for rugged line play as two of their top linemen, Gordon Bennett and Doug McNeill, who tip the scales at 240 each, have been sidelined with injuries.

GW's record is no indication of the fine calibre of football that is characteristic of the Colonials' club. Holding VMI, defending conference champs, to a slim 7-6 margin, a GW TD pass was nullified and VMI scored again in the closing minutes to clip the Colonials, 14-6. A constant downpour in the GW-Furmen clash prevented a sustained Colonial drive in another game that could have spelled victory for either team as the Colonials were edged 22-14.

GW suffered its third straight defeat when The Citadel pulled out a squeker 27-24.

Xavier Encounter

Villanova's Wildcats will travel to Cincinnati, Ohio in their next tilt to tangle with the Xavier Muskateers.



After a strong '62 finish, the Muskateers expect to be tough again this year.

Eighteen lettermen and a truckload of sophomore stars point to a winning season. A veteran backfield backs this claim as the Muskateers ride the trails with head-coach Ed Biles, who turned in a very impressive 6-4 slate while making his collegiate head - coaching debut.

Signal-caller for the Muskateers will be Walt Byrniarski who is flanked by fast running backs in Mike De Fazio, Jim Husk, and Roger Thesing. Among the sophomore stalwarts will be George Wilson, Jr., son of the Detroit Lions' coach.

Co-captains Ken Lehman and Joe Mollman are solid mainstays on the line and are rated with the best of Villanova's opposing

by Jim Proud and Jerry Bruderle

Villanova fought valiantly in the first half before succumbing to a powerful Boston College eleven 34-0 last Saturday in Chestnut Hill, Mass. Three times the Cats were stopped inside the B. C. 25 as interceptions and fumbles again thwarted the Villanova offence.

Villanova took the opening kick-off and drove fifty yards to the Eagle 25 where instead of a field goal, a fourth down pass fell short of its mark and gave B. C. the ball on downs. The Eagles then marched 75 yards to their first score with Concannon passing the final thirty yards to Cronin for the T.D.

At the beginning of the second period Concannon again passed for a touchdown this time to Tom Budzinsky and the two point conversion made it 14-0.

This time Villanova marched to the Eagle six with a 51 yard pass to Clifford accounting for most of the yardage. Here quarterback Bill Sherlock fumbled and B. C. recovered to halt another Cat attack.

Shortly before the half Villanova was again stopped when Connell's pass was picked off by Budzinsky at the two yard line.

At the start of the third period Concannon drove the Eagles to their third score, skirting left end from the Villanova one.

Once again Villanova mustered a sustained drive to the B. C. thirteen with junior full-back Mike Manger, substituting for injured captain Jim Thomas, carrying the brunt of the load with 3 out of 7 carries for 25 yards. Another fumble then ended the drive and Villanova's hope for an upset victory.

Late in the final period soph quarterback Don Koshlap directed the Cats to the Eagle ten where two misfirings foiled any hopes of avoiding a shutout.

All-American candidate Jack Concannon ran and passed for 171 yards, completing 8 of 16 passes for 119 yards. Quarterback Dave Connell completed 7 of 9 passes for 91 yards with one interception. Sherlock, seeing more action than in the last two games, completed his only two passes for 61 yards.

Sad Saturdays

by Joe McCarthy

Quite a few friends of Villanova were rather stunned last Saturday. Their gridiron heroes had lost two games in a row. This had not occurred since the disastrous campaign of three years ago.

But Buffalo and Boston College on successive Saturdays all of a sudden made the Villanova football program seem like mud. First Buffalo spoils a sunny (quite rare for Villanova) Homecoming weekend as they gladly accepted a 14-7 give-away and a week later fell victim to one of the nation's best unknowns Marshall College. Then, the 'Cats decided to continue their United Fund antics and allow Boston College to trounce them 34-0.

Oh, it could have been worse, if B. C. tried harder. But as a Catholic school, they weren't too cruel, unless you term their appearing at game time "cruel". Then again they might have had the opportunity to score a few more times, if some of the Villanova squad would have fumbled or placed their passes in more opportune places...,

Say, like inside the Villanova twenty yard line instead of waiting until they were down inside the Boston College twenty. But then we thank the gods for little things . . . don't we???

Of course we looked at the paper Saturday morning and read the portent for the weekend. The Freshman football players had just dropped a close one to West Point 20-17. We didn't really think much of it then.

But Sunday morning while we're still trying to forget, we remember and wonder why the freshmen can play Army and come so close to winning and the varsity is not allowed to expose themselves to a "prayer-less" school.

Still the same fellows that play on the freshman squads of today will hopefully compose the varsity at a later date. But if our dear old alma mater runs true to past performances, we'll still lose to Buffalo and Boston College four years from now when these frosh are seniors. And the last game on the schedule will of course be that inspiration to all seniors to marry at graduation and avoid service duty, dear old Quantico.

There must be reasons for these things. Maybe the frosh have great coaches and the varsity doesn't hardly plausible. Maybe the frosh while they are on the road to becoming varsity players lose a lot of potential. This sounds better.

So why is this latent potential not used to its fullest advantage? If we knew, we'd be football coaches. But since we're not football coaches, those that are must cope with the difficulty. And with five more games left on the schedule this year, they'll have some thinking to do.

Then again, the events of the past two seasons might have been one of those rare phenomena, like the 1960 Eagles or the 1950 Phillies, a winning Philadelphia team. We hope not!

All East and All American candidate Al Atkinson again shined in a losing effort . . . we look to a solid block of votes to garden him an All East position by the end of this season.

Fraternities' Chastement Highlights Council Meeting

A lengthy meeting of the Student Council, at which all but one motion was passed, was held last Wednesday.

A motion by Tom Furst dealing with a proposed investigation into the cost of purchasing the sound equipment which is rented for the Field House concerts was met with much debate.

The motion was finally passed when Jim McErlane explained to the un-informed members that this motion was only for an investigation.

Marty McGuinn, chairman of the Council, withdrew his motion that any infraction of fraternity regulations concerning pledging and social functions be dealt with by the Student Senate.

Before doing so McGuinn chastised the fraternities and Inter-Fraternity Council for being "quite lax" with their authority.

McGuinn further struck out against the fraternities saying, "If the Inter-Fraternity Council is to succeed they're going to have to get off their tails and move."

He then asked that all fraternities ratify the Inter-Fraternity Constitution by next Monday and submit a new motion redefining their judicial powers.

A motion by John Mylotte, Joe McCarthy, and John Hagerty that the Student Council affirm and support the concept of non-compulsory class attendance and that a poll be taken of the professors to determine their opinion met with the greatest dissention and debate of the evening.

Jim McErlane proposed two amendments to this motion. Both of these were passed. One

Council Dance Theme For Friday Evening Is 'Spooky Spectacle'

The "Spooky Spectacle" is the theme of this year's Student Council dance which will be held this Friday, November 1, in the Field House.

John E. Roberts, general chairman of the dance has announced that music will be provided by the "new"Villanovans while entertainment during the breaks will be provided by two excellent vocal groups, the "Spires" from Villanova and the "T-Tones" of Rosemont College.

Large Attendance

This Friday night dance will provide the kick-off for the Holy Cross football weekend and a large attendance is expected since it is traditionally the largest dance of the academic year.

The theme of "Spooky Spectacle" is in conjunction with the celebration of Halloween the previous night and the decorations will be in accordance with this theme.

Second Villanova Forum To Feature Writer, Editor, Publisher Golden

by Tom Krause

Harry Golden, famous writer, editor and publisher, will be the second speaker in the Student Council Lecture Series. He will appear here on Monday, November 4 at 8:00 p.m. in the University Field House.

Mr. Golden, whose homespun philosophy has attracted a circulation of 50,000 for his paper, The Carolina Israelite, has been an institution in Charlotte, North Carolina, ever since his arrival in 1941.

Born in New York on May 6, 1903, Golden was an avid reader and youthful enthusiast in the Henry George movement for agrarian reform and attended the City College of New York. A social historian by interest and training, he felt the impact of the integration problem in the South.

Two of Golden's books, Only in America and For 2c Plain, accomplished what few non-fiction books do; they became successive number one best sellers and both remained on the list at the same time.

Some of Golden's offbeat proposals are his "Golden Vertical Plan" and his "Borrow A Child Plan."

In the "Golden Vertical Plan" he asserted that problems arise only when Negroes sit down with whites. Therefore the pupils should remain standing at their desks at school.

The "Borrow A Child" Plan consists of a Negro borrowing a white child in order to attend a

Opera Star Miss Rise Stevens Will Sing At Villanova Concert

by Matt Roche

Rise Stevens, stage, screen, opera, and television star, will be the second guest of the Villanova Musical Concert Series on Tuesday, November 12. The concert will take place in the Villanova Field House at 8:30 p.m.

Miss Stevens, born in New York City, attended the Juillard School of Music on a scholarship. She refused her first Met contract to gain experience in Europe where she debuted in Prague, Czechoslovakia.

She has appeared with all of the major opera companies of the world including Milan's La Scala, the San Francisco Opera Company, the Paris Grand Opera, and the Vienna State Opera.

Dubbed "first lady of opera and song" by music critics, she was the only prima donna invited to sing at the ground breaking ceremony for New York's Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts, which will house the new Met Opera House.

Movies in which she has starred are: The Chocolate Soldier, with Nelson Eddy; the Academy Award winner Going My Way, with Bing Crosby; Carnegie Hall, with Villanova's last featured guest, Leopold Stokowski.

A frequent guest on television, Miss Stevens has been seen as a soloist on the Ed Sullivan Show, the Voice of Firestone, the Bell Telephone Hour, as well as a panelist on the Tonight Show. The diva holds the distinction of selling 2,500,000 records — the highest number in the classical field today. She has been chosen as one of the ten best dressed women and the Charicaturists Society of America chose her as one of the ten most beautiful women in the world.

Tickets are on sale now in the Pie Shoppe for $4, $3, and $2 for the orchestra, and a special one dollar student price for the balcony.

Senior Class 'Scrooge'

The post of Senior Class Treasurer is one which requires deft handling of financial affairs and Chuck Gnilka fills the position as if it were custom-made for him.

Chuck, a senior mathematics major who is also President of the NROTC Recreation Committee and a member of the DPM fraternity, has brought new systems to the old process of collecting funds. At the Junior Dinner Dance he initiated a new ticket procedure and as Chairman for class collections for Charity Weekend, another new system netted the school the greatest amount ever collected by a student organization.

Occupying his time prior to this year were his membership on the Charity Ball committee and Publicity Chairman for the Sophomore Spring Outing, both of which were highly successful affairs.

In this position of Class Treasurer, Chuck acquired the name "Scrooge" because of his frugal handling of past affairs. Chuck explained: "I try to get the most acomplished with the least amount of funds.

Upon graduation, Chuck plans to apply to the Nuclear Power Program of the Navy whereby he hopes to be assigned to duty aboard an atomic submarine. "Life on the submarine is more dangerous than that of the surface fleet," he stated, "but it offers a greater challenge and is more rewarding."

Chuck anticipates spending his career in the Navy on atomic submarines. If he manages the affairs of the submarine as he has so skillfully managed the affairs of the Senior Class, there is no doubt that Chuck will eventually succeed in commanding his own atomic submarine.

Beta Gamma Society Plans Participation In Toronto Debate

Beta Gamma, Villanova's Debating Society, took to the rhetorial road last weekend when it opened its current season of debates.

Dave Galie, Joe Rohrer, Terence McStravick, and Eugene Fitzmaurice were entered in the Rosemont College Tournament.

The topic under discussion was: Resolved: "The Federal Government should guarantee an opportunity for higher education for all qualified high school graduates." Last Thursday, the Society held a verbal scrimmage of the topic before the Student Education Association.

This Saturday, Fitzmaurice and Galie will participate in the Parliamentary Debate to be held in Toronto. Representatives from sixteen American and Canadian colleges and universities will be present. Also on Saturday, four other debaters will attend the LaSalle College Tournament.

November 8-9 will find the Society at Queens College in Brooklyn, New York, at that school's tournament.

Mr. James O'Toole, the Assistant Coach of Beta Gamma, announced that the Debating Society is still accepting applicants and anyone interested, with or without experience, is asked to visit the Speech Department located in the Classroom Annex.

Villanovan Peter Rea Elected President Of Management Group

Peter Rea, Class of '64, was elected president of the Philadelphia collegiate chapter of the National Office Management Association. This chapter was created in September, 1963, in conjunction with the association's plans for an increase in membership.

The Philadelphia chapter is composed of five representatives from schools in the area, among them Villanova, Pennsylvania, Drexel, LaSalle, St. Joseph's, and Beaver College.

Villanova's representatives, aside from Rea, are Timothy S. Driscoll, Andrew J. Fennell, Thomas R. Lanese, and John S. Schwartz. The faculty advisor is Dr. Walter H. Klein of the Department of Industrial Administration.

Originally, the National Office Management Association, founded in 1919, was an association of business executives who had banded together because of a mutual interest in management.

Now the purpose of the association is to disseminate management information and training to its members so that they wil be able to conduct themselves efficiently in the business world.

'Inherit The Wind' Is Initial Belle Masque Production

Belle Masque President Jim Mason has announced that the Lawrence and Lee production of Inherit the Wind will usher in the 1963-1964 Undergraduate Theatre Season. The show will be performed in the Vasey Hall Auditorium from Wednesday, November 20 to Saturday, November 23, at 8:30.

Student tickets for $1 go on sale in the Pie Shoppe on Monday, November 18. Adult tickets will sell for $1.25.

Inherit the Wind was widely acclaimed at its opening on Broadway in 1955. It was later made into a movie starring Spencer Tracy and Frederick March. The story is based on the famous Scopes Monkey Trial of the 1920's.

In this trial, Clarence Darrow defended Scopes, who was being tried for teaching evolutionary theory in a bigoted Southern town. William Jennings Bryan was the prosecuting attorney.

In the Belle Masque interpretation, these roles are played by Jim Mason and John Meehan, respectively. Bill Byrne, Ed Maksinoski, and Betsy Cain from Rosemont, have the other major roles.

Pi Theta Chi Plans Halloween Mixer

Buckley Strikes At Liberals; Analyzes American Education

The appearance of conservative critic, William F. Buckley, Jr., on the Villanova campus resulted in a large crowd in the Field House and a few anti-liberal pickets outside. Mr. Buckley, editor-in-chief of the National Review, spoke on "The Aimlessness of American Education."

In his speech, Mr. Buckley decried the present standards of liberal education. He castigated the progressive course in our educational system which allow "papers on school furniture to be written."

Before he analyzed the aimlessness of American education, Mr. Buckley addressed himself to the aims of our educators. He stated, "Our educators don't know what education is."

Reiterating a famous quote, Mr. Buckley said that he "would rather be governed by the first 2,000 people in the Boston telephone book than by the Harvard faculty." In other words, he fears the "intellectual arrogance" of the educated elite.

We should free ourselves from academic freedom, in Mr. Buckley's opinion, if it "allows a teacher to undermine the premises of the school or the premises of the community."

He opposes the idea of a well-educated man who has no concept of moral standards. "Sheer book-learning did not elevate the morality of men like Lenin and Trotsky."

Mr. Buckley feels that no college should remain neutral, for by its very nature a college steeps itself in controversial subjects. A higher educational institution should impart its knowledge to the students in such a way as to influence the student's way of thinking.

One Aim

One of the aims of education should be "to forward knowledge and good conduct at the expense of some points of view." He advocates the indoctrination of the student in the philosophy of the university in which he is enrolled.

Mr. Buckley hopes that the colleges will implant values which will best equip us to survive. Colleges may some day bring theory into practice by a conscious effort to foment student participation in public affairs.

Agent of Reform

"The student may be the agent of reform," said Mr. Buckley, in expressing his hopes for an improvement in education.

Cards were passed among the audience after his talk. Many questions were asked, dealing with Catholic education, the conservative's view of education, Barry Goldwater, and Madame Nhu.

General Counsel Milton Semer Blasts Federal Bureaucratic Implementation

by Tom Krause

Milton P. Semer, General Counsel for the Housing and Home Finance Agency, addressed the first session of the Villanova Law Forum on Friday night, October 18. Mr. Semer was substituting for Robert Weaver, the distinguished Administrator of the Housing and Home Financing Agency, who was unable to attend because of budget hearings.

Mr. Semer, a native of Auburn, Maine, and a graduate of the University of Chicago, spoke on urban problems in America. In discussing urban problems, he portrayed them in the light of their effects on his agency.

According to Mr. Semer, "Bureaucratic implementation" is a definite hinderance to the solving of modern governmental problems. "In modern governmental affairs," said Mr. Semer, "no decision often equals decision. The world is full of half-truths."

"The population increase will necessitate great expansion in housing facilities. There will have to be increased spending in the federal budget.

Mr. Semer also spoke of the problems with which his agency is concerned. His frustration with modern bureaucrats lies in their inability to concentrate on one problem for a sufficient length of time.

As he stated: "Until there is a consensus of opinion, there can be no progress in the solving of urban problems." He did, however, note that 45 states have enacted programs of urban renewal.

The Federal Housing and Home Finance Agency has increased the number of programs designed especially for urban areas from two to fifteen in recent years. Mr. Semer said that this illustrated the significance of urban affairs in modern governmental problems.

The Sophomore Cotillion will be held in the Field House on November 15. The music will be furnished by Jules Jaffe and his band, and the verdicts will provide the entertainment at intermission.

A block of seats has been reserved for the Sophomores at the Quantico game on Saturday. At 9:00 p.m. the annual class party will be held at the Moose Hall in Norristown. Premium refreshments will be served.

Tickets for the Cotillion will go on sale November 4 in the Pie Shoppe and in the C & F Cafeteria.

'The Gay And Burning Bridge' Continues Run At Playbox

The first production of David Rabe's The Gay and Burning Bridge, the story of the disintegration of the relations between a young man from the midwest and his father, girl friend, and two buddies, opened last Friday at the Playbox.

Mr. Rabe started writing the play in 1959. Since then, it has been revised numerous times until the playwright felt it was complete.

The director of the play, Richard C. Harshberger, believes that it is a sound play, and that the playwright has something to say and says it well.

He said he didn't realize how well it was said until rehearsal when balance, rythmn, flow and beauty became apparent.

The script, he feels, will stand up to any play in the Playbox this year and in the years to come.

After the play closes, plans will be made to submit it to play publishers for publication. Four professional producers have manifested an interest in the play.

The play will run this weekend, November 1, 2, and 3 and will continue on November 8, 9, and 10. All performances begin at 8:30 p.m.

Delegate Reports

NFCCS Does Exist!

by Terry Cooney
NFCCS Senior Delegate

"Yes, Virginia, there is an NFCCS!", or so we've tried to explain. The question may still be raised in many minds as to what exactly NFCCS does.

As has been explained, in general, NFCCS is your voice, the voice of the Catholic College Student, in national and world affairs.

More particularly to this campus, the campus federation is a standing committee of the Student Council. Under the leadership of the senior delegate who is elected by the Student Council members, NFCCS acts along the lines of a co-ordinating committee.

On October 20, the senior delegate attended the second meeting of the Philadelphia Region of NFCCS at Rosemont College.

Of particular importance to Villanova was the bidding for Secretariates to take place at this meeting.

Since the movement to abolish NFCCS a year ago, the pendulum has swung the other way in regards to NF at least in the Student Council. It is true, however, that the Student Body remains relatively uniformed, and it is this situation that is trying to be remedied in these reports.

At the summer meeting of the National Federation of Catholic College Students held in Minneapolis, Villanova entered a bid for the Student Affairs Secretariate of the National Federation. This Secretariate concerning itself, as it does, with student problems was ideal for Villanova, whose Student Council had already taken a big step in this field last year with its Student Government Conference. The bid was defeated because it was felt that Notre Dame had a little more experience in this field.

At the Regional meeting, Villanova successfully made its bid to gain that experience by taking over the Student Affairs Secretariate of the Philadelphia Region of NFCCS. This Secretariate, under the leadership of the Vice-Chairman of the Student Council, Tom Furst, will in effect be the leading body on student problems in the Philadelphia area. As such it is in dire need of students with interests in the field of Student Government and Student Problems. Anyone interested in working on this committee or any of the other fields of NF should leave their name in the Student Council office.

A Worthwhile Program

The appearance of pickets in front of the Field House at the Buckley lecture last week was a welcome addition to the campus. It proved that there are some things that the student body will enthusiastically support or enthusiastically denounce.

Attendance at this, the first in a series of lectures to be held here this year, is also proof that cultural events will be supported by the student body if imaginative and worthwhile.

The Student Council is to be congratulated on this forthright yet overdue step. The complete lack of an effective speaker program in years has been a somber monument to lethargy.

The next Villanova Forum lecture, to be held on Monday evening, November 4, will feature the noted journalist and humorist Harry Golden. The wry, portly, cigar-puffing Mr. Golden will offer a sharp contrast with the intellectually-affluent Mr. Buckley, both in terms of philosophy as well as personality.

In the coming months the Forum will bring before the student body other noted figures from the fields of art, science, literature and politics.

An enthusiastic response to these early programs will no doubt be considered in determining whether similar events will be ventured in the future. The program deserves support from the student body.

Confusion

For thirty-five minutes last Wednesday night, Villanova's Student Council "debated" on a motion relating to non-compulsory class attendance. The word "debated is used loosely; perhaps "was confused" would be more appropriate.

Amendments, counter amendments, points of information, points of personal privilege, etc., were thrown to and fro while many of the Council members remained in the dark as to what was actually going on.

It seems that the Student Senate could have presented the motion far more clearly originally. Nevertheless, the confusion in the Congress could have been held to a minimum if each Council member were far more aware of the rules of parliamentary procedures, and more thought was given to the wording of individual motions.

President's Report

Frats Striving For Unity, Voice

by Marty McGuinn
Student Body President

Fraternities at Villanova have advanced with great strides towards becoming active and purposeful campus organizations.

Such has been their development, that the cry for unity and strength in the formation of an Inter-Fraternity Council has been loud and seemingly unanimous. Inter-fraternity cooperation appears to be essential for the effective survival of these social organizations.

Eighteen months ago, the Student Government passed legislation calling for the initiation of an Inter-Fraternity Council.

One year later, this group completed a constitution, but it was never ratified by the individual fraternities.

Recent controversy and interest has been stimulated by legislation stating the senate's judicial power over the fraternities.

The President attempted to point out at last Wednesday's Student Congress meeting the lethargy of the I.F.C. and to emphasize the need for immediate and concentrated action to meet the challenge of fraternity apathy.

The fraternities are seeking judicial powers for themselves which, indeed, could be both beneficial and effective; but, as yet, they have failed to establish themselves to the extent that they should merit such authority.

Many of the fraternity members recognize the urgency of the situation, while others appear only to concern themselves with personalities and irrelevancies and fail to envision the end results. The weeks ahead will largely determine the future of the Inter-Fraternity Council and, if the future is to be a successful one, the fraternities must face the facts and combine their efforts.

A clearly defined relationship between the Inter-Fraternity Council and student government, and the relationship between the Council and the individual fraternities themselves, must be established.

The fraternities have been instructed to submit to the senate their own legislation clarifying the afore-mentioned and other matters, at which time they will have ample opportunity to voice their opinions. In effect, if the Council is to escape its inactivity, it must speak now or forever hold its peace.

Counterpoint

Disappointing Diatribe

by Frank Sauers

To those of us who view educational indoctrination as intellectual suicide, the diatribe of Mr. Buckley last Thursday against intellectual and academic freedom was, to say the least, a disagreeable, but not wholly unexpected, disappointment. We had hoped to hear a criticism of the bland, cold, and aimless character of the college curricula, or the failure of many professors to stimulate independent thinking, or the apathy of many students in developing their minds, but heard instead a two-hour plea for controlled thought.

I cannot disagree with Mr. Buckley that much of American education is aimless. What I do question is where Mr. Buckley would like to aim it. He sharply criticized efforts of the American colleges to remain morally and politically neutral and urged college administrations to develop certain ground rules to which all professors would have to adhere in leading the youth down the righteous road.

That colleges should hire professors of character and attempt to develop basic moral concepts in their students is indisputable. But when Mr. Buckley condemns Columbia University for having graduated a Marxist he is suggesting the infusion of attitudes beyond the realm of concepts of right and wrong. He is suggesting political and philosophical indoctrination.

Incubators

The university that demands intellectual allegiance from its faculty, the university where professors shrink in fear of committing the unpardonable sin of intellectual disobedience is not a university at all. It is nothing but an incubator for the nourishment of infantile minds.

There is no such thing as a crime of thought. There is no just reason for placing limitations on man's mind. The healthy mind is the one that is completely free to develop itself without the fetters of petty tyrants who would have you and I place a lock on a portion of our mind and hand them the key. The freedom of his mind is man's most valuable possession. This is the ultimate freedom. To abdicate even a portion of his thinking to another is a submission to tyranny.

Likewise, to place any institution or philosophy, or authority inside a tabernacle and stifle criticism is to abet the evolution of a tyranny. The more sacred the holy cow, the more susceptible to criticism it should be. Not even our most hallowed institutions, such as democracy, should be exempt from criticism, analysis, and attack.

It is amusing that Mr. Buckley who as a conservative decries the loss of freedom through centralization of political power in the federal government delightfully suggests a plan that results in the centralization in a college administration of the power of direction over the moral and philosophic attitudes of its student body and faculty.

Mr. Buckley's solution for intellectual dissent is a comfortable one — eliminate it. But the price is too costly. Those who see no dangers in his philosophy can take hold of their banners and march gloriously back into the century when men burnt faggots at the feet of those who dared to think.

Letter To The Editor

To the Editor:

On Wednesday, the 23rd of October, I attended a Student Council meeting as a member of the Student Senate. In my two years at Villanova University I have never seen such an interest taken in an issue which was to be debated on the Congress floor. In the same regard, I have never witnessed anywhere the maligned rebuttal that such enthusiasm and interest received.

I am referring to an incident which occurred following the reading of a motion sponsored by Martin McGuinn, current Chairman of the Student Council. The motion stated, "That any infraction of the fraternity regulations concerning pledging and social functions be dealt with by the Student Senate."

After reading the motion, the Chairman stated that he wished to clarify his position. In doing so, he reprimanded the Inter-Fraternity Council for its deliquence in fraternity affairs and in those affairs directly relative to its constitution.

He stated examples in which he felt the I. F. C. was both an ineffective and useless organization and emphasized his hopes that the I. F. C. would immediately convene to reaffirm itself in the eyes of the Student Council. He then withdrew his motion.

My complaint rests in the complete irrelative nature in which the Chairman, in with-drawing his clause, publicly accused and belittled an organization not mentioned in the motion. If there was an argument with the I. F. C. it should have been cited as such in his motion.

The withdrawal completed, the floor turned immediately to other affairs and left the large number of fraternity defenders hanging "in the air and helpless to voice their feelings. It is no wonder an exit "en masse" of angered onlookers resulted.

It is obvious that the Chairman meant to stimulate interest both in the Student Council and in the I. F. C. However, I feel that the manner in which he accomplished this was improper. I feel that the Executive Secretary, Thomas Stanley, should offer some explanation for his derogatory remarks at the meeting directed not only at the I. F. C. members but at the members of every fraternity at Villanova University.

I hope that this situation may be relieved.

HAPPINESS CAN'T BUY MONEY

With tuition costs steadily on the rise, more and more undergraduates are looking into the student loan plan. If you are one such, you would do well to consider the case of Leonid Sigafoos.

Leonid, the son of an unemployed bean gleaner in Straightened Circumstances, Montana, had his heart set on going to college, but his father, alas, could not afford to send him. Leonid applied for a Regents Scholarship, but his reading speed, alas, was not very rapid—three words an hour—and before he could finish the first page of his exam, the Regents had closed their briefcases crossly and gone home. Leonid then applied for an athletic scholarship, but he had, alas, only a single athletic skill—picking up beebees with his toes—and this, alas, aroused only fleeting enthusiasm among the coaches.

And then—happy day!—Leonid learned of the student loan plan: he could borrow money for his tuition and repay it in easy installments after he left school!

Happily Leonid enrolled in the Southeastern Montana College of Lanolin and Restoration Drama and happily began a college career that grew happier year by year. Indeed, it became altogether ecstatic in his senior year because Leonid met a coed named Anna Livia Plurabelle with hair like beaten gold and eyes like two sockets full of Lake Louise. Love gripped them in its big moist palm, and they were betrothed on St. Crispin's Day.

Happily they made plans to be married immediately after commencement—plans, alas, that were never to come to fruition because Leonid, alas, learned that Anna Livia, like himself, was in college on a student loan, which meant that he not only had to repay his own loan after graduation but also Anna Livia's and the job, alas, that was waiting for Leonid at the Butte Otter Works simply did not pay enough, alas, to cover both loans, plus rent and food and clothing and television repairs.

Heavy hearted, Leonid and Anna Livia sat down and lit Marlboro Cigarettes and tried to find an answer to their problem—and, sure enough, they did! I do not know whether or not Marlboro Cigarettes helped them find an answer; all I know is that Marlboros taste good and look good and filter good, and when the clouds gather and the world is black as the pit from pole to pole, it is a heap of comfort and satisfaction to be sure that Marlboros will always provide the same easy pleasure, the same unstinting tobacco flavor, in all times and climes and conditions. That's all I know.

Leonid and Anna Livia, I say, did find an answer—a very simple one. If their student loans did not come due until they left school, why then they just wouldn't leave school! So after receiving their bachelor's degrees, they re-enrolled and took master's degrees. After that they took doctor's degrees—loads and loads of them—until today Leonid and Anna Livia, both aged 87, both still in school, hold doctorates in Philosophy, Humane Letters, Jurisprudence, Veterinary Medicine, Civil Engineering, Optometry, Woodpulp, and Dewey Decimals.

Their student loans, at the end of the last fiscal year, amounted to a combined total of nineteen million dollars—a sum which they probably would have found some difficulty in repaying had not the Department of the Interior recently declared them a National Park.

Erratic Stokowski Symphonic Debut Is Alternately Brilliant, Uninspired

by Matt Roche

Leopold Stokowski and his American Symphony made their Main Line debut on Saturday, October 19, in the Villanova Field House. This was a homecoming for Mr. Stokowski since from 1912 to 1938 he was music director of the Philadelphia Orchestra.

After the welcoming speech by Marty McGuinn, president of the Student Council, to the over five hundred parents and over one thousand students at the Parents' Weekend Concert, Jack Ryan, concert chairman, introduced the founder and conductor, Mr. Stokowski.

T'n'T—What Is It?

In response to recent inquiry by many students . . . The Turf 'n' Tinsel Club is an organization which presents each Spring an all male musical comedy. The purpose of the club simply stated is — enjoyment — both for the members and for the public who views the activities of the club.

A good example of this was the recent skit performed for the parents. Nothing is more enjoyable than watching a comedy skit except perhaps being a part of it. It is the opinion of the members that no other activity provides the fun and good times of the annual T 'n' T play. The idea of fun is most important here for absolutely no talent is required for participation in the play.

No Time

Many students worry about the amount of time an activity will require. T 'n' T requires only the amount of time the student wishes to put into it. For all practical purposes no time at all is needed until second semester when practice for the play begins. Even this takes only two nights a week.

Unique

The very existence of a club of this type (limited to male membership) is in itself a novelty, since there are only a few like it in the country. The best known of these are the "Hasty Pudding" of Harvard and the "Mask and Wig" of the University of Pennsylvania which have achieved national fame.

The club has recently completed a membership drive designed mainly to interest the freshmen in the activities of the club. Some of these freshmen performed in the skit for the parents. The overall results of the membership drive proved once again the tremendous enthusiasm for an organization of this type.

Response

The response of not only the freshmen but also the upper classmen proves conclusively the desire for and need of such an organization on campus. T 'n' T is now more than twice as large as any other organization on campus.

The first social event of the year—a party at the St. Cosmos Club in Conshohocken — will be held this Saturday night.

One striking feature of the Concert was the acoustical shell on the stage. It acted as a sounding board for the orchestra. Mr. Stokowsi has delved into the science of acoustics and the conduction of sound. This is another indication of the preparation which the Maestro gives to each performance.

This reviewer was disappointed both in the programming beginning with the modern Kay and ending with a traditional Bach fugue, and in the choice of numbers for a college campus. One wonders how many were familiar to the typical college students. As one example we may cite Handel and Mahler. The comments were "I was impressed, but I didn't appreciate it, because it wasn't familiar."

Commencing with a modern piece with a movie-like score Ulysses Kay's Of New Horizons, Stokowski led the orchestra through a theme of hope ending in a climax.

At the end of his Wagner piece, Prelude to Act III of Der Meistersinger, there was a moment of enthralled silence before the enthusiastic response from the audience. Just before the intermission, Mahler's Symphony No. 10 was played in contemporary style with a modern harp flourish ending.

Handel's Suite

The Amaryllis Suite by Handel began the second half of the program with a series of dances featuring the string section. This aroused favorable comment. The Maestro finished with the Passaglia and Fugue in C Minor — an unusual finale — playing a heavy piece with good insight.

A notable feature of the American Symphony Orchestra is its composition — about one third are talented musical graduates of Curtis and Julliard from 18 to 25 years old. This gives the flexibility of a combination of youth and experience to the group. This may provide a training ground for future American "greats."

A redeeming note of the evening was the Maestro — arms akimbo, commanding, directing fingers, the all-encompassing hand, the commanding are — whose person magnetized the orchestra and audience.

One wonders whether it was an "off" night since the orchestra's interpretation of the pieces ranged from alternately clear and brilliant to questionably uninspired. As a tribute to the Maestro's brilliant passages, the audience demanded three curtain calls.

A word of thanks should go to Jack Ryan, concert chairman, and to Willam Gross, director of the concert series, for arranging this concert. The attendance is a compliment to their and the committeemen's work.

We would like to see a return of Mr. Stokowski with a program planned appropriate to the college student. This should include works familiar; as an example we could cite Beethoven, Rimsky - Korsakov, or Rochmanov.

Co-operation?

by Al Verdi

This overworked word for teamwork seems to have been forgotten on the Villanova campus by students, faculty and administration alike. This lack of cooperation is most notably seen in the dealings of the Belle Air yearbook.

Some members of the staff fail to realize that their purpose in this organization is not to dictate to other students, but rather to compromise and cooperate for the benefit of the yearbook. Staff members in the Belle Air apparently feel that they have one job and one job only. Seldom can one find a student willing to forego his time and energy for another.

Lack of cooperation is also seen in the organization of the yearbook. Few, if any, staff members know what another member is doing — and what is worse, few care. Indeed, some students of the staff do not even know the theme and format of the book.

Attitude

The attitude of the staff seems to be that the yearbook will be published in spite of each other. This lack of cooperation carries beyond the walls of the Belle Air staff.

The Villanova Photography Department, the right arm of the Belle Air has poor cooperation with the Belle Air. These two must work together to present a successful yearbook. However, it appears that each one is making it more difficult for the other to operate.

The Belle Air often fails to give sufficient notice for picture appointments, while the Photography Department often fails to provide a photographer for an appointment. It seems that a little more teamwork between these two offices would allow for an easier and more pleasant job for both.

The Faculty

While on the subject of cooperation, it would do well to mention the laxness of some members of the faculty and administration in regards to picture appointments for the Belle Air. It is well understood that the time of these people is valuable and limited, but when an appointment is made for a picture, is is expected that all involved will be present.

However, extenuating circumstances may sometimes arise which prevent the fulfillment of an appointment. In such a case, notice could be given to the Belle Air to avoid undue delays and cancellations which inconvenience not only the staff, but also other members of the faculty and administration.

Conclusion

In all these cases, an extension of cooperation by all concerned would eliminate delays and omissions and would help to present an accurate yearbook complimentary to the University.

The Rising Curtain

Hot Playbox—Cold Play

by Paul Norton

We at Villanova have been called on to perform our own brand of self sacrifice by witnessing the Graduate school of Theater's new production, "The Gay and Burning Bridge." The struggle has been moved beyond the footlights and playgoers must have braved the elements of atmosphere and story in a 30'x60' oven.

The play which opened last friday night is an original by David Rabe, a grad student hero, and will run for the next two weekends.

"Run" is a good word because in the second act a young girl, while drunk, goes dizzily spinning around the stage. Throughout the evening the audience is forced into similar vertigo as the play goes around and around and around.

Unfortunately, most of the audience seemed pretty much unsure of just what they had seen. Even some of the actors had difficulty in explaining their roles.

The hero struggles to seek his own identity, (to find himself) in his smothering world. He turns to the surrounding influences and attempts to move out. In each case he is thwarted and even though he seems to end on a hopeful note, it is far from a successful conclusion.

Acting

Needless to say, the lead role of Danny is difficult and requires tremendous depth to decipher just what the author had in mind. Bill DiPaolo is a mature actor who, in most circumstances, is disciplined and controlled. His portrayal is set firmly within the play but it would seem that Danny should be deeper, more searching and younger in his outlook.

The same problem exists for Karen Fitzgerald (Carol Schmenkel). She appears to be fighting her own maturity to picture a young girl with a grown-up mind.

In the supporting roles, Alan Willig as the father and Thomas Grace and Peter Mocco as Danny's friends do justice to their parts. Mister Willig displays an even mixture of temperment and emotion.

Messers Grace and Mocco provide the much appreciated comedy in the second act. Mister Mocco is particularly adept in his timing and naturalness and Mister Grace possesses a simple likable innocence.

Construction

The play itself suffers too often from either a lack of point or a skirting around the main issues, of a scene. Even by the end of the second act we aren't quite sure of the direction or just what is involved in the plot struggle.

The final act, in an attempt to tie up a climax to what must be presumed as rising action, contains a lot screaming and hopeful lines but little else.

Thomas Nevins' sets, though unimaginative, are properly close and cluttered and do give a sense of the limited outlook of the characters.

To me it seems unfortunate that the actors and audience have to be subjected to the uncomfortable heat of the small playbox for three hours. There must be some way of providing an adequate ventilation system. Considering this and the quality of the play, the whole night was just a concentrated effort in warm boredom.

Caught In Passing

Ellington Keeps Busy - 'It's My Tempo'

by Jan Dyroff

What with the current interest in the eighty-eights in the leading jazz magazine in the country, it is only fitting we turn our attention to the same subject without trying to be a slavish copy.

In particular we'd like to single out one Duke Ellington for some long special praise. Duke has been around a long time, way back from the Cotton Club days, and it's hoped by all that he'll be around for a long time to come.

On Tour

At present the Duke is on tour for the State Department in the Middle East. In September he was in Damascus, Syria for their International Fair and got the full Persian-carpet treatment. Crowds were extremely enthusiastic, acclaiming him with shouts of "Ash al Duke"—long live the Duke.

Later he touched down in Amman, Jordan where he played to a select audience under the patronage of King Hussein in a 2,000 year old Roman amphitheatre.

His band on tour covered much ground and many countries, going through Afghanistan, India, Ceylon, Pakistan, Iran, Iraq, Lebanon, Turkey, Cyprus, Egypt, and Greece. We wonder if he ever considered making a special stop for his alumnus Juan Tizol in Hindustan?

Ellington likes to keep busy. He writes, conducts, travels, sells himself, his music, and his art form. "It's good to do all these things together at one time," he said, "it's my tempo."

Summer Stock

During the summer the Duke was once again embroiled with the Stratford - in - Ontario's Shakespeare production. He did a new musical score for their production of "Timon of Athens."

He has a unique gift for bringing a sixteenth century concept in playwrightship and music up to date. Witness to this study is a truly superb album he put out in this vein a while back, "Such Sweet Thunder."

Ellingtonian compositions that have come to the fore of late are highlighted by "My People." It was conceived, written and staged by the Duke as his contribution to the Century of Negro Progress Exhibition at McCormick Place in Chicago.

It included not only the music, but choral sections, and spotlighted solos. The Saturday Review called it a visual and aural experience. For it he won a plaque praising him for his contribution to American music.

All of the above is interesting, it tells what one man is doing. It is more than that, though; it is significant in that one man, a jazz artist, can do so much.

Vivid Service

He can serve his country in a vivid way by pursuing his art form and receive recognition for it. He can create, write, arrange, work with the classics, and be accepted as a man.

Someone recently asked if jazz had any aesthetic value in modern society and from the above it is apparent that it does, a point that wasn't one of the original considerations here but one that can be drawn.

FROM CAMPUS TO CAMPUS... FROM COAST TO COAST... THEY ALL LOVE THAT

If you can take your nose out of that text book for just a moment, you'll notice that Yum-Yum has emerged as the most stimulating campus sport in many a year. Who needs panty raids when you can Yum-Yum under a large tree or in a little sports car? Be advised, however, that on rainy days the hip prefer their Yum-Yum indoors. (Research rooms of libraries and empty field houses are considered the choicest locations.)

As you've probably deduced by now, Yum-Yum is strictly for Him and Her. And in Columbia's riotous new comedy "UNDER THE YUM-YUM TREE", (Columbia Pictures, not Columbia University) Yum-Yum is developed into a high art form by its greatest practitioner, "Hogan."

Hogan, hilariously portrayed by Jack Lemmon, is a lecherous landlord who rents apartments to attractive girls and goes from door to door with a heart-shaped passkey. One of the tenants is Carol Lynley, a curvy co-ed who is conducting a cozy experiment in platonic, pre-marital co-habitation. (It's all in the interests of science.) Dean Jones is her nervous wreck of a fiance and Edie Adams is on the premises as the marriage-counseling teacher who takes a tumble for Hogan.

Hogan's own apartment, happily referred to as "The Sin Bin," is an electronic ambush-on-virtue that could make etchings obsolete. There's a violin section, for example, that emerges out of nowhere and plays, without benefit of human hands, "Music To Make Yum-Yum By." There's also a bar with enough whiskey to refloat the Titanic. But don't get Hogan wrong. Jack Lemmon defines Hogan as "a man who is outraged at humanity. Therefore, everything that seems outlandish and bizarre to the rest of the world, seems perfectly normal to him. Hogan cannot understand why the world is so ungrateful to him."

We guarantee it's marvelous mayhem and sure-fire material for a term paper on Laughter. It may not earn you an "A"—but what an 'education' when you see Jack Lemmon in Columbia Picture's "UNDER THE YUM-YUM TREE," co-starring: Carol Lynley • Dean Jones • Edie Adams • Imogene Coca • Paul Lynd • Robert Lansing and The Yum-Yum Girls.

Villanova's Security Force

by Bill Manfred

Very often a small group of men, dedicated to a purpose, have been able to cope with great difficulties and to control situations with ease while remaining virtually unnoticed and unappreciated. Such a group of men can be found on the Villanova campus.

This group of men is the Security Force of Villanova and carries out its numerous duties with ease and efficiency while remaining unnoticed much of the time and almost never appreciated.

Founded Lately

The Security Force was organized in 1956 and placed under the capable leadership of Captain Murphy. At this time the Force consisted of five men whose primary purpose was to protect the Equipment and the furnishings and to discipline the students in the newly constructed Dougherty Hall.

In time, with the rapid increase in the student body and an increase in problems caused by the increase of students, the Security Force was also expanded to cope with the new problems.

Today the Force consists of 18 men, who work in three shifts around the clock, and whose duties are to protect, not only Dougherty Hall, but all life and property on the Villanova campus. Their first and foremost responsibilitly, as quoted from Captain Murphy, is "To protect the life and property at Villanova University."

Prime Duty

In carrying out their primary responsibility they encounter many tasks, many of which are unnoticed and unappreciated by the majority of the students, employees, and faculty. Some of their duties can be enumerated here, but by no means does this enumeration completely describe all the many services rendered by them to the University.

Again, their first concern is the protection of the students, the faculty, the employees, the administration, and the buildings, on campus. In doing this they constantly check and maintain fire-fighting equipment on campus, as well as continually checking for and removing fire hazards.

They have also designated certain buildings as bomb shelters in co-operation with the present Civil Defense Program. The excellent safety record on the campus roadways testifies to the fact of the Forces' efficient work in controlling the traffic on campus.

Captain John Murphy (right) head of Villanova's Security unit appears with several of his stalwarts.

Another important duty of the Force is to police the social and athletic events helds on campus. Their responsibility here is also the protection of life and property.

Many Functions

There are also several functions performed by the Security Force which few people have had the occasion to learn about. The first of these is the maintaining of a Lost and Found Department on the second floor of Dougherty Hall.

Many times these men have acted quickly and heroically in cases involving sick or injured persons, administering aid to them and transporting them to either a hospital or the Infirmary. One of the most important functions of these men, especially Captain Murphy, is the ability to act as a liaison officer between students and civil authorities.

The practical and technical knowledge possessed by the men of the Force in regards to civil law and procedure is invaluable in helping students cope with any difficulties with the civil authorities. In several instances the assistance of Captain Murphy, acting as a liaison officer and as a friend to the student, has resulted in the prevention of unjust action being taken against the student.

Small Group

The Security Force, then, can be described as a small group of dedicated men who protect the people and the property here at Villanova. Because of their grave responsibilities and of their effective and successful efforts in carrying out these duties, they should be appreciated and also receive the co-operation of the faculty and students.

It is proper and right that at this time the Security Force of Villanova University is publicly commended for their dedication and for their successful efforts in protecting life and property at Villanova.

Charles C. Price, Penn Prof. Addresses Political Union

In a recent address to the Villanova Political Union, Dr. Charles G. Price, Chairman of the Chemistry Department of the University of Pennsylvania, tried to persuade the Union to endorse world government.

The text of the debate resolution was: "Resolved that this House supports the transformation of the United Nations into a federal world government."

Dr. Price is a past national president of United World Federation, Inc., and is presently chairman of its National Political Action Committee. He is also an Honorary Vice-President of that organization.

Peter DeLiberty, president of the Union, announced that this year the Union is scheduling all its debates in 110 Bartley. They will be held on the second and fourth Monday of every month at 7 p.m.

Although the speakers have not yet been scheduled, the dates for the remaining debates this semester will be November 11, November 25, and December 9. After each meeting there will be a members' reception for the guest.

A new publication, Politico, has resulted from the political organization. Edited by Mike Magro, the publication will appear once every month. According to the editor the publication will present "written opinion of Union members and of special guest writers."

The special feature of the first edition will be an exclusive interview with William F. Buckley Jr., on the topic of the U.S. Foreign Policy and the Kennedy Administration. The edition is scheduled to appear on Monday November 4.

dealt with having the report sent to the Student-Faculty Committee and the other that a poll be taken of the student body to see if they wanted this motion.

The original motion was finally defeated after much confusing debate, which stemmed from improper wording of the motion and from a lack of proper knowledge of parliamentary procedure on the part of certain members of the Council.

Senior Steering Group Forms Three Diverse Activity Committees

The Senior Steering Committee has three subordinate working committees. These are the social, education, and investigating committees.

The social committee is now planning for the annual Senior Weekend to be held April 3-4. Plans are also under way for Fathers' Day and the closing party. The committee is also toying with the idea of two additional class parties.

The education committee has sent a letter to a cross-section of 15 colleges seeking information regarding an honor code. Jim Murphy, Senior Class president, has said that the formulation of an honor code for Villanova is one of their pet projects.

Last Thursday the entire Senior Steering Committee met to draft final plans for the alumni-senior get-together to be held at the Alumni House on November 6 between 4:30 p.m. and 6 p.m. The entire Senior Class will be invited.

Coordinator Gnilka Announces Nov. 8 Date Of Fall Navy Dance

The Fall Navy Dance sponsored by the NROTC Recreation Committee will be held on November 8, at the General Washington Country Club, so reported Chuck Gnilka, president and coordinator of the dance.

The dance, dedicated to the fourth classmen, will begin at 9 p.m. and terminate at 1 a.m. The dress is semiformal. Flowers are not required for this dance.

John Unipan, the entertainment chairman, advised that the music will be provided by the "Squires," a collegiate band from New York City. Program-favors will be distributed upon entering and is under the direction of Bob McKelvie. Refreshments will be available and can be purchased.

Captain Presents Queen

The Queen of the 1963 Fall Navy Dance will be presented to the midshipmen by Capt. C. McCall, USN, Professor of Naval Science. The captain will present the Queen with a bouquet of roses on behalf of the midshipmen battalion. The master of ceremonies is Harry Lee.

Assignment: gear up for more "go" in low!

Result: All 3-speed manual transmissions in Ford-built cars with V-8's now are fully synchronized in each forward gear

To get more "go" in low, Ford engineers were asked to upgrade the conventional 3-speed transmission to give drivers more control in all three forward gears—to make "low" a driving gear—and they tackled the problem imaginatively.

Their achievement, another Ford First, is the only U.S. 3-speed manual transmission with all three forward gears fully synchronized! No need now to come to a complete stop when you shift into low—and no clashing gears! It lets you keep more torque on tap for negotiating sharp turns and steep grades. It makes driving more flexible, more pleasurable.

Another assignment completed and another example of how engineering leadership at Ford provides fresh ideas for the American Road.

Villanova Alumnus Dr. John Goldschmidt To Head Med Center

Dr. John W. Goldschmidt, distinguished Villanova alumnus of the class of 1950, was recently named director of the new Jefferson Medical College Hospital Rehabilitation Center during the dedication ceremonies.

Dr. Goldschmidt, a 1943 graduate of Saint Joseph's Prep, attended Jefferson Medical College and interned at Jefferson and Fitzgerald-Mercy Hospitals.

He served as an instructor of physical medicine and rehabilitation at the University of Pennsylvania's Medical School and also on the faculty of the School of Allied Medical Professions there.

The former Villanovan is on the board of governors of the Heart Association of Southeastern Pennsylvania and chairman of its rehabilitation committee. He is also medical advisor to the Eastern Pennsylvania Chapter of the American Physical Therapy Association.

Dr. Goldschmidt is advisor to the Pasteur Medical Society.

IJF Plans Formulate Quickly For February Jazz Concert

Plans are rapidly being formulated for the fourth annual Villanova Intercollegiate Jazz Festival, to be held in the University Field House on February 7, 1964.

According to a preliminary report of developments, given by Chairman Eddie Bride, this year's Festival should easily surpass those of the previous years.

Contacts have already been made with the members of the 1964 Advisory Committee, all of whom have been expressed enthusiastic approval of "IJF." Some of the jazz personalities highlighting this committee are bandleaders Stan Kenton (the Chief Advisor), Maynard Ferguson, Horace Silver, and J. J. Johnson.

Other members are John Hammond, artist and repertoire representative and talent scout from Columbia Records, Bob Share, administrator of the Berklee School of Music, and Rev. Norman O'Connor, the most highly-respected clerical enthusiast of jazz today.

Press notices to many of the nation's magazines and newspapers are soon to be released. Down Beat Magazine, THE jazz publication, carried an article in their November 7 issue, which was sent to newsstands October 24. The article outlined the rules for entering the Festival and added other pertinent information.

Besides the press releases, letters of announcement have been sent to a total of seven-hundred schools from the East coast to the mid-West. Bride has already stated that he has received numerous inquiries from various college groups, along with requests for applications.

Each group will be required to return a fifteen-minute tape with the application; the tapes will be auditioned at the Berklee School of Music on January 2, 1964. The deadline for tapes has been set at December 19, 1963.

This past weekend, Bride and publicity co-chairman Bob Dowling traveled to New York, meeting with some of the advisors and scouting of the city's top jazz spots, in the hopes of securing a booking for the winner.

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANIES SALUTE: DAVE COYLE

Dave Coyle (B.A., 1961) has a knack for getting right to the heart of a problem. His ability to comprehend the problem, analyze procedures, correct inefficiencies, and clarify operations in a succinct report, makes him somewhat of an efficiency expert.

In less than two years, Dave's talents have shown up on four assignments. As a start, he investigated the procedures for handling dangerous plant conditions in the Jenkintown area for Bell of Pennsylvania. He developed a simplified system for the handling of reports, which are the basis for quickly correcting the dangerous conditions.

On other assignments, Dave has also established new procedures for improving the efficiency of installation and repair operations. By riding service trucks and observing the men's performance, he helped the men boost their sales of telephone equipment.

Dave Coyle, like many young men, is impatient to make things happen for his company and himself. There are few places where such restlessness is more welcomed or rewarded than in the fast-growing telephone business.

Literary Society Presents Symposium: 'Lord Of The Flies'

"Symposium: Lord of the Flies," the Literary Society's program on William Golding's controversial novel, has been rescheduled for 7:30 p.m., Monday, November 11, in 110 Bartley Hall.

The date of the symposium had to be changed from November 4, because the Student Council Lecture Series is presenting a talk by author-journalist Harry Golden on that night.

The topic of the Society's second informal literary discussion of the semester is still tentative, but the time has been set for 10:30 a.m., Thursday, November 7, in 204 Vasey.

'Lynx' Contributions Now Being Limited To Villanova Only

Barry Thornton, editor of the Lynx, has announced a new ruling which limits contributions to the publication to Villanova students only.

Occasionally in the past, articles were accepted from writers of other colleges. According to Thornton, this will increase a student's chances for having an article published.

This semester's publication date for Villanova's literary magazine has been tentatively set for late in November. It will be comparable to recent issues in size.

According to Poetry Editors Hilary Russell and Bill Hart, present submissions indicate a definite improvement in the quality of the poetry section. The number of poems to date also exceeds other issues.

Students wishing to hand in poems, short stories, description, or essays may still do so. Articles may be submitted to Barry Thornton 243 Sheehan Hall; Dennis O'Hara, 228 Sullivan Hall; or at the Lynx office, 447 Tolentine Hall.

Basketball?? Yep!!

by Roy Baron

The bright Indian Summer sun was shining down on the football practice field as the Wildcat backs and linemen ran through their plays in preparation for the Parents' Weekend game with George Washington. Inside the Field House a whistle was blowing. A group of about twenty experienced veterans and eager newcomers gathered about their coach. The day was Tuesday, October 15. The occasion was the first day of basketball practice.

Head coach Jack Kraft seemed pleased. He was looking into the faces of the men whom he hopes will better the excellent records turned in by his teams in his first two seasons at Villanova. The task will be difficult for he now possesses a two-year record of 40-17, but the material is there.

He has six lettermen returning, three of them starters, from the squad that carried Villanova to a fourth place finish in the N.I.T. Heading this group is Wally Jones, one of the finest backcourt men in Villanova history, and, in the opinion of his coach a genuine All American. After an operation on his right knee during the summer the Wildcat captain appears ready to go at full speed again after being hampered somewhat by the injury last season.

Juniors Jim Washington and Eric Erickson are the other starting lettermen that return. "Wash" was outstanding at center last season, averaged 12.7 points and 12.2 rebounds per game. Eric exceeded pre-season expectations, playing an excellent floor game at guard while scoring 257 points. Both are being tried at forward now.

The presence of George Leftwich and Bill Melchionni have made Erickson's movement to the frontcourt possible. Leftwich has looked better in practice than he did as a 13.4 points performer two season ago. A knee injury kept him out of action last year.

Melchionni hit for a 17.5 average last year for the Frosh. What is more important, his great natural ability has helped him to fit in with the style of play to which Jones and Leftwich are accustomed.

Soph Richie Moore (6-4) is expected to team with Washington at forward. He was the leading scorer for the Frosh last year (23.6) and is a good rebounder.

The fifth berth is wide open. Marine veteran, Al Sallee (6-8), and transfer Mike Tralies (6-5) must prove themselves better than Erickson if they expect to start over him. Sam Iorio (6-8 letterman) and Soph Bernie Schaffer (6-5) provide depth up front, while Don Ficca, Butch Winterbottom, Ben Kenny, and Joe McGill are experienced backcourt reserves.

This overall depth is something Kraft has never been blessed with before.

The fact that the student body is expecting this prominence to be attained is evident from the many rumors of national ranking, the source of which the coach can't seem to locate. Expected difficulty in purchasing tickets is evidenced by the crowds which turn out each afternoon to view the practice sessions.

Ruggers Win, Tie And Lose In Four Games; Aussies Sunk

Villanova's Rugby team moved through it's Fall schedule, with 4 games in 8 days against teams of varying ability and escaped with one victory, one tie, and two losses.

The initial encounter was against a group called the First Troop who are the Wildcats' main competition in the Philadelphia area. The game ended in a scoreless tie.

Three days later the Wildcats played a group of Sailors from the H.M.S. Pream, temporarily docked in Phila., and sunk a thoroughly disorganized team, 34-3. Among those scoring were Freshmen Jeff Hooligan who scored twice, Dick Gove, John Camiolo, and Leo Campbell.

After this exhibition, the team moved to New York for a battle with the New York Rugby Club, generally considered the best team in the country. With 5 minutes left in the game, Villanova trailed only 16-6, when the English - Irish dominated New Yorkers scored twice in rapid sucession to sew up the contest 23-6.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

by Jim Proud

Villanova's bowling team is off to a fast rolling start. The local squad at this time owns a 6-3 record, good enough for third place behind LaSalle College and the University of Pennsylvania, both of whom have a 7-2 marks in the Philadelphia Intercollegiate Bowling League.

Other members of the League are St. Joseph's College, Drexel Institute, Philadelphia College of Pharmacy, Penn State and Philadelphia Textile.

Every Sunday during the school year, matches are held at the William Penn Lanes located at 34th and Walnut Streets in Philadelphia. The League Champs travel to New York City for a round-robin tournament to be held in April.

Returnees

Returning Varsity members include Charles Williams, team Captain Andy Razzore, Jim Rowley, Don Logan, John Brennan, Leo Muller, Denny Henderson, and Howie Riley. New members of the Keglers include Spence Jones, Dick Broderick; the team's only southpaw, Bruce Thomas, and John Therkelson. Great things are expected of Jones who was the New York State Junior Champion in 1961.

Coach Sal Rico has an optimistic outlook for the Coming season. "I am looking forward to placement in the national singles, doubles and team competition." With this talent such hopes don't seem out of place.

Villanova's Sailing Club resumes action this week sailing against Kings Point on October 26 followed by the Freshman Middle Atlantic Championships at Navy on November 2. The Kings Point meet will be the first for Villanova since the opening race against Penn, which Villanova lost, 3-2. Two meets in early October were canceled; one at Monmouth because of bad weather, and another at Navy because the Villanova sailers could not get transporation to Annapolis.

Newly-elected captain, Joe Linsalata feels that the Wildcats will well-represent themselves against the competing freshmen from 14 schools in the Middle Atlantic Championships. This is the second annual meet and Navy, the defending Champ, is again favored with Georgetown.

Freshmen Jay Hollenback and Jim McLaughlin have shown much experience and potential. Hollenback won 2 races against Penn.

Zwolak Leads Harrier-Mates, Quantico, St. John's Fall

by Bob Skinner

Vic Zwolak led the Wildcat harriers to a closely contested 23-32 victory over his former teammates, the Quantico Marines, on Saturday, October 19. The meet was held at the five and one quarter mile course in Fairmount Park.

Beneficiary of some of the nation's best athletic talent through its PLC program, Quantico had ex-Big Eight cross-country champ Billy Mills. Mills gave All-American Zwolak fits for three miles of the course. Zwolak finished in 27:12, to Mill's 27:35.

Fellow Villanova All-American Tom Sullivan placed third with a time of 28:08; Marty Ferko was fourth, and Dave Hyland and Noel Carroll were sixth and ninth respectively.

Last Saturday, Coach Jim Toppeny's squad travelled to New York City's five mile Van Courtland Park to encounter St. John's. The meet was in preparation for the IC4A's scheduled for November 18.

Under normal conditions Van Courtland's combination of woody hills and flat plateau topography is a good test for the best runners, but with the unusual Indian summer temperature hovering near eighty degrees, it was near torture.

Zwolak again led the team to victory, 18-44. Zwolak's winning time was 25:49. Tom Sullivan and Dave Hyland finished in a dead heat for second place with times of 27:00.

The freshmen won their second meet in a row defeating the St. John's frosh, 24-33, over a three mile course. Steve Ball, 16:00, led the Wildkittens in their victory followed by Dick Bright, third and Steve Furko, fifth.

JACK CLIFFORD

Dick Sernyak was the workhorse of the squad collecting 90 yards on 14 attempts while Jack Boyle chipped in with 78 yards on 15 carries.

Sernyak scored Villanova's first TD capping a 68 yard 13 play drive. In this series of plays, the former Monsignor Bonner standout went off right tackle and right end (well-done Al Atkinson and Jack Clifford) five times for 38 yards with the touchrdown coming from 16 yards out. Mike Manger kicked the extra point with the game 7:20 old.

Missed opportunities

The locals had a couple of other opportunities but they couldn't take advantage of them. After the Colonials first score, Villanova marched to GW's 49 yard line and on a third-and-twenty-six play, quarterback Dave Connell connected with soph end John Kelleher on a 42 yard pass play to the enemy 7.

Not only did Kelleher catch the ball between two defenders, but it appeared that he was behind them just before the ball was thrown. Sernyak's fumble two plays later killed the drive, however.

Villanova's second touchdown came off a 71 yard 15 play drive. Connell passed to Clifford from the Colonials four for the six pointer. Manger's successful extra point proved to be the game-decider.

The Colonials first scored on the fourth play from scrimmage with the game 1:55 young. Holland's 12 yard pass to Flowers was caught on the VU one and from there the Old Forge, Pa. junior stepped over for the score. Gross' extra point attempt was good.

The play that set up the score was a gem. On the left side of the field, nine Colonials were lined up along the line of scrimmage and behind them stood Drummond. Hunched over the ball was Holland who centered it diagonally back to Drummond just as Villanova came out of its defensive huddle. Thirty seven yards and a cloud of dust later Drummond was stopped from behind by Boyle.

Stop Drummond!

Pre-game prognosticators declared that Drummond had to be stopped. The 6-1, 205 pound potential All-American was not stopped but he was just about rendered ineffective. Going into the game he was averaging 4.9 yards on each of his 55 carries but was held to only 55 yards (37 yards on the above run) on 13 carries. In other words, he gained only 4 yards in his last 11 attempts.

They helped make a major advance in medical technology

...yet there's not an "M. D." in the house

These six men were members of a team that developed an x-ray system so advanced that, even with exposure to x-radiation reduced by 80%, images come out much sharper on the diagnostician's viewing screen. By bringing to the task the unique talents, experience, and educational background of each member, this team of experts has made it possible for radiologists and physicians to do a better job of medical diagnosis.

Of these six men from General Electric's X-Ray Department, Milwaukee, four have degrees in engineering, one majored in physics and math, and the sixth in economics. Not one was trained primarily in medical science—although, of course, their Department works closely with the medical profession. Nor did any of them anticipate, when in college, that their major subjects would be put to use in providing improved tools for diagnostic medicine. But they did recognize—as their record shows—that better-than-average performance could qualify them for challenging jobs with a forward-looking company like General Electric.

There are hundreds of such teams at General Electric today. Their make-up varies, and almost every field of specialization, technical and non-technical, is represented somewhere in the Company. The projects are just as varied: nose cones for missiles, desalinization of sea water, computers, or power plants to squeeze more electricity from a pound of coal or a gram of atomic fuel.

The more than 36,000 college graduates at General Electric comprise one of the largest and most varied pools of talent in the nation. But the Company's future is, in many ways, wrapped up in people still in school and college. As projects increase in size and complexity, so will the need for able young people. People who demonstrate, through their college record, the best use of their educational opportunities, who know the meaning of excellence, who understand the differences between specialization and narrowness, breadth and shallowness. Such people, working together, will make up the teams of the future, and be the architects of what we call progress.

Mulligan Founds VU Racket Squad, Moderator Wanted

The embryonic Villanova Tennis Club held its first meeting on October 23 and, according to chief organizer Bob Mulligan, the response was "tremendous" with nearly 40 applicants turning out.

Mulligan, a senior Philosophy major, stated that Villanova is the only college in the surrounding area without a tennis team.

Because of the large turnout, he said that he planned a round-robin tournament among the applicants to determine their ability. From this tournament an eight-to-ten member team will be formed. Information concerning this tournament will be posted on the bulletin boards outside Alumni Hall.

Coach, moderator needed

Although several faculty members have expressed an interest in the team, a coach and a moderator will be needed. Any faculty members interested in serving in either of these positions may contact Mulligan or watch for announcements in The Villanovan and/or the bulletin boards.

Plans are being made for indoor practice to be held during the winter at a local high school. Outdoor practice will begin in March and the season will open in mid-April and run into May. Matches will be planned with the surrounding colleges.

Freshman and varsity teams are planned along with instructions for anyone interested in the game. Any additional information may be gained by calling Bob Mulligan at EL 6-6547, anytime in the evening.

Hard-Luck Wildcats To Host Big Crusaders This Saturday

by Tom Willson

Villanova's blue and white banners will be unfurled against the purple and white of Holy Cross in this week's 1:30 Saturday afternoon classic at Villanova Stadium. The Wildcats will play host to the Crusader squad which has consistently managed a high rating among Eastern football powers.

After tackling the likes of Penn State's Nittany Lions and the Syracuse Orangemen, Holy Cross poses formidable opposition to the Wildcats as well as their big-time opponents. In this battle of Eastern independents, the Wildcat squad will be "up" for their clash with the Crusaders from New England.

The Wildcats are still looking forward to the big game when the breaks will fall the way of the Blue and White. Judging by pre-game spirit and enthusiasm, the skirmish with the Crusaders could be the Wildcats' big day in the '63 pigskin campaign.

Sparked by captain John Morris, rated as Holy Cross' all-time center great and possibly the best center in the east, the Crusaders will field a strong line against the Wildcat bomb-squad which delights in blitzing opposing quarterbacks. Al Atkinson, Mike Strofolino and company will seek to another the Crusader ground game and stop their speedy backfield stars.

Rough-and-tumble Jim Marcellino, leading pass receiver and top all-around back is in the midst of another fine season. Jim Gravel and Jim Hollaron are real speedsters and great broken field runners.

Quarterbacking the Holy Cross squad will be either Joe Policastra or Fran Coughlin, two daring and dangerous passers. Reliable receivers are a Holy Cross trademark again this season as Jon Donovan and John Dugan figure prominent along the line. End posts will be deep in lettermen.

Recuperating from the stunning blows dealt by graduation is a major task which still confronts Dr. Eddie Anderson, who enters his 38th season as a head coach and his 20th at Holy Cross. Dr. Anderson, former All American at Notre Dame under the immortal Knute Rockne and "National Coach of the Year" at Iowa in 1939, prefers to brush aside the losses to Syracuse, Boston University, and Dartmouth and remains hopeful that the Crusaders will post another winning season.

Trio Of Xavier Speedsters Stun Tough-Luck Cats, 27-0

by Roy Baron

Villanova's Wildcats were stunned by a fired up Xavier eleven last Saturday night 27-0. A crowd of about 8,000 surprised Cincinnati fans witnessed the tremendous display of hard-hitting line play and backfield speed put on by the Musketeers.

During the opening period it looked as though the visiting 'Cats were going to jump off to an early lead for the first time this season. With Joe Santomauro, starting in place of the ailing Dick Sernyak, and Jack Boyle leading the way, the Mainliners twice drove deep into Xavier territory.

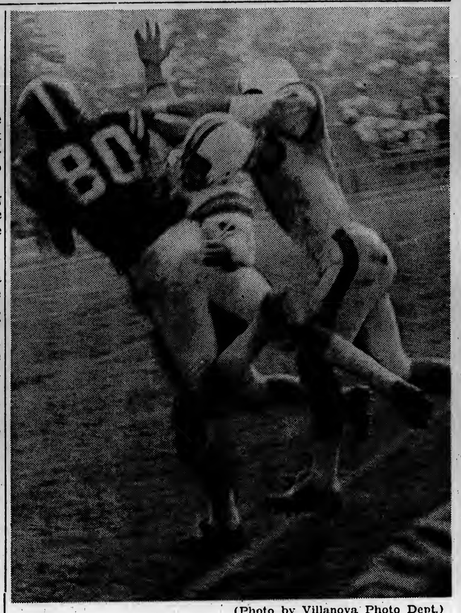
However ,the Musketeers dug in, stopping the Wildcats at the 16 yard line and later at the three.

Lightning Strikes Thrice

Late in the second period a trio of lightning fast sophomore backs, within three minutes, changed the entire complexion of the game. Following a fair catch of a Dave Connell punt the Muskies took over on their own 23 yard line.

On the first play from scrimmage Walt Mainer raced around his own right end. He shook off a desperate grab by Jim Thomas and raced down the sidelines to paydirt.

Minutes later another soph speedster, Terry Brown, intercepted an errant Connell pass at his own 38 and ran it back 37 yards to the Villanova 25. After gaining a first down at the Wildcats 14, the third soph, 167 pound John DeFazio, swept his left end for the second touchdown. The Musketeers were unable to convert after either score.



Brynarski's Revenge

During the third period Walt Brynarski, a senior who had been demoted to the third team, took over at quarterback for Xavier. Brynarski was seeking to avenge last season's defeat at the hands of Villanova, when he played his best game in a losing effort.

This time he was not to be denied. Following Mainer's second touchdown, an 11 yard run, Brynarski rolled out to his right, and went into the end zone for the two-point conversion. Less than five minutes had elapsed when he rolled left for six yards and a touchdown. The placement was good, making the score 27-0.

'Cats Lack Big Play

The fourth period was a repeat of the opening quarter. Three times Villanova pushed deep into Xavier territory, being stopped at the 15, 9, and 24 yard lines. Each time, as has been the case all season, the Wildcats failed to come up with the big play at the necessary moment.

Clifford's Extra Point Block Gives Villanova 14-13 Win

by Tom Bruderle

Jack Clifford is 6-3 and it is a good thing he is. The heretofore almost unnoticed 230 pound senior end cracked the George Washington line on a extra point attempt by the Colonials, blocking the kick, giving Villanova a hard-earned 14-13 victory over the visitors before 11,000 delighted Parents' Day fans.

The Colonials had marched 86 yards in 12 plays hitting paydirt when Harry Haught went through left tackle, shook off three would-be tacklers and scored from 24 yards out. Quarterback Marv Holland elected to go for the two pointer and he had it when right-end Paul Flowers grabbed his pass making the score 15-14

Back moving

However, one of the George Washington players was detected illegally in motion and the play was called back and a five yard penalty was assessed against GW. Fullback Mark Gross went for the tie by attempting an extra point which Clifford blocked.

Although scoring but 14 points, Villanova's offense rolled up 306 total yards, 247 of them on the ground. Before game time, Coach Alex Bell was looking for a good performance from one of his backs, but instead received two fine showings.

Billiards-Intramurals

The Villanova Billiard team, led by George Walko, won its first meet of the season by beating a highly rated La Salle five 5-2.

This is a large feather in the cuemen's caps because La Salle is considered one of the top teams in the East.

The longest run for Villanova was turned in by Captain George Walko, 25 in a row. Pat De Gennaro also turned in impressive runs of 21 and 20 respectively.

The "Hustlers" have their next meet on the ninth of November, at which time they have a rematch with La Salle.

The Intramural Department had the annual cross-country run this year on the 17th. First place went to Sam Perlitz who ran the course in the time of 11 minutes and 5.8 seconds.

In second place was John Kichula and third place went to Richard Brant.

The first place teams of the football league as of the 24th were: in the 3:30 league a three way tie among, the Notorious Nine, DPE, and TKD. In the 4:30 Austin league another three way tie among the Bulldogs, the Spartans and the Chuggers. In the 4:30 Mendel league there are also three teams in first place. The Dunes 9, The Mets and the Kings Men.

Due to the fact that Standard Time started on the 27th the 4:30 leagues are now 4:20 leagues. In an effort to complete the games before dark the halves have been shortened from 20 minutes to 18. The half time is also shortened from 5 minutes to 3.

Play-offs for the first half, which ends on the 19th November, will be held on the 20th, 21st and 22nd with the final game on the 25th.

Second Concert Stars Rise Stevens On November 12, Tickets Now On Sale

Miss Rise Stevens, considered by many devotees of music as the "first lady of the opera and song," will be the second guest of the Villanova Musical Concert Series on Tuesday, November 12, at 8:30 p.m. in the Villanova Field House. Her visit is being sponsored by the Knights of Columbus of Villanova University.

Miss Stevens is one of the most versatile vocal artists in the world. This is evidenced by her successes in the Metropolitan Opera, opera houses in foreign countries, television, concerts, movies and records.

Tickets for the concert are now on sale in the Pie Shoppe for $4, $3, and $2 for the orchestra and a special $1 student price for the balcony.

She began her career in New York at the age of 10 on a children's radio program. In her teens she sang with the Opera Comique in New York. Refusing a Met contract on the grounds of insufficient experience, Miss Stevens went abroad for study and training. She made her debut at the Prague Opera House in the role of Mignon.

Since then she has appeared with most of the world's leading opera companies such as the Metropolitan Opera Company, the San Francisco Opera Company, Milan's La Scala, The Paris Grand Opera, The Vienna State Opera, and The Athens Music Festival.

Miss Stevens was the only prima donna invited to sing at the ground breaking ceremony for New York's Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts, which will house the new Met Opera House.

Movies in which she has starred are: The Chocolate Soldier, with Nelson Eddy; the Academy Award winner Going My Way,

Foreign Advisor Daniel Rivas Exposes Red Subversion

Mr. Daniel Rivas, foreign student advisor at Villanova, will speak at a Conservative Club lecture tomorrow night, November 7, at 7:30 p.m. in 110 Bartley Hall.

Prior to his coming to Villanova in 1960, Mr. Rivas was an English teacher, newspaper columnist, and radio commentator in Cuba. When the Castro regime came into power, he was marked as a enemy of the state because of his work A Critical Study of Communism.

Mr. Rivas' topic tomorrow night will be "Communist Subversion in Latin America." He will attempt to show the serious plight of Latin American countries with regard to the tremendous inroads made there by the Communists.

On the same program, Mr. Rivas father, Daniel Rivas Sr., will answer questions following his son's lecture. The elder Mr. Rivas will certainly give an accurate picture of present day Cuba because he lived there until August 10 of this year.

Before coming to the United States (via Madrid), Mr. Rivas was the president of the Chamber of Commerce of Camaguey, Cuba. He was in Cuba during the crisis of last October and will be a source of first-hand information on this topic.

Conservation Club President Jack Ames invites all those interested in becoming aware of the problems presently confronting our nation to join this Club. Applications may be obtained at 252 Sheehan Hall.

Lawrence's 'Inherit The Wind' Opens Masquer's New Season

The Belle Masque Society will begin the undergraduate season with the play Inherit The Wind. The performances will take place in Vasey Hall Auditorium from Wednesday, November 20, to Saturday, November 23, at 8:30 p.m. There will be a matinee on Saturday afternoon in addition to the evening performances.

Student tickets will go sale November 18 in the Pie Shoppe. The price is $1 for students, and $1.25 for adults.

The Lawrence and Lee play concerns the famous Scopes Monkey Trial of the mid 1920's. John Scopes, a Tennessee high school teacher, was indicted for professing the theory of evolution to his students.

In the trial, Scopes was defended by Clarence Darrow. The prosecuting attorney was the former three-time presidential candidate William Jennings Bryan.

The names Henry Drummond and Matthew Harrison Brady are substituted for Darrow and Bryan in the play.

Directing the play will be Thomas Nevins, an instructor in the Graduate Theatre.

Quo Vadis?

by Phillip Ludlow

It is hoped that at some time or other in his stay at Villanova, the individual student turns introspective and inquires of himself "quo vadis?"

Quite often this is a lonely process thought out in the solitude of a quiet church or a shady glen. On the other hand one can know oneself through others by social communication of ideas and ideals.

Into this realm falls the Villanova Philosophy Club which concerns itself with communication. The interchange is trifurcated, vocal, aural, and visual.

Word of mouth exchange of thought is accomplished by the society's seminars, the first of which will be held on November 25. Fredrick Neitzche and his affirmation of life will be the topic.

Learning Quest

Later in the year the quest for learning will lead the young philosophers into the Kierkegaardian notion of faith and into the exotic fastness of Chinese philosophy.

Spotlighting the second aspect, it is felt that one can know by heeding others and to this end a series of lectures have been proposed, leading off with "Art and Philosophy" by Dr. Frederick Kovach.

Thencely "Non-western Philosophy" will be the metier of John Tisch, followed by "Poetic Knowledge and Philosophic Knowledge" by Daniel Corish.

Leadoff Lecture

Leadoff lecture in this incisive series, "Existentialism and Existentialisms" by Peter Kreeft was an overwhelming success. The hall for the talk was capacity house, and the audience participation afterward was active in the extreme.

Thirdly, communication is visual. At present the club is fulminating plans for an essay competition in the field of philosophy which will be patterned on the competitions of the classical continental colleges.

Further details on this and other plans in the publicatory field will be released in the near future.

Broad Scopo

On a broader scope, the club is accepting memberships. Application can be made through Mr. Kreeft in the philosophy office. A particular invitation is offered to the distaff side of the campus populace to join the organization.

PSEA To Be Addressed On Educational Ideas; Area Schools Invited

Father Joseph J. Burns, O.S.A., Ed.D, will present an address entitled "Bubbles and Baubles in Educational Thought" to the Villanova Chapter of the Student P.S.E.A. on November 13 at 7:30 p.m., in 209 Bartley. Faculty members and education majors from 20 schools in the Southeast Region of the Student P.S.E.A. as well as all other interested persons have been invited to attend.

Fr. Burns holds a doctorate education and teaches education courses at both the undergraduate and graduate levels in the University.

After the lecture there will be a question and answer period. A social hour will conclude the evening.

Kennedy Gives Award To Freshman Essayist Jeffrey J. Radowich

Jeffrey J. Radowich, of the Freshman Class has received a $300 award from President Kennedy for his winning essay on the subject of "Ability Counts." Jeffrey was one of five national winners from 104,000 high school entries. He comes from Archbishop Corbett High School, Washington, D.C.

After winning on the high school level, his essay was judged best in the District of Columbia, then it was submitted on the national level.

In conjunction with the 1,000 word essay, contestants were required to visit rehabilitation agencies and centers, and to observe the handicapped in gainful employment.

Golden Calls For Fulfillment Of His Ideal American Dream

Harry Golden, speaking here last Monday night called for the fulfillment of the American dream which he stated was the opportunity for a person to go into an open society and be accepted as an individual on his merits as a human being.

The noted humorist, nationally syndicated columnist, and editor of the Carolina Israelite addressed the second Villanova Forum lecture series.

Golden said that by enacting civil rights legislation we don't give Negroes anything they are entitled to as American citizens. He noted that Negroes today occupy the same position as the Italian and Irish immigrants a century ago.

He said that immigrants have always provided America with a gulfstream of vitality. The immigrant, he said, must make good or else he will always be alien.

Golden said that Negroes today supply us with a vitality we need. The demonstrations and sit-ins, he said, are the only vigorous things going on in America today.

While the Negroes are demonstrating for human rights, he said the rest of the nation are in the country clubs and at slot machines doing little. Golden cited the fact that the infant mortality rate among the Negroes far outdistances that of the whites and that out of 12 million Negroes in the country six million are illiterate.

In typical fashion, Golden lampooned the bug-a-boos that are used against them. He said that once somebody complained of working next to a Negro because of the way he smelled. Why, he asked, do I keep seeing the television ad showing a white blonde spraying herself.

Dr. Lucille Brown To Initiate Series Of Nursing Lectures

On November 11 the Villanova College of Nursing will sponsor the first of a series of lectures devoted in some way to the nursing profession.

Dr. Esther Lucille Brown will be the speaker and will discuss the "Newer Dimensions in Nursing." Dr. Brown will speak at 3 p.m. in Vasey Hall Auditorium.

Dr. Brown received her Bachelor of Arts degree with special honors from the University of New Hampshire and her Ph.D. degree in cultural anthropology and sociology from Yale University.

In addition, Dr. Brown has been awarded an honorary life membership by the National League for Nursing and has been made an honorary LL.D by Skidmore College. She is currently with the Russell Sage Foundation on the West Coast.

Her publications include Social Work as Profession, four editions; Nursing as a Profession, two editions; Physicians and Medical Care and Nursing for the Future. This latter work was first published in 1948 and has been reprinted six times and translated into Portuguese and Swedish.

Heed the still, small voice of conscience

Call home now! It's easy, it's inexpensive, and the folks'll love you for it!

Does a man really take unfair advantage of women when he uses Mennen Skin Bracer?

All depends on why he uses it.

Most men simply think Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the best after-shave lotion around. Because it cools rather than burns. Because it helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Because it helps prevent blemishes.

So who can blame them if Bracer's crisp, long-lasting aroma just happens to affect women so remarkably?

Of course, some men may use Mennen Skin Bracer because of this effect.

How intelligent!

Senior Outing Today Sponsored By Alumni Coach Kraft To Speak

This afternoon from 4 until 7 p.m. a senior outing will be held at the Alumni House on Lancaster Pike.

The open house type affairs will consist of a buffet supper and feature Coach Jack Kraft, head coach of the basketball team. Coach Kraft will speak on the upcoming season at 5:15 p.m.

The invitation extended by William E. Schubert, Jr. '42, president of the alumni association, was mailed to the seniors by the Format Committee of the class.

President Of Singers Announces Activities For First Semester

James Quinn, president of the Villanova Singers, has announced tentative plans of the group for this semester. Tomorrow afternoon the club will perform for the Women's Auxilliary of the Marriott club.

As a preliminary to the spring concert tour, this semester's plans include a concert at the Reading Hospital in the latter part of November and a concert before Christmas at Cabrini College. This will probably be a joint concert with the Cabrini College Glee Club. The semester schedule will close with the annual Christmas Concert which will be a joint concert with a local girls' college.

'The Gay And Burning Bridge' Revised For Final Production

The Grad Theatre's production, The Gay and Burning Bridge, has been altered since its October October 26 performance.

The Director of the play Mr. Richard Harshberger and the playwright, Mr. David Rabe decided to change the structure of the work by breaking down the scenes into acts. This change resulted from the critiques after each performance.

According to Mr. Harshberger, "Under the previous structure the production was focusing conflict through the acting which didn't blatantly exist in the writing and this hampered the presentation of the status quo that had existed in Danny Mueller's life prior to the opening of the Play."

The final performance will be held in the Playbox, this weekend, November 8 and 9 at 8:30 p.m.

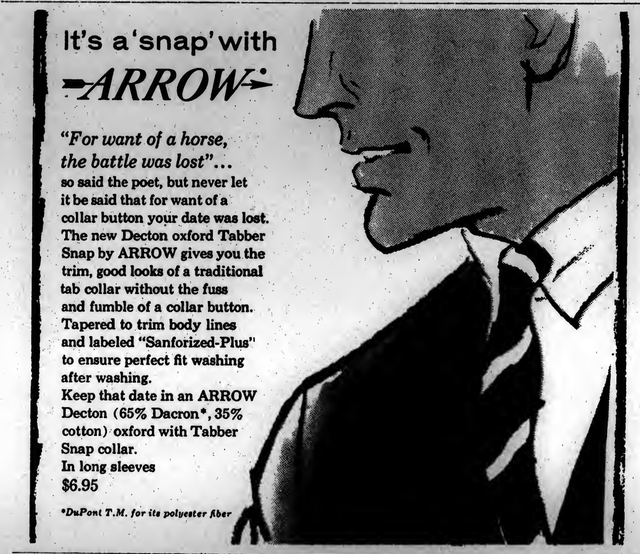
Retired Adm. Nevins Spoke To IRS Recently On Global Happenings

The International Relations Society was addressed recently by the Society's moderator Joseph H. Nevins. The topic concerned world affairs and the former Admiral added to the discussion experiences from his 30 years in the United States Navy.

On November 7 and 8, the Villanova chapter of the IRS will attend the Regional Conference of the International Relations Society to be held at Baltimore, Maryland. The topic of the Conference will be the continual strife in American race relations. Its effects on world opinion, and steps that college students can take to alleviate this problem.

Meetings were held on October 29 and November 5 to enable the Villanova delegation to familarize itself with the conference topic.

According to Lois Greyson, Secretary of the IRS, the purpose of the organization is to supplement the studies of political science and international relations on campus.



Psych Club Symposium Between Departments To Be Held In Future

The Psychology Club of Villanova University is planning a symposium between the members of the Psychology Department and other various departments to discuss the relative state of psychology today.

The purpose of this symposium will be to stimulate interest in psychology as a profession.

In December, Dr. Joseph Bradley who founded the school of psychopharmacology will speak at a meeting of the Club.

Meetings are held every Thursdays at 10:30 a.m.

Active Senior VP

Hailing from Columbia, Pennsylvania, Vice President of the Senior Class, Jack Hohenadel has been active through his many activities in leading his class.

As a Co-Chairman with Ed Coffey of the Villanova Forum Jack has been instrumental in securing for Villanova leading talents in the fields of politics, literature, music, and the arts.

His past activities speak for his devotion and loyalty to class and the school. As a Junior he was president of the Orphans' Outing and co-chairman of Mothers' Day. In his sophomore year he was program director of the Spring Project of the Orphans on campus as well as Homecoming Float chairman and a member of the Orientation Committee.

Jack's extracurricular time is devoted to basketball and swimming. Although he is student director of the language lab he also finds time for membership in Delta Pi Mu, the Arts fraternity.

Commenting on the Villanova Forum, an innovation on our campus, Jack said, "The responsive attendance shows the continued enthusiasm for the high intellectual caliber of our great speakers.

"I would like to see the Villanova Forum continue this worthwhile endeavor serving the Main Line and the Philadelphia area as an intellectual magnet for interested minds."

Complimented on his leadership as a VP of the Senior Class Jack modestly added that "any credit belongs not to me but to my class since this cooperation in everything I did paved the way for later committee successes such as the Forum and the upcoming Senior weekend."

Student Literarians Debate On Modern Kafka And Golding

Modern German author Franz Kafka will be the focal point of the Literary Society discussion at 10:30 a.m. tomorrow in 204 Vasey. John Brown and Frank Quattrone will moderate.

Kafka, practically unknown in his own day, partly because of his own sense of inferiority and solitude, is most famous for his harrowing, symbolic portrait of the clerk-turned-insect in "The Metamorphosis."

Among his other works are The Trial, The Castle, and Amerika, three novels which the author employs as vehicles to express his philosophy on the helplessness, futility, and frustration of modern man.

Orson Welles wrote the screenplay of The Trial for his recent avant-grade production of Kakfa's most popular novel.

The Society's program on British author William Golding — Symposium: Lord of the Flies — will be held on Monday, November 11, at 7:30 p.m. in 110 Bartley.

Vice-President Frank Sauers will moderate the discussion.

Class Attendance

A motion in the Student Council seeking support for the idea of non-compulsory class attendance, created a sizeable disturbance in that August assembly. Such an incident would seem to indicate that a number of students have very tender feelings on the subject.

The present system followed in regard to attendance compels a student to attend a certain number of classes or suffer a lowering of his quality point average. Attendance at class has the same value to a student's marks as a religion course, that is, it is worth two credits.

A student with seventeen credits and twenty absences in a semester may just as well have failed a two credit course.

Advocates of non-compulsory attendance feel that the student should be free to determine when not to attend class. They do not think his marks should suffer for such a decision.

A number of responsible students find it a burden to attend every class because of their obligations to legitimate activities. It is this same group who think, and rightly so, that a college student should be a responsible enough individual to know when his presence in class is imperative for his own well-being.

If the student body as a whole is composed of capable, intelligent and conscientious students, as indeed it should be there is no need for compulsory attendance.

If, however, the administration does not think it is in the best interest of all concerned to abolish the present attendance system, perhaps it could be modified.

It is not completely unfeasible to adopt a system of attendance whereby honor students and/or juniors and seniors would be exempt from compulsory attendance.

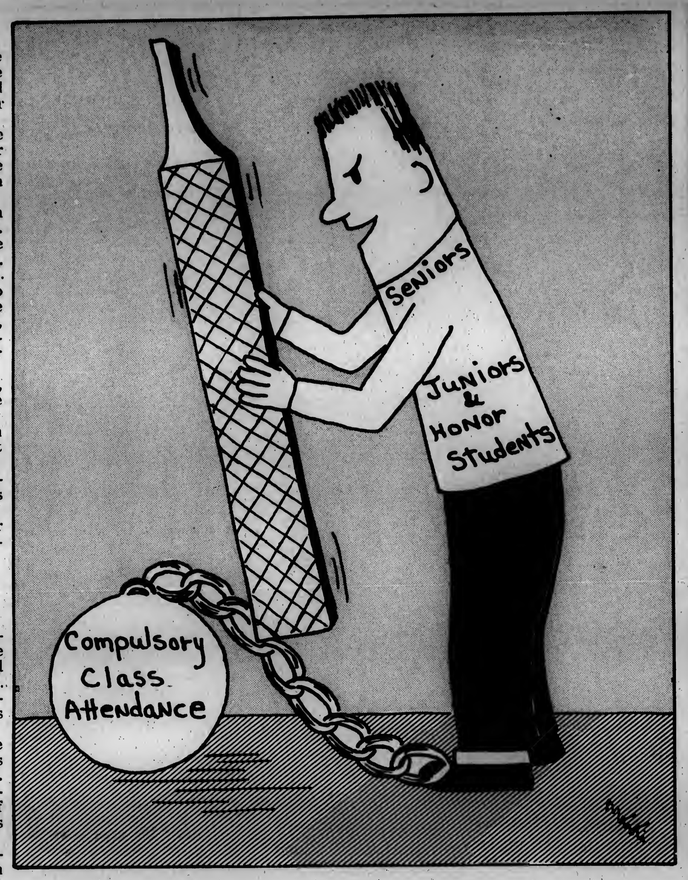
Such a program would provide an added incentive for academic excellence, as well as give upperclassmen an opportunity to exercise their better judgement.

A Worthy Amendment

An important amendment which would permit the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania to grant loans to needy college students appeared on yesterday's ballot. It certainly merited the ardent support such long overdue legislation deserves.

At present less than one third of the high school graduates of college calibre attend a college or university in this state.

One half of the high school alumni and alumnae are academically able, yet sixteen per hundred capable students cannot go simply because of financial dearth in the family.



This proposed amendment would allow students to borrow up to $1000 a year on their signature for a maximum of $5000. This figure covers a possible period of three years as an undergraduate and two years as a graduate student.

Due to the burgeoning annual enrollment in and application to Pennsylvania colleges and universities, such legislation is now absolutely essential to supplement existing scholarship and loan programs.

Without this help nearly one in four qualified students will continue to be turned away because of limited loan funds.

In the past, proposed amendments have been defeated simply because of voters' lack of interest rather than out of opposition to the proposal. Lethargy and indifference have no place; a positive stand must be taken.

Let us hope that the voters of Pennsylvania have not relapsed into what could amount to a fatal blow to education in the state, and that they have not flagrantly violated their personal responsibility to support this necessary legislation.

Letter To The Editor

To The Editor:

Due to the present social upheaval throughout this country, our national newspapers have given widespread attention to the issue of civil rights; and, the Negro's fight for equal status.

It is not unusual, then, that college newspapers would give equal attention to these issues.

In the October sixteenth edition of The Villanovan, an article entitled: "On Negro Voting," appeared.

I wish to challenge some of the remarks made in that article since, I feel, the author missed the point completely.

Let us review some of the statements that were made.

"One of the most fundamental demands made by Negroes, particularly those in the South, has been for the right to vote. Negroes have demonstrated and, in all probability, will continue to demonstrate against voting restrictions."

This was the author's premise. The Negroes are fighting, rather, demanding "something." Are they demanding for the right to vote, only?

Next, the author cited a voting incident that took place in Cambridge, Maryland this fall.

"Yet in Cambridge, Maryland, two weeks ago, Negroes had an opportunity to vote for integration but, many, remarkably, stayed away from the polls."

The referendum that was presented was one that directly affected the Negro; and, as it turned out—it was defeated. The author stated that the "great majority of the white voters were against the measure." The author inferred that due to the absence of the Negro voter, the referendum was defeated. This may or may not be true.

The fact that the referendum was defeated is insignificant; since, as I see it, the Negroes saw no benefit to them in such a measure. They, merely, gave up their right to vote which is no different than what the white man would do, if he saw in a similar measure (that affected him) no real benefit. This amendment was a compromise to the Negro; and, fortunately, Negroes will no longer settle for compromises.

That the Negroes in Cambridge have the opportunity to vote does not mean that they have been given something special. The Negro, in America, is a citizen and as a citizen is entitled to the same rights and privileges as the white man in America. One of the rights is voting!

Not unlike the white man in his desire for fulfillment, the Negro seeks certain things. In Cambridge, the Negro requested the use of its public accommodations. He did not want to be put off; he wanted action. The referendum offered to the Cambridge Negro was another delay in action.

Why should the Negro's request for service in a white establishment be put to the vote of the public? Does the white man's request for service in a Negro establishment get put to the vote of the public?

Instead of denouncing Mrs. Gloria Richardson, leader of the Cambridge Non-Violent Action Committee, for her refusal to compromise, it appears that she deserves praise for seeing through the smoke screen of the "prolong segregation at all cost" proponents.

Until injustices, discriminatory practices and "let sleeping dogs lie" attitudes regarding the Negro's fight for civil rights are wiped out, the Negro will continue to demand "his rights." Compromises are not in keeping with his demands.

HOW SMALL CAN YOU GET?

Today let us address ourselves to a question that has long rocked and roiled the academic world: Is a student better off at a small college than at a large college?

To answer this question it is necessary first to define terms. What, exactly, do we mean by a small college? Well sir, some say that in order to be called truly small, a college should have an enrollment of not more than four students.

I surely have no quarrel with this statement; a four-student college must unequivocally be called small. Indeed, I would even call it intime if I knew what intime meant. But I submit there is such a thing as being too small. Take, for instance, a recent unfortunate event at Crimscott A and M.

Crimscott A and M, situated in a pleasant valley nestled between Philadelphia and Salt Lake City, was founded by

A. and M. Crimscott, two brothers who left Ireland in 1625 to escape the potato famine of 1841. As a result of their foresight, the Crimscott brothers never went without potatoes for one single day of their lives—and mighty grateful they were! One night, full of gratitude after a wholesome meal of French fries, cottage fries, hash browns, and au gratin, they decided to show their appreciation to this bountiful land of potatoes by endowing a college. But their generosity contained one stipulation: the enrollment of the college must never exceed four students. They felt that only by keeping the school this small could each student be assured of the personalized attention, the camaraderie, the esprit, that is all too often lacking in larger institutions of higher learning.

Well sir, things went along swimmingly until one Saturday a few years ago. On this day Crimscott had a football game scheduled against Minnesota, its traditional rival. Football, as you can well imagine, was something of a problem at Crimscott, what with only four undergraduates in the entire college. It was easy enough to muster a backfield, but to find a good line—or even a bad line—baffled some of the most resourceful coaching minds in the nation.

Well sir, on the morning of the big game against Minnesota, its traditional rival, a capricious fate dealt Crimscott a cruel blow—in fact, four cruel blows. Sigafoos, the quarterback, woke up that morning with an impacted incisor. Wrichards, the slotback, flunked his taxidermy exam and was declared ineligible. Beerbohm-Tree, the wingback-tailback, got his necktie caught in his espresso machine. Yuld, the fullback, was stolen by gypsies.

Consequently, none of the Crimscott team showed up at the football game, and Minnesota, its traditional rival, was able to score almost at will. Crimscott was so cross after this humiliating defeat that they immediately broke off football relations with Minnesota, its tradtional rival. This later became known as the Sacco-Vanzetti Case.

So you can see how only four students might be too meagre an enrollment. The number that I personally favor is twenty. Why? you ask. Because, I reply, when you have twenty students and one of them opens a pack of Marlboro Cigarettes, there are enough to go around for everybody, and no one has to be deprived of Marlboro's flavor, of Marlboro's filter, of Marlboro's staunch and steadfast companionship, and as a result you have a student body that is brimming with sweet content and amity and harmony and concord and togetherness and soft pack and Flip-Top box.

That's why.

Book Reviews

The Least Dangerous Branch by Alexander Bickel, Bobbs-Merrill.

Alexander M. Bickel, in his book the Least Dangerous Branch, has written an incisive study on the realm of the Supreme Court and politics. The study is in an altogether different approach in the Mr. Bickel attempts to substantiate, as well as present, the concept that the Supreme Court is consistent with the theory and practice of political democracy.

Although the book is excellently written, those who lack a somewhat juridical mind may find themselves wadding through some of the complicated court cases. On the other hand, students of government and law will find the book informative and enlightening.

Mr. Bickel traces the Supreme Court's decisions from Marbury vs. Madison to the most recent cases on school segregation. Film censorship, anti-birth control legislation, Congressional investigations, loyality dismissals, and legislative apportionment are some of the topics treated in depth by Mr. Bickel.

As Mr. Bickel traces the development of the Supreme Court to the position it has in the United States government today. he indicates the trends that existed in the Court and how the men and the times aided in forming some of the Court's greatest decisions.

For the student who wishes to know why the Supreme Court is presently the most powerful court in the world, this book is a necessity. Laws and regulations which rule our lives today (especially the more recent censorship and segregation cases) are presented in a startlingly new light.

The Supreme Court's relationship with the nations political institutions is vividly revealed in a study of the great Constitutional cases. Elements which are usually bypassed by other serious writers on the highest court of the land are also put under the microscope.

Franz Kafka, Parable and Paradox. by Heinz Politzer Cornell University Press.

This book is, without a single doubt, a long waited definitive edition in the study of Franz Kafka. No serious scholar in the field of contemporary literature can afford to over look it.

Three provocative questions are posed by Professor Politzer, whose metorphosis are we concerned with in the story The Metamorphosis, Who is on trail in The Trail, and is the hero of The Castle seeking for the castle or is he fighting against it?

In his diary Kafka lamented the fact that he had no heirs. But he does. His heroes live on, calling those after him and did Werther and Manfred. One of the most important people to fall under his spell was the late Albert Camus.

What is the relation of the following ideas in Camus, conscience, orime, guilt, the clergy, to Kafka? To answer them here would be out of place. They are vital and can be found in this work. Perhaps this unique incisive studies can be declared one of the major assets of the work.

Politzer's explication of the metamorphosis of Gregor Samsa has recently been complemented by a local literary critic's assertion that the concept of the story from the very first line is the greatest in modern literature, but a reading of Politzer is necessary.

The study, while an exhaustive one, is not one that would leave the ordinary reader short. It serves equally as well the Kafka buff, and there are many, and the uninitiate who seeks to know, and there are more.

Pleasant Surpsises

by Don Walling

Pleasant surprises have been coming rather consistently from a small room located in the Classroom Annex. That room is the Band room where Art Chappell and his staff of officers have labored to make this the best year for the Band.

Although the Band's new gray pants were a welcome addition, the most pleasing and startling innovation was the group's marching. Their usually snappy best has been retained but precision and polish has been added to their routines.

No sooner had the bandsmen returned from their successful Boston trip when they revealed their biggest surprise. To the astonishment of almost everyone, the Band played host to four select high school bands for Parents' Day . . . and put on a show which will not soon be forgotten.

York Catholic High School from York, Pa., Bishop Egan High School from Levittown, Pa., Bishop McDevitt from Harrisburg, and Archbishop Carroll from Washington, D.C., dazzled the almost capacity crowd on this the "birth" of the Annual Villanova Band Day. The over 400 musicians spelled out a huge and colorful "Villanova" in honor of the parents present.

The Band should not go unthanked for its efforts for the University. Under the direction of Joe Colantonio and with the able assistance of Father Doherty, the Band has been a source of pride to the University and truly merits its title: "Pride of the Main Line".

Second Guessing

by Terry Cooney

Last year after Villanova had participated in two post season bowls — Sun and Liberty — and showed itself apparently quite capable of handling nationally known football powers, cries of "Bring on the big ones" were heard echoing from Fedigan Hall to the C & F Cafeteria.

Though we're very close to playing a really impressive game as coach Bell put it last week, there are certain factors that seem to form an insurmountable wall in the path of that small step.

The foundation of that wall rests in our weakness at quarterback. In this past Saturday's game against Holy Cross, senior Bill Sherlock finally looked at home in his position.

Gone were the slippery fingers, missed handoffs, and mental block to any more than 3 or 4 offensive plays, which seemed to characterize his appearance in the game early in the season.

Sherlock mixed his plays well and pulled a few surprises to keep the Holly Cross team off guard. But missing from his performance was a passing and running game on his part.

Holy Cross had apparently done a good job of scouting our pass secondary and designed their pass patterns accordingly. End Dick Kochansky was like Mandrake the Magician seemingly disappearing and then popping up with nobody anywhere near him. To make matters worse the one time we do come close, the referee gets in the way and another pass gets completed.

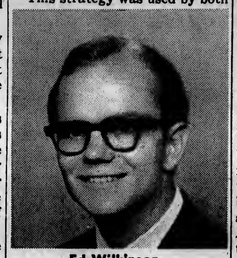
The sunshine of Villanova's football for the past three years and again Saturday was the line play of the defensive team. No matter which way our offense is moving either up or down on the performance scale, the defensive line could be counted on to put in an above average performance. This past Saturday was no exception. Holy Cross was unable to organize any substantial running game, moving only 99 yards in about 40 plays on the ground.

It seems that Villanova can look forward to the last two games with an anticipation of seeing a smoother, more coordinated edition of the '63 Wildcats add two more victories for an above average season.

Holy Cross Drowns Villanova, 3-0 In Late Second Half Goal Skirmish

by Jerry Bruderle

It rained last Friday for the first time in over 30 days and Villanova lost to Holy Cross in Rugby, 3-0. These two seemingly isolated tidbits of information, when put together actually tell quite an interesting tale.



It's the tale of one of the truly hairy afternoons of Rubgy at Villanova, and one which has left its mark on those who were there to witness it.

Yes, people all over campus are coughing and sneezing this week after standing along the boggy sidelines of the Rugby field under a merciless downpour which left large portions of the playing field under inches of water last Friday afternoon.

What they saw was a rare game, more like soccer than Rugby in which any attempt to pick up the ball was sheer folly, because of the ball's slippery, greased-pig condition.

So, instead of trying to pick the ball up, and risk knocking it forward, which in Rugby is a penalty, known appropriately enough as "knock-on", the play of the day was to kick the ball forward and for the ruggers to run in a charging hoard after it.

This strategy was used by both sides almost from the start and although there were often some penetrating breakthroughs by both teams in the first half, neither side suceeded in scoring.

It was late in the second half after the contest took on aspects of a water-polo match and after several near-drownings on both sides, when Holy Cross made its big push down to the Villanova goal line and finally scored by pouncing on a loose ball in the end zone like a bunch of happy frogs on a lily pad.

Although the home team threatened in the remaining minutes, they failed to break through for the score, and the game ended for Villanova, 3-0.

Villanova's rugby team still has a few openings on its roster for interested students. The team, which has one of the best backfields in the East, is literally short on tall men in the line. Although anyone interested in the team is invited to try-out, men around 6'3" of 6'4" would be especially welcome.

The team practices Tuesday through Thursday on the field across from the stadium. Starting time for the practices are 3:30.

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANIES SALUTE: REGIS FILTZ

As an engineering associate, Regis Filtz (B.S.M.E., 1958) is involved in virtually all facets of telephone communications for Bell of Pennsylvania. From the design of underground conduit to bridge cables, Regis is an expert.

Much of his reputation came about on his first assignment, where his recommendations for the most economical underground cable resulted in savings estimated at $200,000 annually.

Other assignments have included engineering requirements on a variety of communications equipment and services. He has even taught a course in switching logic.

For Regis, the diversity of assignments has broadened his engineering knowledge and given him the opportunity to advance in position and compensation. His authority in catenary suspensions requires field engineers to consult with him in the design of such spans.

Regis Filtz, like many young engineers, is impatient to make things happen for his company and himself. There are few places where such restlessness is more welcomed or rewarded than in the fast-growing telephone business.

Wildcat Grid Future?

by Roy Baron

In observing the Villanova football team the last seven Saturdays it has easily been noticed that the Wildcats' opponents have been obsessed with a fighting spirit not often viewed before.

West Chester, Buffalo, Xavier, and Holy Cross had all been humiliated by one or both of the recent Villanova bowl squads. Revenge was their motive.

George Washington and Toledo had heard the news of how the Wildcats had for two years been the scourge of the East. They were winless and wished to break the habit.

The Villanova game for Boston College has tradition behind it. The Eagles had to win if they wanted to maintain their position as a growing power.

Thus, each team which the Wildcats have faced this season had a reason for placing the 'Cats at the top of their list of enemies. Each team was "up" on the Villanova game more than any other.

Some may ask why haven't the Wildcats been as equally high in spirit? Why haven't they been as eager to claw their opponents as the opposition has been to devour them?

The answer may lie in the schedule which Villanova plays. The only teams which have been long rivals are Boston College and Detroit.

The ideal situation would be to form a league which would provide five or six foes to be encountered each season. But who would join Villanova in this conference?

Many years ago Penn State, Pittsburgh, Syracuse, Army, and Navy were considering joining the Wildcats in an eastern conference. This was not feasible since most of these schools drew support from either state or federal funds. Villanova, with its limited resources could not be expected to compete with their recruiting policies.

A second proposed league was nearing reality when N.Y.U., Georgetown, and Fordham dropped football from their athletic programs.

This leaves just one more possibility, a Catholic conference. This would hopefully include such teams as Boston College, Holy Cross, Detroit, Dayton, and Xavier, in addition to Villanova.

Director of Athletics, Arthur Mahan, informed the Villanovan that Villanova had taken the initiative in negotiations for such a conference on several occasions. But a successful agreement has never been reached.

The reasons for this continued failure bring in just about every school. Holy Cross is reluctant to drop such local money-makers as Dartmouth, Connecticut, and Yale.

Boston College is unwilling to drop the five or six big name opponents the receipts from which games are more attractive than those they would derive from playing in Catholic league.

Thus Villanova has been forced to abandon the idea of a league for the present at least. To compensate for this the Athletic Director has been trying to build up rivalries with Xavier, VMI, Toledo, Delaware, George Washington and West Chester.

By scheduling teams for the next few years it is Mr. Mahan's hope that these games will become traditional at Villanova in much the same manner as Detroit and Boston College. Such a policy, it is felt, could eventually lead to the foundation of a league.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

Villanova's Sailing Club resumed action this past weekend with eliminations for the Freshman Middle Atlantic Championships at Navy. Frosh Jay Hollenback and Jim McLaughlin skippered the Villanova crews to a second place tie with Penn, in qualifying for the finals in early November, also, at Navy.

Last week's race with Kings Point was called off due to lack of transportation, meaning the Wildcats had been out of action since their September 23 loss to Penn. However, newly-elected captain Joe Linsalata felt that the Frosh would well-represent themselves, and the crews more than lived up to his expectations.

McLaughlin, in the "B" division and with Jay Glenn in his boat, had 2 seconds, a third and a fourth.

Navy, the favorite, won the competition, with Swarthmore and Georgetown finishing fourth and fifth.

In Bowling, Villanova defeated LaSalle 2 games to 1, to tie the Explorers for second place in the Bowling League. Chuck Williams rolled the high game for the Wildcats, with a 216, while LaSalle's Ted DeLuca was the overall high man with 228. John Brennen turned in the high series for the Wildcats with a three game total of 210, 204, 171 — 585. Leo Couchara was high for the Explorers with 563.

Last Thursday the Intramural Department held its annual golf championship. The winners of the 18 holes contest were Tony Greenfield and Frank Majczon.

Both are freshmen and finished the tournament with identical scores of 75. Sophomore Charles Waldron garnered third place with a score of 79, four strokes behind the pace set by Greenfield and Majczon.

'Cats - Titans Seek Burke Trophy

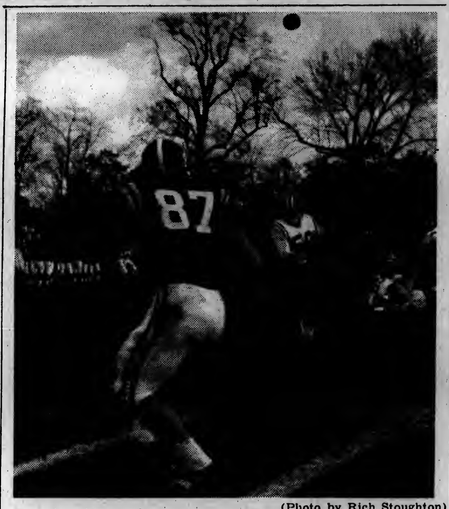
Wildcats Tackle A Tough Assignment Facing Detroit's Stress Defense

by Tom Willson

Rain, mud, and a slippery turf were the fan's delight as the Villanova squad held Detroit's All-American quarterback Jerry Gross, to a mere three passes last fall.

A crushing display of defensive heroics sent the Wildcats into the victory column, and also snapped a five-year Titan winning streak in last year's Villanova-Detroit clash.

Saturday's classic gridiron duel will mark the 31st meeting in this traditional rivalry as the Wildcats of Villanova hold a 16-12 edge over the Titans from Detroit, Michigan.



Villanova's forward wall will face another tough line from the likes of Detroit's Dennis Shaw, a rock-'em sock-'em center and "Big Bob" Koral, a bruising guard, who form the nucleus of a punishing and powerful defense.

Sophomore reserves constitute an integral part of Detroit's "stress defense" program which has proven effective against such offensive powerhouses as Boston College in which the Titans were threatening throughout the game before finally succumbing to the passing prowess of Jack Concannon.

Wildcat defenders will tackle another tough assignment with Detroit's fleet-footed backfield. The 'Cats could regain the prestige lost in the Xavier game by stopping cold the Titan running attack which will be spearheaded by fullback Fred Brier as well as outstanding halfback performers.

Villanova fans can expect a successful Wildcat tilt if the Cats capitalize on long drives and crack the Titan defense when deep in enemy territory.

A victory over Detroit would provide the momentum necessary for the regular season finale when the 'Cats tangle with the Marines from Quantico, Virginia.

Dunn's Electrifying 99 Yard Return Sparks Wildcat's 22-14 Victory

by Joe McCarthy

Inspiration must have been the keynote last Saturday in the Villanova clubhouse at halftime.

For the Wildcats returned from the break, down by a 14-8 count to the Holy Cross Crusaders, to score the decisive and insurance tallies, and to stymie the Cross offensive machine with three key interceptions in notching their fourth victory in seven outings by a 22-14 count.

In a day where the 'Cats took advantage of the advantages, Bob Dunn shined. It was his electrifying 99 yard kick-off return that put the 'Cats into a lead which they never relinquished. On two kickoff returns, Dunn, a senior halfback, gained a total of 144 yards.

Wind Ruins Kickers

At the start of the third quarter Holy Cross elected to kickoff instead of receive. The Cross hoped to have the Wildcats punt into a stiff 30-40 mile-per-hour wind.

The strategy backfired as Dunn took the kick on his own one and galloped the length of the field with just :15 gone on the clock. Junior fullback Mike Manger then kicked the conversion to give the Wildcats a 15-14 lead.

The first Villanova score came as the result of a poor 21 yard punt into the wind from the Crusader seven by kicker Fran Coughlin.

Thomas Scores

In the 28 yard, six play drive in the late second quarter, Captain Jim Thomas, starting after reinjuring his ribs a week ago, accounted for 21 of the yards including the final two. Junior halfback Dick Sernyak, who gained 38 yards in 4 tries, then skirted right end for the two point conversion. The score narrowed the Holy Cross margin to 14-8.

The final touchdown for the Main Liners was the culmination of a 35 yard, 8 play drive immediately after Sernyak had recovered a Crusader fumble on the return kickoff after Dunn's score.

Sole Completion

Senior quarterback Bill Sherlock, playing his first full game as signal-caller, completed the drive with his only completion of the day in four attempts, a nine yard toss to end Jack Clifford in the end zone.

Game accolades belong individually to Sherlock, Dunn, Boyle (73 yards in 16 tries), Thomas, and Atkinson. But the Villanova secondary deserves the most praise as four interceptions by Dunn, Boyle, Fay, and Thomas squelched the Cross attack and sped the game for the 'Cats even though statistically the Crusaders took game honors.

Wildkittens Defeat Rival Following 33-0 Loss To Navy

by Roy Baron

Following a 33-0 disaster at the hands of Navy, the Villanova Wildkittens bounced back last Friday afternoon to defeat the West Chester frosh in the rain 14-0, to give the Mainliners a 1-2 record.

In the first half over a hundred yards in penalities and three fumbles kept Villanova from reaching paydirt. But in the third period Gerry Bellotti, the Kittens outstanding quarterback from Union City, N.J., passing from the Ram 35, hit John Schunke at the 15, and Schunke ran in for the touchdown. Jim Case's extra point try was blocked.

The second score came early in the fourth period on a trick play which completely fooled the Rams. Starting at the West Chester 35, Bellotti rolled out and handed off to halfback John Kolmer coming back. Kolmer handed to Cliff Tallman on the reverse, and then Kolmer raced down field.

Tallman pitched the ball back to Bellotti who hit Kolmer, who was all alone at the five, with a pass. Kolmer walked in for the six points. The two extra points were added by Kolmer on a run.

This Saturday, at 2 p.m. the frosh will play host to Bullis Prep.

Fourth Duel Triumph Gained As Five Harriers Break Tape

by Bob Skinner

Villanova's Cross Country team had five men tie for first place last Saturday. The fleet-footed Harriers swept to their fourth consecutive victory without a defeat by the margin of 15-47 over American University, in Washington, D.C.

Crossing the final white stripe of the 3.2 mile course in a Wildcat pack with the identical winning times of 17:12 were All-Americans Vic Zwolak and Tom Sullivan, Dave Hyland, Marty Ferko and Noel Carroll. Carroll's fifth place finish was the highest he has ended yet.

Sixth place was held by Fred Chenny, of American University who in finishing in the time of 17:37 broke his school's existing record for the course. The Main Liners' points were rounded out by Jim Orr and Jim Smyth, who finished seventh and ninth respectfully.

Doubt of a 'Cat victory was never great, as the first five finishers jumped off to an early lead. However, a majority of the bitterly cold race was conducted in a wooded area, which featured narrow and dangerous footpaths, with the result that overtaking a man there was impossible.

A further complication was the fact that American University was participating in two dual meets simultaneously, and the runners from Washington and Lee College provided added congestion along the narrow trails.

As the teams broke from the wooded confinement with a mile to run in the open, the final order was established as Zwolak and Ferko put on bursts of speed to match their mates.

The next-to-final dual meet for the Varsity will be held November 7 at Fairmount Park against LaSalle College of Philadelphia — a team which posts a commendable 5-1 record, and which is rumored to be "up" for the chance to hand the Main Line combine their first defeat.

The Freshmen also have a dual meet scheduled for November 7 at Fairmount Park, against the Penn State Frosh. The Wildkittens, led by Canadian Steve Ball, have posted a 2-0 record in competition so far this season, and seem in shape to defend last year's IC4A crown, won at New York City's Van Courtland Park.

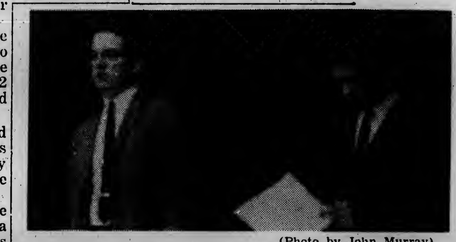
Friday Cotillion Is Opening Of Festive Soph Weekend

by Phillip Ludlow

The Sophomore Cotillion will mark the beginning of Sophomore Weekend this Friday evening, November 15, in the Field House. Highlight of the evening will be the crowning of the Sophomore Cotillion Queen selected from among five finalists.

The theme of the dance will be "Harbor Lights" and it will feature elaborate decorations. Festivities will begin at 9 p.m. and continue until 1 a.m. The affair is open to all students.

Entertainment will be provided for the evening by Jules Jaffe and his band, who have played at the Waldorf-Astoria and the New York debutantes' ball for the past 12 years. Intermission music will be provided by the Verdicts, a rock-and-roll band.



Pictures will be taken at the dance and can be obtained for the price of $4. Tickets are on sale at the Pie Shoppe and Bartley Cafeteria from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. The price of the dance is $3.

On Saturday, the activities include the Quantico game, after which there will be a class party in the evening. A block of seats has been reserved for the Sophomore Class at the game and there will be a car privilege for all classes this weekend. However, students must remove their cars from the parking lot from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Saturday to facilitate parking for the game. Parking is suggested in the area of the law building.

Furnishing the entertainment for the party that evening will be another rock-and-roll band, the Revelers. Refreshments will be served and the cost of the party is $3.50.

Tickets are being sold by the committee chairman and the class officers. The party will be held from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m., at the Moose Hall in Norristown.

Girl Cheerleaders, Attendance Subjects Of Council Debate

by Pete Mangan

Last Wednesday night the Student Council plowed through a considerable number of motions in the shortest meeting to date. Debate on most of the issues were limited.

The two major motions put before thet Council which caused the most controversey concerned compulsory attendance and the addition of girl cheerleaders to the Villanova squad.

An amended motion on attendance, originally introduced by Jan Dryoff and John Roberts, was passed in the Council. At the last meeting of the Congress extended debate was held concerning the wording of a similar motion.

The debate on the new motion, however was limited and it was passed speedily by the Congress.

The motion affirms the view of the Student Council that a change be made in the rules on compulsory attendance with a view toward placing more responsibility on the individual student.

It also provides for a poll to be taken among faculty members concerning their opinions on compulsory attendance. The results of the poll will be introduced at a student-faculty meeting.

Another motion, introduced by Mike Ferrara and Jim McErlane proposed the addition of three female cheerleaders to the present squad. Chairman Martin McGuinn limited debate on the issue to twenty minutes.

Speaking in favor of the motion, Mike Ferrara claimed that the girls would provide an added impetus to spirit at athletic events. He also stated that all activities at Villanova should be open to nurses, including cheerleading.

The contention of the opposition was that tradition at Villanova was of primary importance. Speaking against the motion, Senior Class President Jim Murphy, claimed that male cheerleaders at Villanova are a long established tradition.

He stated further that the admittance of female students to undergraduate divisions only ten years ago was not reason enough to break tradition which has existed for a much longer period.

In committee reports prior to debate on the motions, Jack

Rev. Richard Appicci Promises 'Who's Who Will Soon Be Revealed

The Rev. Richard Appicci, OSA, dean of student activities, has announced that the 1963-64 selections to Who's Who in American Universities will be announced within the next two weeks.

Thirty-seven seniors were selected by various committees to be submitted to the national organization. The organization approved the 37 names.

The universities' nominations were chosen by a committee composed of Father Appicci, The Rev. Joseph Kemme, OSA, dean of student affairs, The Rev. George McLaughlin, OSA, dean of men, The Rev. William Hopkins, OSA, chaplain, and Miss M. Dorothy Boyle, dean of women.

Requirements for candidates were a 2.5 minimum cumulative average, activity in recognized campus organizations, and good standings with the authority of the university.

Belle Masque's 'Inherit The Wind' Slated To Premier On November 20

by Mike Ferrera

The Belle Masque Society will present its first offering of the year on November 20 at 8:30 p.m. It will be the widely acclaimed Broadway hit, Inherit the Wind.

Based on the famous Scopes Monkey trial, the play was written for Broadway by Lawrence and Lee. It was later made into a movie starring Spencer Tracy and Frederick March.

Inherit the Wind gave its first performance in July of 1925 in Dayton, Tennessee. The events depicted took place in a sweltering courtroom.

A drama with some comedy interspersed, Inherit the Wind is concerned with the controversy over the teaching of evolution to secondary school children. The president of Belle Masque, Jim Mason, will play the lead of Henry Drummond, a character based on Clarence Darrow.

John Meehan will play the role of Matthew Harrison Brady (William Jennings Bryan), and the role of E. K. Hornbeck (H. L. Mencken) will be played by Bill Byrne.

Others in the cast include: Mary Byrne, Cookie Cook, Brian Morgan, Betty Cain of Rosemont, and Ed Marmoski. The entire cast, largest in Belle Masque history, will take part in the play.

The play is directed by Thomas Nevins of the Theatre Department. Inherit the Wind will run from November 20 to November 23. Curtain time will be 8:30 p.m. and there will be a matinee at 2:00 p.m. on November 23. All performances are given in Vasey Hall.

Juniors' Annual Ring Mass Sunday Morning November 17

The Junior Ring Mass will be held Sunday, November 17, at 9 a.m. in the University Chapel.

Rev. James Ryan, OSA, class moderator, will be the celebrant of the Mass. All attending juniors are to receive Communion in a group. The rings will be blessed at the conclusion of the Mass.

At approximately 10 a.m., a Communion Breakfast will be held at the Treadway Inn. Jack Kraft, Villanova's basketball coach, will speak about the forthcoming season.

Tickets are on sale in the Pie Shoppe for $2.25. There is a limit to the number of tickets to be sold. Since the Mass is a class function, all juniors are requested to attend even though they may not have a ring.

Co-chairmen for the affair are Tony Pennachia and Denny Driscoll.

Richard Harshberger doesn't think much of David Rabe's suggestion in this candid shot in the Playbox. They are preparing the Graduate Theatre's production of "Night Life".

Charity Weekend Festivities To Be Held December 13, 14

This year's Junior Class has announced that the traditional Charity Weekend will be held December 13 and 14th.

The weekend's sole purpose is to provide a more delightful Christmas for some 140 orphans of St. John's Orphanage in Philadelphia.

Friday night, December 13th, the Christmas Charity Ball will be held in the Field House. Chairman Dick McCormick wishes to make note of several features.

First, the time of the dance will be from 8:30 to 12:30 p.m. Second, the price of the tickets will be $2.50 per couple. Third all refreshments at the dance will be free. Finally, the winner of the popular Missing Link contest will be announced at one of the breaks.

The theme of the dance is "Twas the Night Before Christmas" and the popular Villanovan's will fill the air with joyous music.

Saturday morning a bus will take Villanova students and their dates to St. John's to "claim" their "son for a day." Shopping at Penny's Toy Store, gifts, rides on amusements, lunch, cartoons and the movies "Pepe" will make for a happy day for both orphan and "parents."

Ken Curtin, chairman for the outing, points out it is not necessary for V.U. student to bring dates. However, it is necessary to have enough "dads" for each young boy. Also, after the orphans are returned, the Junior Class has planned a Class party.

Annual IRS Conclave Held In Baltimore Md. Five Members Attend

Five members of the Villanova chapter of the International Relations Society last weekend attended the annual American International Relations Club's Regional Convention in Baltimore.

Villanova president, William Blauvelt, and William Bates, both juniors, contended for positions yet lost to a strong metropolitan delegation from New York City.

Dr. Jankins, president of Morgan State addressed the inital assembly meeting. He presented his views on the equal rights question and reminded the student of his responsibility in this problem. Dr. Jankins asked "is it too much for the college student to recognize the dignity of the Negro?" He demanded that the college student at least know how to take a definite stand in racial problems.

Discussion periods were held to allow debate on "Race Relations." It was concluded that the American racial strife does affect world opinion. Racial groups create an emotional alignment against the dominant whites.

A meeting reviewing this convention and future plans for the club will be held Tues., November 19. All are invited to attend.

Grad Theatre Stages Kingsley's 'Night Life' To Open November 16

The Graduate Theatre Department will present as its next production, Night Life, the story of a good man pressed into the motley of the fool, by Mr. Sidney Kingsley. A special performance will be held this Friday evening in the Playbox for the administration at which time the playwright and his wife, Mage Evans will be present.

The cast is composed of Mr. Thomas F. Nevins, designer and technical director for the department, who plays Will Kazar, the arrogant labor leader. Mr. Richard F. Harshberger who is a faculty member of the department is Lew.

Mitzie Smyth, a graduate of Quincy College, Quincy Illinois, plays her first role at Villanova as Gia.

Two of the departments full time graduate students, David Rabe and Dennis Ciesil play the roles of Neil Bennet and Sonny Drake. Mr. Rabe, a Playbox veteran was the playwright of The Gay and Burning Bridge. Mr.Ciesil marks his first show at Villanova with his portray of the sick comic, Sonny.

Eileen Shea, a graduate of the American Academy of Dramatic Arts, is Red. An upperclassmen of Villanova, John McCabe plays the role of Chunky. Frenchy, the headwaiter, is portrayed by Bill Long, a full time graduate student form Glassboro State College.

In the cast will appear as part of the musical dimension of Night Life Watson Klincewicz originally a member of the Four Freshmen.

Carol Schmenkel, a graduate of Rosemont College stage managed the play. The production will open to the public on Saturday evening, November 16 at 8:30 in the Playbox.

Fr. Burns To Discuss Aspects Of Education At PSEA Gathering

Tonight, at 7:30 p.m. in 209 Bartley Hall, the Pennsylvania Student Education Association will sponsor a lecture entitled "Bubbles and Baubles in Educational Thought." The address will be given by the Rev. Joseph J. Burns, OSA, Ed. D., a member of the university faculty.

Father Burns holds a doctorate in education and teaches education courses at both the undergraduate and graduate levels at the university.

Following the address there will be a question and answer period. A "soical hour" in the Bartley Cafeteria will conclude the evening's program.

In attendance at this meeting will be representatives from colleges in the Southeast Region of the P.S.E.A. which includes Bryn Mawr, Cabrini, Chestnut Hill, Drexel, Harcum, Haverford, Holy Family, LaSalle, Penn, Penn Military, Rosemont. St. Joseph's, Temple, West Chester, and Villanova.

Faculty members, students, and all interested parties are invited to attend. Education majors and those interested in teaching have especially been requested to attend.

Villanova And Georgian Court Sponsor Christmas Concert

The Villanova Concert Band and the Villanova Singers will host the Georgian Court Glee Club in the annual Christmas Concert in the Field House on Saturday, December 14 at 8:00 p.m.

The appearance of a girls' college in a joint concert with the Villanova Singers is a new feature of the Christmas presentation.

James Quinn, President of the Singers, Arthur Chappell, Band President and the president of the Georgian Court Glee Club, have been working jointly with the chairmen of the Concert Services to surpass last year's successful show.

Also appearing and making their debut will be the Women's Glee Club of Villanova. The Women's Glee Club with Jacqueline Greeco as president, is comprised of nursing students and is under the direction of William Tapp.

The Villanova Singers, directed by Herbert Fiss, will perform the "Jubilate Deo" of Peters, one of the finest poly-phonic selections in modern liturgical music and the classical favorite, "Hodie Christus Natus Est." They will also perform various Christmas standards.

The Concert Band, directed by Joseph Colantonio, will perform Harold's "Festival Prelude" and Leroy Anderson's "Christmas Festival" and "Sleighride."

The Georgian Court Glee Club will join the Singers in rendering the Hallelujah Chorus from Handen's Oratorio, The Messiah.

Rosemont Students Are Voted Into VUPU, A. K. Ray Will Speak

At a recent business meeting of the Political Union, the membership voted to accept Rosemont students as associate members on an experimental basis for the remainder of this year.

Heated debate on the resolution resulted in a long-awaited benefit for the girls from Rosemont, who have shown consistent interest in the VUPU.

Members were informed that they would next debate with A. K. Ray, First Secretary for Political Affairs of the Embassy of India, Washington, D.C.

Dr. Ray will debate with the Union on the following topic, Resolved: That This House Favors Substantial Cuts in Economic Aid to Unaligned Nations. This debate will be held Monday evening, November 25 at 7 p.m. in 110 Bartley Hall.

Union President Peter DeLiberty announced the beginning of a concentrated membership drive to attract underclassmen to Villanova's fastest-growing political organization.

Dilworth To Address Villanova Law Forum

Dean Harold Gill Reuschlein of the Law School has announced that the second meeting of the Villanova Law Forum will be held on November 20, instead of November 15, as previously planned.

The Forum will be addressed by Richardson Dilworth, former mayor of Philadelphia. This meeting is the second in a series of three meetings on the topic "The City Faces Its Problems."

The next meeting of the Forum will be on February 27, 1964, and will be addressed by Richard J. Daley, the Mayor of Chicago. All Forum meetings are held at Garey Hall, Villanova Law School at 8:30 p.m.

Senior Job Interviews Will Be Major Topic Of Career Conference

On Thursday, December 5, the Thirteenth Annual Career Conference will be held for all Villanova seniors. The various speakers will discuss campus interviews from the standpoint of the receiver and the student. Over 50 representatives from large firms have been invited, and all are expected to attend.

Last year over 600 seniors were present and were impressed by the remarks of the speakers. This year's conference should equal or surpass that of the previous year. The participating seniors will be excused from class from 8:30 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. on December 5.

Evening school students and graduate students are also invited to enroll with the Placement Office.

Student Council

November Music Festival Connotes WWVU's New Collegiate Sound

by Bob Dean

"Definitely the NEW SOUND in Collegiate Radio." That's the theme and the goal of campus radio WWVU as the station helps usher in a new year of 'distinctively different' programming with the NOVEMBER FESTIVAL of MUSIC.

"We will present for our listeners," says Music Director Frank Quattrone, 'a musical panorama in which, during each special program, we will offer what we hope will be an interesting and educational concentration on the various musical forms."

Highlighting the FESTIVAL schedule are two complete, day-long programs devoted first to the field of Jazz, then to the world of Folk Music.

The JAZZ SPECIAL will be aired on Wednesday, November 13, beginning at 2:00 p.m., when Mike DiBenedetto will open the program with a review of PIANO JAZZ — featuring the keyboard jazz artistry of performers such as George Shearing, Andre Previn and Errol Garner.

All of which will be followed by a session with the BIG BANDS and VOICES; a lesson in DRUMOLOGY; and an adventure in JUST JAZZ — featuring the stylings of Maynard, Ahmad, McCoy, and others — 'still further out.'

To wrap up the day the station will present a segment devoted to JAZZ COMBOS, and Ed Bride will host two hours of the music of THE REEDS.

For folk music fans, the 'Voice of Villanova' will present a day-long FOLK MUSIC SPECIAL on Thursday, November 21. The program will begin and end with portions devoted to male and female vocal folk soloists (repectively). Interwoven between the two will be a special PETER, PAUL and MARY performance, a program of the various other prominent folk groups, and a special commentary-discussion type program on THE FOLK MUSIC MANIA hosted by Frank Sauers with guest Jim Croche of the Villanova Spires.

The FESTIVAL will offer a very wide musical scope—touching on nearly every facet of the art — with programs ranging in diversity from THE GOLDEN YEARS OF MILLION SELLERS on November 17 from 6:00 to 10:00 p.m., to TCHAIKOVSKY CONCERTOS on November from 7:00 to 9:00 p.m.

Complete program schedules for the NOVEMBER FESTIVAL OF MUSIC are available through the VILLANOVAN or from the office of WWVU.

Sigma Kappa Tutors Try Forming Society With Council Helping

The Student Council Tutor Program is attempting to form a society, the Sigma Kappa, which will be financed by the Student Council.

The program is designed to offer assistance to any student who feels that he needs it. The aid is free and will be given on a confidential basis. To qualify, a student must be sincere in his desire for aid.

Interested students may obtain information and registration forms in Dougherty Hall this week. On the form the student is required to give his name, the course in which the assistance is needed, and a place he can be reached.

All student tutors have volunteered their assistance. The only requirement to become a tutor is to have received a grade of "B" or better in the course in which he wishes to tutor.

Any student interested in becoming a member of the program should obtain information from a member of the Academic Affairs Committee of the Student Council.

For further information contact Jim McErlane or Neil Stoneback.

Don Laurie Announces Kiddies' Outing Game 'Cat-Quantico Game

The annual football game for the Orphans Outing will be held this Saturday when the Villanova Wildcats meet the Quantico Marines at 1:30 p.m. in the Villanova Stadium.

Chairman Don Laurie has announced that 15 homes for underprivileged children have been invited to the outing. Eleven organizations have responded and some 654 youngsters will visit the campus this Saturday.

Athletic Director Art Mahan has announced that 800 seats on the Villanova side will be allocated for the occasion. It is hoped that either programs or pennants will be made available as souvenirs for the children.

Transportation for the game will be provided by the men of Delta Pi Mu. In addition, they will direct the weekend's proceedings and act as guides for the children.

Further information may be had by contacting Laurie in 307 Sullivan.

Aesthetician Kovach Selected As Winner Of Trip To Amsterdam

Dr. Francis Kovach, professor of philosophy at Villanova, has been notified by the American Council of Learned Societies that he has been selected to attend the International Congress for Aesthetics at Amsterdam, Holland, in 1964.

Professor Kovach, who received this award on the basis of an essay submitted in competition with other scholars, is the first Thomistic philosopher to be represented.

Portrette

Adroit Juggler

Known to Villanovans as Argon in Moliere's The Imaginary Invalid, Jim Mason is an English major in education.

Jim adroitly manages to juggle scholastic and extra-curricular activities with equal facility. His consistent 3.00 average is balanced by his Belle Masque activities as president.

He portrayed Harry in the Time Of Your Life by William Saroyon and Jim Boyle in The Broken Doll a Graduate Theatre production. He will be seen next week as Drummond in Inherit The Wind. This Belle Masque production will run from November 20 to 23, in Vasey Auditorium.

In addition to his theatrical activities, Jim is a member of the Literary Society, WWVU, the Philosophy Club, and PSEA.

Commenting on his acting, Jim said: "Acting has been an exciting experience, giving me a chance to learn discipline first hand. The roles are varied and challenging, since as Tim Boyle I had to play an 18-year old boy and as Drummond I depict a 65 year old man. Contrary to popular myth, acting is both a physical and mental challenge."

As President of the second oldest campus organization, Jim is well qualified to give advice to the aspiring actor. He commented, "During practice, through acting, you are taught to be someone else and come out of yourself. Being someone else gives one freedom and objectivity about oneself."

When school is not occupying Jim's time, he likes to read, to listen to classical music, and again, theatrical, to direct. In his future looms the possibility of graduate school and teaching. Perhaps his thespian enthusiams will inspire a future student to become another Jim Mason.

Twenty-ninth 'Noche Espanola' Set For Friday, December 6

The twenty-ninth annual "Noche Espanola," a literary-musical review of the Spanish Club, will be held on Friday night, December 6, at 7 p.m. in Vasey Auditorium.

The first part of the program will consist of performances by a pianist, two guitarists, male vocalists from the Villanova Singers, a soprano from Cabrini College, a magician, the Spires, and the T-Tones from Rosemont College.

A one-act comedy El Pontapie Invisible (The Invisible Kick), starring Nestor Sala, Hilda Rivas, Gabriel Falla, Francisco Gonzalez, Jose Urisc, Manuel Rodrigues, and Daisy Maldonado of Cabrini College will comprise the second part of the evening's entertainment. Refreshments will be served at the intermission.

Dr. Victor Sanchez-Mesas, consul of Spain in Philadelphia, will address the audience prior to the intermisson.

A social dance will follow in the Bartley Cafeteria. There is no admission charge for either activity.

Students from Rosemont, Immaculata, Chestnut Hill and Cabrini Colleges have been invited. An invitation is also extended to any other interested persons who would like to attend.

R. Sargent Shriver Appoints Thornell University Peace Corps Coordinator

The National Director of the Peace Corps, R. Sargent Shriver, has appointed Richard Thornell of the Peace Corps African Division to coordinate the team of Peace Corps representatives which will be on campus from November 17 to 20.

The team will consist of Bill Moffet, Paul Vanderwood, Cappy Critall, and Dei Calisto.

The objective of this team effort of the Peace Corps will be to inform as many students and faculty members as possible about the Peace Corps' services, projects, and progress.

Peace Corps volunteers must be American citizens with no dependents under 18. In the beginning of their training, they receive three months intensive schooling at an American college or university in the customs, history, culture, and language of the country in which they will be working. They also receive refresher courses in the skills that will be needed on their particular project.

After receiving a thorough training the volunteers serve for two years.

At present there are eight former Villanovans serving in the Peace Corps overseas. They are: Salvadore DiBlasio in Turkey; Michael Menster and John Neary in the Philippines; Nicholas Cordasco and Peter Arquin in Ethiopia; John Walsh in Ecuador; Vicent Berger in the Dominican Republic and Robert Hallisey in Liberia.

Anyone interested in further information about the Peace Corps should contact the Rev. George Riley, Peace Corps liaison officer, at LA-5 4600.

Student Lawyers To Attend Annual Red Mass In Chapel

The annual Red Mass for the students and alumni of Villanova Law School will be celebrated in the chapel tomorrow evening at 7 p.m. The Mass is traditionally celebrated to ask the blessing of the Holy Spirit upon the students, faculty, and alumni of the Law School.

A Pontifical Mass will be celebrated by the Most Rev. Francis E. Hyland, D.D., J.C.D., former bishop of Atlanta and titular bishop of Bisica. Father President John A. Klekotka, OSA, will act as Archpriest.

Master of Ceremonies

Serving as deacon will be the Rev. Philip F. Barrett, OSA, dean of Commerce and Finance, and the sub-deacon will be the Rev. Robert J. Welsh, OSA, dean of Liberal Arts. Masters of ceremonies will be the Rev. Joseph T. Daly OSA, and the Rev. Charles D. Tirrell, OSA.

The Rev. Vincent A. McQuade, OSA, the president of Merrimack College, will be the preacher at the Red Mass. Father McQuade will talk on "Educational Opportunities: New Horizons for American Democracy."

The music for the Mass will be provided by the Villanova Singers, under the direction of Mr. Herbert Fiss, with organ accompaniment by Law School Dean Harold Gill Reuschlein.

Reasons For Mass

The Mass is known as the Red Mass for two reasons. First, the vestments of the clergy and the altar cloths are red because this color has always been associated with the Holy Spirit.

Second, the robes of the English judges were red, and popular belief has this fact associated with the Mass which the judges attended as a group attired in their robes.

Buffet Supper

Law School students, alumni, and the Board of Consultors and their wives will attend the Mass. A buffet supper honoring Bishop Hyland and Father McQuade, will be held after the Mass in Garey Hall.

The Board of Consultors and the Law faculty and their wives will be the guests of Father Klekotka at the supper. Many Law School alumni will also attend the buffet.

Members of the Bench and Bar and the general public are invited to attend the Mass.

J. F. O'Brien, Ph.D. Talks On Relativity

Dr. James F. O'Brien, associate professor of Philosophy at Villanova, recently participated in a Science Forum on the subject of "Relativity" held at Rosemont College. Dr. O'Brien discussed the philosophical aspects of the problem at the two-day meeting.

Letters To The Editor

To The Editor:

I was a little shocked and very much disappointed to read the article "A History of the Villanova Forum" which appeared on page 5 in the October issue of The Villanovan.

It seems to me that the article was grossly unfair and inaccurate in depicting the Forum as a product newly emerged solely from this year's work. This is certainly not the case, although fading memories may make it appear so.

The Student Council Forum is, in fact, the result of the persistent efforts of a long line of people whose efforts stretch back for a number of years. The first noticeable seeds of the Forum were sown when the Council under Chairman Tom Hoffman (1959-60) won its long-fought battle for an independent Student Council treasury.

Provision was made in the Council's first budget that year for a Forum and Harrison Salisburg, noted columnist for the New York Times, addressed the first Student Council Forum which was held under just that name. The next year, Chairman Bob DeLisa's Council (1960-61), determined to make the Forum a permanent project, decided to expand the concept, and budgeted money for that purpose.

Fulton Lewis III packed Vasey Hall as the first Forum speaker that year, and John Crowe Ransom took to the Forum's platform later in the year. George Meany's appearance was cancelled at the last minute when an unexpected call to the White House forced a change in Mr. Meany's plans.

While I am unaware of the product of the Council of 1962-63 in regard to the Forum, I do know that Chairman Tom Wall's Council (1961-62) sponsored Forums.

All of this could have been documented easily if someone would have taken the trouble to check the Student Council's Educational Affairs files or past Villanovans.

I am sure that the men who in the past worked on the Forum take pride in the fact that they contributed to its foundation and continuation, and that they are pleased the Forum is being enthusiastically and capably continued by the present members of the Council. However, I can't help but feel that when so many others have worked so hard for the realization of what they felt was a worthwhile institution their efforts should not be ignored by gross misimpression.

I do not claim that the misrepresentation was intentional, but the actual facts were so readily attainable and documented, and certainly even within the memory of some, that the misrepresentation has little to excuse it.

I have only the most sincere personal regards for the dedication of the members of the Council and I extend my best wishes as they continue to expand the responsible role of the Student Council at Villanova.

To the Editor:

On Wednesday evening, November 6, 1963, we had the pleasure of witnessing Student Government in action. What a sight to behold! If you weren't there, just picture the operation of a smooth and efficient railroad complete with signals, switches and central tower.

The issue at hand was whether or not three female cheerleaders — after tryout (whatever that means) — should be added to the present all-male contingency. Debate was restricted by the Chairman to twenty minutes after an attempt to limit it to fifteen had failed — a net gain of 300 seconds. Wow!!!

The first person to speak on the motion was a gent named Ferrara who had in fact introduced it.

He put forth a few points which he believed constituted a firm foundation on which to base this feminine innovation namely that: (a) the addition of girls would increase school sprit, (b) the real image of the University would be projected and (c) girls are an integral part of the University performing much of the work in the various activities in which they participate, and therefore should be recognized in such a capacity as cheerleaders.

After Mr. Ferrara was through, the Chairman asked if there were any negative debates — which was like asking Wally Jones if he liked to play basketball. Hands shot in the air from all sides. The Chairman looked into the gathering much like a manager looks into the bullpen in the ninth inning of a close ball game and selected an ace right hander — James Murphy. Jim "I am a radical" Murphy, who himself began a tradition last year, wrapped himself in the sacred cloak of tradition and vehemently opposed what he called "yielding to females." One wonders whether Mr. Murphy's principles are rooted in bigotry or common sense.

"Look at Georgetown," he rumbled, "they've held on to their all male image," clutching tradition to his breast. Does he conjure up a parade of imaginary horrors of the Class of '92 having a stroke upon viewing girl cheerleaders? Mr. Murphy paraphrases his predecesor Cornelius Vanderbilt with his "nurses be damned" attitude.

We were also alarmed when so eminent a scholar as that man with the cigar (probably a Havana) tiptoed down the primrose path of sentiment and culminated his venture with triviality by expressing fiscal alarm in buying sweaters for girl cheerleaders.

Happily we can report however that the Student Council appropriated $82.95 for 2000 folders for the Third Annual Variety Show. How much are sweaters nowadays?

Adding confusion to misinterpretation and completely ignoring the issue as stated by Mr. Ferrara, apparently feeling that Murphy's nebulus arguments were quite sufficient, Pete Smith finally stated the one reason which should and could delay the acceptance of female cheerleaders simply "that the administration is against it."

Miss Lois Greyson, a student nurse, concurred on this point reducing any following comments to mere theoretical syllogisms.

Let us now take a look at some of the questions which arise in an individual's mind after viewing and listening to such a sampling of Student Government: (1) Does the Student Council have any real power, or is it just a mere figurehead relegated to the position of deciding how how much should be spent on a wooden box with 3½ inch letters for the Student Activities Bulletin Board? (2) the effect of cliques and groups within the Council, (3) personal prejudices overruling objective analysis, (4) the stature of the nurses on campus, (5) What is tradition? (6) What is an image, and does it necessarily follow that what someone else does is good?

In the meantime, all aboard for Villanova. Toot! Toot!

Positive Response

We congratulate the Villanova football squad and the Villanova Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps for their immediate and positive response when they were criticized for inattention to the flag of the United States.

The situation was immediately remedied with force and intelligence. This speaks well for both the members and the leaders of these groups. For, it is their example that the student body will use for its own behavior.

The conduct of both organizations for the past month has been immpeccable. Based on this performance, we feel that we can say without any reservations that will continue to provide Villanova with exemplary leadership whenever and wherever the Star Spangled Banner might be played.

Especial credit belongs to the new NROTC commander, Captain Charles McCall. His positive and constructive leadership rates praise and commendation. A graduate of the United States Naval Academy, Captain McCall has already and will certainly in the future provide the university with another fine NROTC unit during the coming year.

Now the student can not blame anyone else but himself for disrespect to the flag.

Whether or not they are purposefully, disrespectful or disrespectful due to ignorance is not relavent.

At football games there is still that small minority who reach for ice cubes or yell "team" while the National Anthem is playing. During NROTC colors, there is yet another minority that trek their weary way through or around the very ranks themselves. They do so without any regard for their obligations as a citizen to the flag of the United States. We hope that these students will follow the example of the athletic squads and the NROTC unit.

President's Report

Noteworthy Proposals

by Marty McGuinn
President, Student Body

Much legislation has been presented for the consideration of the Student Congress during the past two months.

In this period, proposals affecting sundry areas of student life have been made.

The first proposal deals with a request presented to the Administration to initate a program of course and instructor evaluation. the results of which could be useful and beneficial in maintaining the highest standards of academic effectiveness.

The second motion concerns an appeal from the Student Council, asking the Administration to change the existing policy of class attendance to one which would be non-compulsory and would place more responsibility on the individual student.

The aforementioned motions are being investigated by the Council's Academic Affairs Committee in conjunction with the heads of the respective academic departments.

The results will be submitted to the Student-Faculty Committee for its consideration before the Thanksgiving recess.

A motion to include three women on the present all-male cheerleading squad was defeated. but only after determined debate by both sides. Cries of "railroading" were expressed by the outspoken minority but after 17 minutes of debate, over two-third of the congress members, (an overwhelming majority) called for the vote on the question which was subsequently defeated.

Problems which have resulted in the parking lot, and requests to improve conditions in the library, are among the additional pieces of legislation confronting the Student Council.

Library Has Excellant Micro Room Facilities Available To Students

by Liz Kovach

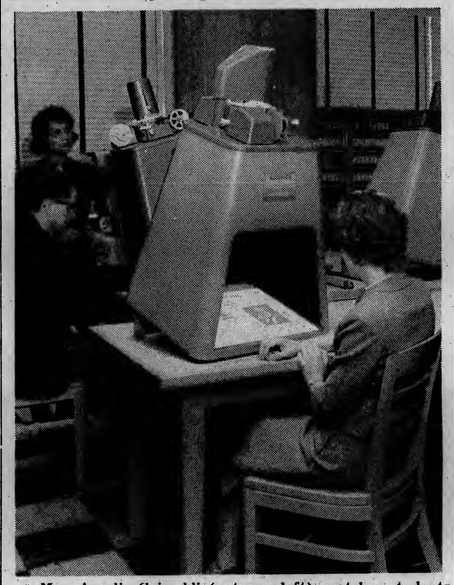
Even though the general student body makes use of the Villanova Library, relatively few realize that on the second floor is situated one of the largest university Microfilm Libraries in the country.

When a student or faculty member searches through the catalogue cards for books or magazines, they should check the corner of the catalogue card because there they might find a blue stamp indicating that the particular book or magazine is available on microfilm.

The full value and possibilities of the Micro Room have not been realized as yet. For example, it is possible for the faculty to assign work to the students involving materials available in the Micro Room. This has been done by the Engineering Department and has worked out very successfully for all concerned. An attractive feature of giving such an assignment is that microfilm does not circulate, therefore, the students will have very little difficulty completing the work.

Although microfilm is not a new discovery, most people are hardly aware of its existence, not mentioning its utilization in the past, the present, and its possibilities for the future.

Microphotography has been known for over 100 years. During the Franco-Prussian War, messages were sent by means of microfilm. The key step in the widespread use of microfilming was made in the early 1930's by David Rogers, librarian of the New York Herald Tribune. Rogers was very concerned by the deterioration of the newspaper files; and one day he had an occasion to see a check microfilmed in a court room, which gave his the idea.



By 1933 the first newspaper microfilm instrument was developed. The first 100 years of the Herald Tribune files has occupied 181,571 cubic feet, and on microfilm it went into a cabinet the size of a home case. Today newspapers, business, industry and universities make use of microfilming.

At Villanova, the Library owned a few isolated pieces of microfilm, but it was not until 1959 that they were centralized and assimilated into its micro collection. The work which such a project required cannot be attributed to any one person, but the Micro Room would not be what it is today without the efforts of: the late librarian, Rev. Daniel P. Falvey, OSA; the Rev. Louis A. Rongione, OSA, Director of the Falvey Memorial Library; Mrs. Elizabeth Walsh; and Mr. H. J. Boettcher.

Father Rongione is concerned with the Micro Room not only in his capacity as Library Director, but also personally. It is one of his pet projects and his ambition is to have the Micro Department of the Villanova Library second to none in the country. He has increased the number of volumes, as well as enhanced the over all appearance with countless additions, such as new shelves.

Mrs. Walsh, a full-time faculty member in the Library Science Department, was the first to assemble the microfilm materials and worked with the Micro Department to make it the well organized branch of the Library it is today. Seeing the smooth operating Micro Room now, one cannot begin to imagine the difficulty of her task, for at the time she assembled it there was little written matter about microfilm and the organization of a micro library.

Mr. Boettcher has worked with Father Rongione on the idea of expansion for the Micro Room. Although he was not hired as an artistic architect, he has given unselfishly of his time and talents to develop the open shelves which have been recently added to the Micro Room and which greatly increases the efficiency and the operation, as well as adds to the beauty of the room.

Mrs. Aurelia Grimaldi (extreme left), watches students use micro film machines in special Microfilm Room in the Library.

The Micro Room is presently in the capable hands of Mrs. Aurelia Grimaldi and her assistant Mr. Edmund H. Feuerstein.

At the present time the Micro Room has seven readers for microfilm materials, two readers for microfiche, two readers for microcards, one reader for microprint, and one reader-printer which will make a paper copy of the film in seconds. These readers are necessary for the magnification of the print to its original size.

Microform is either film or an opaque on which appears the text of a document, magazine, newspaper or book. The text in microform has been greatly reduced in size by the process of micro photography. In the Villanova Micro Collection there are five different types of microforms.

MICROFILM is probably the most familiar form. It can be 16 or 35 mm film on a roll, but most microfilm for libraries is 3 mm type two inches in width. Ten issues of the New York Times can be rolled on one reel, or a year of American Magazine, Saturday Review or Popular Mechanics. MICROFICHE is also film but not a roll. It is a sheet of film, three and one half by five and one half inches, containing from 40 to 80 images. MICOPRINT is an opaque, not a film, it measures nine by twelve inches and contains 100 pages of a usual size book on one side of a card. AMERICAN MICROCARD is an opaque, three by five inches in size and it contains 40 to 60 pages. EUROPEAN MICROCARD is an opaque and the same size as the fiche. It is made from the microfiche.

The Villanova Micro Collection contains 6427 microcards, 11737 microprint cards 17572 microfiches, 3025 reels of microfilm, and 120 filmstrips. These represent more than 5061 volumes and more than 1834 titles. There are over 250 Periodicals on microform, and included in the Micro Collection are documents, rare books and out of print materials. If it weren't for microfilm, the Villanova Library would not be able to have important and out of print materials such as are contained in the Vatican Library. Much rare Augustinian materials are also available in microform.

Facilities such as the Micro Room would not be possible without the invaluable assistance of the Parents Committee. This Committee is headed by Mr. Louis C. Stengel, Jr., the president of The Manhattan Shirt Company. He and his committee are seeking funds to finance the University Library's space utilization program. The cost of the Library Program over the next five years is estimated at $25,000, of which $25,000 will be needed for the current year.

Much of the material purchased in the past has been financed by the parents through similar campaigns. The Library wishes to express its thanks to the parents and hopes that they will continue to support the school in the future.

The Gentlemen Personified

by Ed Bride

"Personally, I think he's the gentlemen personified."

These were the words of Capitol Records promotion man Tom Kennedy and the suject of the conversation, no surprise to any chronic listener of WWVU's "Jazzroom," was further described in the New Edition of the Encyclopedia of Jazz: "(Stan) Kenton's own strong personality as spokesman for modern jazz has lent added significance to his efforts."

Kennedy enabled the writer to keep a short tradition of pioneering Kenton's works on the Villanova campus radio station by sending an advance copy of Stan's latest Capital effort, "Adventures in Blues," which was released November 5 and heard the following evening.

This album is a showcase for Gene Roland, who has been on-and-off with Kenton for nineteen years as a writer, arranger, and player. He composed all nine numbers on the album, and also plays the soprano sax and mellophonium solos, displaying unheard-of prowess on both.

And what's more important, Roland sticks with the theme of the album, playing deep, penetrating, bluesy solos on reed and horn. To keep this blue mood with an orchestra of such classic size (23 pieces), is a feat in itself.

The most haunting number is undoubtedly "Blue Ghost," which, according to the liner notes, was named after a girl who attended every Ohio concert the band played, came in a blue dress, and "always slipped away quietly before anyone could learn her name."

It is deep, but it moves; "Ghost" features Stan's piano and the muted trumpet of Marvin Stamm, whom Kenton hired direct from North Texas State College, the most reknowned college for laboratory band in the country as far as "Kentonish" sounds are concerned.

Next could be any one of three tunes: "Night at the Gold Nugget" (a club in Oakland, California, which has murals of Kenton all over the room), "The Blues Story," or "Dragonwyck."

"Nugget," the longest of nine pieces at 5½ minutes, features a sax riff punctuated by trombone lines, and is enhanced by Roland in a dual solo role. First comes the soprano sax, and then the mellophonium, with which he reaches the highest notes I have ever heard on this instrument. Fantastic and exciting.

"The Blues Story" is a wild ensemble number with trombonist Dee Barton — another North Texas alumnus — in the foreground. Once again, the title is apropo, as the listener wants to get up and shout before it's over.

I can't see how the album can miss with the critics, especially since they stick with the theme and the solos are so well-polished But then, I liked "Adventures in Jazz," which won all sorts of awards, but was still downed by "Down Beat."

Twice Yearly Test Barrage Is To Please Mom And Dad

By Rusty Miller

Why is it that twice a year, just before Fall mid-semester and just before Spring mid-semester the students of this University must be subjected to a last minute barrage of tests the likes of which are supposed to be reserved for final exam week. The answer to the question — why to please mommy and daddy of course! A mark, no matter how hurriedly compiled, no matter what the effect on the student's final grade, must be sent home.

Clarification

Let the point be clearly understood — it is not that the faculty gives out unconsidered, unfair marks or tests. It is that the faculty gives last minute tests, merely to get a mark to send home. Even more important, there is no attempt to coordinate these tests with those of other instructors. If a student is unlucky he may be burdened with as many as six tests, all to count as mid-term grades, within three days.

This is not a tear shed by a crybaby, a voice crying in the wilderness. This is a legitimate complaint by a student who had five tests within three days himself, two the first day, a day off, then three the next. For what possible reason, I ask, should a student be subject to three tests in one day?

So Cut

The common practice as we all know, is to cut one or more. Some faculty members, however, will refuse to give a make-up even if the situation is explained ahead of time. This is not only an inconvenience; it is a totally unfair practice. Even an "A" student is under extreme pressure with so many important tests crammed into such a short time.

Will the results of those exams give a true picture of that student's progress? Possibly! What then of the average student? Will his true progress be revealed by these grades? Chances are good that it will not.

It is obvious that the administration does not advise this practice for it has not set aside a certain period for mid-term exams as it has for semester exams in January and June. Why then do the faculty members persist in the practice? Can't they see the obvious unfairness to the student?

Solution

The suggested solution I feel is fairly obvious. The faculty should co-ordinate their tests so as not to overburden the student during any particular period. This suggestion may be ridiculed as impractical, even impossible. I feel however, that something should be done to alleviate the situation. I know furthermore that I am not alone in this feeling.

Promising Productions On Broadway

by Paul Norton

This season's Broadway panorama has been the brightest and most promising of the past four or five years. Almost half of the shows that have opened have been already tagged as hits and are looking forward to long runs.

Notable among these smashes are John Osborne's dynamic "Luther" and Arnold Wesker's "Chips With Everything." Both plays are British imports and will run in close popularity with their fellow countrymen's productions of "Oliver" and "Beyond the Fringe."

On the comedy roster Jean Kerr's "Mary, Mary" remains at the head of the longest run list and "Enter Laughing" holds its own with Carl Reiner's story.

Overpowering the whole dramatic scene are Edward Albee's "Who Afraid of Virginia Woolf?", a magnificent piece of Theatre and his new and equally controversial "The Ballad of a Sad Cafe" adapted from the Carson McCullers novella.

Musicals haven't fared so well thus far with the exception of the well reviewed "One Hundred and Ten in the Shade." Mary Martin's "Jennie" is an abortive attempt at nostalgia and Meredith Wilson's "Here Love" has been hailed as a great show for the kids but that is about all.

Still held over from last year year are "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," the pretty but empty headed "She Loves Me" and the Pulitzer winning "How to Succeed . . ."

★ ★ ★ ★

The big news now in this area is "The Girl Who Came to Supper" with Florence Henderson and Jose Ferrer at the Shubert. Base on Terence Ratigan's play, it has prematurely been looked to as a new "My Fair Lady." Certainly the play has a combination of major talents in Noel Coward (music and lyrics) and Harry Kurnitz (book).

Herman Levin who produced the original MFL has reassembled some of his magicians in hope of repeating their first cooperative effort. Oliver Smith is doing the sets and Irene Sharaff is lending her imaginative hand to the period costumes. Robert Russell Bennett's orchestrations should be the crowning touch.

★ ★ ★ ★

Up and coming are two fine plays. Belle Masque will present Inherit the Wind and the grad theatre will do a revised edition of Sidney Kingsley's Night Life. Both of these are scheduled for production within the next few weeks and if well executed should provide evenings of good theater.

★ ★ ★ ★

Opera buffs had a difficult choice last night between Joan Sutherland in "La Traviata" at the Academy and Rise Stevens here at Villanova. Sutherland is now regarded as the prima donna but there is always a certain romantic charm and a great deal of warmth surrounding Rise Stevens.

★ ★ ★ ★

A must for Philadelphia this month should be the National Repertory Comany at the New Locust. They are featuring three fine shows, "Ring Around the Moon," "The Seagull," and "The Crucible." Eva LaGallienne and Farley Granger head this distinuished group.

Last Sunday's Interclass Play Festival at Rosemont was an enjoyable evening despite our disagreement with the judges choice of the best play. The senior class presented an original comedy but the winning "Antigone" was a fine production.

On Campus with Max Shulman

(Author of "Rally Round the Flag, Boys!" and "Barefoot Boy With Cheek.")

I WAS A TEEN-AGE SLIDE RULE

In a recent learned journal (Playboy) the distinguished board chairman (Ralph "Hot Lips" Sigafoos) of one of our most important American industrial corporations (the Arf Mechanical Dog Co.) wrote a trenchant article in which he pinpointed our single most serious national problem: the lack of culture among science graduates.

Let me hasten to state that Mr. Sigafoos's article was in no sense derogatory. He said emphatically that the science graduate, what with his gruelling curriculum in physics, math, and chemistry, can hardly be expected to find time to study the arts too. What distresses Mr. Sigafoos—and, indeed, all of us—is the lopsided result of today's science courses: graduates who can build a skyscraper but can't compose a concerto; who know Newton's Third Law but not Beethoven's Fourth Symphony; who are familiar with Fraunhofer's lines but not with Shelley's.

The lopsided result of Today's Science

Mr. Sigafoos can find no solution to this lamentable imbalance. I, however, believe there is one—and a very simple one. It is this: if students of science don't have time to come to the arts, then the arts must come to students of science.

For example, it would be a very easy thing to teach poetry and music right along with physics. Students, instead of being called upon merely to recite, would instead be required to rhyme their answers and set them to familiar tunes—like, for instance, the stirring Colonel Bogey March. Thus recitations would not only be chock-a-block with important facts but would, at the same time, expose the students to the aesthetic delights of great poetry and music. Here, try it yourself. You all know The Colonel Bogey March. Come, sing along with me:

Physics
Is what we learn in class.
Einstein
Said energy is mass.
Newton
Is high-falutin'
And Pascal's a rascal. So's Boyle.

Do you see how much more broadening, how much more uplifting it is to learn physics this way? Of course you do. What? You want another chorus? By all means:

Leyden
He made the Leyden jar.
Trolley
He made the Trolley car.
Curie
Rode in a surrey
And Diesel's a weasel. So's Boyle.

Once the student has mastered The Colonel Bogey March, he can go on to more complicated melodies like Death and Transfiguration, Sixteen Tons, and Boo-Hoo.

And when the student, loaded not only with science but with culture, leaves his classroom and lights his Marlboro Cigarette, how much more he will enjoy that filter, that flavor, that pack or box! Because there will no longer be a little voice within him repeating that he is culturally a dolt. He will know—know joyously—that he is a complete man, a fulfilled man, and he will bask and revel in the pleasure of his Marlboro as a colt rolls in new grass—exultant and triumphant—a truly educated human person—a credit to his college, to himself, and to his tobacconist!

© 1963 Max Shulman

We, the makers of Marlboros and sponsors of this column, urge you not to roll colt-wise in the grass if you are carrying a soft pack of Marlboros in your pocket. If, however, you are carrying the crush-proof box and weigh less than 200 pounds, you may safely fling yourself about.

Out, Out, Brief Candle

by John Fitzgerald

Although it takes some imagination to consider a cigarette a candle, it requires more to be convinced of the significance of the removal of all cigarette advertising from college campuses.

To be metaphysical about it, is has gone from being to nonbeing. Gone are the salesmen with their free samples, gone the Viceroy football contest, gone the fifty-five L and M Tempests and gone the Lucky Strike crazy questions and Tareyton's paraphrasing of Caesars from college publications like this one.

Though I do not know the exact loss in revenue to the Villanovan, I do know that this paper and some 2,000 other college publications, mostly newspapers, will lose as much as 50% of their advertising income.

The significance of such happenings is second only to rationale behind them.

Ostensibly, the reason why cigarette advertising on college campuses has virtually ceased is the Tobacco Institute's decision to ban it because the smoking habit is an "adult custom". However it seems the real reason is that the Institute was goaded into making this decision by some very adult minded collegians.

An article entitled "The Effects of Smoking" in Scientific American by Dr. E. Hammond explained the high death rate of smokers to non-smokers and "how tobacco smoke damages the lungs, heart and other body tissues". In August 1962, this so influenced an editor of Main Events, a newspaper of one of the City Colleges of New York that by October 29 of that year the newspaper announced its discontinuance of cigarette ads. Three issues later it was out of funds.

The Nation, America and The Medical Tribune soon publicized the newspapers fate and public response, notably from doctors, influenced the administration of the college to supply the missing funds.

Much to the editor's dismay the problem which was considered simply to be one of health and good judgement threatened to mushroom into the moral and ethical spheres.

However, the discussion was brought back to the straight and narrow by Coccyx, a group at the University of Chicago trying to eliminate cigarette advertising from their daily college paperpaper, and the Illinois Division of The American Cancer Society.

These groups gathered eighteen college paper editors who were lectured by a surgeon, a graduate student in biology and an advertising executive. Two aspects of the smoking habit were laid before these editors.

Next, the doctor and the graduate student emphasized the medical point of view by asking "Can you afford to ignore the evidence that cigarette smoking and lung cancer are causally related?"

Second, the advertising executive labeled the habit "stupid" and noted how he could have bought a sports car with the money that had literally gone up in smoke during the years he smoked.

For those astute observers who noted that the Villanovan has not been purged since Max Shulman's "On Campus" still appears here, The Coccyx supplemented their anti-cigarette ads with a series entitled "On Campus Cancer."

This fighting fire with fire spread throughout the state and to other states as well. It coupled with The American Cancer Society's admonitions, the findings of various State Medical Society's and the now twice postponed report of President Kennedy's ten man scientific committee must certainly have ruffled the leaves of The Tobacco Institute.

Ergo, I hope you can see through the smoke rings of The Institute's "adult custom" argument to the heart of the matter. Can you as a young college student afford, both physically and economically, to pass by unheeding.

"Just what I thought a bad case of Nerves!"

Sidney Kingsley Destroys Myths Of Typical Broadway Playwright

by Bill Byrne

I guess we all have a preconceived idea as to what a Broadway playwright should look like and be. Holzywood paints him as a tall, impeccably clad and erudite gentleman, with little time for anyone but himself and his stars. Well, that's what I thought, too, until I met Mr. Sidney Kingsley.

Mr. Kingsley is the eminent author-director of such dramatic successes as Dead End, Men in White, Detective Story, and the recent Night Life. He has been a weekend visitor at Villanova in the past few months preparing a rewritten version of Night Life for Playbox production.

Patient

Well, as to Mr. Kingsley, he is a short, graying, casually-dressed man. He is warm and patient, especially with fledgling reporters.

The playwright described his purpose here as two-fold. The recent Broadway production of Night Life was far removed from his original conception.

The play was written for theater in the round but no theaters of this type are available on Broadway. Forced to adapt to the proscenium, much of the play's dramatic excitement was never ignited.

Mr. Duprey

Mr. Richard Duprey, chairman of the Villanova Theater Department and critic for America magazine, recognized the play's potential greatness in his review. He and Mr. Kingsley began corresponding and this production is the result.

Rehearsing in our Playbox, Mr. Kingsley found whole new elements of the play that has been locked out by the proscenium.

The second thing that brought Mr. Kingsley here is the chance to work with young people in creating new ideas in dramatic presentation. He himself started at Cornell in a small experimental theater, much like our Playbox. Mr. Kingsley expressed great delight in what he has found here and a genuine admiration for the faculty and students of the Theater Department.

Theater Cure

The author offered a possible cure for the maladies that plague our modern theatre. He feels that the public must be made to realize that American theater is not confined to the limits of Shubert Alley. The future of theater in this country lies in the university, community, and repertory theaters that are constantly sprouting up. It is in this grass roots drama that the graduates of such experimental schools as ours will find the laboratories to create a fresher, more vital theater.

The Theater Departments' presentation of Mr. Kingsley's Night Life opens November 15 in the Playbox. The play is a sensitive but provacative commentary on modern life. Only a young at heart veteran like Mr. Kingsley could have written it.

Book Review

by Frank Quattrone

Avant-Garde: The Experimental Theater in France

What was probably undertaken as a modest introduction to the major French avant garde plays of the sixth decade of the present century has evolved into a brilliant study of the challenging and perplexing, courageous and outrageous theater of this troubled era.

In his incisive analyses of the dramatic principles as well as the actual dramas of Beckett, Ionesco, Genet, Adamov, and the rest, Mr. Pronko has crystallized quite admirably the sundry aspects of the crisis in human values of the twentieth century.

Life for modern man has become petty and devoid of meaning. His empty days are "filled" with the anguish of solitude, absurdity, tedium, and frustration begotten by the figurative generation of a hostile universe and a stagnant bourgeois society.

It is against this background, the author asserts in a style occasionally ponderous but generally crisp and lucid, that the revolution in theater deemed "avant garde" burgeoned at the turn of the century.

But the avant-garde is no organized movement with set rules or patterns. In fact, Eugene Ionesco, the unofficial spokesman for France's experimenting and generally pessimistic playwrights, maintains that "there is no avant-garde theater."

Nevertheless, a number of striking similarities pervade the bulk of these unconventional plays, such as (thematically-speaking) the revolt against the conformity and banality of bourgeois life and ideals, and (dramatically speaking) eccentric behavior, admixture of the serious and the comic, the desire to shock, and the pursuit of newness for its own sake.

No aficionado of the modern theater should neglect this timely book

Assignment: match the performance of our finest automatic drive in a lighter, less expensive version!

Result: A new Ford-built 3-speed torque converter—ideal "traveling companion" for our new, hotter, medium-displacement V-8 engines

A completely new Ford Motor Company 3-speed automatic drive for 1964 delivers improved passing performance . . . smoother acceleration . . . better start-ups (up to 35% higher torque multiplication in Low) . . . more flexible downhill braking . . . quieter operation in Neutral.

With the introduction of this lighter, highly durable and efficient transmission in 1964 Comet, Fairlane and Ford models, our engineers have taken still another step toward putting extra pep per pound into Ford-built cars.

Simplified gear case design and a one-piece aluminum casting result in a lighter, more compact transmission—one that has fewer components and is extremely easy to maintain. Built to precision tolerances akin to those in missile production, the new automatic transmission is truly a product of the space age, and is typical of technical progress at Ford.

Another assignment completed; another case of engineering leadership at Ford providing fresh ideas for the American Road.

Student Editor Silenced

The 1962-63 "student editor of the year" has been silenced by officials of the University of Alabama.

Mel Meyers, whose editorials in the Alabama "Crimson and White" gained him national fame and popularity plus repeated threats on his life, has been told by university officials that he may not "write upon or comment upon any racial matters."

The administration required Meyers and all other students to sign statements agreeing not to write or comment on any racial matters for publication.

According to a spokesman for the university, the new policy only applies to students writing on the campus. The director of the news bureau said, "that the school prefers professionals to do the racial news writing and said that a claim that the policy would prohibit all comment by the students was silly."

Last February, the United States Student Press Association named Mr. Meyers "student of the year," for his editorials calling for obedience to federal law in Alabama. After this Meyer's life was threatened and crosses were burnt on the lawn of his fraternity house.

Finally the university administration hired two full-time guards for him. The case is now up for investigation by the Commission on Freedom and Responsibility and the USSPA.

Franklin and Marshall's Student Weekly has announced a move to stimulate freshman averages, and to improve the over-all scholastic position. At last week's Inter-Fraternity Council meeting it was announced that the fraternities had approved a raise in pledging averages to 1.50 (college on 3.0 system). As of now Villanova doeshave a 2.5 minimum for holding any office in a campus organization, but does not have any minimum for pledging.

There are some campus Picassos at San Francisco University. Dismayed by the utter failure of campus artists to succeed in transforming "The Wall," a student meeting place surrounding the new science center, the Foghorn has announced the campus' first annual Arts Festival.

First prize in the Arts Festival will be the publication of a six-part life story of the artist creating the most original mural. Other prizes include a season's pass to all home games, and autographed zetherballs.

Who knows, another Picasso or Fragonard could be discovered, but it should be stated forcefully that no one is allowed to cut off their ear

Meet Gerald Bourland

Computer Systems Associate at WE

Gerald Bourland, B.S., Central Missouri State College, '61, picked Western Electric because it offered many interesting and challenging opportunities in his favorite fields—automation and data processing. Gerald's work here consists of writing, testing and documenting computer programs—each one a different and exacting assignment.

Also of great interest to Gerald when he joined Western were the Company's numerous management courses and paid Tuition Refund Plan. He knows, too, that we'll need to fill thousands of supervisory positions within the next few years. And he's getting the solid experience needed to qualify.

Right now, Gerald is working on a verification sub-system for maintaining production control. It consists of seven distinct computer programs that operate as one routine which performs the function of tying together and verifying forecasted with actual customer orders.

If you, like Gerald Bourland, set the highest standards for yourself, enjoy a challenge, and have the qualifications we're looking for—let's talk! Opportunities for fast-moving careers exist now for liberal arts, physical science and business majors, as well as for electrical, mechanical and industrial engineers. For more detailed information, get your copy of the Western Electric Career Opportunities booklet from your Placement Officer. Or write: Western Electric Company, Room 6405, 222 Broadway, New York 38, N. Y. And be sure to arrange for a personal interview when the Bell System recruiting team visits your campus.

Galie, Fitzmaurice Place In St. Michael's Debate

The Beta Gamma Debate Society completed in two tournaments the weekend of November 1 and 2. The debates were held at St. Michael's University in Toronto and La Salle College.

David Galie and Eugene Fitzmaurice placed second in a contest in parliamentary debate at St. Michael's. Fitzmaurice also received a commendation as third place speaker.

In the La Salle College tourney, Terry McStravick paced his three freshmen colleagues to a fourth place finish by winning an award as third affirmative speaker.

The other freshmen who helped Villanova to gain its first debating honors of the year were Katherine Koller, Edgar Grey, and Richard Behreus.

Galie, Fitzmaurice, McStravick, and Joe Rohrer won six and lost four debates at Rosemont College on October 26 and 27. However, they did not qualify for an award.

Marines On Campus

The Marine Corps Officer Selection team will be on campus November 12, 13, 14, and 15, 1963 to interview men students for Marine Officer training programs.

The Officer Selection Team will be in Dougherty Hall to provide information and interview applicants.

All Marine officer training is conducted at Quantico, Virginia. Qualified seniors who accept the challenge of Marine leadership training will be draft deferred upon enrollment until they have met the requirements for their degree and graduate.

Upon graduation ,they will attend a ten week training course and then be commissioned.

Blocked Wild Kitten Punt Gives Preppers Winning Edge

by Tom Bruderle

A well-drilled smooth-working Bullis Prep eleven turned a blocked Villanova Wildkitten punt into a touchdown and edged the Blue and White 25-21 at Villanova Stadium last Saturday.

With several hundred fans looking on, Villanova was leading 14-13 midway in the third period, when Bullis took the lead. On fourth down, the Kittens were forced to punt from their own end zone and the visitors threw a strong rush at the kicker.

Prepper Roy Povin broke through the line and helped block the kick and then fell on it for a touchdown. The extra point try was no good.

Bosacco Scores Twice

Villanova drew first blood as John Bosacco popped over from the one and Jim Case kicked the first of three successful extra points. Bullis bounced back to tie the score at 7-7 with 6:17 showing in the second quarter.

Bosacco struck again, this time from seven yards out for the TD and Case made the score 14-7. With thirteen seconds left in the first half, Bullis picked up its second six-pointer but the point was blocked giving the Kittens a 14-13 advantage at the halftime intermission.

The third quarter featured the blocked punt and touchdown by Bullis which gave them a lead they never relinquished. In the opening minutes of the fourth quarter the Kittens stopped the Preppers on the Villanova 19.

On the first play from scrimmage, quarterback Gerry Bellotti fumbled and Bullis quickly took advantage of the opportunity by pushing across their final touchdown to make the score 25-14 with 11:10 to play. The extra point try was missed.

The ball changed hands, but with 2:41 left, Bellotti and Case scored with a touchdown and extra point each to make the score 25-21. Bullis took the kick-off but had to punt after three plays. The ball hit the Villanova safety man and Bullis recovered the ball and ran the clock out.

Helm Comments

Commenting on the game, Assistant Freshmen Coach Jack Helm attributed the loss to penalties and three fumbles, two things which have plagued the team all year. Nevertheless, Bullis is no pushover having defeated every Kitten squad except the 1961 and '62 teams.

Despite the 1-3 record, Helm believes that the team played good ball in their four game season. In the season's opener, the Kittens surprised a few people by giving the Army Plebes some fits before succumbing 20-17 at West Point.

On October 25, the squad went to Annapolis only to be thumped 33-0, but bounced back with a convincing whitewash of West Chester, 14-0. The Bullis Prep game was the season's finale.

Helm is somewhat pessimistic about the number of freshmen who can make next year's varsity team because of the large number of returnees from this year's squad.

Backs Gerry Bellotti, Richie Green and linemen Paul Sadaski, John Fry and Buddy Piper all have a good shot at next year's squad. Piper, incedentally turned in a fine game last Saturday, particularly on defense.

In addition to the above five, Bosacco, Case, John Kolmer, Chip Bender, George Hunt, Al Stopko, Tom Flandera all deserve close scrutiny at next year's spring practice.

Four All-Americans Provide Desired Depth To Open '63-64 Meets

Now in the fifth week of preseason practice, Villanova's Swimming team is priming for its first meet of the 1963-64 season against Princeton on December 4.

Four returning All-Americans, Co-captains Dick McDonough and Jack Geoghagen, Rick Girdler and Paul Wynn lead a strong returning group of lettermen who hope to better last year's second place finish in the NCAA Championships won by Yale.

Coach Ed Geisz has a pleasant problem, with seven strong contenders for the four man 400 metre relay team, the Wildcats bread and butter event of recent seasons.

Dick Rebak and Ray Donelly have shown great promise so far, and much hope is placed on them to give the squad greater depth.

For the frosh, who have a four-meet schedule Starting December 4 against Princeton, former New York City high school champion Tim Turvy and Greg Doyle, a past Catholic High school champ show the greatest promise.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

The Villanova Ice Hockey squad will begin its third consecutive year of intercollegiate competition this winter. The club is a member of the Eastern Pennsylvania Collegiate Hockey League.

Included in the league are teams representing Lehigh, Lafayette, Bucknell, and Franklin and Marshall Colleges. Most of the games in league feature a home-and-home series with each team.

The team that wins the league title is presented with the J. C. Nicholes Trophy.

According to team captain, "with the wealth of returning lettermen, the prospects for a winning season looks promising." Lettermen Clemente Cousins, Hal Canty, Ken Kilmartin, Kevin O'Shea, and Dick Thackery expect to fill the forward and center slots.

Charlie Zaccaria, Hilary Russell, and Bob Birmingham will take the chores of defense. Returning as goalie is Bernie Trott, who holds the league record of 58 saves in one game.

Season tickets will be available previous to the start of the schedule in early December.

ailing Club Vies For Eastern Title nder New Leader, Soph Linsalata

Joe Linsalata, a sophomore English major from Wynnewood, has replaced Dan rley as Commodore of the Villanova Sailing Club. Hurley is presently practicing for 1964 Olympics.

The club's under its new leaders are in a neck-in-neck battle with Princeton for the thical "Best-in-the-East" title. The recently gained a second place finish to Prince- in the Annual Sunday Varsity Regatta held at Princeton.

The sailers were handicapped by strong 20-30 mile-per-hour winds. Linsalata, in "A" division, garnered a st, second, third, and fourth th one disqualification.

Two Firsts

In the "B" division, Mike ley, a sophomore physics ajor, captured first twice d had one second, a third, and disqualification. In both divi- ns, club treasurer Mike Faas s the crew.

The final tally for the first ree teams participating in regatta was Princeton 66, llanova 53, and Rutgers 52. e 'Cats hope to gain revenge r their two disqualifications in e Frostbite Regatta at George- wn on December 7 & 8. This eet will be the last of the year d will determine the final east- n power.

Frosh Win

Meanwhile at the Naval Acaemy, the freshmen skippers on the Freshman Middle Atlanc Championships. Jay Hollenack, class "A" skipper, took wo firsts and one second. Jay lynn was crew for these 3 aces and took the helm for the nal two. He successfully gained a first in the fourth A race ut was disqualified for bumpg a buoy in the fifth.

Jim McLaughlin, B class skipper, led the team to victory with hree firsts and two seconds in his five efforts. Rich Holwell as his crew for all five races.

The nearest competitor to the rosh were the Princeton freshman contingent. The 'Cats outscored them 65-58.

Previous to their appearance n the Frostbite Regatta the varsity will meet the Princeton squad in a one day regatta on November 24 at Swarthmore.

In the club elections, the 22 ctive members also chose in ddition to Linsalata and Faas, Jim Gapstur as its Vice Commodore and Mike Riley as its Secretary.

One Last Fling

by Joe McCarthy

The season is about over now. There remains one regularly scheduled last fling. It won't be an easy one. The Quantico Marines, already bowl bound (Missile Bowl) with an 8-1 record, will test the offensive and defensive punch of Alex Bell's third consecutive winning squad.

Speculation is, if the 'Cats can show their worth in this last encounter, Alex Bell's third consecutive bowl bid might become a reality. We know from the past several performance and the tremendously improved play of many of the previously inexperienced line and backfield, that the 'Cats can and will show their worth.

We don't know about this bowl bid, but the offer would be a tremendous reward to a team that has taken a few hard knocks for the past two months. We hope so.

Senior scatback Bob Dunn has received little publicity for the only contribution to the Villanova record book this year. He is the best man Villanova has ever had return opposing kickoffs.

His 389 yards in 13 returns rank as a Villanova record for a single season. The old record belongs to Pete D'Alonzo of the 1950 squad. He had 310 yards in 13 tries. Dunn is a sure bet to break the "Most Number Returned" category next Saturday, if his sprained hand recovers sufficiently.

Mike Manger, Villanova extra point specialist now has ten consecutive conversions. He has yet to miss one . . . The touchdowns last weekend by McDonnell and Boyle were their first of the year. Both excelled in the Detroit encounter.

Al Atkinson, Villanova's All-East right tackle made the squad again, his fourth in eight tries this season. Could be that the Wildcats have an All American in the making for next year.

Individual rushing shows Jack Boyle, who has really come into his own this season, leading the 'Cats with a 4.5 average. He has eaten up 361 yards in 81 tries. Jim Thomas, Villanova Captain, is second with a 4.2 average with 289 yards in 69 carries. He also tops the 'Cats in scoring with four touchdowns, good for 24 points.

Basketball booklets are all out with Sports Illustrated the lone exception. Dell doesn't rate the 'Cats in the top twenty but does rate them second in the east to NYU who has gotten the nod for second in the country. Sport picks Villanova "best in the east, if not in the nation, and another book selects Jones and cohorts for the number 14 slot in the nation but behind NYU who again sets second in the nation rating. Roughly Played Rugby Game Won 3-3 Tie At Penn State

by Jerry Bruderle

Villanova's Rugby team traveled to Penn State on Saturday and, in a roughly played contest, gained a 3-3 tie what could be termed an "upset."

Much of the celebration around University Park was a result of Penn State's football victory over Ohio State, but the Rugby match also contributed its share.

Penn State played with a team made up of ex-football players, (including one 6-6 forward), and a Welch halfback, whose skill and knowledge of the game kept Villanova on the defensive for most of the time.

Unique Field

The playing field was sloped and had goal posts made of telephone poles. However the Wildcats failed to take advantage of their downhill field position in the first half. Consequently they had to play a strong defensive game uphill in the second half.

Villanova's Hal Canty opened the scoring with a try midway through the first half. The conversion was missed, allowing the Nittaney Lions to tie score. Bit on their score, the conversion was again missed.

Scoreless Second Half

The second half was a rough but cleanly-played defensive battle. Both teams missing scoring opportunties by failing to come up with the big play.

The Wildcats are now 2-4-1, with 2 games remaining. This Saturday, they entertain Lehigh across from Villanova at 9:30.

Cat's Tennis Team Views Varsity Status Following Tournament

Villanova can anticipate a tennis team this spring. The possibility of the squad attaining varsity status, according to its organizer Bob Mulligan, has been brought before the university's Director of Athletics, Art Mahan. Mahan appeared optimistic.

A tournament of some thirty students is presently being held. Mulligan hopes that through this tournament he will have some method by which he can determine the quality of its participants.

Another big step just completed is the offer of help from Norm Brumall coach of the Haverford College team in assisting Wildcat egorts in organizing a squad.

47-19 Victory Over Explorers Earns An Undefeated Season

by Bob Skinner

Saturday Villanova's Cross Country team perpetrates its 1963 string of victories, and remained undefeated in four years of dual meet competition, by taking the measure of LaSalle College of Philadelphia, 19-47.

Under the guidance of "Jumbo" Jim Elliott, who substituted for ailing mentor Jim Tuppeny, Captain Vic Zwolak, Tom Sullivan and Dave Hyland swept first, second and third places with the identical time of 24:33. Marty Ferko was fourth with the time of 24:42, and Jim Orr, Noel Carroll and Jim Smyth were tenth, tenth and twelfth respectively.

Paul Minehan, who was the first to finish for LaSalle, and the fifth in the race, broke his own school record of 25:10 with the time of 24:46.

Minehan led for the first two miles, but in the woods, Zwolak and Hyland passed him and maintained the lead. With two hundred yards left before the finish line, Tom Sullivan joined his mates to establish the final order.

Under good running conditions, he team ran its best race of the year, and appears fit to defend last year's IC4A crown at Van Courtland Park in New York on November 1.

The Frosh had their third and final dual meet before the IC4A's this Monday, after the event had twice been twice been postponed because of rain.

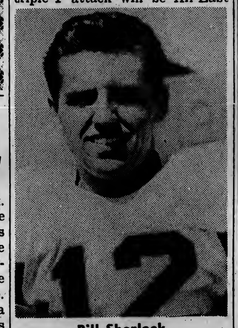
Spiteful Quantico Aims Missiles At 'Cats After Winning Eight In Row



by Tom Willson

Villanova's Sun-Bowl squad romped over Quantico, 34-0, in 1961 when "Bulldozer" Billy Joe (currently starrting with the Denver Broncos of the AFL) had a field day as he trampled the entire Quantico team. A tenacious Wildcat defense prevented any "leatherneck" scores in an overwhelming victory for Alex Bell's Mainliners.

Wildcat fans are aware that this Saturday's battle with the Marines from Quantico, Virginia will be no pushover. The Leathernecks are famous for their toughness and esprit de corps throughout the world and are an awesome military machinery on the gridiron as well. The Quantico Marines command respect from all quarters this season as they won their first eight and boast of victories over Xavier (97) and Holy Cross (7-6) while posting an overall mark of 8-1.

The Cuban Crisis brought the Marines' drive for a third straight national service championship to a screeching halt. In 1962, the hardnosed leathernecks compiled an impressive 5-2 slate before making their exit from the 1962 football spotlight.

Quarterbacking the Quantico triple-T attack will be All-East

Bill Sherlock

Pat McCarthy, formerly of Holy Cross, whose graduation from his Alma Mater has dealt an irreparable blow to the Crusader attack this season. Meanwhile, the Marines are benefiting from his services as an expert signal-caller, who excels in clutch play and was well-known in New England as a deft and dangerous leader.

Villanova's fine defensive unit will be confronted with a veteran and proven backfield which was further strengthened by newcomers McCarthy and former Penn State fullback Dave Hayes. Two former Villanova stars, center Hank Gotard and halfback Tom O'Rourke, play a major role in making the Marines tougher than ever this season.

The Wildcats will field a deeper, faster, and stronger line than their opponents and our forward wall will embark on an intensified effort to spark a convicing victory over the Quantico Marines. The Wildcats' flashly senior quarterback, Bill Sherlock along with power-runner Jim Thomas, hope to terminate their collegiate football careers with a top-notch performance against the leathernecks.

The 'Cat kick-off return specialist, Bob Dunn, ace-pass receiver Jack Clifford, speedy halfback Jack Boyle, hard-hitting Frank Culotta and Al Reinoso will play their final games for Villanova.

Summing up, the Villanova-Quantico clash should prove to be the most exciting and colorful contest of the season, as the fired up Wildcats intend to post another victory while the '63 football campaign draws to a successful completion.

'Cats Rout Favored Detroit As Thomas, McDonnell Star

by Joe McCarthy

"28-14 Mistake" was how the overline in the Detroit Free Press read last Saturday morning. The Villanova Wildcats had routed the University of Detroit Friday night for their first away win in ten years against the Titans.

But it was no mistake. The 'Cats had jelled, just as their performance a week before against Holy Cross had indicated. There were very few glaring errors and no costly ones. The Cats really shined.

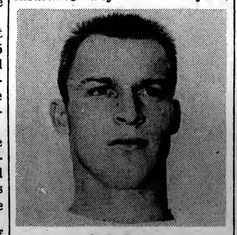
The defense held the Detroit offense ground thrust to 115 yards. Of this yardage, Fred Beier, ranked fifth in the nation in rushing previous to the game, accounted for 88 in 18 attempts.

On one set of downs in the third period, the charging Wildcat line threw the frustrated Titans for 28 yards loss. This show of strength precipitated the first Wildcat score.

Down by 6-0 at the start of the second quarter, the 'Cats were aided by a 15 yard punt return by Dick Sernyak and a 15 yard personal foul penalty. Paydirt was hit with a 6 yard Sherlock to Boyle touchdown.



A fumble by Titan quarterback Bill Madaya and a recovery by Bill Quigley, starting his first game of the season at left guard, led to the second Wildcat touchdown with just 40 seconds remaing on the first half clock. Taking over the ball on the twenty, it took the Main liners four plays to complete the score as Dave Connell hit junior halfback with a pinpoint pass in the end zone from the 18 yard line.

Sernyak's reception was a feat in itself. He took the pass as it angled through the outstreched arms of a Detroit defender. The score sent the Wildcats to the dressing room with a 14-6 halftime lead.

It wasn't until the first play of the fourth quarter that the Titans scored again with fullback Baier going over from the two on a fourth down play. Previously the Villanova defense had stalled a Detroit drive on the eight yard line.

The role of hero, however, went to junior end John McDonnell. His 26 yard interception return of a Detroit pass accounted for the decisive tally. For the past two years McDonnell has been noted for his defensive prowess but had yet to tally any Wildcat points.

On the next set of downs for Villanova, the 'Cats added an insurance tally with a 64 yard,

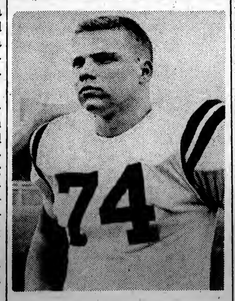
Bob Dunn

13 play drive. Captain Jim Thomas, fired up by the McDonnell touchdown, spear-headed the drive with 46 yards rushing and a final plunge from the Detroit one.

Accolades belong to many ballplayers for their heads-up football. Each man who wore the Wildcat uniform last Friday was a hero and rightly so.

John McDonnell receives "Soda Pop Shower" for a job well done after the Detroit game.

PROFILE



All American, 1964!

by Roy Baron

Al Atkinson is a quiet, mild-mannered young man, who, despite his size (6-1, 225 pounds), will walk around campus practically unnoticed.

But on Saturday afternoons, coaches from both teams the press, the professional scouts, the fans and the opposing linemen and backs are constantly made aware of his presence.

Last weekend in the Cats 28-14 victory over Detroit, Al spent 58 minutes on the field. Most of the time while playing defense, he was being double-teamed by two Titan blockers.

Al Atkinson

He still managed to make enough tackles to rate being picked for the weekly All-East team. This was the second week in a row and the fourth time this season that he has been chosen.

An All-Catholic and All-Scholastic selection at Monsignor Bonner High School, Al chose Villanova over Penn State and all the other local colleges. His reasons for this were that he wanted attend a Catholic college and he preferred to stay close to home. At present he is an accounting major with an overall cumulative of 2.5

Al, who lives in near-by Upper Darby comes from a large family, two brothers and four sisters. He keeps in shape during the summer months working as a stone-mason's helper.

Many professional scouts have already shown a great deal of interest in Atkinson even though he is only a junior. Line Coach Lou Ferry, a former pro himself, rates Al as an excellent professional prospect.

Compared with Charlie Johnson, Villanova's All-East tackle last year, Ferry said, "Even though Atkinson is not as big as Johnson, he's quicker, and for this reason is a better line man."

Ferry believes that Atkinson, if he does not grow enough to make it as a tackle in the pros, could do well as a linebacker or a guard. As far as Atkinson is concerned, he prefers to wait.

The effect of Al's presence on the field is certainly felt by his teammates. Just watching him work in practice and playing better than fifty minutes without letting up cannot help but serve as an inspiration to his teammates.

His teammates often kid him about time Coach Alex Bell refused to get on the bus for an away game until Allen came. Nevertheless, one of the members of the Team agreed with the Coach's thinking when he said," Al does everything but score the touchdowns."

Five Nursing Students Chosen From Diversified Candidates

Thirty-seven seniors have been selected for "Who's Who In American Colleges and Universities".

The number is the most ever accepted from Villanova by the organization. The normal complement is thirty-six.

Pictures and biographies of those selected appear on pages 8, 9, 10, and 11 of this edition.

Five nursing students appear on the list, the largest number in recent years.

In addition to the five nurses, there are 8 engineering students, 5 Commerce and Finance students, 19 Liberal Arts students.

The finalists were chosen by a committee consisting of the Rev. George McLaughlin, OSA, dean of men; Rev. Joseph Kemme, OSA, vice-president for student affairs; Miss Dorothy Boyle, dean of women; Rev. Richard Appicci, OSA, dean of student activities; Rev. William Hopkins, OSA, University Chaplain; Martin McGuinn, student body president; and James Murphy, senior class president

The committee chose the final thirty-seven from lists submitted by a committee of student leaders, the deans of the various colleges, and the moderators of recognized student organizations.

The finalists will appear in a booklet, along with those selected from other colleges, published by the national organization.

A banquet will be held sometime, during December for the Whos Who selectees.

The nominees were selected on the basis of activity in student organizations, good standing with the authority of the University, and a minimum 2.5 cumulative average.

An Editorial

A Ridiculous Dilemma

The Student Council will be faced with a ridiculous dilemma tonight. Either what's right is wrong, or what's wrong is right. Sound foolish? It is.

One of the contributing factors to this predicament is the Student Senate. It recommended for passage a motion that would enlarge the cheerleading squad by the addition of three female cheerleaders. This motion, although recommended by the Senate, was defeated by the Student Congress on Nov. 6 after active debate.

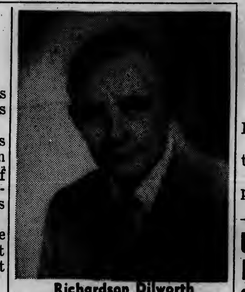
Last week two more motions were presented to the Student Senate. One states that undergraduates (without regard to race, creed, or sex) be equal before the Student Council. This was recommended for passage.

However, the second motion calls for the Student Council to permit and encourage all male and female undergraduates the right and privilege of participating in any and all of the activities that are a part of the Council. And, also, that the Council condemn any discrimination against male or female students.

This motion was recommended for defeat by the Student Senate. Logically then, the Senate is recognizing the rights of students (male and female), but is permitting discrimination against those rights.

When these two motions come before the Congress tonight a number of things can happen. The Congress must either grant all students the same rights or discriminate against some (e. g. women).

If the Congress grants equal rights for all students (women included) then women will have the right to be cheerleaders. If the second motion is defeated then women students will have the rights of all other students but will not be permitted or encouraged to exercise those rights.



If the Congress rejects both these proposals then all students will not have equal rights or privileges and can be discriminated against.

These are all suppositions growing out of the defeat of the proposal for women cheerleaders. There should, in fact, be no issue over women's rights here at Villanova.

Nowhere in the Student Handbook does it say that women (or men) must be chosen by an act of the Student Congress to be cheerleaders. It does say, however, that students may join extra-curricular activities. Cheerleading is an extra-curricular activity. If women don't have the rights of students then we might as well not even consider them as students, even though they also pay tuition.

The whole problem revolves around one question. Are women students? "If the Student Senate and the Congress can not make up their mind on this issue then it is up to the Student Body to raise its voice in condemnation or approval.

You as students have a duty to see that your governing body is protecting your rights and privileges as students — whether male or female. One way to do this is by attending the Student Congress meeting tonight. Bring your common sense.

Richardson Dilworth To Address Law Forum Tonight At Garey Hall

Richardson Dilworth, former mayor of Philadelphia, will address the Villanova Law Forum tonight at 8:30 p.m. in Garey Hall.

This Forum, originally scheduled for November 15, is the second in a series of three sessions dealing with the topic, "The City Faces Its Problems."

Mr. Dilworth was Mayor of Philadelphia from 1955 to 1962. He was President of the American Municipal Association and the United States Conference of Mayors. During his administration both he and the City of Philadelphia received national acclaim for the progress made in solving urban problems, particularly in transportation.

Earlier in the year, he was appointed Chairman of the Transportation Study of the Boston-Washington Corridor by President Kennedy.

Mr. Dilworth graduated from Yale University in 1921 and Yale Law School in 1926. He is a senior partner in the law firm of Dilworth, Paxson, Kalish, Kohn, and Dilks in Philadelphia.

It is the purpose of this year's Law Forum to examine the Undergrad Thespians Present 'Inherit Wind' Starring James Mason

The Belle Masque Society will open its season tonight at 8:30 p.m. in Vasey Hall. The first production will be the well-known Broadway play, Inherit the Wind.

The play was written by Lawrence and Lee. It was made into a movie, released in 1960, starring Spencer Tracy as Henry Drummond and Frederick March as Matthew Harrison Brady.

Inherit the Wind is based on the famous Scopes Monkey trial of the mid-1920's. First performed in Dayton, Tennessee, the drama is enacted in the milieu of a sweltering courtroom.

John Scopes, a secondary school teacher, was indicted for teaching the theory of evolution. This raised quite a furor because some people believed in a literal interpretation of Genesis.

Scopes was defended by Clarence Darrow in the trial. In the play, the name Henry Drummond was substituted for Darrow.

The prosecuting attorney was the three-time presidental can-

Guest Playwright Sidney Kingsley Attends Premier Of 'Night Life'

The Graduate Theatre's first production of Night Life on Friday, November 15, was attended by a special invitational audience. Among the guests was the playwright, Sidney Kingsley, and his actress wife, Madge Evans. Others were Henry Murdock from the Philadelphia Inquirer, Barney Sackett from WIP and Frank Ford who reviews for WPEN.

Appearing in the cast is Richard Harshberger holding the leading role of Lou Bagettle. Lou is a soft, easy-going man who runs a furniture business and is deeply concerned for his fellow man.

Labor leader Will Kazar, a self-made man who has pulled himself up from the slums and has become the undisputed ruler of a world of crime and sinister movements, is played by Thomas Nevins, designer and technical director of the department.

The author of the Playbox's last production, David Rabe, appears as actor in the role of Neal Bennet, a lawyer who avoids conflicts in a world of futility and decadence. Instead, he assumes an air of casual, sophisticated indifference.

didate, William Jennings Bryan, who is called Matthew Harrison Brady in the drama.

There are some moments of comic relief admixed with the dramatic highlights. Jim Mason, president of Belle Masque, will play the lead role of Henry Drummond.

The role of Matthew Harrison Brady will be played by John Meehan and Bill Byrne will portray E. K. Hornbeck, a character based on H. L. Mencken. Two other members of the cast include: Mary Byrne, Cookie Cook, Brian Morgan, Betty Cain of Rosemont and Ed Marmoski.

The stage manager is Dick Pazden and Tom Zielazny is in charge of the scenery. The entire club will take part in the play making it the largest cast in Belle Masque history. The troupe consists of 33 members.

Thomas Nevins, an instructor in the Theatre Department, will direct Inherit the Wind. Evening performances will run from Wednesday, Novemuer 20, to Saturday, November 23.

Curtain time is 8:30 p.m. and there will be a matinee at 2 p.m. on Saturday. All performances will be given in Vasey Hall.

Tickets have been on sale since Monday. They are priced at $1 for students and $1.25 general admission and can be purchased at the Pie Shoppe.

Commenting on the play, Mr. Nevins said, "As always, Belle Masque is trying for the best possible production."

Noted Scientist Dr. Bradley To Lecture Psychologists

Dr. Joseph V. Bradley, chief of the department of psychology at Walter Reed Army Hospital, will address the Villanova Psychological Society on Thursday evening, November 21, at 8 p.m.

Having held his present position for nearly a decade, Dr. Bradley has amassed considerable experience in the field making him more than capable of handling the chosen topic of his dissertation, "Behavioral Stress and Physiological Change."

His bachelorate in science was earned at Fordham University in 1943. He was awarded a Doctor of Philosophy degree by the University of Chicago in 1951. Since 1955 he has been a lecturer at the University of Maryland.

He is a pioneer in the field of psychopharmacology, being one of the men responsible for the introduction of that field of study in the United States. This science involves the study of certain forms of animal behavior as a method of evaluating phychoactive drugs.

An example of the use of psychopharmacology would be operant conditioning of animals under control conditions and under the influence of tranquilizing drugs.

In addition to the aforementioned pioneering venture, Dr. Bradley is also recognized by the international scientific brotherhood as a leader in the relatively new field of experimental psychology.

Dr. Bradley has been honored by his colleagues on many occasions and is a member of a number of professional fraternities, among them the American Psychological Association, the American Association for the Advancement of Science in which organization he is a Fellow.

Moreover he is a Fellow of the New York Academy of Science, and holds membership in the American Psychopathological Association, and the American Academy of Neurology.

This lecture, which will be held in 209 Bartley Hall, is open to every member of the academic community.

Mr. Moritz Announces Conference Speakers

Mr. Moritz, the head of the Placement Office, has announced the identity of speakers for the Career Conference on December 5.

Among them is S. R. Ryder, regional director of the U.S. Civil Service Commission, who will speak on "Preparation for the Interview." Richard Jamison, personnel manager for The National Drug Company, will lecture on "What does the employer look for in the interview."

M. G. Dinsmore, the third speaker, college relations man for Western Electric, will talk on "What information should the student expect from the interview."

Following the speeches there will be a "free-wheeling" question and answer session between students and visiting recruiters. Opportunity will be afforded at the close of the session to talk to visiting interviewers who will be stationed around the Field House.

THE VILLANOVAN BASKETBALL EDITION WILL APPEAR ON DECEMBER 4.

Beta Gamma Hosts Tourney 30 Universities To Debate

Villanova Debating Society, Beta Gamma, will play host to representatives from nearly 30 colleges and universities who will arrive on campus for the Villanova Tournament on November 22 and 23.

The tournament has been expanded to a two-day affair this year and, for the first time, each team will switch sides, debating affirmative and negative alternately in succeeding rounds.

Altogether, 150 debates will be held in rounds of competition. Each school will enter two teams and prizes will be awarded to schools compiling the best won and lost record in 10 debates.

Carl Green, student chairman of the event, has assigned Terry Cooney to the job of finding timekeepers. Carole Toczylowski is in charge of hospitality and refreshments, while Terry McStravick heads the scheduling and tabulating committee.

Representing Villanova in the tournament will be Terry Cooney, Dave Galie, Joseph Rohrer, and Eugene Fitzmaurice.

Most of the schools in the Philadelphia area will be represented in the tournament. Schools from outside the area included the U.S. Naval Academy, Penn State, University of Delaware, Georgetown University, Seton Hall, C. W. Post, and the College of William and Mary.

The debates will be held at 4:30 p.m. and 7 p.m. on Friday, and 9 a.m., 11 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. on Saturday.

'64 Pre-Registration For Spring Semester

Students in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, Commerce and Finance, and Nursing will be required to pre-register for the spring semester.

Pre-registration for the students in Liberal Arts and Sciences has tentatively been set for December 3 to 19. Juniors and seniors in Commerce and Finance will pre-register during the week of December 9, and freshmen and sophomores will pre-register during the week of December 16.

Pre-registration for Nursing will take place from December 2 to 13. Engineering students are not required to pre-register.

ICG Hosts Socialist Taylor, Plans Regional Conferences

The Villanova Intercollegiate Conference on Government, on Wednesday, December 11, will host as its first speaker of the year George S. Taylor, the Socialist-Labor Party Candidate for mayor in the recent Philadelphia election.

Mr. Taylor, noted for his critical views of the American capitalistic system as it exists today, is the foremost speaker for the Socialist-Labor party in South-eastern Pennsylvania. His speech will be entitled "A Criticism of U.S. Capitalism and Soviet Despotism.

This will be Mr Taylor's second appearance on campus this year, he was recently interviewed by WWVU's Frank Sauers on his show "Just This Side of the Fringe."

Besides their speaker program the ICG has also been doing a good deal of work in preparation for the coming regional and state conference which will be held during the second semester of the year. According to the Chairman, Jerry Cardamone, the chapter has already held four meetings in which proposals have been outlined, although no actual debate has taken place yet.

At a recent executive session, it was decided that the Villanova chapter would attempt to prepare approximately ten legislative planks on such topics as civil rights, federal aid, and other national current political issues.

These issues are first proposed and debated by members within the chapter, after which they are assigned to special committees which prepare them to be presented before the regional convention.

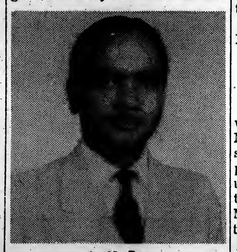
The regional meeting, to be held during the second semester, will take place at Villanova.

Student Council Mixer At Field House Dec. 6

The Social Affairs Committee of the Student Council has invited 14 local girls' schools to a gala mixer to be held in the Field House on Friday, December 6.

John E. Roberts and Jack Ryan, co-chairmen of the affair, have planned an extensive advertising campaign for the mixer aimed at bringing to the Main Line campus a veritable plethora of girls from nearby schools.

The entertainment for the mixer will be provided by the "Verdicts", a band which has recently gained wide acclaim with Villanova students.



The mixer will start at 8:30 and continue until 12:30. This earlier than usual start is planned for the event in order to give the girls' boarding school contingent ample time to return to their respective campuses.

Villanova Political Union Conducts Republican Primary

The Villanova Political Union will sponsor a Republican preferential primary on Thursday, November 21, in the Pie Shoppe.

Frank Dunne, secretary of the Union, has announced that the primary is being conducted so that a sampling of student opinion concerning Republican Presidential hopefuls will be taken.

The Union feels that this will give university students who discuss the strength of liberal and conservative candidates the opportunity to demonstrate the popularity of their respective ideologies.

At the balloting table applications for membership will also be accepted. In the past the Union has not only attracted students interested in a political career, but also those who are interested in the important foreign and domestic issues of the day and who desire to express their views to other interested students.

Caucuses for the three parties will also be held on November 21 in 112, 214, and 303 Bartley Hall. These caucuses will serve to familiarize new members with the Union as well as to prepare for the next debate to be held Monday night, November 25, at 7 p.m. in 110 Bartley.

The guest speaker at this debate will be A. K. Ray, secretary for Poltical Affairs of the Indian Embassy. Mr. Ray, an experienced diplomat, will speak on the topic, Resolved: That this house favors substantial cuts in economic aid to unaligned nations.

Sonny Drake, whose sick comedy crystalizes the mood of decadence that pervades the play, is acted by Dennis Ciesil, a recent graduate of Quincy College

Anna Brem, movie queen and goddess of beauty who is torn between her love for Neal and her desire for perversion, is played by Irene Walsh.

Other performances of Night Life will be from November 22-24, and from December 6-8 and 13-15. Tickets are $1.00 for students and $1.25 for adults. They may be purchased at the ticket window of the Playbox or reserved by calling LA 5-4600, Ext. 454, Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Reservations must be paid for by 8:15 on the night of the performance.

All performances begin at 8:30 p.m.

Spanish Night Festivities Include Comedy And Music

"Noche Espanola," the twenty-ninth annual literary-musical review of the Spanish Club will take place on Friday night, December 6, at 7 p.m., in Vasey Auditorium.

The initial stage of the program will consist of performances by Carol Verano, a soprano from Cabrini College, Edward Perze, a magician, Joe Prestilco and Jim Croce of the Villanova Singers, a pianist, two guitarists, the Spires, and the T-Tones from Rosemont College.

The second segment of the evening's festivities will feature a one-act comedy, El Puntapie Invisible (The Invisible Kick), starring Nestor Sala, Hilda Rivas, Gabriel Falla, Francisco Gonzalez, Jose Ursic, Manuel Rodriguez, and Daisy Maldonado of Cabrini College. Refreshments will be served during the intermission.

Vito J. DiVincenzo moderator of the club, stated that the Consul of Spain in Philadelphia, Dr. Victor Sanchez-Mesas, will address the assembly prior to the intermission.

Following the play, there will be a social dance in Bartley cafeteria. No admission will be charged for any of the activities.

Francisco Claro, assistant consul of Spain in Philadelphia, and consuls from various Latin American countries will also be in attendance.

Faculty and students from Rosemont, Immaculata, Chestnut Hill, and Cabrini Colleges have been invited. An invitation is extended to any other interested persons.

Traditional Weekend For Charity Outing To Be Held Dec. 13-14

The Junior Class, under the direction of President Jack Emery, is rapidly finalizing plans for Charity Weekend to be held December 13 and 14. All proceeds from the weekend will be forwarded to the Orphans Scholarship Fund.

The traditional junior weekend will begin on Friday night in the Field House with the Charity Ball. The dance will be held from 8:30 to 12:30 with free refreshments served.

The theme of the dance is "'Twas the Night Before Christmas" and the music will be by the Villanovans. The highlight of the evening will be the presentation of Villanova's "Missing Link".

Saturday morning a bus will take Villanova students and their dates to St. John's Orphanage to claim their "Johnnie" for a day of entertainment, shopping, and excitement.

The "Missing Link" Contest, under the chairmanship of Don Pellecchia, will be set up in the Pie Shoppe. All those wishing to vote for a friend who most resembles the "Missing Link" can do so at the price of one cent per vote.

Collections will also be taken up in all theology classes in conjunction with the project. Proceeds will be for the Scholarship Fund.

Last Chance Today To Join Peace Corps

A special Peace Corps informational team from Washington, D. C., is spending its last day on campus today.

The team has been encouraging students to fill out the questionnaire application and to take the placement test, which will be given at 2, 4:30 and 7 p.m. today in the faculty dining room in Dougherty Hall.

If students fill out the questionnaire and take the test, they can learn in a month whether or not they are acceptable for Peace Corps service, Paul Vanderwood, one of the Peace Corp Representatives, said. Usually, it takes much longer.

Seniors and juniors are especially being encouraged to complete the application process. Seniors who are acceptable will be invited to a training program next spring — that's when they make their decision about the Peace Corps, Vanderwood said, "But even after that, if something comes up and a person feels he cannot serve, he is free to leave."

Qualifications for Peace Corps service are 18-years-old (there's no upper age limit), good physical and mental health and a U. S. citizen.

What should students who are interested in the Peace Corps do after the information team leaves?

"See the Rev. George F. Riley OSA, on campus," Vanderwood said. "He is our liason person on campus."

Grad Record Exams To Be Given Soon

Doctor Swift has announced that the Graduate Records Examination will be given on December 16 for all senior psychology majors. These are all-day tests with the general aptitude section in the morning and the advanced achievement section in the afternoon. Results will be available early in January.

Rejuvenated Gamma Phi Honor Society Aims To Spark Academic Excellence

Gamma Phi Honor Society, reorganized in October, 1963, elected their officers for the year on November 6. They are: Richard Bennett, president; Michael Helmick, vice-president; Thomas Rzepski, treasurer; Gerald Chapman, secretary.

The functions of the society were decided at this meeting. They include: the development of a new student tutor program for C & F students, the exploration of an honor program, and the development of senior seminars in the various major fields of Commerce and Finance.

Purpose Outlined

The purpose of Gamma Phi, as outlined by Dr. Walter H. Klein, moderator, is to stimulate academic excellence in the college, to recognize achievements in the student body, and to enable students to make more meaningful contributions to the college.

Dr. Klein also alluded to a message from the Rev. Philip F. Barrett, OSA, dean of C & F, which expressed Father's deep interest in the work of the society and his hopes for its successful future.

The society's membership consists of seniors and juniors who maintain a 3.00 average and meet the requirements of a competitive interview. The interview is conducted by a panel consisting of the officers and faculty members.

Lectures to be Sponsored

A series of lectures will be sponsored by Gamma Phi to inform members and interested students of graduate work in business economics, business opportunities, research developments in business fields, and to reactivate the Business Whirl as the C & F student publication.

Included as guest speakers in the lecture series will be Dr. James F. Anderson of the Philosophy Department and Mr. Stephen J. Carroll, Industrial Administration.

The next meeting will be held on November 20, at 2:30 p.m., in 109 Bartley Hall. Application for the society will be accepted in the second semester.

Former Lynx Editor, Murphy 2nd Literary Award Selectee

Frank Quattrone, president of the Villanova Literary Society, has announced the second winner of the society's literary award for the outstanding contribution to each issue of the Lynx.

Winner for the Spring issue of 1962 is Frank Murphy, author of "The Fraud." Murphy, 1962-63 editor of the Lynx and selectee to Who's Who, is now taking post-graduate courses in creative writing at Purdue University.

All winners of the semiannual award receive personalized plaques, while their names are placed on the Honor-roll plaques which are on permanent display in the Reserve Room of the library.

The executive board of the Literary Society has voted to expand the award this year to include dinner for the winner, along with the officers, at the expense of the club.

John O'Hara one of the most prolific of contemporary men of letters, will be the author under consideration at tomorrow's literary discussion during the activities period in 204 Vasey.

The underlying dominant theme will be O'Hara's contribution to the modern literary milieu.

One reason contemporary critics reject O'Hara interpretation of morality is that the critic himself fails to relate what he sees in himself to what is outside of himself — society. This is the apogee of O'Hara's vision.

Portrette

The Man-Behind-The-Scenes

Variously described as a rotund teddy bear enveloped in a cloud of smoke and Italy's humorous gift to Villanova, affable Peter J. Smith usually may be found lurking in the Student Council Office.

Pete came to Villanova four years ago from the wilds of Garden City, New York, where he attended Garden City High School. Pete's school spirit not only pervades his activities, but it also directs, enforces, and manages them.

As may be recalled, Pete was the barker for his roommate Jim Murphy last year during the Senior Class campaign. The size of Pete's heart and sense of humor match his body which he admits as "portly".

His sense of humor as emcee endeared him to the captive audience during Parents' Weekend. Never a clinging vine or wallflower, Pete's ebulliant spirit is reflected by his activities as a member of the Spirit Committee for four years and the Cheerleading Squad for three years, which he leads as captain this year.

He was the Social Chairman for Belle Masque during his sophomore year and now is its Student Council representative. His dramatic work for the Belle Masque has earned him not only membership, but also the Presidency of Alpha Psi Omega the National Dramatic Fraternity. Who can forget Pete's role as the officer in Mr. Roberts or again as the lovable bartender in William Saroyan's The Time of Your Life?

This busy senior's activities span the time of his Villanova years. He was a member of both the Junior and Senior Steering Committees as well as the Charity Outing Committee, and Junior Weekend Committee last year. It was in conjunction with the last that he wrote the program for the Peter, Paul, and Mary Concert.

His emcee ability came in handy again for Mothers' Day last year. As man-behind-the-scenes Pete was Chairman last week of the Rise Stevens Concert. Mention the hours of work that make up just one of these projects and P. J. will slap you on the back, crack a joke, and change the subject. This versatile senior also holds membership in the Marketing Society.

Asked to summarize four years of college, Pete answered: "Villanova has given me so much more than mere factual knowledge. It has given me friendships, diverse outlooks on life, and a suffrage and respect for others' opinions. The student who hasn't realized the advantage of intangible values not contained in a book has wasted both time and money. It is this heritage that makes me state that Villanova is more than outstanding, it is the best."

This love of life will carry P.J. far in graduate school and life. This collegiate impetus will make PJ.'s future life in advertising and sales as much a success as his past at Villanova.

Cold Blatter A "Shoo-In"

by Frank Sauers

Governor Rockefeller's announcement last week that he is now an active candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination fooled no one.

Everyone knows that the GOP candidate next year will undoubtedly be Senator Weary Coldblatter, suave leader of the party's "Preservative wing." We talked the other day by phone with the Senator's campaign manager.

"Rockefeller is just another Kennedy," he said "what we need is a candidate who will appeal to the good, wholesome, pro-American segments of the American public.

Already we have pledges of support from such groups as the Daughters of the American Revolution, the John Birch Society, Ku Klux Klan, Minutemen, Black Muslims, the State of Mississippi, and the entire U.S. Steel Board of Directors.

This is grass roots, son. It's about time we turned those fuzzy heads in Washington out to pasture and returned government to the hands of the people."

"Hasn't Senator Coldblatter," we asked, "been accused of being against everything and in favor of nothing?" "That's true," he said, "and it is a complete distortion. Just think about it.

"Senator Coldblatter is 'in favor of' leveling the U.N., he is "in favor of' drowning the East, he is ' in favor of' banning the importation of pressed ham from Communist Poland and a million other positive things."

"Is Senator Coldblatter still opposed to the income tax?" we asked. "In principle, definitely," he said, "the senator in a speech last week to the Intercollegiate Society of Millionaires told the youths to oppose the income as a socialist intrusion on their personal freedom.

"Do you realize," he said, 'that after taxes a person making 3 million dollars a dollar a year would be left with little more than a milion to live on? It's a disgrace.'

"Just to prove that the Senator is willing to compromise in order to serve the common good, he has decided simply to oppose the graduated income tax."

"Good," we said, "that will certainly attract the low-income groups."

"Didn't Senator Coldblatter vote against the treaty banning the testing of nuclear bombs?" "Very definitely," he said, "We are quite proud of that; it should win the election for us."

"Why," we said, "isn't it a good thing?" "What? Are you crazy," he said, "do you realize what that evil treaty could mean? Peace! You can just imagine what that would do to the economy!"

Some exciting possibilites are already in prospect should Senator Coldblatter become President.

He already has some imaginative ideas about a cabinet: William F. Buckley for Secretary of Labor; Governor Wallace for Attorney-General; W. F. Buckley for Secretary of Welfare; Robert Welch as Chief Justice; W. F. Buckley for Treasury Secretary; and because of the humane battle against the Communists, Madame Nhu as chairman of the Presidents Council on Inter-group relations.

Letters To The Editor

To the Editor

The motion which I introduced before the Student Council has generated much diversified comment. The question of whether or not we should allow three Villanova undergraduate females to be permitted to join the present male cheerleading squad was defeated on November 7 by vote of the Student Council.

Since then the real issues have been clouded by those who do not wish to see girl cheerleaders at Villanova. For the sake of clarity, I would like to restate why I introduced the motion.

The primary end which I had hoped to achieve was an increase of school spirit. Girls possess an ability to generate the enthusiasm of the fans, which is exactly what is needed at Villanova.

Secondarily, I contend that a true image of the University would be projected. Girls do attend Villanova and we should not go out of our way to hide this fact.

Opponents contend that national prestige of the University would be seriously hampered by having girl cheerleaders. It would be an admittance to the public that girls, in fact, do attend Villanova. Is this a bad thing?

Girls are really a very integral part of our University. They are eligible to vote for office, to hold seats in the Student Council and the Steering Committees, and to run for class office. They are represented in most of the activities on campus and always give valuable aid to class projects.

Are these people deserving of having their identity as students of this university cast aside lightly? Should these people be subject to the whims of the prestige conscious dreamers on campus?

When will these dreamers cast aside their perverted visions of grandeur and national prestige and face the realities of life?

To the Editor:

This year's Student Council has been one of the most controversial assemblies in recent years. Controversy itself can have a very positive influence in student government because of the interest it creates among the student body.

This year's Council has brought itself into the spotlight and at least now people have been brought to realize that "those guys" do something besides bringing in speakers and handing out Senior car privileges.

However, there is also an extreme to be avoided. Controversy for the sake of controversy puts the Council in the place of a debating society whose only purpose is one of forensics. It is necessary to remind some of our own members that ours is not.

Recently a motion regarding cheerleaders was discussed on the floor. Admittedly it was a "loaded gun" and some noise was expected. The vote was taken, the motion should have ended there. But it did not. I do not have to reiterate that a loaded gun in the hands of playful children is a dangerous thing. The gun has gone off.

At the last Senate meeting two motions were presented which championed the concept that once and for all, discrimination arising from creed, race, or sex be abolished from the Villanova campus. Hurrah!

That these arose from the way that the cheerleaders motion was handled on the floor of the Congress is obvious.

However, it is highly ironical that one of these motions was accepted and one rejected. The reason for this was two-fold The motion that was rejected was, in the admission of the author, incorrectly worded. The rather superfluous verbiage and slanted approach merited defeat in the Senate.

The second reason was not one of expression but of nature. It is obvious that the Senate (as will the Congress) did not relish the idea of having to bother with something so basic as to be assumed by the majority of people. The Senate accepted the first because it really had no choice. The second carried the whole thing to extremes and was rejected.

Before the student body is asked to judge the Council's actions, they should ask themselves what they consider the Council's purpose to be. If they wish an exercise in forensics by their representatives, then these motions are germaine to their purpose.

If the associate editors of this newspaper who in fact presented these motions were to be completely objective in their editorial policy, they would print not only their criticism, but these motions in their entirety which they submitted to the Student Council.

This evening the Student Council will once and for all deal with this question. I sincerely hope that it is not protracted to even more unnecessary lengths.

James McErlane
Student Council Vice-President for Student Affairs

On Our Letters

In the past much has been written and little said in a number of the letters to the editor. Since our job as spokesman for the students requires that we make every effort to present the views of as many students as possible we have printed a number lengthy letters.

But with this policy there comes the ever present danger of being the voice of a "clique" of "elite" group. To offset this influence, and to make for a more interesting editorial page, we of the Villanovan are reserving the right to condense all letters and material sent to us for the purpose of publication on the editorial page.

Those wishing to express their feelings on certain matters are asked to make their comments as brief as common sense and good judgement will allow.

Since we publish weekly we ask that all interested parties have their letters in by one week in advance of the date of publication.

All letters must be signed, but name will be withheld upon request.

On the 26th of October a major portion of the United States changed from Daylight Savings Time to Eastern Standard Time. It is hoped that by the time this note is in print the Villanova University will also put its clocks one hour forward, or, if not, at least make them all the same wrong time.

President's Report

Inaccuracies Condemned

by Marty McGuinn
President, Student Body

Expressions of opinions are always valid, provided that such subjective statements have their foundation in clear and accurate facts. Discussions presented for the consideration of the student body at large can be beneficial and should be directed for the purpose of achieving a concrete solution.

It has been the purpose (and, indeed, has been the intention) of this column, to disclose legislation and matters pertinent to the student body, so as to create an awareness and interest.

The Student Council Tutor program, the result of past legislation, is among the many projects which should be explained.

It appears, however, that the controversy concerning recent actions of the congress merits additional comment here.

Letters and editorials in the VILLANOVAN have criticized the Student Council for its seemingly conflicting reaction to certain motions, its procedured methods in others, and, finally, its status as originator of projects.

I am not condemning the authors' freedom of expression, but do regret the inaccuracies and unfair distortions which are often presented to the sometimes uniformed masses.

The important and underlying issue in these circumstances is the sincerity and purpose for which such opinions are printed. It seems to me that the best means to concrete results is to resolve such issues by a vote on the Congress floor.

Endless letters and editorials which do not propose to effect a solution may only reflect an attempt by a person to see his name in print.

If the supporters of sundry legislation (specifically those in favor of female cheerleaders) are interested in resolving these questions, they can move for reconsideration of these motions at the congress meeting and state any new evidence and correct all fallacies. Or, are these people concerned only in continued aggravaiton, and not in the solution?

'Night Life' Succeeds In Playbox Despite Script, Not Because Of It

by Bill Byrne

The Playbox came of age last weekend with its most ambitious project to date, Sidney Kingsley's Night Life. In every phase,acting, direction and setting, the Theatre Department has met the play's challenges triumphantly.

In my opinion, this is a far superior production of the play than the one that opened in Philadelphia a year ago. Although Mr. Kingsley has rewritten several scenes, the credit must go to the intimacy of the Playbox and talent of the members of the Theatre Department.

The production is easily the best the Playbox has seen, but this is despite the play, not because of it. In trying to say too much, Mr. Kingsley ends up, especially in the second act, dropping his dialogue on on deaf ears. Six major characters, with accompanying neuroses, are about three too many to involve the audience as deeply as the play's theme demands. I must admit that interest is held more in the sheltering smallness of the Playbox than in one of the labyrinths of Shubert Alley.

One character especially, Neil Bennett, though well played by David Rabe, did very little except confuse the audience. If Mr. Kingsley had left a few axes unground, the play would be stronger and a great deal clearer.

Mr. Kingsley is a keen observer of our modern world. His thesis that evil dominates our society and rules by the conformity of its subjects, is well founded and excellently defined in the play. If only he had not given us so many tangents to explore, the drama's impact would not be deadened.

The drama, nevertheless, has many strong moments. The scenes employing the stream of consciousness technique are well staged and immensely effective Kazar's declaration of power by his control of the entire cast with the snapping of his fingers is a frightening moment and a staging triumph. Mr. Dudley's direction, especially in his use of light and music effects, contributes a great deal to the play.

The actors, too, serve Mr. Kingsley well. Strong performances, on all levels, make the play, with all its faults, a provacative and enjoyable evening. Thomas Nevins as Kazar and Irene Walsh as Anna turn in powerful performances as the embodiment of power and evil in the world. The evening's strongest portrayal comes from Richard Harshberger who, as Lew Bagatelle, ignores the world's laughter to bring hope to the "furlined sewer." A newcomer, Dennis Ceisel, clowns uproariously as Sonny, yet leaves the sour taste of disgust in our mouths. Special note must be made of the large supporting cast who, while unobstrusive, help draw the audience into the play's reality.

The play's setting, a key club, offers a challenge to the confines of the Playbox. But Mr. Nevins scenery has made the theatre and the audience a part of the club and with our program, a menu, and the usher, a maitre d', the audience readily accepts for a few hours the world that the play and its characters inhabit.

The Theatre Department has done wonders in its production of Night Life. The manuscript's faults are almost forgotten in its practical application on the stage. Here, everything works and contributes to an exciting and enjoyable theatrical experience.

Caught in Passing

'Fringe' And Enfringement

Jan Dyroff

Images result from their age and as the age changes, so do the images. Images are produced by many things including history, tradition, and the actions of men. Universities have images, and they change as the idea of the university changes.

In the historical shift of power, the state of the student has changed. Whatever sway his ideas once held on the civil scene have vanished. Gone, too, are his powers to have a say over his curriculum and his choice of teachers.

Sticky Hands

The only recourse the student of today has if he wishes to have a hand in his academic destiny is in the university's intramural government.

But it seems that even this is to be denied him, for those in the high places on the local student government seem to regard their position as a sacred cow and their meetings as closed shop gatherings.

Keep Quiet

A point was recently made that the Villanova Student Congress should not be forensic jousting grounds for the members of the organization.

One implication of this statement is that the congress should become a rubber stamp for the actions of the officers.

Foul Hints

Another implication is that the popularly elected delegates holding minor offices are incompetant and should shut up.

The most abhorrent implication is that those in the minority should have no say, that those who object to a motion, that those who see or think they see a possible miscarriage of justice should hold their peace.

Governing the entire proceedings of the Student Congress should be the concept that while some might not agree with the views of the individual member or student, all will fight to the death for their rights to express them.

Openly Closed

It is in the by-laws of the Student Council that their meetings are open to the general public (Art. I, Sec. 1) and in the constitution that all regular undergraduates are allowed to speak (Art. VII, Sec. 8).

The question: Do we play by the rules or are some people more equal than others?

Student Council meetings are as funny as the play below!

BEYOND THE FRINGE

"Beyond the Fringe", London and New York comedy hit will open a three-week engagement Monday evening, December 2 at the Forrest Theatre.

Featured in the national touring company are Patrick Carter. William Christopher, Patrick Horgan and Leigh Wharton. Producer, Alexander H. Cohen, who directed the company now appearing on Broadway also staged the national replica.

Hailed as "an explosion of literate joy, proving that the troubles of the world can be devastatingly funny", "Beyond the Fringe" was written by a quartet of young Britishers to whom no cows are sacred and no national institution hallowed.

I Cons Clast

They cast jaundiced eyes on everyman and work with satanic impertinence in destroying illusions about sex, Shakespeare royalty, religion, war, the race issue, concert artists and a host of other subjects.

In keeping with his tenet that civilized playgoers should dine liesurely and well before approaching an evening's pleasure in the theatre, Producer Cohen has ordained that the curtain will rise at 9 p.m. each night at the Forrest.

SHOULD AULD ACQUAINTANCE AND JAZZ LIKE THAT

I am now an elderly gentleman, full of years and aches, but my thoughts keep ever turning to my undergraduate days. This is called "arrested development."

But I cannot stop the healing tide of nostalgia that washes over me as I recall those golden campus days, those ivy-covered buildings (actually, at my college, there was only ivy: no bricks), those pulse-tingling lectures on John Dryden and Cotton Mather, the many friends I made, the many deans I bit.

I know some of you are already dreading the day when you graduate and lose touch with all your merry classmates. It is my pleasant task today to assure you that it need not be so; all you have to do is join the Alumni Association and every year you will receive a bright, newsy, chatty bulletin, chock-full of tidings about your old buddies.

Oh, what a red-letter day it is at my house, the day the Alumni Bulletin arrives! I cancel all my engagements, take the phone off the hook, dismiss my resident osteopath, put the cheetah outside, and settle down for an evening of pure pleasure with the Bulletin and (need I add?) a good supply of Marlboro Cigarettes.

Whenever I am having fun, a Marlboro makes the fun even more fun. That filter, that flavor, that yielding soft pack, that firm Flip Top box, never fails to heighten my pleasure whether I am playing Double Canfield or watching the radio or knitting an afghan or enjoying any other diverting pursuit you might name—except, of course, spear fishing. But then, how much spear fishing does one do in Clovis, New Mexico, where I live?

But I digress. Let us return to my Alumni Bulletin and the fascinating news about my old friends and classmates. I quote from the current issue:

"Well, fellow alums, it certainly has been a wing-dinger of a year for us old grads! Remember Mildred Cheddar and Harry Camembert, those crazy kids who always held hands in Econ II? Well, they're married now and living in Clovis, New Mexico, where Harry rents spear-fishing equipment, and Mildred has just given birth to a lovely 28-pound daughter, her second in four months. Nice going, Mildred and Harry!

"Remember Jethro Brie, the man we voted most likely to succeed? Well, old Jethro is still gathering laurels! Last week he was voted 'Motorman of the Year' by his fellow workers in the Duluth streetcar system. 'I owe it all to my brakeman,' said Jethro in a characteristically modest acceptance speech. Same old Jethro!

"Probably the most glamorous time had by any of us old alums was had by Francis Macomber last year. He went on a big game hunting safari all the way to Africa! We received many interesting post cards from Francis until he was, alas, accidentally shot and killed by his wife and white hunter. Tough luck, Francis!

"Wilametta 'Deadeye' Macomber, widow of the late beloved Francis Macomber, was married yesterday to Fred 'Sureshot' Sigafoos, white hunter, in a simple double-ring ceremony in Nairobi. Many happy returns, Wilametta and Fred!

"Well, alums, that just about wraps it up for this year. Buy bonds!"

IJF - A Good Idea And A Small Start Now Bigger And Better Than Ever

by Bob Dowling

"We were searching for a type of entertainment for our Junior Week show which the class would be able to afford, and having little luck. Then Joe and I thought, why not have a collegiate jazz festival?"

These were the words of Jim Braithwaite, a former Villanovan of 1962, describing how he along with co-chairmen Joe Zawacki, also of the '62 Class, first hit upon the idea which was to launch the Villanova Intercollegiate Jazz Festival.

The show that year was a small, weeknight affair which drew no more than 300 people. However, both Jim and Joe realized the possibilities of such an event, and with a year's experience behind them and renewed effort, were able to draw a near sellout crowd.

Last year ,under the direction of Tom Semmer, Ed Bride, and Phil Bosche, the Festival not only sold out, but gained both radio and TV coverage, along with the endorsement of some of the top names in the jazz field today.

Now, three years and three festivals later, the question posed is: what is in store for the coming 1964 Festival? Under the guidance of Chairman Ed Bride, this year's committee has been hard at work since early September, contacting a total of 700 schools from the East coast to the mid-West, soliciting prizes from instrument manufacturers, and making arrangements with the many personalities who are serving as judges and advisors for the show.

It is reassuring to find already a strong response from the many well-known personalities who are devoting a good deal of their valuable time to the show.

The interest of these people for IJF was best displayed a few weekends ago in New York City, where Ed Bride and myself spent two days meeting with a number of the people working with the Festival.

..... ABC .....

Our first appointment was with the people at ABC radio, whose network last year carried the Festival to a total of 66 stations, ranging from New England to the West Coast. After a brief reminiscence of the highlights of the '63 Festival and a short discussion of technical details, we left with ABC's enthusiastic assurance of coverage.

Our next stop was with Sid Bernstein of General Artists who, proudly pointing to the 1963 IJF Judges Award on his wall, offered us whatever help he could render in the coming months.

We left Mr. Bernstein's, still laughing at his jokes, and rushed to offices of Downbeat Magazine for our appointment with Ira Gitler, who will be one of the '64 IJF judges. While there we discussed the current IJF in the November 7 issue of Downbeat, and received the assurance of future Downbeat coverage, a valuable asset as it is undoubtedly the most respected and widely read publication in the jazz field today.

Our final stop of the day was with John Hammond, artist and repertoire representative and now also talent scout for Columbia Records. A man well-known in the record industry, Mr. Hammond does the recording for nearly all of the current jazz and folk music on the Columbia label, two of his biggest discoveries probably being the jazz sextet of Paul Winter and the well-known folksinger Bob Dylan.

He agreed to serve again this year as one of the Festival judges, and carefully reviewed the progress made on IJF '64 thus far, offering a good deal of advice for future plans, which include the possibilities of recording an album of the Festival.

This is, of course, just a brief look at some of the things that have been happening on IJF '64. Over three months are still left, along with a few surprises, before the final date of February 7, 1964.

Judging from the developments thus far, however, I would feel safe in agreeing with Bride in saying that this year's Festival should undoubtedly surpass all previous shows.

A Fleeting Word

by Al Verdi

Students on the Villanova campus are noted for several characteristics: their cheers at football games, their conversations in the Pie Shoppe, their murmerings about the nurses, and their discourteous treatment of fellow students. The last of these attributes deserves some further comment.

Courtesy

Courtesy is not an artificial ceremony of good manners, but rather a genuine expression of respect for another person. This genuine courtesy seems to be lacking in Villanova students.

Take, for example, the incident which occurred after the Chad Mitchell Concert. While Chairman Joseph McGill was speaking of the efforts and intentions of his class, some, or should I say many, students noisily left their seats to leave.

Common courtesy demands that one remained seated until a speaker is finished, but this common sense rule apparently was forgotten by some Villanova students.

On another occasion after the William Buckley lecture, Martin McGuinn was asked to make some concluding remarks, and to thank Mr. Buckley. Again, however, students began leaving their seats and talking with no regard for the speaker.

Disrespect

This student disrespect is not only confined to fellow students, but extends to the treatment of the workers on campus. The workers in both the resident and day-hop cafeteria often take abuse from ill-mannered students.

Many campus workers are looked down upon because they are not going to college. Often they are abused by thoughtless students who seldom stop to think of respect and courtesy. These workers are here to help us, not to serve us — and they deserve the courtesy and respect of students.

Word to the Wise

Since discourteous students paint a poor picture of Villanova, it is expected that students will realize their place on the college campus and act like courteous men and women.

Second Class Students?!

by Steve Friend

Going through Sullivan Hall in an abortive attempt to sell tickets to a social sponsored by the Turf 'n Tinsel Society, I came across a situation which bordered on the unbelievable. Upon entering one of the rooms, I came across the editor and Student Council representative of the Lynx, in a state of absolute frenzy.

Agitation

Questioning him about his extraordinary agitation, I received an answer which sent me staggering to the nearest chair for support. Some unspeakable cads had the colossal audacity to desecrate a Student Council meeting by suggesting that a few nurses by permitted to assist the present cheer-leaders for the Holy Cross game.

The decadence of it all! Such a heresy has not rocked an Augustinian institution since the heyday of Martin Luther.

This opinion was shared by several other participants in the discussion. It was their belief that a dayhop must necessarily be completely devoid of any loyalty or interest in Villanova University.

Unable to realize the disastorous repercussions of such a movement, I questioned him further on his vehement opposition. Failing completely in his attempt to conceal his exaspiration at my ignorance, he replied that my monumental stupidity was directly attributable to the fact that I am a dayhop.

All those who commute daily are characterized by: (a) the brown lunch bags they greedily clutch (b) a total indifference toward extra-curricular activities and (c) a fanatic eagerness to leave the campus as quickly as possible after their last class.

In short, all they do is pay tuition and help support IBM. One of these pro-residents, not the aforementioned the editor, went so far as to state that dayhops were actually mentally inferior to residents.

Before conversing with these liberal thinkers, I felt that, as a college student, I enjoyed the same status as the rest of my Villanova colleagues. Now, at last, I am award of my deplorable position as a dayhop and the social stigma which accompanies it.

Realizing this, I suggest that each dayhop be required to wear a Star of Davd on his coat and constantly ring a bell, thus allowing privileged residents to flee from commuters' contamination.

My inability to fly into a rage at the thought of female cheerleaders is a vivid example of my mental inferiority. An act such as this would be the first of a series of steps which would ultimately result in the moral decay of Villanova. Coed dorms, free love, beer in the Pie Shoppe, Cosa Nostra—all this and more would quickly follow.

But really, how could you expect me to understand this? After all, I'm only a daphop.

Sophomore Blazers Will Be Delivered Dec. 3, 4, 5

Does a man really take unfair advantage of women when he uses Mennen Skin Bracer?

All depends on why he uses it.

Most men simply think Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the best after-shave lotion around. Because it cools rather than burns. Because it helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Because it helps prevent blemishes.

So who can blame them if Bracer's crisp, long-lasting aroma just happens to affect women so remarkably?

Of course, some men may use Mennen Skin Bracer because of this effect.

How intelligent!

Knights Misunderstood Group

by Bill Manfred

Of the many organizations on the Villanova campus there is one whose existence and nature are grossly misunderstood by much of the student body. This misconception is generated through ignorance of the history, nature, and purposes of the organization.

The Knights of Columbus is not, strictly speaking, a student organization but is an organization consisting mainly of students and one which is under its own central, national government.

History

The history of the Knights of Columbus dates back to 1882, and to a young priest at St. Mary's parish in New Haven, Connecticut. The Rev. Michael McGivney was the first born in a family of 13 children and was of Irish extraction.

Although the family lived a life of poverty, Michael was able to receive an education and at the time of his father's death, Michael was enrolled in St. Mary's Seminary in Baltimore.

Shortly after his ordination in 1877, Father McGivney was assigned to St. Mary's Parish in New Haven where his greatest work was performed. Father McGivney died suddenly in 1890, at the age of 32, less than seven years after his ordination.

Father McGivney

The background of poverty and suffering was a great influence on Father McGivney as he met with a group of young men in his parish and persuaded them of the need for a Catholic layman's organization.

Through dedication and untiring efforts, he and his young parishioners worked for a charter of the Knights of Columbus which was granted in March 1882, by the State of Connecticut "for the purpose of rendering mutual aid and assistance to its members and their families."

Since that date in 1882, when the Knights of Columbus consisted of eight men, the organization has grown and has established itself on a nation-wide basis. Today the Knights of Columbus has over 4,500 councils and over 1,300,000 members participating actively in the 50 states of the United States, the 10 provinces of Canada, in the Canal Zone, Puerto Rico, Mexico, Cuba, and the Philippines.

K of C and Church

The Knights of Columbus, in close contact with the Catholic Church, has three purposes or ideals which are realized in a unity with the Catholic Church. The first of these purposes is material aid to members, including insurance benefits and mutual aid to sick, disabled or needy brother Knights.

This material purpose is fulfilled through an insurance program for members, which provides protection for the members and their families and assistance to other Knights.

The second purpose is intellectual and consists of encouragement of higher education through libraries, periodicals, scholarships, lectures, loans, and grants. The third purpose is religious in nature and is fashioned to encourage the charitable endeavors of the Church.

In this aspect, the Knights of Columbus gives assistance to the poor and to war victims, provides religious education for orphans, needy children and converts, fights communism and obscene literature, and in general, supports the Catholic Church.

Principles

The Knights of Columbus operates under the principles of Charity, Unity, Fraternity, and Patriotism, and these principles are the bases for all their activities.

Some of the accomplishments of the Knights of Columbus are these: The paying of $6,000,000 in benefits to insurance beneficiaries in 1959; the defense of the Catholic Church through the Catholic Advertising Program; and the support of education by its scholarships.

Also included are: loans and grants; the complete microfilming of the Vatican Library and the depositing of it at the University of St. Louis; the charitable action in cases of disaster; the establishment of the Columbian Squires.

Also: the distinguishing war record; the building of the Knights Tower at the National Shrine to the Immaculate Conception in Washington, D.C.; and the many other programs instituted by individual councils to assist in worthy causes — Cardinal Tardini, Cardinal Gibbons, Calvin Coolidge, General Pershing, and many others have praised the Knights of Columbus for its great works.

Secrecy

The secrecy of the Knights of Columbus, which has resulted in much misunderstanding, is an essential element only in its degrees and meetings. The secrecy of the Knights of Columbus has been held as legal and moral in many court decisions.

The Knights of Columbus, following the principles of Charity, Unity, Fraternity and Patriotism, are an example of the layman's important to the Catholic Church and are exemplary of true Christian living.

A GREAT CONTROVERSY

by Rusty Miller

A great controversy has arisen on the usually quiet campus of Villanova. Lines of opposition have been drawn, opposing forces gathered. One major engagement has already been fought, with the winning side now claiming a final victory.

One battle however, is not the war. The underdogs are reforming their ranks, changing their strategy, even resorting to a hate campaign. Quoth their champions, "We have not yet begun to fight!" The next engagement will surely tell!

The issue — should Villanova University, the pride of the Main Line (whatever that means) have (shudder) girl cheerleaders?

—Boo! Hiss! Go Home!

—Well here's some of the opposition now! Let's see if we can get a few comments from them.

—Boo! Hiss!

—Ah, come on fellows. You there! What's your name?

—Me? Ah Shucks (giggle giggle) Willard Funk (giggle giggle) That's F-U-N-K.

—Yes . . well Willard, tell us why you're so bitterly opposed to (shudder) girl cheerleaders.

—I AM OPPOSED TO (shudder) GIRL CHEERLEADERRS BECAUSE . . . I forget!

—Oh come on now Millard. You were standing there booing and hissing.. Now you must remember why.

—Oh yes. I am opposed to girl cheerleaders because . . . I like fellas (giggle giggle).

—I see. Well . . . thank you, Willard . . . Whew!

Ah you over there, the thin fellow. What's your name?

—Snith!

—Oh I've seen some of your advertisements around. You're Hate Snith. That's a funny first name, you've got there. Well now Hate, suppose you tell us why you don't want (shudder) girl cheerleaders.

—I think I have some statistics here that will illustrate why I'm against (shudder) girl cheerleaders: 31-24-32½, 38-42-38, 29- . . .

—Yes, I see your point. Thank you Mr. Snith.

How about you? What's your name?

—Nurphy, Linus Nurphy!

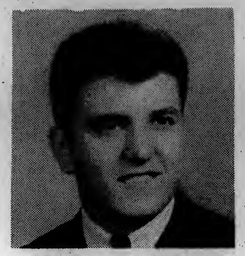
—Why do you keep wrapping yourself in that cloak or blanket or whatever it is Mr. Nurphy?

—This is my blanket, the blanket of tradition. I'm a radical but I feel insecure without my blanket of tradition.

—Why are you opposed to female cheerleaders Linus?

—Because we would have to buy sweaters for them and those sweaters cost $13.00 apiece. Three times 13 . . . that's ah . . . carry the two . . . oh thirty-nine . . . and after all, that's a lot of money. Boys are a lot cheaper. They can always wrap themselves in an old blanket, like my blanket of tradition here. Pardon me while I adjust my blanket . . . Another thing, girl cheerleaders is a radical idea.

—But I thought you were a radical, Mr. Nurphy.



—Oh I am, but to support it I'd have to take off my blanket of tradition and then I'd feel insecure. Besides I'm all tangled up in it now and I can't . . . ugh . . . get the darn . . . thing off.

non-alignment while receiving aid from the United States, this should prove a most interesting topic.

It has also been announced that Congressman Neil Staebler, Democrat from Michigan, will address the Union on Monday, December 9. The topic will probably concern Medicare.

Mr. Staebler, architect of the rebirth of Michigan's Democratic Party, also serves as the party's state chairman. A frequent speaker for the Democratic National Committee, he has received national attention because of his attacks on Senator Barry Goldwater.

Also of interest to Villanova students is the addition of a group of Rosemont girls to the membership of the Union. These girls have shown an active interest in the Union's activities in the past year and requested admission at the previous business meeting.

urban problems of our large cities. The next meeting of the Forum will be held on February 27, 1964, and will be addressed by Richard J. Daley, the Mayor of Chicago.

Mr. Dilworth will be introduced by Dean Harold Gill Reuchein of the Law School. All members of the judiciary, the bar, and the general public are cordially invited to attend.

Newest Figures Show Villanova Now Largest In Foreign Enrollment

Figures released recently show that Villanova has the largest enrollment of foreign students of any Catholic college in the state of Pennsylvania.

Campus Foreign Student Advisor Daniel Rivas told a group of students that there are over 140 foreign students on campus this year . . . the largest total in the schools history.

The majority of the students come from Cuba and China, although some 35 countries are represented including coutries from 5 continents.

CAMPUS NEWS BRIEFS

The History Department will sponsor the first in a series of lectures on Wednesday, December 11, at 7:30 P.M. in the east lounge of Dougherty Hall.

The speaker will be Dr. S. D. Gotein, professor of Arabic in the Department of Oriental Studies at the University of Pennsylvania Dr. Gotein's topic will be "The Four Faces of Islam."

The title of Dr. Gotein's lecture is taken from the prophecy of Ezekiel and will deal with the Islamic view of reality and its mission in the world. A question and answer period will follow the lecture. All students, faculty members, and friends are invited to attend.

Senior Class President Jim Murphy has made known the chairmen for the major committees of the coming year.

Heading the Senior Class Concert is Ed Weille while Ed Coffey will arrange the Senior Dinner Dance at the Sheraton Hotel. The concert is slated for April 3 and the Dinner Dance the following evening.

The Senior Steering Committee has been divided into three committees this year. Mike Ferrara will head the Social Committee, Tom Stanley, the Investigation Committee, and Don Laurie, the Education Committee.

The Social Committee already has planned a Senior Class Party for Friday night, December 6, and a Post Concert Party, April 3. A Christmas Party in New York in conjunction with the Holiday Tournament, Saturday, December 28 has been suggested as well as, a Senior Winter Day to be held in the Pocono Mountains some Saturday in February.

The Investigation Committee is looking into various possibilities for a Senior Class Gift Ideas from interested parties are invited

A speaker program is on the planning boards of the Education Committee. Also, letters have been written to many of the Universities of the nation endeavoring to compare views on controversial campus matters.

The Classics Society of Villanoval University will sponsor a lecture by Professor Lily Ross Taylor, speaking on "Roman Public Meetings in the Late Republic."

Miss Taylor is Professor Emeritus of Latin at Bryn Mawr College, Professor at the American Academy in Rome, Sather Professor at the University of California, Gugenheim Fellow, past president of the American Philological Association, and past Dean of Bryn Mawr Graduate School.

Miss Taylor has studied at Wisconsin, Chicago, Bonn, and the American Academy in Rome. In addition to a Ph. D. from Bryn Mawr in 1912, she was awarded the degree of Litt, D. from Wisconsin, Wilson College, Mills College, and Columbia University.

Her most recent book, Voting Districts of the Roman Republic (1960), received the American Philological Association's Award of Merit for 1961.

The lecture will be given on Tuesday, December 3, at 8 p.m., in 110 Bartley.

On Wednesday evening, November 13, the Rev. Joseph J. Burns, OSA, addressed a composite group of 25 area college students on "The Baubles and Bubbles in Educational Thought." The talk was sponsored by the Student PSEA organization.

Assignment: design a car for tomorrow... that could be built today!

Result: Allegro, an experiment in advanced automotive ideas that are practical for the near future

Allegro means "brisk and lively," which certainly describes Ford Motor Company's new dream car, a handsome fastback coupe. More than that, Allegro has unique functional features that could be adapted for future production cars. (This has already occurred in the case of retractable seat belts!)

A major innovation is a cantilever-arm steering wheel with an electronic "memory." The steering wheel is mounted on an arm that extends from a center-mounted column. The wheel swings upward for easy exit, returns automatically to its former position at the touch of a button. Power adjustment enables it to be moved three inches fore and aft and five inches vertically. This, plus power-adjustable foot pedals, permits use of a fixed seat design for low overall height.

Basically a two-seater in present form, Allegro has rear floor space that could be converted to carry two additional passengers. The car could be powered by either a V-4 made by Ford of Germany or by the domestic 144- or 170-cubic-inch Sixes.

Allegro is one of a series of Ford-built dream cars which will be shown at the New York World's Fair to test consumer reaction to styling and mechanical innovations. This will help determine which of their forward-looking features are destined for the American Road—as further examples of Ford Motor Company's leadership in styling and engineering.

Villanova Singers Plan Schedule Of Exciting Springtime Activities

by John Sperger of the Villanova Singers

For over two months, while the football team has been having its ups and downs, and the freshmen are finally realizing what college life is all about, a group of about 80 men have been working at their own task.

Their base of operations is the Classroom Annex; their goal is to build the finest male glee club in the East; and their name is the Villanova Singers.

The Singers, under the direction of Mr. Herbert Fiss, will venture up on their second Midwestern Tour this April. On this six-day tour the club will visit Pittsburgh, Columbus, Toledo, Chicago, and Detroit. They will sing at St. Mary of the Spring College in Columbus, Mary Manse in Toledo, and Barat College in Chicago.

A highlight of the trip will be in Detroit where after a concert with Marygrove College, the Singers will be given a guided tour of the Chrysler Corporation.

A trip to New England is planned for early March with concerts at Newton College in Boston and Albertus Magnus in New Haven. Concerts in New York will be held at Good Counsel College in White Plains and Manhattanville College in Purchase.

The appearance at Dunbarton College in Washington, D.C., and Georgian Court College in Lakewood, New Jersey, will round out the distance performances. Apperanace at Immaculata, Chestnut Hill, Rosemont, Holy Family, and Cabrini Colleges are also on the schedule.

A concert with Immaculata College and the Curtis Symphony is planned for April 14 in the Field House. The Curtis Orchestra is under the direction of Mr. William Smith, assistant conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra.

This year's officers include: Jim Quinn, president; Bob Goldberg, vice-president; Frank Matricardi, secretary; Joe Prestileo, treasurer; Mike Ferrara, tour manager; John Graziano, Student Council rep.; Dan Seltzer and John Sperger, publicity managers; Jim Sulzman, librarian; Mike Newman, assistant tour manager, and Gene Donohue, social chairman.

As one can see from this long line of officers, the Villanova Singers is a big operation whose aims are three: to sing well, to perpetuate and spread the name of Villanova as her cultural ambassadors, and, obviously, to have a great time.

Soph Vice-President Asks Deans For Tutor Nominations

John Graziano, vice-president of the Sophomore Class, has asked the deans of the various departments to submit nominations to the Student Council of students for the Tutoring Society.

Help is urgently needed in the science courses and in Mathematics 115, the freshman mathematics course. Skeleton structures have already been established for the nursing and engineering courses through their honor societies. Such difficult courses as Mathematics 115, engineering mathematics and chemistry and physics will have specific committees set up for them.

There has been difficulty in arranging the program this year because of its size. Approximately 300 students will be involved in this program in one way or another.

Anyone who wishes to apply as a tutor or anyone who needs help in his courses may do so by signing his name at the table which has been set up by the ramp leading to the residents cafeteria or in the Student Council office.

DELEGATE'S REPORT

A Broken Record

by Terry Cooney

The past Sunday, the Fourth Regional Meeting of the NFCCS was held at Manor Junior College.

I'm begining to feel like the original broken record in writing again that the students of Villanova take an active interest in NFCCS. I won't say that there is something in NF for everyone, but I will say that there are very few people who, if they took the time to investigate, could not find some aspects of NF suited to them. Space does not permit me to elaborate to any great extent on the multiplicitty of programs, however, let me briefly catagorize them by fields.

In the field of Social Work there is the Visiting Workshop and the Casa Del Carmen Project which involves work among the poor Negro and immigrant Spanish families of Philadelphia. This area also provides the chance for Sociology majors to gain some practical insight into their fields.

Also of interest to all students is a study to be conducted in conjunction with the Religious Affairs Committee of the Student Council on the various aspects of the Parish as they relate to our society.

Moving to the field of Human Rights, of immediate note is a conference held under the auspices of the National Youth Council on Dec. 6, 7, 8 in Washington D.C. on this topic.

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANIES SALUTE: DICK GRETZINGER

Administrative engineering is a term phrased by Dick Gretzinger (B.S.E.E., 1960), but after reviewing his career at Bell of Pennsylvania, there is no other term that so well defines his talents.

Within Philadelphia he coordinated the teletypewriter cutover from manual to dial operation. Not an easy task in itself, but when you accomplish it one year in advance of the target date—that's administrative engineering.

Dick was quickly moved to other responsible positions where his combined engineering and administrative abilities could be put to good use. As a just reward and to broaden his horizon, he was sent to the 12-week training course in data communications at Cooperstown, New York.

Dick is presently planning engineer for the administration of three central offices in the Philadelphia area.

Dick Gretzinger, like many young engineers, is impatient to make things happen for his company and himself. There are few places where such restlessness is more welcomed or rewarded than in the fast-growing telephone business.

Planetarium Presents 'The 4th Dimension'

The Villanova Astronomy Department has announced that a new Planetarium show entitled "The Fourth Dimension" will be presented this Friday at 8 and 9 p.m. and Saturday at 3 p.m.

Our planetarium is a smaller scale version of the Fels Planetarium of the Franklin Institute in Philadelphia. The Spitz AP 3 planetarium projector is capable of doing all the fascinating things for which the Fels projector has become famous.

The three shows this weekend will present in a very unique manner the fourth dimension of Time. The presentation will endeavor to explain the many aspects of Time including how we measure Time, what we use as a standard of Time, and how Time is divided into days, months, and years.

Students Bernard Lietz and Arthur Hunter will narrate the half-hour presentation. A nominal charge of twenty-five cents will be made.

Following the presentations the observatory will be open to the public. All will be able to view the planets and the moon through a powerful 15" telescope.

Profile

From Blocker To Runner

by Roy Baron

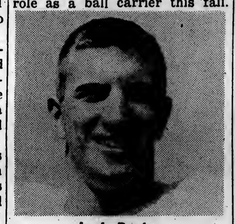
This fall the Villanova eleven had opened up its attack with frequent reverses and end sweeps. Figuring prominently in this innovation has been Jack Boyle.

Boyle was the Blue unit's right halfback last year. His major task was to provide the blocking for the running of Billy Joe and Jim Thomas and for Ted Aceto on passes.

This job of blocking was nothing new to Jack. This had always been his forte. At Cardinal Dougherty high school he had been used chiefly as a blocker for his smaller backfield mates.

However, on the gridiron this fall, Jack has not only been an excellent blocker, but he has also become a good all-around halfback.

Before the Quantico game he was leading the team in rushing yardage with a 4.5 average, having gained 361 yards on 79 carries. In addition to that, he had caught seven passes, one of them for a touchdown.



Boyle chose Villanova over such interested schools as Rutgers and Xavier. There were two reasons influencing this decision. One was his desire to play in the Philadelphia area. This he felt would help fulfill his ambition, that of landing a coaching job near his home upon graduation.

The other reason was the influence of one of his two older brothers, Joe, who had graduated from the Mainline school. Unlike John, Joe had been on the Wildcat basketball team.

In accordance with his plans to teach and coach, Jack is taking education at Villanova. Majoring in history, he presently holds 2.5 cumulative average.

Last summer he took over the operation of his father's tavern, when his father was ill. On previous vacations he had done construction work.

Boyle did not expect his new role as a ball carrier this fall.

Jack Boyle

Always having taken pride in his blocking ability and defensive play, he feels that he is now just learning how to run with the pigskin. This in his eighth year as a halfback.

Jack is surprised with his showing thus far. In addition to his rushing yardage total, he has had about 150 yards in gains nullified because of penalties. In the Detroit game he had a 50 yarder called back.

Villanova's backfield mentor, Joe Rogers, calls Jack one of nicest boys he has had to coach. He rates not only Boyle's runningg, but also his receiving as highly improved over last season.

When questioning Jack about the 'Cats for next season, his replay was "Great! I wish I could be a part of it."

SPORTS ROUND-UP

In Bowling, Villanova defeated Penn State, 2 games to 1. The 'Cat keglers are now 12-6, in second place, and one game behind powerful LaSalle.

Leading scorers for Villanova were Howie Riley, who had the high series of 569 and the high string of 202, and Chuck Williams, who turned in a 542 total.

High man for the Nittany Lions was Wayne Werline, who rolled a 530 series and a high single of 218.

The Rifle Team routed the University of Scranton and Valley Forge Military Academy in a triangular intercollegiate match fired at Valley Forge. The Wildcats posted a blazing 1401 score out of a possible 1500. This was the fifth highest in fourteen years of intercollegiate competition for the 'Cats.

Valley Forge and the University of Scranton posted scores of 1391 and 1378, respectively.

Setting the pace for the Wildcats were Joe Smith, 286 out of a possible 300. Behind him were Jaime Garofalo, 283; Team Captain Art Blades, 281; Mike Willhelm, 276; and Mike Nervi, 275.

The Villanova billiard team continued their unbeaten ways by downing the Lafayette Lounge 4-2 in an exibition held at Lafayette Hill, Pa. The team was once again led by George Walko, Pat O'Neil, Pat DeGennaro, and Jerry Green.

It is interesting to note that this team is perhaps the most successful group in the school. They have not lost or been tied in a college match or exibition since their formation last year.

Quantico

back Jack Boyle, however, was ruled incomplete on the contention of the Field Judge that Boyle was out of bounds when the pass was caught.

Unfortunately for the Main Liners, the questionable call stymied their drive and began the decisive Quantico drive to their first touchdown. The score at the time was still 2-0.

Sexless Cheers

by Joe McCarthy

Spirit is a nebulous thing. The Villanova cheerleaders believe and worship this concept. Their performance (if one can stretch his or her imagination and term it thus) was soporific and uninspiring last Saturday afternoon.

Comments were overheard last Saturday. One fellow quizing his date at the beginning of the game asked, "Do you think Villanova should have girl cheerleaders?" She replied after some thought, "I don't think so."

Along about halftime this young woman was heard to comment, "Giraffes would be better than those guys, let alone girls". Thus she reversed her opinion after just two quarters of watching the marvelous males of Villanova project their cherished image of an all male school to a Philadelphia television audience of over one million.

There was no reason why the Villanova cheerleaders should act in this way. The game was in reach for almost the entire sixty minutes. And yet there was no real demonstration or attempt to lead the Villanova section in co-ordinated cheers.

Perhaps spirit doesn't really affect the outcome of a ballgame, but the players sure appreciate the home crowd cheering and urging them on after hearing the jeers and comments of away crowds.

Let those who moan and bewail the loss of the Villanova image if there were girl cheerleaders, be silenced if this is the image they desire. Girls couldn't do more harm.

Improvements that are expected in the future are the assignment of a section to one or two cheerleaders instead of having them all grouped before the fifty yard line section and an attempt to coordinate and lead the cheers of the spectators. By doing so it would eliminate the necessity of fellows leading their own groups.

Another item of importance was the sorrowful picture presented by Villanova when the lone female member of the band sat in the stands for both the pre-game and halftime shows. If the television camera were passed briefly through the spectators, the tradition concept would equal Norman Lincoln Rockwell tactics.

'63-64 Top All-American Contenders Slated For Pre-Season Scrimmage

by Steve Freind

Villanova's basketball team will learn just how far it has advanced since beginning practice when the 'Cats travel to New York to scrimmage New York University on November 23 in Madison Square Garden.

The scrimmage, closed to the public by order of Garden officials, will pit the two top contenders for eastern supremacy against each other.

Coach Lou Rossini's Violets, led by All-American Barry Kramer, have been labeled in most pre-season magazines as the class of the East, with Villanova close on their heels. Coach Jack Kraft considers the scrimmage a good opportunity to evaluate the progress the team has made during the past three weeks and to discover any flaws which must be ironed out before the Princeton opener.

Kraft also feels that this pre-season taste of game competition will prove invaluable to his sophomores, who thus far have been limited to intra-squad scrimmages.

This is especially true due to the fact that the scrimmage is at Madison Square Garden, long known for its ability to "choke" newcomers to its floor.

By playing at the Garden, the 'Cats will become relatively accustomed to the court on which they will participate in the Holiday Festival during the Christmas vacation.

Concerning the overall team performance thus far, Kraft stated that he is satisfied with the 'Cat's development. Singled out for stellar play were Bill Melchionni, whose speed and hustle have been impressive, Mike Trailes, whom Kraft calls "a pleasant surprise and our second best rebounder," and Eric Ericson.

Kraft also said that George Leftwich is "the George of old". The shooting and rebounding of Jim Washington has never been better.

Richie Moore, always known for his scoring ability, is now also a defensive stalwart. Wally Jones, the 'Cats' backcourt magician and All-American candidate, has been somewhat sluggish so far, but Kraft feels that this will be cured by Wally's first scent of game competition.

As of now there are fourteen men on the squad with a cut coming sometime this week and another possible cut after the NYU scrimmage.

The 'Cats opener will be at Princeton University on December 4. Kraft feels that the Tigers will present his squad a severe test.

You couldn't ask for a tougher opener than Princeton," he said. "They have a fair overall team and a great All-American in Bill Bradley. That makes them a good team."

Ruggers End Slump With 29-0 Rout Of Lehigh University

by Bob McIntyre

Villanova's rugby team soared out of a late season scoring slump by smashing Lehigh U. ruggers 29-0 on Sunday afternoon at Villanova.

The scoring of 29 points represents the largest total garnered by the team this year and as a result the team record stands at 3-4-2.

The first score came five minutes into the first half as Jeff Hoolahan, one of the speedy backs, sprang loose for 50 yards till he hit paydirt.

The other scores of the first half came at the hands of three other blazing backs, Bert Lombino, Ed Kurek, and Leo Cambell and two conversions by Hal Canty.

'Cats' Season Ends With 16-0 Loss To Bowl-Bound Marines

by Joe McCarthy

Endings are sometimes bleak. Last Saturday provided one of these endings for the Villanova football squad as they succumbed to a crushing Quantico squad 16-0 before 11,200 last-game-of-the-season fans at Villanova Stadium.

Fourteen points for the Marines in the final quarter told the story. In the first quarter, Quantico gained a two-point safety after an apparent mixup in signals between center Roger Agin and kicker Dave Connell sent the ball past Connell for an automatic safety.

The loss was the Wildcats' fourth and third shutout of the year. Nonetheless, the 'Cats finished the campaign with their third consecutive winning season with a 5-4 slate.

Three times in each half, the 'Cats invaded Quantico territory but failed to crack the scoring column. On one occasion the 'Cats marched to the Marine 15 where they attempted their first (and last) field goal of the season.

The kick was short. It was the only time this season that kicker Mike Manger had failed in a kicking effort. He is ten for ten on touchdown conversions.

Controversy arose during the third quarter. The 'Cats had moved from the Marine 49 to the 32 where quarterback Bill Sherlock was faced with a fourth and four situation. His pass to half-

DE-EMPHASIS GRACES VILLANOVA WITH SUCCESS

by Joe McCarthy

De-emphasis has treated Villanova well. Ever since that fateful spring two and one half years ago, there has yet to be a losing Villanova athletic team.

During that spring reshuffle of athletic personell, four big changes were made. Rev. John J. Curran, OSA, now the University's Vice President for Financial Affairs, replaced Rev. Joseph Kemme, OSA as head of the Athletic Board and as Moderator of Athletics.

This appointment in itself was to result in other changes. Arthur Mahan, then Baseball Coach, succeeded to the post of Director of Athletics. Publicity for the Athletic Department was handed over to Ken Mugler, a former Philadelphia Bulletin sportswriter.

Coach Alex Bell had just experieneced his first season as head of the Villanova football team. He finished with a 2-8 record. At the beginning of spring practice, however, he stated "I'm better equipped this year, if for no other reason that I know my players and our strengths and weakness, both individually and collectively." His performance and that of the Wildcats the next fall proved his points quite well.

At about the same time, Alex Severance wrapped up 32 years as a basketball coach at Villanova with the announcement of his retirement after a 11-13 year. Jack Kraft of Malvern Prep succeeded him and has had remarkable success in this position.

More important than any of these changes was the formulation of a new Athletic Policy. This policy has never really been stated. But it has boiled down to one thing—moderate to outstanding success.

John Kelleher

Bill Quigley

Three years of football under this policy ended last Saturday afternoon. Nobody was particularly happy. Quantico had just stopped the Wildcat football machine with a 16-0 win.

The 'Cats nonetheless snowed promise of things to come. Seventeen of the twenty-two players on the first two teams return next year. Twelve of fourteen of the linemen also return. Aided by good prospects from the freshman squad, there could be excellent results.

Some still cry and criticise about the 5-4 record for 1963. That's only because they've became too used to exceptional teams.

For Rennsaeler, who extended its streak of losses to 32 last Saturday, it would be the equivalent of 18 consecutive holes-in-one. For many other squads in the nation, it would also be a thunderstorm in a desert.

Everybody would like to see Villanova playing with teams of the top ten. But in this writer's opinion, it's a lot better to win in our "class" than be the losers we were when we did play these teams.

Sophomore end John Kelleher took the brunt of some undeserved criticism for dropping three passes. People overlook the fact that many of his catches this year should never been.

The only ballplayer to finish the season as a starter who was not on the original starting lineup was left guard Bill Quigley. Quantico was Quigley's third starting assignment. Again Quigley shined in his linebacker position and showed lots of hustle on the offense.

Cross-Country Team Finishes Fourth In IC4A Finals In N.Y.

by Jerry Bruderle

Villanova's Vic Zwolak won the individual IC4A Cross Country Championship held last Monday at Van Courtland Park in New York in record time. The Notre Dame. Villanova the defending champ, finished fourth behind Brown University and Michigan State.

Zwolak's time of 24:46.8 over the five mile course broke his own IC4A record set in the same event last year. Zwolak and Army's Bill Straub were running neck and neck for the first mile of the race, but the ex-marine pulled out to a two hundred yard lead at the half way mark and kept it to the finish. Steve Machooka, from Kenya, representing Brown, finished second.

The other Wildcat finishers were Dave Hyland in tenth place, followed by Tom Sullivan in fifteenth place, Noel Carroll in forty-fourth place, and Jim Smyth in ninety-ninth place.

Marty Ferko, who was in Ferko, who was in eleventh place with a mile to go, was overcome by heat prostration and finished one-hundred eighth behind Jim Orr who placed one hundred sixth.

Villanova's total of 162 points was far behind Notre Dame's 55 Brown tallied 137 and Michigan State 145. The Irish placed third, eighth, thirteenth, fourteenth and nineteenth.

Frosh Division

In the Freshman Division, Villanova again placed high in the individual standings, but finished fourth in the team standings. Villanova's Steve Ball was runner up to Georgetown's Jim McDermott. The men from the nation's Capitol placed first, third, four, fifth and tenth to win the frosh event with an amazing total of 23 points.

Richie Bright finished seventh for Villanova and Mike Ferko, Marty's brother, finished twenty sixth.

Next Monday, November 25, the National Collegiate Championships will be held at East Lansing, Michigan. Zwolak will again be among the favorites along with Dan Murphy of San Jose State.

San Jose State is the defending champion and is again favored to win the team title. Stanford, last year's runner-up, along with Michigan State and of course Notre Dame are the co-favorites along with Villanova.

Competing with Zwolak from Villanova will be Hyland, Ferko, Carroll, Orr and Smyth.

WILDCAT BASKETBALL, 1963-64

Vol. 39—No. 9 VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY, VILLANOVA, PA. December 4, 1963

Mainline Miracle

A Strange Phenomena

by Steve Freind

During the past two years, a strange phenomena has occurred at Villanova. This phenomena has been labeled "The Miracle of the Main Line."

In each of these years Villanova has fielded basketball teams which have been relegated to mediocricy by pre-season critics. In each of these years, the 'Cats have won the Big Five title and participated in a post-season tournament.

Now, the situation has changed. This year, the 'Cats, self admittedly, are loaded with talent and are picked to dominate the Big Five, if not the entire East. A twenty-six game schedule will determine whether the 'Cats will enjoy the same success as a unanimous favorite.

To find the answer, Coach Jack Kraft, the "Miracle Maker," was consulted. "We definitely have the talent to have a top team," he said. "This is by far the most material we've had in three years."

Returning to the Wildcat camp are five lettermen, Captain Wally Jones, Jim Washington, Eric Erickson, Butch Winterbottom and a standout of two years ago George Leftwich. Three sophomores, Richie Moore, Bill Melchionni, and Bernie Schaffer come to the varsity with great potential. Transfers Al Salee and Mike Tralies are bidding for a starting berth.

Another big factor, according to Kraft, is rebounding. He looks to Tralies, Moore and Sallee to help Jim Washington clear the boards. If these men develop as expected, a major problem will be eliminated.

A major factor to any team is

Princeton Contest Tonight Hinges On Stopping Bradley

by Dick Pazdan

Word out of Princeton has it that the Tigers will be hard pressed to repeat last year's performance. But last year's team was 19-6 — so saying that they might not repeat just isn't saying too much.

Last season Princeton laid it on Villanova by a 68-53 score (in the Field House no less!!!), but gone from that team are the number two and number three scorers. Graduation took last year's captain and back court whiz Art Hyland, and forward Bill Haarlow. Hyland scored 404 points (16.2 average) and led the Tigers in shooting percentage (.480) while Haarlow scored at a 10.8 clip (271 total).

Back of course is Bill Bradley. The 6'5" junior led the team in scoring (27.3 per game), rebounding (306), total points (682), etc., etc., etc. All this as a sophomore.

After Bradley Princeton is a great big question mark. Nothing is certain. Seven veterans and four sophs are fighting for the remaining four starting berths. Beyond Bradley no other starters were named for tonight's contest, set for 8 p.m. in Dillon Gym. The picture is made even cloudier because of the extended football season. Senior captain Bill Howard (6'4"), and junior Don Roth both play football and will not be in top playing shape. Last year Howard averaged 5.4 while Roth scored 3.6 points per game.

The starting center is likely to be Don Nieman, who at 6'6" is the tallest man on the Tiger squad. Last season he was number four in the scoring and rebounding departments with 103 rebounds and 81 points (3.5 average) in 23 games. Once he gets rid of his football muscles Howard will probably alternate at center with Nieman.

Two "ifs" are on the Princeton roster, junior Chuck Berling and senior Rich Wright (6'4"). Berling was on probation for half of last season, but did manage 60 points in the 11 contests he played in. Wright meanwhile has had a condition similar to arthritis in his fingers. A physically healthy Wright and a scholastically healthy Berling could brighten Princetons picture greatly.

Soph help can be expected from 6'3" Bob Haarlow (brother of last years Bill), 6'2" Ed Steube (last years leading Frosh scorer), 6'2" Don Rodenbach, and 6'0" Bob Baughan. Haarlow and Steube look like the best bets.

In the final analysis it looks like this — stop Bradley and you beat Princeton.

ECAC To Provide Stiff Competition In Holiday Festival

by Tom Bruderle

For the first time in several years, Villanova's basketball Wildcats will meet in the annual ECAC Holiday Festival to be held in Madison Square Garden, beginning December 26.

Accompanying the Cats will be Providence, Utah, St. Joseph's College, St. John's University, Dayton, Cornell and Minnesota.

Coming from a 24-4 record and an NIT Championship are the greedy Providence Friars. Back for what is expected to be his best year is 6-10½ John Thompson who averaged 18.9 points and 14.0 rebounds a game.

Starting along with Thompson will be 6-8 Bob Kovalski (11.5 ppg) and 6-2 Jim Stone (14.5 ppg). Up and coming sophs are Bill Blair, (6-2, 20.0 ppg.) and Jim Benedict, 6-3, (25.0 ppg.).

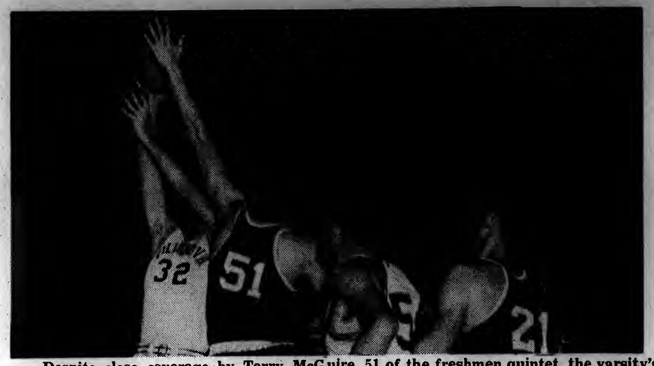
At Utah, hopes are not quite as high. Coach Jack Gardner's Utes compiled a poor 12-14 mark last season. Doug Moon, a 6-1 senior guard with an 11 point average last season is the only returning starter.

Danny Hawes, at 6-5, is a converted forward now playing center but has only an 8.3 average as a forward last year.

The winter could be a little warmer if sophs Lyndon McKay, a 6-6 forward with a 20.1 average and George Fisher, 6-7, with a 19.3 average come through. Otherwise, the future looks gloomy for the Utes.

Things are rarely gloomy on the St. Joe's basketball scene and this year won't be an exception. Nevertheless, Coach Jack Ramsey will have his problems.

St. John's will be a surprise if they don't better last year's woeful 9-15 log, the worst in Coach Joe Lapchick's 45 year reign. Ken McIntyre, 6-1 junior leads all varsity returnees with a 13.0 average.



Dayton will merit a close look this season. Last year's team had a 16-10 record and lost five men through graduation, but this year's team could be even better. Gordie Hatton, a 6-3 senior with a 15.7 average last year, is back for his third straight starting season.

The man to watch, however, is a 6-11 soph. Cornell is in a different situation as sophomores and juniors must come through if the Big Red is to improve on last year's 12-12 record.

For any sort of a season, Jim Magliseeau a 6-6½ forward- converted - to - center must come through strong.

Coming off, a 12-12 record, Minnesota could be at least as good this year. Mel Northway, at 6-8, is the club's big man averaging 12.2 points and 10.1 rebounds a game.

The Festival will open the afternoon of December 26 when St. John's meets Utah at 2:00 and will be immediately followed by the Villanova-Dayton battle.

Despite close coverage by Terry McGuire, 51 of the freshmen quintet, the varsity's Eric Erickson is up and in for a two pointer. Waiting for a possible re-bound are Al Sallee, 54, and Frank Gaidjunas, 21.

'Cats Roll In Frosh Scrimmage 86-55 After Favorable Show Against NYU

by Steve Freind and Rusty Miller

Villanova's highly-touted basketball team passed their final pre-season test with a resounding 86-55 triumph over the freshmen squad.

Paced by George Leftwich and Bill Melchionni the 'Cats appeared ready to tackle Princeton tonight. The patented fast-break and air-tight defense were simply too much for the scrappy Frosh to handle.

Two weeks ago, the 'Cats traveled to Madison Square Garden to scrimmage New York University. NYU is ranked second nationally in most pre-season polls.

Actual Game

The scrimmage gave Coaches Jack Kraft and Lou Rossini an idea of the strength and weaknesses of their squads. The scrimmage, nevertheless, was conducted under actual game conditions. The few observers in the Garden were treated to a highly-contested exhibition.

From the view point of these writers, the 'Cats clearly dominated the encounter. Despite yielding a towering height advantage to the Violets, the 'Cats gave notice that they are definite threats to N.Y.U.'s eastern supremacy.

What makes Villanova's showing more impressive is that the 'Cats played the entire scrimmage without their backcourt ace, Wally Jones, sidelined with a twisted ankle.

Coach Kraft was both pleased and surprised with his team's performance. "On the whole, I'm very satisfied with the results of the scrimmage," he said. "We played with much more cohesion than I expected us to exhibit this early in the season."

Kraft said that he was especially satisfied with the strong rebounding of Mike Tralies, Al Sallee and Bernie Schaffer. He also cited the play of Bill Melchionni, who started in place of Jones.

Melchionni, constantly ballhawking and setting up plays, showed no signs of inexperience as he more than adequately filled in for Jones.

The absence of Jones, the team leader, more than offset the fact that Barry Kramer, N.Y.U.'s unanimous All-American, played for only the second time in three weeks due to a foot injury.

Asked to comment on N.Y.U., Kraft said, "They have the ability to be a really fine team, but they didn't impress me on Saturday. They committed too many unnecessary fouls." He felt that Ray Bennett, the Violets, highly-rated sophomore, "has the potential to be great, but still makes sophomore mistakes."

Strong In Passing

Probably the 'Cats strongest point was their passing, constantly keeping the Violet defense offguard. This is particularly true of George Leftwich, whose passes resulted in at least a dozen Villanova scores.

One weakness on which Kraft commented was the rebounding of Jim Washington. "I don't feel that Jim got as many rebounds as he should have," he stated. "When he was underneath the basket, he did a good job. However, he spent too much time outside to make me completely happy."

Concerning Bill Bradley, Princeton's great All American whom the 'Cats face tonight, Kraft said," He's definitely a great one. He can do everything. The one thing that makes him so dangerous though, is his unselfishness. He constantly passes up shots to set up his teammates. This gives Princeton more balance and makes them a better ball club."

1963-64 Wildkittens Head For Success With Talented Squad

by Jim Proud

Villanova's 1963-64 Freshmen basketball squad is perhaps the best collection of players ever to come to Villanova in a single year.

Its talent is personified in the persons of Charles (Pete) Coleman, William Soens, Frank Gaidjunas, Terry McGuire, and Joseph Turk. These top five players have acquired honors ranging from All-American to All-Catholic

Backcourt Men

Pete Coleman is prehaps one of the best high school backcourt men on the eastern seaboard and an All-American. He will team with Joseph Turk, an engineering student and a member of the Philadelphia All-Catholic team last year at LaSalle, in the backcourt for the Kittens.

Bill Soens shined as a 6'8", 210 lb. graduate of Penn Charter, where he averaged 24 points a game and was selected as a high school All-American. He will team in the front court with Frank Gaidjunas and Terry McGuire to provide the Kittens with a devastating rebounding trio.

Focal Point

Soens, will be the focal point of Coach Jack Devine's freshman squad. He possesses a tremendous shooting eye and with his height and strength should lead the team in rebounding.

The other two frontcourt men, Frank Gaidjunas and Terry McGuire, All-Catholic and All-City, and All-State, All-Catholic and All-Scholastic, respectively, will complete the starting five for the 'Kittens.

Gaidjunas and McGuire can be placed in the category of possible greats on the freshman roster. Gaidjunas a 6'8" 205 lb. arts and science student and a graduate of LaSalle High, where he averaged 20 points a game, will join with Soens to help control the boards for the frosh squad. Terry McGuire, the All-State player from Cleveland, Ohio, will play the corner where his shooting abilities will bolster the team's scoring capacity.

In reserve the team has two fine players in Richard Kelleher and Charles Burt.

Kelleher, a 6'5" lb. math major can fill in for the front court men. He was All-County in high school, and combines quick hands, good shooting, and rebound strength to support the team's striking ability.

More Depth

Burt, who comes from Bergen Catholic High School, also adds depth to squad. He is an arts and science student, can play any position on the team, and is very versitile.

The season opens on the tenth of December against Scranton. The game will be in the Field House before the varsity game with Scanton.

A Problem

One problem facing the team, as it does all frosh squads, is whether or not the players can co-ordinate themselves into a team.

The players come from different backgrounds. Soens comes from the Inter-AC league in which is played different style of ball than in the Catholic league which gave us Gaidjunas and Turk.

Pete Coleman played his high school basketball in the suburban public league which is unlike either the Inter-AC or the Catholic league.

Palestra Management Offers Season Ticket At Lower Price

by Joe McCarthy

Season ticket books are now available at the Field House for all the Palestra basketball games this year. Passes are only for Villanova games.

Admission to ten Palestra games costs the holder of the season pass $5.00. Single game admission for students with presentation of matriculation card is seventy-five cents per game or $7.50 for ten games, the buyer would save $2.50 with the season booklet.

Under no circumstances will these seats even be occupied during the game, let alone sold. They are the sole possession of whoever might purchase them, even if the buyer fails to pick them up or attend. Date tickets can also be picked up at the same time provided they are available.

Other advantages to the season-booklet pass, according to Athletic Director Art Mahan, is that the really vehement supporters of Villanova will not be left out of any game.

Phenomena

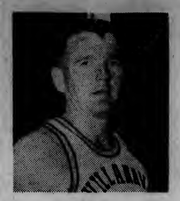
the schedule. Villanova's schedule this year, while not brutal, is no pushover. To begin with, the 'Cats have to play the members of the Big Five.

The 'Cats finished in a first place tie with Penn for the Big Five title last year. Competition is so keen in these tilts that upsets are everyday and a five-point win a runaway. Last season, they also garnered a fourth place finish in the National Invitational Tournament in NY.



Besides Big Five encounters, the 'Cats face stiff tests from the likes of Toledo, Seton Hall, Xavier, St. Bonaventure, Buffalo, Detroit, Dusquesne and Marquette.

Sam Iorio

Player Profiles

by Jim O'Brien

Eric Erickson

Eric comes to Villanova from Monsignor Bonner High School. He earned a starting position as a sophomore last year, taking over the slot vacated by George Leftwich. He played exceptionally well for a sophomore, averaging nine points a game. His shot at the buzzer won the St. Joe's game 63-61 and enabled the Wildcats to tie Penn for the City Title.

Eric's experience, shooting ability and knowledge of Coach Kraft's defense mean that he will once again be a valuable member of the squad.

Sam Iorio

It will be up to Sam to keep the team supplied with Nancy's cookies now that Jim McMonagle has graduated. Sam was a valuable reserve last year. Whenever Jim Washington got into foul trouble, Sam would come into the game and do a good job defensively.

He also used his height to advantage in gathering in rebounds. This year Sam will once again be a reserve center. We can count on him for some colorful moments and some adequate ballplaying.

Sam is one of the best known of all the ballplayers. He is on speaking terms with every secretary, every campus cop, every nurse,most faculty members and anyone else who says hello.

Wally Jones

Without him it's not the same club. This has been the story of Villanova basketball for three years. Wally shoots with the best. In his sophomore year he made an amazing 49.9% of his shots, many of them from twenty feet with a defender hanging on his arm.

No one will dispute the fact that Jones is one of the finest shooters in the country, — but Wally is also living proof that there is more to the game of basketball than just shooting.

Wally directs the offense. When he is not directing it, it doesn't go anywhere. He sets up plays, he passes, he screens, and he shoots. Bob Walters, coach of LaSalle recently said, "In my book Jones is great."

His past accomplishments are well-know; 967 points in two years, Most Valuable Player in the 1962 Quaker City Tournament, All Big Five two straight years, co-winner of the Most Valuble Player Award for the city. Maybe this is the year for All-American honors. One thing is certain,—Wally will join the 1000 point club in one of the first two games this season.

Ben Kenny

Ben was sixth man on last year's team. His outside shooting ability means that he will see action against zone defenses. Ben played well on several occasions last year and will be counted on as a reserve guard again this year.

George Leftwich

George is back after a year's layoff. His knee is well-rested and functioning well. Two years ago he teamed with Jones and Hubie White to lead the Wildcats to the Big Five Championship, the Quaker City Tournament Title, and second place in the Eastern Regionals of the NCAA Tournament.

Leftwich and Jones were the backcourt sensations of the East that year. Their dazzling steals and ballhandling provided Palestra fans with a type of basketball that had been missing for years.

George is respected as a fine shooter. With him back in the lineup, Villanova fans are likely to see the "run and shoot" type of game that was so successful two years ago.

Bill Melchionni

Backing up Jones and Leftwich will be Bill Melchionni, a sophomore guard from Pennsauken, N.J. Bill averaged 17.5 points a game last year for the frosh. He is an all around ballplayer — a fine shooter, passer, and court general.

Bill would undoubtedly start on any other team in the city. The fact that he will probably be relegated to a reserve role indicates the depth with which coach Kraft is blessed this season. Melchionni will step into Jones' position next year.

Richie Moore

Richie Moore is a local boy. He played at John Bartram High School, in Philadelphia and was selected to the All-Public squad.

He was a well-known and respected ball player in the City's independent leagues. Last year as a freshman he averaged 23.6 points a game.

Although only 6'4", Richie's bull-like frame enables him to rebound with taller men. Moore has terrific moves on offense and will add scoring punch to the forward position. He is well suited to the running game and will take part in many fast breaks with Jones and Leftwich.

As of now it looks like Richie has nailed down the starting position at forward. If he can master the intricacies of the side position of the 1-2-2 zone, Moore will be a valuable addition to this year's team.

Al Sallee

"Big Al," they call him. Alan Sallee is a 6'8" ex-marine who should add rebounding power to this year's squad.

Right now he is getting acclimated to Villanova's scrambled defense. As the season progresses Al should see more and more action.

He played a year at Bellarmine College and then two years in the Marine Corps. If Al can adjust to the running type of game, he will be a valuable asset with his height and soft shooting touch.

Bernie Schaffer

Bernie Schaffer was the starting center on last year's freshman team. He is a hustler, giving 100 percent at all times. His main function this year will be as a reserve big man.

When the starters get into foul trouble and a strong rebounder is needed, Kraft can count on Bernie to do a creditable job. He averaged 11.5 points a game last year so he is capable of scoring also.

Mike Tralies

Mike is another local boy. He is a graduate of Roman Catholic High School in Phila. The fifth starting berth is up for grabs, and Tralies has an inside shot for it. He has been working out in the pivot on offense and seems suited to the position.

Mike is a transfer from the Naval Academy and had to sit out last year. Once he gains some game experience he could be a pleasant surprise.

Jim Washington

A good team needs big men to get the ball and little men to run with it. Jim is the big man. Last year he proved himself one of the best rebounders in the area. He dominated the defensive backboard particularly. He has been switched from pivot to corner on offense.

This move will probably enable "Wash" to get more use out of his jump shot. Although he did a good job in the pivot last year, he does seem to be more suited to the forward position. Last year Jim averaged 12.7 points and 12.2 rebounds a game.

Rumor has it that Jim spent the summer playing playground ball with the local professional players — and proving himself a definite pro prospect.

Warren Winterbottom

Wichita and Winterbottom! When the team arrived at Madison Square Garden for its workout on Wednesday, Wichita was on the court practicing. The manager was told to keep the players in the locker room so they wouldn't see what they were going to face. Wichita was huge — and ranked fifth nationally.

Saturday came and who will forget it. I know Mr. Winterbottom won't. A steal, a fifteen foot jumper and Butch had set the Cats on fire. Wichita went down, 54-53. It was Villanova's biggest win in years, and Butch was as responsible for it as anyone.

Warren's main value is as a "spot" player. His great personal desire and hustle make him capable of coming off a bench cold and sparking a team to inspirational heights.

Final 1962-1963 record — 19-10. Villanova is co-champion with Penn for the Big Five Title. Head Coach Jack Kraft is 40-17 for two years.

"... That Good"

by Roy Baron

"Jack Kraft seems to have assembled a team that may be the best in the East, if not the nation. VIllanova will be that good."

"Kraft has a 40-17 record since taking over for Al Severance two years ago. He'll enhance that this season with the speed, scoring power and rebounding strength the Wildcats possess."

These are but a couple of the comments which sportswriters have made about the Wildcat basketball team recently. True, these may be the views of a pair of optimists. But their opinions are not the only ones which laud the Cats' chances for a highly successful campaign.

Nearly every forecaster has placed Villanova with N.Y.U. as the two top teams in the East. There must be a valid reason for this optimism, and there is.

Barry Kramer of the Violets is being hailed as the top collegiate player in the nation. He is the big reason for the selection of N.Y.U. in many pre-season polls as the number 2 team in the country.

So Kramer is great. We'll admit that. But you would have a most difficult task in getting Coach Kraft to rate him higher than our own Wally Jones.

To Kraft, Wally is an All-American, a man who is just as valuable to the Wildcats as any other player in the nation, including Kramer, is to his team.

Jones is the team leader. For two years he has quarterbacked the club from his backcourt position. He was equally efficient in directing the fast breaking attack which Coach Kraft used in his first year on the Mainline and the slow-down tactics of the '62-63 campaign.

Now that the Cats once again have good overall speed they will go back to the running game. With his knee now mended Jones should excel in his role as the middle man in the fast break.

For basketball enthusiasts there was nothing quite like "the hand is quicker than the eye" type play of Jones, George Leftwich, and Hubie White two years ago.

Now with Jones and Leftwich together again, and with Richie Moore taking over White's role, the crowd will spend many an evening on their feet applauding the magician-like play of Jones and Company.

However, the fast breaking offense of the Cats will be only as good as the men under the boards. When you don't get the rebounds, you can't expect to play a good running game.

Jim Washington, Villanova's leading rebounder last year, is expected to receive the much needed help of newcomers Mike Tralies and Moore in this department.

All the excitement, however, will not be provided by the Wildcats this season. Villanova must challenge teams sporting some of the top players in the nation.

First to be met will be Princeton's All-American, Bill Bradley, tonight. Also to be encountered are Toledo's Larry Jones, already drafted by the Los Angeles Lakers; Xavier's Bob Pelkington, the nation's number 2 rebounder last winter; and the nation's leading scorer a year ago, Nick Werkman of Seton Hall.

Third Big Five Crown?

by Jerry Bruderle

After capturing or sharing the Big Five title two years running, Villanova tied Pennsylvania for City honors last year, but the Quakers have lost seven veterans and can be discounted as serious contenders. The major threats to Villanova will be Temple's young Owls and LaSalle's experienced Explorers. This leaves St. Joseph's in the middle of what should be a rebuilding year.

TEMPLE

Coach Harry Litwack's Owls appear to be strong again and rate as Big Five contenders. Six-eight Jim Williams from Norristown, who averaged 21.4 for the freshmen, could be the best big man in Temple history.

Flanking him will be another soph, Ken Morgan, and last year's leading scorer and rebounder, Dan Fitzgerald. Morgan, 6-6, averaged 16.7 for the frosh and is a strong rebounder. Six-five Fitzgerald scored at an 11.9 rate and should improve with a better team behind him.

The guard slots will be manned by 5-11 senior, Frank Bishop (9.0) and 6-2 Bob Harrington (9.7). Vince Richardson and Elmer Snethen return to fill in the guard and forward positions.

St. JOSEPH'S

The big problem at St. Joe's is replacing graduated stars Jimmy Lynam, Billy Hoy, and Tom Wynne. Coach Jack Ramsey appears to have the material to compensate for the latter two but Lynam's guard slot is yet to be filled. Ed Walsh, a 5-10 junior who played behind Lynam last year seems to have the inside track over high-scoring soph Billy Oakes.

Oakes averaged 17.3 for the freshmen last year. The other backcourt position will be manned by Steve Courtin, who filled in when Hoy broke his ankle, and averaged 11.9 last year. Although ony 6-1 he rebounds well and has quick hands.

The other returning letterman is team captain, Jim Boyle. A six-four forward, who averaged 12.6 last year, he should make up for Wynne's absence. At the other forward spot, 6-5 soph Tom Duff and veteran Joe Kelley 6-3 will fight it out.

At center, 6-8 John Tiller and Larry Hoffman will alternate. If Ramsey needs shooting he will start Tiller, for rebounding, Hoffman.

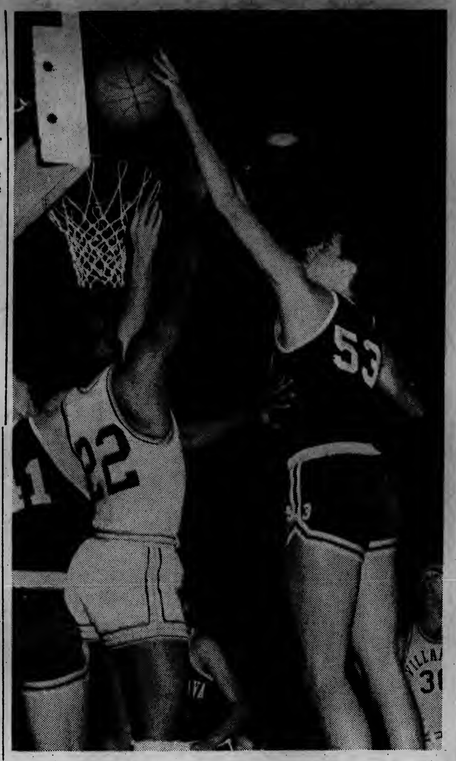
The Hawks can not be counted out in the Big Five. Last year they were 2-2 in city competition. One loss was a triple overtime thriller with Penn and the other a single overtime duel against Villanova.

PENN

The loss of seven veterans means that Penn will be rebuilding this year. Captain Ray Carazo who averaged 11.4 last year is the only experienced backcourt man returning. He will team with 6'1" soph Jeff Neuman a 17.9 scorer for the Quaker Frosh.

Penn's front court will be manned by 6-4 Fred Greene, 6-7 Joe Andrews and 6-3 Stan Pawlak. Pawlak is a sophomore who broke the freshman scoring record last year, hitting at a 23.4 clip. Andrews is the Quakers only big man and is important mainly for his rebounding, not shooting. Greene on the other hand must return to his freshman form when he scored over 20 points a game.

The lack of experience will be the biggest drawback but the shooting potential is there.



Junior Bruce Moore 6-4 can play both in the front court and back court. He will be McCloskey's main reserve strength. With only one real veteran returning in Carazo, McCloskey will need a miracle to match last year's 19-6 record, but the Quakers will improve.

LASALLE

LaSalle, under new coach Bob Walters, will be bolstered by the return of their big front line but will be lacking in guards. To fill this need, 6-6 Frank Corace will move to one guard slot. Corace, the team's leading scorer last year with an 18.4 average, teamed with 6-7 George Sutor and 6-10 Walt Sampson to form a formidable forward wall.

Sampson, a senior, scored at a 7.8 clip last year and pulled down 10 rebounds a game. Sutor, a junior, averaged 13.4 pts. and 11 rebounds a game. In Corace's forward position will be 6-4 Al Tezsla. In the other guard position will be 5-8 Curt Fromal, the ballhandler the Explorers need.

Walters hopes to keep his team moving this year as opposed to last season's stand-and-shoot offense. The Explorers were 16-8 but seemed lethargic and indifferent in many key contests. The potential is again there and Walters will have an excellent season if he can uncover it.

It would be safe bet to say that 53, Bill Soens has just tapped in a bucket but it would also be a lost bet because he didn't score.

The two points belong to 22, George Leftwich who has just scored on a layup. Number 41, Joe Turk goes up for the shot while Richie Moore, 30, moves in.

The varsity took the annual scrimmage with the frosh, 86-55.

James E. McErlane Elected 'Catholic Youth' Of The Year

Jim McErlane, one of the most responsible and dedicated students at Villanova,will be honored with the Outstanding Catholic Youth of the Year award at the December 17 Who's Who banquet.

Jim McErlane

McErlane was elected out of a field of twelve by the Student Council to represent Villanova University at the National Catholic Youth Council which will elect the National Catholic Youth of the Year.

While at Villanova, Jim has distinguished himself in numerous campus organizations including: Student Council, Student Senate, the Student Activities Committee, Knights of Columbus, NFCCS Regional Parliamentarian, and Tutoring Program.

In his sophomore year Jim was co-chairman of the committee which brought the senior car privilege through the Student Council. He was also chairman of the Student Council Tutoring Program in his sophomore year and has remained active with the organization since then.

The Semester Re-alignment change which was recently passed by the Student Council was originally submitted by Jim as Executive Vice-president for Educational Affairs and a member of the Student Faculty Committee. The bill is intended to change the first semester to end before Christmas.

Last August Jim was the Villanova delegate to the national convention of the National Federation of Catholic College Students. He is presently co-chairman of the Father's Day committee and was also recently elected to the National Who's Who.

Jim intends to attend Villanova's Law School and to set up his practice in Chester County after his graduation.

Looking back on his career at Villanova, Jim said that he was "gratified at the success of the Student Council the last three years, especially this year with the inauguration of the Lecture series, the Concerts, and the new Basketball Club which can really do a great deal for the school."

St. John's To Receive Proceeds From Annual Charity Weekend

Jack Emery, president of the Junior Class, has announced the plans for Charity Weekend which will be held from December 13 to 17. All proceeds from the weekend will go to the benefit of St. John's Orphanage Scholarship Fund.

The Charity Ball will begin junior weekend on Friday night in the Field House. The dance's theme is "Twas the Night Before Christmas" and decorations will be "sufficient and beautiful."

Highlight of the evening will be the presentation of the "Missing Link" trophy. Votes can be purchased in the "Missing Link" contest at the Pie Shoppe at the price of one cent per vote. Collections are also being taken up in all theology classes to augment the Fund.

The dance will be held from 8:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. and refreshments will be served free of charge. Entertainment for the intermissions will include the T-Tones of Rosemont and a sing-a-long affair. The Villanovans will provide the music for the evening. The price of the dance is $2.50.

Saturday's activity consists of the Orphans' Outing. A bus will take Villanovans and their dates to St. John's Orphanage to claim their "orphans for a day."

From the orphanage, the "fathers for a day" will travel to J. C. Penney's in Upper Darby so that their young wards will be able to meet Santa Claus. Everyone will buy their orphans an inexpensive gift.

A movie will be shown afterwards at the Terminal theatre and a luncheon will then be held at Kostick's in the 69th St. area. Tickets for the outing cost $1.50 and anyone is eligible to take an orphan.

The weekend will end with the Orphans' Party on Tuesday afternoon at the orphanage. Santa Claus (Denny La Hiff) will distribute 150 gifts to the orphans at the party.

The party co-chairmen, Eileen Walters and Jim Brant, will entertain the orphans and Dennis Addonizio will show a movie. Other chairmen for the weekend include David Mc Cormack, Charity Ball, and Ken Curtin, Orphans' Outing.

Council's Realignment, Exam Proposals Approved, Will Go Into Effect In 1965

by Frank Quattrone

The semester alignment proposal submitted to the Student Council by Jim McErlane earlier this year has received the official approval of the President's Office.

Along with this action an extension of the semester examination periods for 1964-65 was announced by the Rev. Joseph J. Gildea, OSA, Chairman of the Student-Faculty Committee. Under the latter proposal, originally submitted to the Student Senate by Joe Tate and Marty McGuinn, Fall examinations for all students would extend over an eleven-day period from Saturday, January 11, through Friday, January 22, 1965.

Spring exams for seniors and juniors will be held from Monday, May 17 to Friday, May 28 ,and for sophomores and freshman from Friday, May 24 to Friday, June 4.

The realigned academic schedule, replacing the general calendar which has been been followed the last 121 years, will go into effect in 1965. The Fall semester that year will begin with registration on September 7, the day after Labor Day; classes begin the following Monday. Examinations will be held from Saturday, December 11 through Monday, Dec 20.

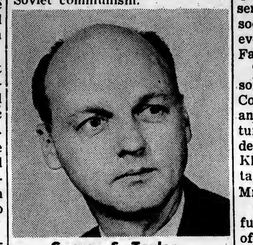
Head Socialist George Taylor Condemns Capitalistic Despots

George S. Taylor, leader of the Socialist-Labor party in southeastern Pennsylvania will deliver an address tonight at 8 p.m. in Vasey Hall auditorium.



The lecture will be sponsored by the Villanova chapter of the Intercollegiate Conference on Government.

His topic will be "A Socialist Criticism of U.S. Capitalism and Soviet Despotism." Taylor has been a candidate for a number of elective city and state offices.

He has run for senator and governor of Pennsylvania and was the Socialist-Labor candidate for mayor of Philadelphia in the recent elections.

This will be Mr. Taylor's second appearance here this year. In October he spoke with Frank Sauers on WWVU's "Just This Side of the Fringe."

Mr. Taylor has long been a critic of U.S. capitalism, but has stressed that socialists also oppose the despotic nature of Soviet communism.

George S. Taylor

Jerry Cardamone, Villanova I.C.G. president, said that to his knowledge this is the first time a member of the Socialist-Labor party has spoken here at Villanova.

He noted that the lecture should stimulate a good deal of discussion during the question and answer period which will follow the address.

Mr. Taylor suggests an economic reorganization of society that would eliminate poverty and want through distribution of the nation's great abundance.

He emphasized that socialism is not inconsistent with democracy. Under socialism, he says, individuals in a particular field would elect representatives from their field to administer it.

It is only reasonable, he notes, that teachers should administer the teaching profession, engineers the engineering profession, janitors the janitorial profession, etc.

Council Takes Survey To Test Faculty View On Student Attendance

At the last meeting of the Student Council, Neal Stoneback, vice-president for educational affairs, stated that, in accordance with a recent motion, a poll is being taken among the faculty members for their views on class attendance.

Pat Mahady of the Student Activities Committee reported that progress was being made on the student directory and that it would be available in the near future.

It was also announced that James McErlane, Student Council vice-president for educational affairs, was elected Catholic Youth of the Year for Villanova.

McErlane reported that the Spirit Committee would hold rallies during the basketball season and that they would form a special Basketball Club to boost spirit.

The local NFCCS representative Terence J. Cooney, proposed that a poll be taken to test the students' knowledge of their parish. This was a request from NFCCS' national office.

In the chairman's report, Martin G. McGuinn pointed out that a query into the problem of a closed-circuit hook-up for the Princeton basketball game showed the venture too costly; hence the Council rejected the motion.

Under new business motions were passed regarding requests to be made to the library for longer hours and special sections devoted to strictly local interests. Thomas Furst and Richard McDonough were the originators of this bill.

Also passed were motions by George Valva for a change in the residents' milk ration and by James O'Connor for financial appropriations.

Defeated by a roll call vote of 29 to 18 was a motion by

Who's Who Banquet To Be Held Dec. 17 At Falcon House

The annual Who's Who banquet honoring those Villanova seniors recently selected to the society will be held on Tuesday evening, December 17, at the Falcon House in Havertown.

The affair which is being sponsored jointly by the Student Council, the Alumni Association, and the administration, will feature talks by the Father President, the Reverend John A. Klekotka, OSA, and the Secretary of the Alumni Association, Mr. George Pequinot.

Others expected to attend the function are the Vice-Presidents of the University, the Dean of Men, the Dean of Women, and the Dean of Student Activities.

The honored students will be presented with a certificate stating their membership in the society and will appear in the annual Who's Who publication of colleges and universities.

Also, they will be listed on two placement forms, one of which will kept by the Villanova Placement Bureau, the other which will be sent to the National Who's Who headquarters in Tuscaloosa, Alabama.

As stated in the literature presented to the students, the purpose of the society is to serve as a practical aid to schools and colleges and as a reliable source for employers in their search for outstanding students.

Villanova is one out of 775 schools which submits students to the Who's Who. This year's selection of 37 members constitues the largest group ever to be placed by Villanova in the society.

Deceased Villanovan's Friends Establish Scholarship Fund

Death struck a former Villanova student at the beginning of this semester. One September evening, Bob "Red" Olive had a fatal automobile accident on the campus of Cabrini College.

Recovering from the shock of the untimely death of Bob Olive, his friends decided to inaugurate a perpetual scholarship to St. Peter's in his memory. This will be granted yearly to a member of the track team.

Prior to his matriculation at the University, Olive attended St. Peter's High School in Staten Island, New York.

St. Peter's is a private school requiring tuition to be paid by the individual students. This scholarship will defray the costs of the high school education.

In order to make this scholarship a reality, contributions are asked from all of Olive's former classmates. The mean amount received thus far has been five dollars, but any contribution will be appreciated.

All donations should be sent to John G. Hall, Attorney-at-Law, 711 Forest Ave., Staten Island, New York.

Graziano Seeks Tutors For Various Courses

John Graziano, vice-president of the Sophomore Class and impresario of the Student Council Tutor Program, has expressed a need for tutors to assist students in a few courses.

After a sluggish start, the program has gained momentum but help is still needed. Nearly 15 tutors are desired for Mathematics 135; Chemistry 111 has need of eight tutors.

All those who are interested in becoming tutors or who wish to partake of this service are urged to leave their names in the Student Council Office or in 316 Sullivan Hall.

Beta Gamma Debaters Grab Top Team Honors At Debate Tournament

Beta Gamma, the university's debating society, hosted the Fourth Annual Villanova Invitational Debate Tournament.

In attendance for the two days of debating that took place in Bartley Hall were teams from 22 colleges.

The team trophy was decided on the best unit's record for 10 rounds of debate.

On this basis, Villanova's unit, composed of Joe Rohrer and Kathy Koller on the "A" team and Terry Cooney and Gene Fitzmaurice on the "B" team, garnered first honors with an 8-2 record and 210 team points.

In second place, also with an 8-2 record but with 208 team points, was Navy.

Though the weekend was marked by an air of mourning as a result of the assassination of President Kennedy, it was decided that the tournament would be held since many of the teams had already arrived, some from great distances, when the official word of the President's death was received.

The tournament consisted of five rounds of what is known as switch-side debating, in which the teams defend opposite sides of the question each round.

In many ways this tournament was unique. In the first place, it was the first time that Villanova had sponsored a switch-side debate tournament.

Third position went to Pitt with a 7-3 record and 229 team points and Princeton captured fourth with a 7-3 record but only 228 team points.

The award for best speaker in the tournament went to Kretchen Bielstein.

Speedy 'Snail' Treasurer

James G. O'Connor, who has been described as diligent, industrious, and conscientious, is the dollar-and-sense man of the Student Council this year. As treasurer, it is his job to guard the bank-book and preserve the Council's funds.

Jim's work on the Student Council dates back four years, and he holds the distinction of being one of two seniors who are four-year members of the Student Senate.

Although nicknamed "Snail" by his fraternity brothers, his pace would be hard to match by anyone. In his sophomore year he worked on the Freshman Orientation, Soph Cotillion, and Spring Outing Committees and he was Co-Chairman of the Religious Affairs Committee. In his third year Jim's committees multiplied to the Charity Outing, Class Concert, Mothers' Day, Junior Charity Ball, Ring, and Steering Committees, as well as the Co-Chairmanship of the Student Affairs Committee. This year he was kept busy by the Senior Steering Committee and his post as treasurer.

Not content with laurels in the political sphere, Jim has also earned admiration as a member of the NFCCS, Sanctuary Society, DPE, as pledgemaster, and the Blue Key.

On the last activity Jim commented, "The Blue Key has given me the opportunity to show the facets and fine points of Villanova to prospective students." He also predicted for the Student Council: "A fabulous future since the potential for success is there."

This IA major from South Orange is still considering after-graduation possibilities although he has ruled out politics. We believe that although some future business will have gained an asset in Jim, the government will have a debit in the loss of a devoted political servant.

Three Approvals Necessary To Withdrawal Grade Change

The Rev. Joseph J. Gildea, OSA, Vice-President for Academic Affairs, has requested that the students familiarize themselves with the following regulation, which appears on page 18 of the Students' Handbook: Without the approval of the professor, his department head, and his dean, no grade higher than C can replace the grade N.

To obtain the necessary approval, a student must submit to the professor a written statement of the reasons for not completing the work by the due date.

The professor will indicate his approval on an official form — a copy of which will be provided for the student when the professor's department head and dean have signed it, attesting that the N may be replaced by a grade higher than C, if the work is completed within the allotted, time, and the higher grade is earned.

The "allotted time" is one month from the end of the term for undergraduates, two months for graduate students.

Ex-Mayor Dilworth Deals Critical Blow To Old Urban Transportation Problem

by Jim Brennan

Richardson Dilworth, former mayor of Philadelphia, recently addressed the Villanova Law Forum. The talk, presented on November 15, was given in conjunction with the Forum's topic, "The City Faces It's Problems."

Mr. Dilworth's talk dealt with the transportation problems in modern urban affairs. He spoke with authority, having received national acclaim for the progress he made in solving urban problems, particularly in transportation.

"Transportation," Mr. Dilworth said, "is the essential and life-blood of every community." He also commented on the increasing urbanization in America.

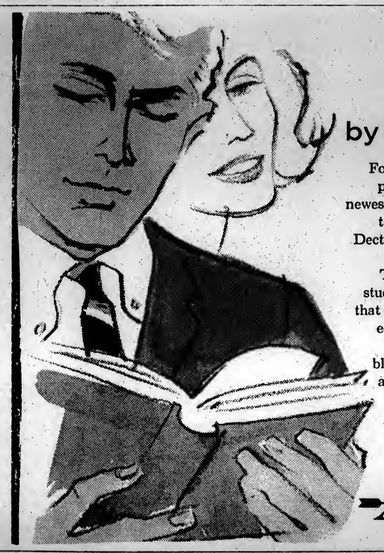
According to Mr. Dilworth, the city should be the center of cultural activity, a true "marketplace of the intellect." This area must be pulled together by efficient transportation.

Also, the entire suburban area should be served in one unified system. Dilworth also called for an expanded subway system, improved rail systems, and bus systems to serve as feeder lines for the railroads.

He seemed to feel that the proposed Delaware Expressway is needed but that general transportation help would be more beneficial to the Delaware County area.

In discussing his position as Chairman of the Transportation Study of the Boston-Washington Corridor, Dilworth expressed his hopes for inter-city rail service.

After his talk, Dilworth answered questions pertaining to such topics as helicopter travel, big city political machines, and center city renewal.



Gotein's 'Four Faces Of Islam' Opens History Lecture Series

Tonight will mark the opening of the History Department's annual series of lectures. Dr. S. D. Gotein, Professor of Arabic in the Department of Oriental Studies, the University of Pennsylvania, will deliver a lecture entitled "The Four Faces of Islam" at 7:30 p.m. in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall.

The title of Dr. Gotein's lecture is taken from the Prophecy of Ezekiel and will deal with Islam's view of reality and its mission in the world. A question and answer period will follow the lecture.

In this connection, it may be pointed out it is not very often that students have the opportunity to discuss such an important topic with an eminent authority as Dr. Gotein. All students and their friends are invited to attend.

Noted Georgetown Professor To Lecture On Party System

Professor Howard Penniman of Georgetown University will lecture on "Congress and the American Party System" in 110 Bartley Hall at 8 p.m. this evening. The lecture is sponsored by the Political Science Department and is open to all members of the university community.

Dr. Penniman is chairman of the Department of Government at Georgetown and is the author of a number of books and articles, and has been a columnist on the Jesuit weekly America since 1958.

He has served as Chief of the External Research Staff of the State Department. He has taught at a number of American colleges and universities including the University of Minnesota and Yale University. His most recent book is The American Political Process.

According to Mr. Logue, chairman of the lecture committee, recent developments in Washington highlight the importance of Dr. Penniman's talk.

Chief among these is the question of whether President Johnson will be able to persuade the Congress to enact the essentials of the Kennedy legislative program, especially the tax-cut and civil rights bills. The talk will be followed by a question period.

Georgian Court Club Joins Campus Singers In Christmas Concert

The Georgian Court Glee Club will join the Women's Glee Club of Villanova, the Villanova Singers and the Villanova Concert Band in presenting the annual Christmas Concert in the Field House on Saturday, December 14, at 8 p.m. There is no admission.

Highlights of the program include the Concert Band's performance of Leroy Anderson's popular "Christmas Festival," and the "Hallelujah Chorus" from "The Messiah" by Handel, sung jointly by the Georgian Court Glee Club and the Villanova Singers.

The Georgian Court Glee Club, under the direction of Patrick R. Clynes, will also perform "Gloria in Excelsis" from Mozart's Twelfth Mass." Soprano soloist Patricia Helbig will present "Come unto Him, All Ye That Labor," also from Handel's "The Messiah."

Directed by William Tapp, the Women's Glee Club of Villanova will render Pietro Yon's "Gezu Bambino."

"The Creation" by Richter and Praetorius' traditional "Lo, How a Rose E'er Blooming" will be contributions of the Villanova Singers, directed by Herbert Fiss. The Spires, Villanova's folk artists, will perform in addition to Joseph Prestilio who will present the beautiful French carol, "O Holy Night."

Rounding out the program, the Concert Band, under the baton of Joseph Colantonio, will present Anderson's "Sleigh Ride," and "A Festival Prelude" by Alfred Reed.

In concluding the program, the audience will assist the music organizations in singing some of the more popular Christmas carols.

Peace Corps Test

Eighty-one Villanova students filled out the Peace Corps Questionnaire and took the placement test during last week's three-day Peace Corps informational drive on campus.

Paul Vanderwood, who headed the Peace Corps recruiting team, called the reception "one of the best the Peace Corps has had anywhere."

The applicants will be informed in about one month as to whether or not they have the qualifications necessary to serve as Peace Corps volunteers.

Those who are accepted later will be invited to specific training programs which will prepare the volunteers for their two years of service.

"When the training time rolls around it's up to the applicant to decide whether or not he wants to go ahead with Peace Corps," Mr. Vanderwood said. "No one signs on the dotted line for a definite commitment in Peace Corps. You're a volunteer from application time until you finish service. Anywhere, along that line, a person who no longer wants the Peace Corps may drop-out."

Students interested in further Peace Corps information should contact the Rev. George P. Riley, OSA, on the third floor of Sullivan Hall. Father has brochures, questionnaires, and other information on the Peace Corps. He will also know the date and location of future Peace Corps tests.

Astounding Events

The events of the past few weeks have astounded an entire nation, the entire world. More specifically, we on the college level will miss our deceased hero. No president in history has ever been so beloved by those in the institutions of higher learning.

Students hear for many years the word "ideal" from their teachers. For many the word only meant something to be discussed in the classroom. President Kennedy, more than any teacher, showed that it was possible to have ideals in a practical and materialistic world. Moreover, he fought for his ideals — something which it would be well for us, as students of the "idea" of a university, to imitate.

Now that the shock of such an unfathomable loss has subsided, it would be well that we take an objective look at our ideals as a nation.

Trial by jury and the assumption that everyone is innocent until proven guilty are ideals which have been an intrinsic part of our concept of the "American way." Yet these two important concepts of our society were violated, unintentionally, by a confused people. Justice has been violated not only in the shooting of a president, but also in the murder of Lee Harvey Oswald.

The question of a fair and impartial jury for Lee Harvey Oswald would have been a difficult problem under most circumstances, but the coverage by the "mass media" made it an impossible task. It is important that we reserve the ideal of justice regardless of the circumstances surrounding the exercising of so difficult an objective. Granted, this is the most diffcult problem we as Americans have had to face, but a truly great nation has never survived because its task was an easy one.

President's Report

Educational Policies

by Marty McGuinn
President, Student Body

Because our academic commitments represent our primary responsibility at Villanova, the Student Council considers educational affairs to be an area of utmost importance.

The privilege for students to voice their opinions and to participate in the consideration of policies which directly affect them can be a valuable asset to the University Community.

Last year, the Student Council originated two proposals concerning the academic calendar. Both were passed by the congress and subsequently considered and approved by the student-faculty committee and sent to the Father President.

It has just been announced that favorable action was taken on these proposals and the following changes will be realized. For 1964-1965, the semester examinations will extend over a two week period in January and in May.

For 1965-1966, the academic calendar will be realigned and the first semester will end before Christmas; the second semester will end in mid-May.

The acceptance of the above proposals is important for several reasons, but most significantly because it emphasized the value of student, faculty, and administration cooperation. The Rev. Joseph Gildea, OSA, vice-president for Academic Affairs, and the Student-faculty committee have been most willing and fair in their considerations.

Certain faculty members, however, have criticized the Student Council recently for its investigation in the areas of class attendance and course evaluation procedures.

Such criticism, I feel, is unfair because it fails to admit of any degree of effective and legitimate student concern in their own educational endeavors. People who deny that certain established policies can be questioned, deny the progress of a growing educational institution.

We are grateful for the cooperation of most faculty members who have responded to our poll, the majority of whom have indicated their desire for a change in the present attendance system, and who have submitted many pertinent suggestions.

Coordinated efforts can only achieve results beneficial to the entire University community and represent a sincere attempt to maintain the highest standards to which Villanova is dedicated.

Letters To The Editor

To the Editor:

We, the undersigned, are members of the Senior Class at Villanova. We were seated at various places at 1 p.m. on Saturday, November 23, when it was announced by Captain Murphy that classes had been dismissed until Monday, December 2.

The roar which greeted the announcement and the ensuing outburst of cheers and screams awakened a sense of revulsion in all of us that will not soon be quieted.

A particularly overwhelmed student was asked by one of our number if he knew just why classes were being excused. He replied, "It doesn't make any difference why. I just know that I am going home." . . .

It is difficult for us, individually or collectively, to discount such a demonstration by the students of this University as a spontaneous happening which can be excused in light of the extension given to our recess.

It is our corporate belief that this disgraceful occurance reflects a severe deficiency in the sense of values of an all too substantial segment of the Villanova student body.

Is our memory so short that we cannot realize why it is that we have been dismissed? Does not the death of a fine American and a fine Catholic move us at least to some feeling of loss which might be reflected in our demeanor?

How can anyone be so callous as to rejoice in the aftermath of a national tragedy of incalculable magnitude? . . .

Villanova students have often been criticized, unjustly they feel, by outsiders. We, a group within the University, have today perhaps been brought to appreciate the basis for this criticism.

It is out hope that the students whose conduct we indict will stop and reflect upon the tragedy that has befallen our nation.

Life must go on, it is true, but the life of the nation has been to some degree deprived by the death of President Kennedy.

A Conservative would be remiss in his loyalty to the man and his principles if he were to let your recent Counterpoint blast of Sen. Barry Goldwater go unchallenged. The diatribe was "cute," but not funny . . .

The charge of right wing extremism is laughable . . .

Sen. Cold Blatter has the support of the DAR, John Birch Society," etal? So? This argument is as specious and phoney as a three-dollar bill.

The Democrats have received, and not disavowed, the support of every pinko, Liberal, ADA'er, fellow-traveler, domestic communist, crypto-communist and anti-anti-communist since the days of the sainted FDR.

Come off it, Counterpoint. This is '63, not '33!

To the Editor:

To a student from a Foreign Country, away from home and home-country and that too by a few thousand miles, life is interesting and charming as well, with the influence of the new surroundings and circumstances.

But even then a void in such a new life is inescapable- a void created by the absence of some family environments . . .

And on the night of November 14, 1963, the Faculty Members Wive's Club of Villanova, welcomed the Foreign students of Villanova by holding a function "INTERNATIONAL NIGHT".

Fully aware of their role- a role which is exclusive and obviously more important than their husband's role in making the life of a Foreign student at Villanova more homely, the Faculty Member's Wive's Club- a prudent, intelligent and extremely affectionate group of Ladies- took the opportunity of holding an interesting function and they should be satisfied with the outcome of that event . . .

It proved to be informative, giving an insight into the ways of life of people living in the far away continents of Asia and Africa.

Doubtless indeed the care and affection shown towards the Foreign students by the members of the Wive's Club is just a, possible substitute for the Motherly and Sisterly affection and care, which has been lacking in the life of a Foreign student at Villanova

John Paranilan

To the Editor:

On Monday, November 18, the Institute of Electrical and Electronic Engineers society on this campus sponsored a lecture given by Mr. Perry Smith from General-Precision on the subject of Micro-Electronics.

The lecturer was obviously a very capable man who was no doubt well informed and qualified on the subject of Micro-Electronics. This did not arouse my dissatisfaction but only my admiration.

What did disturb me was the audience. It was unaware, unattentive and unconcerned. Unaware, in that the engineers did not realize that this man had left his job, spent time to prepare his speech and traveled to Villanova . . .

Unattentive, in that certain persons in the audience, as a matter of fact, most of the audience was busily discussing homework problems, munching on their lunch and making a completely unnecessary amount of commotion . . .

I observed that the individual who introduced the speaker upon concluding his introduction immediately walked to the windowsill, grabbed his lunch, crinkled the waxed wrapping paper, munched, and just stood there on the side looking like a complete fool and being an obvious nuisance and distraction to the speaker. Shortly thereafter, one of his cohorts and then another joined the first and they all had a merry time together.

I inquired of a few senior engineer students concerning this matter and they mentioned that this seems to be the usual procedure.

I admit that the life of an engineer is not easy and this might have been the only free period for lunch but is this an adequate excuse? Should the term "engineer" immediately be associated with a person who has an extreme lack of manners? . . .

Let us of Vilanova not have the outside world disgusted by Villanovans but impressed by our politeness and attention. Remember, we will not be sheltered by Villanova forever and soon will be in the business world.

It might be our situation to be a speaker with a typical Villanova engineer audience. If so, I guarantee, it will not be pleasant and rewarding.

The Rising Curtain

'Wind' Receives Fair And Fiery Treatment

by Paul Norton

It would be so easy to pan a production like Belle Masque's Inherit the Wind. We could call it amateurish, spotty, and roughly treated.

Even at its best it is not a great but it is a good play and deserves being handled by competent people.

The point is that this production has managed to salvage much of the fire and dynamics that makes Lawerence and Lee's play a favorite among audiences and actors.

It has moments of intense conflict and a crescendo of emotion that places a great deal of challenge on the roles of the director and the two leading players. For the most part, each carried off his task well.

Direction

Mr. Thomas Nevin's direction is clear and he manages to keep the action moving smoothly through some cluttered scenes.

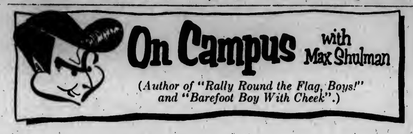
A special nod would have to go to his handling of the crowd who although large and potentially cumbersome, are moved quickly in and out of the action and serve as a directional light for the moods and tones of the evening.

John Meehan's Brady lacked a necessary punch but he did carry off well the bragging, suffering, insecure attitudes of the reknown politician.

His performance, though fine in its own right, was often overshadowed by the subtle strength of Jim Mason as Henry Drummond.

A bit too young and good looking for the role, Mason injected into the character of the craggy old man a sincere warmth which made him both likable and credulous.

Certinly it is his best role here at Villanova and demonstrated his ability to protray a mature man with no little talent.



Both Meehan and Mason were ably supported by Bill Byrne as the cycnical newspaper reporter and Carroll Cook as the fire-breathing preacher. Byrne has moved nicely from his little boy parts into a more mature role.

Cooks second act opening was the highlight of the evening as the fire and brimstone poured off the stage in a rising torrent of emotion.

The rest of the cast was adequate but the women players were notably undistinguished as were the sets.

If for no other reason than the moral questions involved this play was worth seeing. Under Belle Masque's hand it received fair treatment with some fine moments of dramatic technique.

DECK THE HALLS

The time has come to think of Christmas shopping, for the Yuletide will be upon us quicker than you can say Jack Robinson. (Have you ever wondered, incidentally, about the origin of this interesting phrase "Quicker than you can say Jack Robinson"? Well sir, the original saying was French—"Plus vite que de dire Jacques Robespierre." Jack Robinson is, as everyone knows, an Anglicization of Jacques Robespierre who was, as everyone knows, the famous figure from the French Revolution who, as everyone knows, got murdered in his bath by Danton, Murat, Caligula, and Al Capone.

(The reason people started saying "Quicker than you can say Jacques Robespierre"—or Jack Robinson, as he is called in English-speaking countries like England, the U.S., and Cleveland—is quite an interesting little story. It seems that Robespierre's wife, Georges Sand, got word of the plot to murder her husband in his bath. All she had to do to save his life was call his name and warn him. But, alas, quicker than she could say Jacques Robespierre, she received a telegram from her old friend Frederic Chopin who was down in Majorca setting lyrics all she had to do was call his name to his immortal "Warsaw Concerto." Chopin said he needed Georges Sand's help desperately because he could not find a rhyme for "Warsaw." Naturally, Georges could not refuse such an urgent request.

(Well sir, off to Majorca went Georges, but before she left, she told her little daughter Walter that some bad men were coming to murder Daddy in his bath. She instructed Walter to shout Robespierre's name the moment the bad men arrived. But Walter, alas, had been sea-bathing that morning on the Riviera, and she had come home with a big bag of salt water taffy, and when the bad men arrived to murder Robespierre, Walter, alas, was chewing a wad of taffy and could not get her mouth unstuck in time to shout a warning. Robespierre, alas, was murdered quicker than you could say Jacques Robespierre—or Jack Robinson, as he is called in English-speaking countries.

(There is, I am pleased to report, one small note of cheer in this grisly tale. When Georges Sand got to Majorca, she did succeed in helping Chopin find a rhyme for "Warsaw" as everyone knows who has heard those haunting lyrics:

In the fair town of Warsaw,
Which Napoleon's horse saw,
Singing cockles and mussels, alive alive o!)

But I digress.

We were speaking of Christmas gifts. What we all try to find at Christmas is, of course, unusual and distinctive gifts for our friends. May I suggest then a carton of Marlboro Cigarettes?

What? You are astonished? You had not thought of Marlboros as unusual? You had regarded them as familiar, reliable smokes whose excellence varied not one jot nor tittle from year to year?

True. All true. But all the same, Marlboros are unusual because every time you try one, it's like the first time. The flavor never palls, the filter never gets hackneyed, the soft pack is ever a new delight, and so is the Flip Top box. Each Marlboro is a fresh and pristine pleasure, and if you want all your friends to clap their hands and cry, "Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus!" you will see that their stockings are filled with Marlboros on Christmas morn.

© 1963 Max Shulman

The holiday season or any other season is the season to be jolly—if Marlboro is your brand. You'll find Marlboros wherever cigarettes are sold in all fifty states of the Union. You get a lot to like in Marlboro Country.

John LaCost wanted a part in scientific progress

He has it at Western Electric

John LaCost received his B.S.E.E. from the University of Illinois in 1962. One of the factors which influenced him to join Western Electric was the quick manner in which new engineers become operational.

During the short time John has been with us, he has worked in several areas which are vital to the nation's communications complex. And with his future development in mind, John attended one of our Graduate Engineer Training Centers where he studied the front-line Electronic Switching System. He is currently working as a systems equipment engineer on such projects as cross bar switching and line link pulsing.

John's future at Western Electric looks promising indeed. He knows he will be working with revolutionary and advanced engineering concepts like electronic switching, thin film circuitry, computer-controlled production lines and microwave systems. He is also aware of the continued opportunity for advanced study through the Company-paid Tuition Refund Plan, as well as through Company training centers.

How do you see your future? If you have high personal standards and the qualifications we are looking for, we should talk. Opportunities for fast-moving careers exist now, not only for electrical, mechanical and industrial engineers, but also for physical science, liberal arts and business majors. For more detailed information, get your copy of the Western Electric Career Opportunities booklet from your Placement Officer. Or write: Western Electric Company, Room 6405, 222 Broadway, New York 38, N. Y. And be sure to arrange for a personal interview when the Bell System recruiting team visits your campus.

JFK

People tell me that he is dead,
That we will see him no more.
Yet I can not believe them,
For truly he is not dead,
Nor ever will he be.

In others the body would remain
And the soul would be sent to its place,
But to him will be granted a special gift
And his spirit will remain with us.

The soul of a nation does not die.
Nor would He take him from us
When most we need a new idea of ideals
By which to rule our lives.

Yet it is true that they killed his body.
Yes it is true that he lies still,
But somehow, not by bodily means,
His spirit transcends our thoughts
And we feel his very presence,
And do not search in vain,
To bring back his bodily life.

Nor will we seek answers to needless questions,
For a thousand whys will not serve us now.
Every question and its reply lies in us
And not in the star-encased coffin.

Perhaps someday someone will liken those stars
To the figure of this man,
And look in the sky for his light.
But the rays of light will come from within
And our eyes will be but mirrors of hope.

Those that really loved him
Will not seek with tears
That which will not return,
No matter what the years.

No, those that loved him true
Will find him alive in their hearts,
Hearts that refused to pulse
When the assassin's shots rang true.

They'll find him in that great expanse
Wherein the soul resides.
They'll find him in the hearts of men,
They'll find him in all time.

In heart and soul and time.
All united in the soul of Faith.
Faithful thoughts of all mankind.

Ironic Lack Of Peace Proves Fatal To Villanova's Own--John F. Kennedy

by Jan Dyroff

Peace was one of the most dominating themes in the life of John Fitzgerald Kennedy. He devoted his work in the White House to the goal of peace at home and abroad.

It is significant that once Villanova played host to Kennedy and the theme was peace. In April of 1957 he was here for the dedication of the then-new Garey Hall, named for Eugene Garey, a New York attorney and a generous benefactor to the law school.

A three day symposium was occasioned by the dedication. It was guided by the light that law was the foundation of an ordered peace and the peace is the tranquility of order.

During that half of a week, peace was considered under the guise of its international, industrial and interracial questions. John Kennedy came on the third day.

At the time he was only a senator from Massachusetts and was somewhat overshadowed by the other guests, Earl Warren, Chief Justice of the United States, Charles Alvin Jones, Chief Justice of Pennsylvania, and Milton I. Hauser, law partner of the late Eugene Garey.

It is ironic that his death was to be caused by the lack of what he and his colleagues had convened for that day, peace.

While at the University, Kennedy, along with Warren, Jones, and Hauser were awarded Honorary Law Degrees by the Rev. James A. Donnellon, OSA, then University President. John Cardinal O'Hara was the presiding religious at the convocation.

After the convocation Kennedy and the others traversed the campus green to the law school for the formal laying of the corner stone.

As an honored alumnus the late president traversed the same paths as do the students today. He saw the same view they see. He smelled the scent of the pines and felt the shade of the trees as they do, and it is known that he recalled it with enjoyment.

Earlier this fall Father President John A. Klekotka, OSA, attended a meeting in Washington, D.C. for Catholic college presidents. While there he had a chance to meet Mr. Kennedy, who pointed out to Fr. Klekotka that he was an alumnus.

During their conversation Mr. Kennedy said that his association with Villanova was one of happy memories and a source of pride and pleasure.

When the voice of a great man is stilled it is fitting that those who were his compeers, if even in only a small way, pay him tribute and remember him. Villanova does so for its own John F. Kennedy, Doctor of Laws (Hon.), 1957.

The late President John F. Kennedy is shown receiving the Honorary Degree of Doctor of Laws from the Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, OSA, Chairman of Villanova's Board of Board of Trustees and former President of the University.

The Question

Council Ponders Politics

Before the Student Congress this evening will be a motion advocating the start of political clubs on this campus. Specifically, it is urged that a Young Democrat or a Young Republican chapter be begun.

These two organizations, if brought here, hold promise for much. They would enable the student to voice his partisan feeling, something not possible in the present framework of organizations, including the Political Union.

As is know to readers of the Evening Bulletin and other outside newspapers, it is possible for activities at Villanova to have far-reaching effects. Political clubs employed in the right way can bring much good publicity to the school.

If this motion were to be passed, it would be a strong step forward in projecting the image of an aggressive active university interested in the affairs of the community around it.

Spasmodic Spirit

by Steve Freind

During the past few years, the spirit of the Villanova student body has been somewhat spasmodic. In times of outstanding athletic success, such as a football bowl bid or an invitation to a post-season basketball tournament, Villanova's spirit was second to none.

In less prosperous times, however, such as this year's football season, lethargy reigned supreme throughout the campus.

In view of this situation, the Spirit Committee, directed by Chairman Brian Banmiller, has proposed a series of motions that will aid in generating and properly channeling Villanova spirit.

One of the most significant of these motions is the formation of the Villanova Basketball Club.

The club, composed of seventy-five members, will work in conjunction with the cheerleaders in directing cheering during the basketball games.

In return for their vocal support, the club members will receive the best seats available for each game. The first organizational meeting has already been held but a few memberships are still available.

Anyone interested in the club is urged to see Banmiller.

Another proposal intended to induce school spirit is that "the Villanovan engender the student body with a campaign on spirit at Villanova, through articles and contests."

Although nothing definite has yet been decided, a contest is in the offing, with prizes to be awarded to the winners of an essay on school spirit.

The work of Banmiller and the Spirit Committee has been truly commendable. They have spent time and effort in an attempt to improve the spirit of Villanova.

For their labor to prove fruitful, however, each student must regard the improvement of Villanova spirit as his own personal duty.

It is true that student spirit is currently on the rise. It is also true, however, that Villanova is on the brink of possibly its greatest basketball season. Support comes easy for a winner, but the true criterion of a school's spirit is student support during lean times. A case in point is last Wednesday's game with Princeton. The quick sellout of the 150 available tickets was a fine display of team support.

When the 'Cats fell behind at halftime, however, Villanova cheering became perceptively silent. It is times such as this that spirit is most sorely needed. It is the duty of the student body to discard the label of "fair-weather fans."

An attempt should be made to attend every game. The team deserves our support against West Chester, American University or Scranton just as much as it does against St. Joseph's or Toledo.

We have a great team. They have lit the spark of spirit. Let's keep it burning.

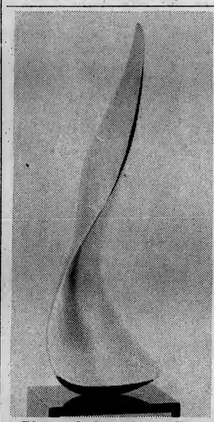
Caught In Passing

Pick: Participation Or Psychosis



by Jan Dyroff

A point was made recently in an article by a team of psychologists that there is a dramatic change in the college student of today, as compared with his past counterpart.

Today's student is very unstable. He is subject to many pressures from a number of quarters. His teachers press him with work. His parents press him for grades. His peers press him for social conformity.

Not Healthy

The situation is overly competitive and is not healthy. On the average, the suicide rate among collegians is about twice as high as the national norm.

Pictured above is the Benny Goodman-Selmer Stage Band Trophy, to be awarded by the renowned musical instrument company at the fourth annual Villanova Intercollegiate Jazz Festival on February 7, 1964.

The trophy, which stands about 15 inches in height, is polished silver, and represents a modern sculptor's interpretation of the g-clef sign, or "upper register" on the musical scale.

These statistics have been compiled from a number of colleges. Villanova, however, is different, in as much as a majority of the students come from the same background and have pretty much the same psychological makeup.

All Alike

It has been said that if you've seen one Villanova student, you've seen them all. It's like cookies from a mold. We are a stable lot.

Never once has a student just given up and gone down to the Pennsylvania Railroad to be decapitated by a Paoli Local (a trick once done successfully by a chick down the pike).

Our apparent stability does not absolve us from taking heed of the sayings of the psychologists. We can improve.

One remedy, in fact, the main remedy, suggested for those mentioned at start of the column was to become active in extra-curricular activities.

Classes Only

This advice might well be heeded by many around the campus. Too many view the university as only a place to attend classes for a degree and as an excuse to throw parties.

Sweeping generalizations are never true, but the worst offenders are the in-again, out-again day students. On the other hand the active people in most organizations are overwhelmingly day-hops.

This may seem like an apparent contradiction. It's just a way of saying that some day-hops are very active and that most day-hops aren't. Perhaps it should be said that most students aren't active or interested in the affairs on their campus.

Feeble Blast

From the quiet side of the group the most ambitious will level the feeble blast that a clique runs the school. Not so, There are a number of offices and jobs and a certain number of people available, that is, interested.

The number of jobs exceeds the number of people with the natural result being a seeming "clique." A job in an activity means work and responsibility. Some glory goes with it, but is secondary.

Work Results

Work and achievement are the main results of activity in extra-curriculars. This need not be limited, in fact almost anyone working in any activity would be glad for help.

Recent legislation in the Student Council notwithstanding, it is felt that no student who is truly interested in working in an activity will be refused. It just requires getting off one's butt and making an effort.

Little Effort

Few make this effort, no matter how worthwhile be the goal. This is not the time nor the place to relate the advantages of individual activities. The Villanova students should be mature enough to recognize those himself.

These remarks come too late for the seniors, but they should not fall on deaf ears for the underclassmen. Now is the time to stir and become a broader person. Opportunities exist and are waiting the taker.

In the next few years Villanova will be growing and will become more vibrant. Pressures now unknown to the present freshmen will appear in a relatively short time.

Our Reaction

How the individual student will react to the growing academic, sociological, and psychological stress is a personal matter, but a solution is presented here.

What actually is needed is an increase of Christian charity, requiring more thoughfulness of others by serving them.

CAMPUS NEWS BRIEFS

Joseph Batkovic, freshman engineering student, was the winner of the Research Society of America award for the best scientific paper presented by a high school graduate.

His paper, entitled "Improvised Time Expander," deals with guerilla warfare. This was announced by Dean John J. Gallen of the College of Engineering.

The award winner was honored at a meeting on December 5.

The semi-final round of the Law School's Moot Court competition will take place on December 17, at 8:15 p.m. in Garey Hall. The judges will be county court and common pleas judges.

William O. Douglas, supreme court justice, will be the chief judge for the final round which will be held in the spring.

The problem of argumentation, dealing with criminal procedure and constitutional law, was drawn up by Gerald Abraham, associate professor at the Law School. The question is an apellate type in which the issues have not been settled by the Supreme Court.

The foreign enrollment at Villanova has reached a record high of 149 students, reports Daniel J. Rivas, Foreign Student Advisor. There are students from 35 countries representing 5 continents.

Three students represent two African countries; 62 students represent 10 nations of the Americas; 39 are from 8 Asiatic countries; 34 are from 13 European countries; and 11 students come from Australia and the Philippines.

They are distributed in the various University divisions as follows: Arts and Sciences, 14; Commerce and Finance, 18; Engineering, 38; Graduate Studies, 60; Nursing, 1; Seminary, 7; and University College, 8.

A motion proposing the organization of Met Clubs at Villanova, was presented to the Student Council by George Valva Sophomore Class president. Met Clubs are undergraduate organizations that hold social functions in their respective home towns.

The motion has passed the Student Council and is now awaiting the administration's approval. If approved, the first club will be located in New York. If this "test city" is successful, other clubs will be formed.

The Villanova Sawcefleem Society will hold its first semi-annual night-time meeting and lecture of the year at 11 p.m. on the evening of Friday, December 20.

Gathering about the Liberty bell type thing on the second floor of Falvey Memorial Hall, the entire membership wil shudder with delight at the grandiloquent moralizing of its principal speaker, Dr. Melville Q. Somonour.

His topic, "Sex, Sawcefleem, and the Passage of Wind in the Atomic Age," is expected to meet with the violent disapproval of the Local Bookbinders' Association.

Nevertheless, despite threats of violence and/or tears by these two opposition groups, as well as excommunication by a local protesting friary, Dr. Somonour will carry on as scheduled, announced Sawcefleem Society prexy, Percival Pratt.

Let's all look in and listen.

Tryouts Announced For Grad Production 'We Shall Have Larks'

The Graduate Theatre Department of Villanova has announced that tryouts for the play, We Shall Have Larks, a romantic farce by Samuel Rulom, will be held on Thursday, December 14, at the Playbox. Thomas Nevins will direct the play that will run on January 31, February 1-2, 7-9, and 14-16.

Tryouts for the next production, Switchboard, a new play by Richard Harshberger, will run from January 10-12 and 17-19.

A unique feature of the play is an all-male cast.

The current production, Night Life, by Sidney Kingsley, will conclude this weekend, December 13-14. Tickets may be purchased at the ticket box in the Playbox. Performances begin at 8:30 p.m.

Classes then recess for the fused Christmas and intersemester breaks and resume on January 20, 1966, after a three-day registration period. All retreats will take place during the Spring term, which comes to a close in mid-May.

Exams for seniors and juniors will be held between April 29 and May 7; the sophomores and freshmen will take their exams between May 6 and May 14. Commencement exercises are scheduled for May 16, the day after the Baccalaureate Mass.

All the dates listed above are tentative.

Father Gildea emphasized that these two proposals, which have received the official blessing of the administration, are entirely the work of the Student Council, the representative voice of the Villanova studentry.

Marty McGuinn, Chairman of the Council, remarked that the passage of these motions will undoubtedly "enhance the position of the Student Faculty Committee," through which all proposals pass on their way to the administration.

EXCITING THINGS HAPPEN AT FORD MOTOR COMPANY!

THE 100,000-MILE ENGINEERING TEST THAT SET OVER 100 NEW WORLD RECORDS

It began September 21 in Florida, when a team of four 1964 Comets, specially equipped and prepared for high-speed driving, set out to do the equivalent of four earth orbits at Daytona International Speedway—100,000 miles at speeds well over 100 miles an hour, round the clock for 40 days, through weather fair and foul.

They did it, all four of them, and they made history! They did it in the full glare of publicity. In semi-tropical heat. In the teeth of torrential squalls that fringed two hurricanes. Including time out for refueling and maintenance, the lead car averaged over 108 miles an hour, toppling over 100 national and world records!*

For all practical purposes this was an engineering trial—the most grueling test of staying power and durability ever demanded of a new car. Only near perfection could stand the punishment dished out to parts and components hour after hour, mile after mile. Brakes, engines, transmissions, ignition systems—every single part a pawn in a grim game of truth or consequence, with total product quality the stake. And they all came through hands down!

Now that it's over and in the record books, what does it mean? New proof of Ford-built stamina and durability! New evidence that Ford-built means better built! Yes—and more, it is a direct reflection of the confidence and creative know-how, the spirit and spunk of Ford Motor Company's engineering, styling and manufacturing team—men who find rewarding adventure in technical breakthroughs.

More proof of the exciting things that happen at Ford Motor Company to bring brighter ideas and better-built cars to the American Road.

hairman Banmiller Organizes pirit Club For Basketball

by Joe McCarthy

Brian Banmiller, Chairman of the Spirit Committee, organized a "Basketball Club for Spirit at Villanova." aims in forming the club are to guarantee a solid nucleus spirited students to support Villanova basketball.

The advantages, for the average member, as pointed out Banmiller, would be certain special privileges. These priges apply to seating and tickets. The best seats possible at the Palestra and the Field House will be reserved for the Club membership. They will sit in one block and supply the student body and spectators with unified cheering.

Passes and Cards

Members of this new club will receive a season pass to all basketball games. Membership cards will be used to procure tickets. Their seat will always be guaranteed.

Tickets will be available two days before the game for all club members. On the day before the game, club members can purchase an extra ticket for their dates, if tickets are available.

Present membership numbers about seventy-five. Any additional students seeking membership must apply to either Brian Banmiller or Pete Smith in the Student Council Office on the second floor of Dougherty Hall.

Away Games

Arrangements for spirit at away games will be announced by the Committee.

Hardcourtmen Travel To New York Seeking Fourth And Fifth Straight

by Dick Pazdan

Villanova's varsity basketball team takes off on a five day Northern swing and meets two Northern New York squads in three days. The 'Cats journey to Buffalo and the spacious Memorial Auditorium (12,000) to take on the Bulls of Bufialo University, and then move on to Niagara to meet the Purple Eagles.

Buffalo's coach, Len Serfustini, has ten lettermen returning from a team that won 16 and lost 5 last season, so optismism is running high around the Bulls' campus.

The Bull team boasts experience and speed, but little in the way of height. Pacing the parade of veteran returnees are 6-3 senior Dave Baldwin who averaged 14.3 points per game last year, and 6-3 senior Gary Hanley (13.3).

Good Rebounds

Hanley also pulled down 12.5 rebounds a game. The only returning lettermen with height and experience is 6-5 senior Bill Billowus, but he only averaged 7.5 per game last year.

Also back are 6-2 junior Norb Baschnagel (7.0); 6-0 senior Dick Harvey (6.1); 6-2 junior Dan Bazzani (5.5); 5-9 junior Roy Manno (5.3); and 6-3 junior Jack Karaszewski (5.0). Soph help might be had from 6-0 Norwood Goodwin who averaged 18.9 with the frosh and 6-6 Bill Barth (13.6).

Two Wins for Bulls

Buffalo has won its two previous games, downing Buffalo State 58-40 and then taking Muskingum by a 55-47 count, so maybe all that optimism is well founded.

Last season Niagara's Purple Eagles finished the campaign with a 14-4 record, but hopes are not as high for this year's edition.

Kuryak Lone Returnee

Only one player is back from last year's starting five, 6-1 Jim Kuryak. Kuryak is noted for his defensive ability.

Coach Taps Gallagher enters his thirtieth season with a mound of question marks. In back of Kuryak the Eagles have few players with any varsity experience.

Joe White, 6-4 junior (3.4) and 6-5 Dom Ventura (1.8) will have to provide the major rebounding strength for Niagara. Tom Lenny a 6-1 junior (2.7), 6-3 junior Brian Motter, 6-0 junior Bill Wrench (1.4), and senior Tom Brennan (1.7) will all be back, but only saw limited action and will be hard-pressed to fill in for last year's departed players.

Scoring Slack

Gallagher hopes some of the scoring slack will be taken up by some of the promising sophomores on hand this year. Last year's leading frosh scorer Ed Phillips (almost twenty points a game) will be on hand and is expected to be number one in the point parade by the end of the season (after he picks up a bit of varsity experience).

Andy Coleman (6-4) who threw in 13.8 for the frosh last year will also be around and should improve with experience.

This will be an inexperienced Niagara team and it might be a few games before they start to jell.

Rugby Team Ends Season 3-4-2 Loses To Columbia "Old Blue"

by Jerry Bruderle

Villanova's Rugby team ended its fall season with a loss to the "Old Blue", a team of Columbia University graduates, 6-0 in the Seven-a-Side tournament held in Van Courtland Park in New York on November 30.

Earlier they had beaten Pennsylvania, 6-3, in the first round of the one day competition. This left the Ruggers with a 3-4-2 record, a little less than what had been expected.

The Seven-a-Side Tournament is a special variation with only seven men on aside with two seven minute halfs. Thirty-five teams from as far away as Canada participated. The "Old Blue" had had several former top flight Ivy-League football and rugby players.

Their top scorer, John Haggerty, was All-Ivy rugby selection and currently holds several Ivy scoring marks.

Despite a fine defensive game the offense was unable to muster any serious advance. It was no easy game beacuse the "Old Blue" were the eventual tournament champions.

In the Penn game, Bert Lombio scored for Villanova in the third overtime of the tightly fought game. Jay Houlihan had scored the first goal as defense took over much of the game.

On December 19 the Rugby team will hold a meeting for anyone at all interested in Rugby next spring. Many positions are open and there is an especial need for big forwards.

The spring practice should begin on March 1 and the first game is March 7.

Wilkinson said the season "was very disappointing and frustrating because we undoubtedly have the talent to become a great team."

NEW CHEVELLE!

BY CHEVROLET

The kind of go—6 or V8—you'd expect from one of Chevy's great highway performers. Come on down and drive it.

The kind of comfort you'd expect in a large interior. Come on down and sit in it.

The kind of fresh styling—inside and out—that makes it the year's smartest surprise. Come down and stare at it.

New Chevelle Malibu Sport Coupe

Now—Chevy spirit in a new kind of car!

We built this one to do more than just stand around looking beautiful. Held its weight down in the 3,000-pound range. Then built four lusty engines—two sixes and two V8's—with output all the way up to 220 horses*!

And if that makes you think this is one frisky car, you've got the right idea.

You've also got a roomy car here. Yet its 115-inch wheelbase keeps it highly maneuverable in traffic and very easy to park.

With its Full Coil suspension, it's got a ride that reminds you of the Jet-smooth kind the way it muffles noise and cushions bumps.

And the fine hand of Body by Fisher craftsmen shows up beneath this one's suave good looks, too.

Sound good? There's more. Like the fact that Chevelle comes in three series with eleven models—convertibles, sport coupes, sedans, wagons, even Super Sport models with front bucket seats. Like the fact that (and see if this isn't one of the nicest surprises of all) the new Chevelle comes at an easy-to-take price!

Like to hear more? The listening's wonderful at your Chevrolet dealer's—and so's the driving.

THE BIG SPLASH -- SWIMMING 1963-64

Led by All-American Dick McDonough, Villanova's swimming team opened its season last Wednesday with a resounding 69-26 triumph over Princeton. The 'Cats won nine of eleven events while setting two pool records.

Last Saturday, the Mermen dropped a close 55-40 decision to Yale, ranked first nationally in pre-season polls. Once again, McDonough led the 'Cats, but his brilliant performance was not enough to upset the powerful Bulldogs.

Coach Ed Geisz considers his current squad the finest he has had at Villanova. Bolstered by the return of All-American McDonough, Rich Girdler, Jack Geoghegan and Paul Winn, Geisz expects the team to improve on its fine 10-3 record of last year. During that campaign, the 'Cats captured fourth place in the ECAC tournament, while finishing seventh in the NCAA Championships.

"With four All-Americans returning, I'm looking forward to a very fine season," Geisz said. "If we work as hard as we did last year, I think we will improve our record."

The Mermen's major strength is Co-Captain McDonough. The two-time All-American and Pan-American Games performer has broken virtually every Villanova record. Last year, Dick set the American record in the 100 meter freestyle and captured the NCAA 200 yard butterfly crown.

During the summer, he starred for an American All-Star team that toured Japan.

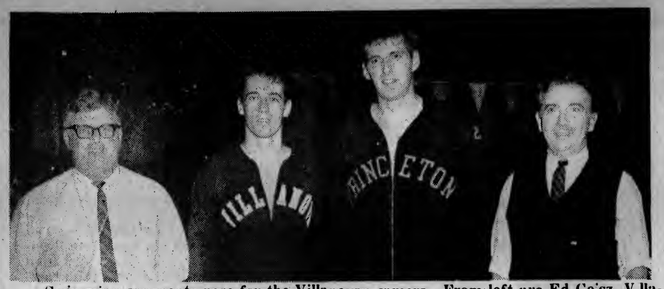
The other three All-Americans are equally talented. Geoghegan, the squad's other captain, Girdler and Winn have all performed brilliantly in the freestyle. Girdler also swims the individual medley.

by Steve Friend



These four men, who will attend the Olympic tryouts in New York this summer, form a powerful nucleus of a team that is a threat to Yale's crown at the ECAC Championships.

Supporting these four, Geisz has an abundance of capable performers. Tom Brennan, Roger Guthrie, Gerald Gears and John O'Brien gives depth to the butterfly department. Brennan, a sophomore, has broken many of McDonough's freshmen records.

The 'Cats strongest category is the freestyle, with nine men scrambling for points. Ray Donnelly, Bill Gallagher, Mike Gill, John O'Brien, Don Griffith, Doug Rebak, Jim Rowley, Ed Sperr, Pat Sullivan, and Dennis West are competing for starting berths in this division.

Chris Fisher teams with Girdler in the individual medley, while Dick Feron and Charles Haire handle the diving chores. Rounding out the Mermen's roster are Bob Frey and Bill Livingood, who compete in the backstroke and breaststrokers Ken Herr and Frank Keim.

Besides, Yale, the 'Cats toughest meets will be with the service academies, Army and Navy. The Cadets present a special challenge since Villanova has never beat them. Seton Hall, Fordham, West Chester, LaSalle, Rutgers and Pennsylvania round out the Mermen's schedule.

Princeton Routs Freshman Swimmers As Diver Bohrmann Nabs Lone First

by Bob Skinner

Last Wednesday, at the Field House pool, Villanova's Frosh swimmers were dunked by the score of 75-20, at the hands of a powerful Princeton Frosh team, in their first dual meet of the 1963-64 campaign.

Facing the likes of a Tiger Frosh squad that is rated as the best in recent years, the Wildkittens failed to place first in all but demonstrating an inability to capitalize on the racing turn.

The one bright spot was the one-metre diving event, which was copped by Bill Bohrmann. George Hollenbach placed third for the Main Liners.

Before the meet, Coach Jack Lumsden had commented: "The potential of the Frosh squad still remains to be seen. Outstanding prospects would seem to be Tim Bill Bohrmann in the diving.

Also, the 400 yard relay team (free style), composed of Frank Conlin, Pete Ancona, Greg Doyle, and Joe Parell, is not up to par, and they have yet to reach their prime.

All-County

Tim Turvey, singled out for praise by Mr. Lumsden, is from Curtis High School in Staten Island, and swims the 20 yard breast-stroke. Bill Bohrmann, the only Wildkitten winner was an All-County diver while attending Iona Prep in New Rochelle, and should give sophomore Bob Biese some strong competition next year.

Pete Ancona, Greg Doyle and Joe Parell will give Turvey improving support in the swimming events as the season progresses. Doyle was National Catholic champion in the 100 yard free-style while attending Cathedral Prep in Erie.

Free-Styler

Ancona is a 100 yard free-styler, and like Bohrmann, is from Iona Prep in New Rochelle, N.Y. Parell is from St. Benedict's Prep in Newark, N.J., and is a free-style sprinter. Greg Hollenbach, who placed third in the diving Wednesday, is from Malvern Prep, and placed in the National Catholic Championships last year.

The next of their remaining nine dual meets is with Malvern Prep, December 10, the schedule culminating March 22 with the Middle Atlantic A.A.U. Championships.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

Freshmen basketball appears to be coming up to expectations; for in the Varsity scrimmage the team had a great deal of poise.

Although they lost to the "second best team in the east", according to Dell Sports, they did not become erratic. Their game went on just as when they came on to the floor at the beginning of the game.

The passing was sharp, especially that of Pete Coleman, and the shooting was for a good percentage.

Bill Soens, the All-American from Penn Charter, turned in a sparkling performance doing a fine job by holding Jim Washington to six points. Bill's rebounding was also noteworthy, and plus this he dumped in nine points for third highest for the 'Kittens, topped by Coleman's 11 and Frank Guijunas' 10.

Earlier in the season Coach Devine, when asked when the team would be ready, said "by the varsity scrimmage". He was right for the squad worked as well as the Varsity but due to lack of experience and depth fell under the foot of the Varsity by 86-55.

The annual Intramural Basketball League commenced last week on Dec. 5. There are seven leagues in Alumni and one league in the Field House.

There are altogether eighty-two teams competing this year.

The games at Alumni are being played between 10:30 and 7:30.

The games at the Field House are played at 8 P.M. Schedules for upcoming games and the names of the different squads may be picked up at the office in Alumni gym.

In the Football League the semi-finals for the play-offs will be played at 3:30 today at both Mendel and Austin fields. The big final comes tomorrow at 3:30 on Austin field.

There will be an intramural council meeting Thursday at 10:30 in 203 Vasey Hall.

Villanova's Rifle team successfully downed two teams, Gettysburg, and Drexel to remain undefeated in five straight matches.

The Wildcats defeated Gettysburg by a score of 1392 to 1363. The leading scores of that romp were Art Blades (280); George Walko (280); Ed Casper (279); Ted Lawandowski (277); and Joe Smith (276).

Ted Lawandowski led the Villanovans to a well earned victory over the Dragons of Drexel by a score of 1373-1340, last week. Lawandowski fired the high score of the night, with a 279. He was backed up by Joe Smith, Art Blades, Mike Wilhelm, and Ed Casper.

Their are possibly seven or eight meets remaining. The next tentative meet is with Manhattan and the Freshmen also have a pistol match with Lehigh this week.

The Pistol team had their first league match at Homesburg, a high ranking member of the Delaware Valley Pistol League and up-ended them by a score of 1093-109C. The victory came two weeks ago.

Upcoming meets are against such teams as Delaware County Fishing and Game Association and a quadrangular meet involving the Univ. of Massachusetts, M.I.T., and the U.S. Coast Guard Academy at the University of Massachusetts.

Bob Mulligan, organizer of the new Tennis Squad announced an important meeting of all members to be held Thursday, December 12 at 10:30 a.m. in Room 116 Bartley Hall. All prospective members who have not yet applied are asked to attend.

Still a problem of the squad is the lack of a coach, and all who have expressed interest or would be interested are asked to contact Art Mahan of the Athletic Department. Recognition of Tennis is under consideration and will be decided this January by the University Athletic Department.

Mulligan is negotiating for a schedule of 10 matches for the Varsity and 6 matches for the Frosh with surrounding colleges who have voiced an interest in such a series.

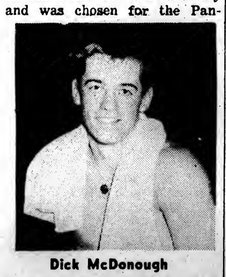
In Bowling, Villanova defeated LaSalle 2 games to 1 and replaced the strong Explorer squad as holder of first place in the Intercollegiate Bowling League.

High man in the three game series for the Cats was Dick Broderick who rolled a series total of 631 with single games of 229, 227 and 174. Also high among the scoring for Villanova was John Brennan with a score of 210.

Top scorer for LaSalle was Jack Gillespie with a high game of 225 and the match total of 609.

Quartet Of All-Americans Expected To Pace Strong Seventeen-Man Team



By Rusty Miller

Rated fourth nationally by the NCAA, the 1963-1964 Varsity swimming team boasts of more outstanding athletes than any other Villanova team. The team includes All-Americans Dick McDonough, Jack Geoghegan, Paul Winn and Rick Girdler.

These four comprise one of the fastest 400 yd freestyle relay teams in the country.

McDonough

Dick McDonough, a senior from South Orange, N.J., is 21, 6-2, 185 lbs. Everybody's All-American in four events, he swims both freestyle and butterfly. He is listed as an NCAA All-American for the butterfly and was chosen for the Pan-

Dick McDonough

American team last year in the freestyle.

Dick swims any distance from a fifty yard sprint to 500 yds. This fact and his ability to swim two strokes give him a great versatility and Coach Geisz a great advantage over an opponent.

Dick holds the 1962-1963 intercollegiate 200 yd freestyle record at 1:57.3. He is also co-holder with Steve Clark of Yale of the American record for 100 meter freestyle.

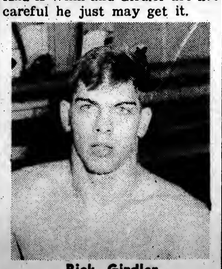
Geoghegan

Jack Geoghegan was only a fair swimmer at Iona High School in New Rochelle, N.J. His improvement upon coming to Villanova was tremendous. Like McDonough, Jack is a senior. He is 21, 5-10, 150 lbs. He swims both freestyle and backstroke.

Jack Geoghegan

Jack is the Otie Drayton of the swimming team. At any other college Geoghegan would be basking in the limelight. He and McDonough differ in times by only about a tenth of a second.

The two remaining members of this championship relay team, Winn and Girdler, will be hard pressed by two regulars, Doug Rebak, and Chris Fisher who have come along well this season and show promise of great things to come.



Paul Winn

Winn is a 20 year old junior, 5-11, 174 lbs. and hails from Short Hills N.J. He swims freestyle. Girdler is also a junior, and 20. He is 6-2, 192 lbs., and comes from Mountain Lakes, N. J. He swims both freestyle and the individual medley.

Coach Geisz' newest delight is sophomore Ray Donnelly, who is doing his best to prove he is Villanova's next candidate for All-American honors. As a freshman, he broke the sprint records set by McDonough three years ago. His :48.5 for the hundred smashed McDonough's record of :49.7.

Donnelly, strictly a sprinter, is pushing hard and fast for a coveted spot on the relay team. And if Winn and Girdler are not careful he just may get it.

Rick Girdler

This puts Coach Geisz in an enviable position, similar to Jack Kraft with great starters and talented men constantly pressing them.

Two other performers who bear watching are sophomores Ken Herr and Bill Livingood. Herr, a breaststroker, last week broke the Villanova record in the Princeton meet. Livingood, a whopping 140 lbs. from Bishop Neuman High School in Philadelphia is a back stroker. Like Geoghegan, only a fair swimmer in high school, has improved tremendously and is within seconds of a pool record.

MermenDunkPrinceton,69-2 But Nipped By Powerful Yale

by Jim Proud

After a resounding 69-26 win over Princeton, the Villanova swimmers fell prey to the East's best, Yale, 55-40.

The 'Cats took the Tigers in swim events except the 200 yard backstroke, won by Jed Graef, an All-American in this event. In winning the backstroke Graef set a new pool record of 2:03.0.

One Meter Diving

The other Princeton points came mainly in the one-meter diving where they placed one and two. Scott Andrews and Gary Walters placed in the first two places respectively.

Villanova's All-American and top Olympic hope Dick McDonough paced the 'Cats by winning two events, the 200 yard butterfly and the 500 yard freestyle.

Wins Two

McDonough, the only man to win two events, won the 200 fly in 2:05.0 and the 500 free in 5:32.5.

In the 200 yard breaststroke Ken Herr set a pool and school record by finishing in 2:29.8. The 400 yard freestyle relay team of Girdler, Rebak, Fisher, and Donnelly, also set a pool record of 3:20.2.

Show of Strength

In this show of strength the swimmers also broke two other pool records. One was in the 400 yard medley relay and the other by Jack Geoghegan in the 200 yard freestyle. The record breaking performance of the 400 medley relay team composed of Bill Livingood, Ken Herr, Dick McDonough and Ray Donnelly, was clicked off in the time 3:47.

Yale

The swimming team went down to defeat at the hands of powerful Yale team last Saturday, 55-40, at the Villanova pool. The Elis took seven of 11 events from the 'Cats.

Main Line wins were posted in the one-meter dive, 200 yd. butterfly, 400 yd. freestyle relay and the 200 yd. breaststroke.

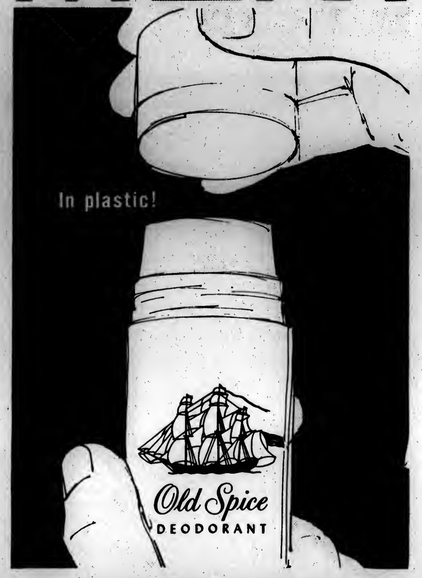
Irony

An irony in the loss to Yale was that Villanovan Bob Biese one-meter dive winner Saturday was unable to win his event during the Main Line rout of Princeton last Wednesday. His point total against Yale was 203.55.

The brightest light in the meet for Villanova was Dick McDonough. He won his specialty the 200 butterfly in the record time of 2:01.6.

Third First

The third first for Villanova came in the 400 yd. freestyle relay. Consisting of Rick Girdler, Jack Geoghegan, Ray Donnelly, and McDonough, the team bettered its record, set against Princeton, by 0.2 seconds.



The last Wildcat win was also the last event of the evening, the 200 yd. breaststroke. Ken Herr won the event in 2:28.8, 1.2 seconds faster than his record breaking 2:29.8 last Wednesday against Princeton.

Outstanding Swimmer

Outstanding swimmer of the night, however, was Yale captain Mike Austin. An All-American and Pan American games winner, Austin won two events, the 50 yd. and 100 yd. freestyle. His 0:22.0 in the 50 and 0:48.4 in the 100 were both records.

Cagers Open Season With Dual Wins; Beat Tigers 72-59, Peacocks 83-42

by Roy Baron
and Ed Farrell

Two victories marked the opening of the current hardwood campaign. Coach Jack Kraft's squad defeated Princeton 72-59 on December 4, and humiliated St. Peter's of Jersey City, 83-42 on December 7.

St. Peter's

When was a game not a game? When the Wildcats of Villanova met the Peacocks of St. Peter's last Saturday night on the floor of Penn's Palestra.

Coach Don Kennedy's squad was completely outclassed by both the Mainliner's offense and defense as the 'Cats rolled to an 83-42 runaway.

The Peacocks were particularly inept in that important phase of the game, shooting. Making only six for 32 in the first half they managed 12 for 26 in the second half to make their half of the scoreboard appear almost respectable.

20 for 43

Shooting 20 for 43 in the first 20 minutes of play, the 'Cats cooled off to 18 for 54 in the final period.

Villanova's depth was once again apparent as Coach Kraft substituted freely during the entire forty minutes of play, clearing the bench by the end of the game.

Foul shooting trouble again plagued the Mainliners as they managed only seven free throws made in 16 attempts. The Peacocks made six for ten, 17 per cent better than their opponents.

Jones Doubles

The reappearance of Wally Jones to the double figure column occurred as he shot 50 per cent (seven for 14) during the second half. Taking only one shot in the first half, he passed off and set up shots most of the time.

Standout for the Peacocks was Joe Bonner, a 6-4 soph with a devastating left hook shot. Bonner wound up second high for the Jerseyites with ten, behind Lou Triverio's 13.

High for the Wildcats was Jones with 15, followed by Bill Melchionni with 13, Jim Washington 12, and Eric Erickson ten.

SPORTS NOTE

The Villanova Wildcats defeated the University of Scranton for their third straight win last night, 97-48.

The game was played at the Villanova Field House before a capacity crowd of nearly 4000.

The game was lopsided from the beginning. For the first 12 minutes of play, the Peacocks managed only one field goal, that by Tim Kehoe. During that time, the Wildcats ripped the cords for 25 points.

Princeton

Villanova's Wildcats opened up what Mainline fans hope to be one of their best seasons with a 72-59 victory over Princeton last Wednesday night.

The game was simply the case of one superstar not being able to keep pace with nine good ballplayers. Bill Bradley had 32 points and 16 rebounds and set up numerous other potential baskets (many were missed) in what he called an unsatisfactory performance.

But the Villanova squad was too good to be held back. After trailing 33-32 at the half, soph star Richie Moore and Jim Washington took charge.

With Moore contributing 14 of his 25 points and Washington 9 points and 12 of his 16 rebounds in the second half, the Wildcats jumped ahead early in the half. They were never headed, as the host Tigers could manage only one field goal in the first nine minutes.

Change Helped

The big reason for this scoring famine was a decision made during the halftime break in the Villanova lockerroom. There, Coach Jack Kraft called for a tightening of the 1-2-2 zone defense to stop the passes going inside.

The Wildcat supporters, many more than the expected 150, were brought to their feet often as Washington would go high into the air to grab a rebound, and then pass out to one of the guards. The fast break was on.

After the game Coach Kraft was high in his praise for his players, especially for the job done by his new men, Melchionni, Schaffer, Sallee, Tralies, and, of course, Moore.

Wally Jones (24) adds to the bewilderment of three St. Peter's players as he flips an over-the-head pass to an unseen teammate during the 'Cats 83-42 romp over the Peacocks.

Zwolak Takes NCAA Cross-Country All-American Kudos For Third Year

by Jerry Bruderle

Villanova's Vic Zwolak won the individual Cross-country championship in the NCAA finals at East Lansing, Mich. on November 25th. In the team competition, Villanova finished 7 behind champion San Jose State.

The week before, Zwolak had won the IC4A title in record time for the second year in a row. Despite the great runners Villanova has produced, from Delaney to Traynor, Vic was the first Wildcat to capture both the NCAA and the IC4A title.

For the ex-Marine, it was one of many rewards to which hard work has entitled him. Like many on the cross-country team, Vic runs for an hour in the morning and an hour and a half in the afternoon.

This goes for five days a week. Even on Saturdays he manages to run in the afternoon.

All-Year Session

For Zwolak, training "season" does not exist, for the competitive year never ends. As cross-country draws to a close, indoor track begins.

The coming of spring means the Penn Relays and the outdoor season. And in the summer, the AAU Championships require peak performances.

Europo Trip

Last Summer, Zwolak placed second to Pat Traynor in the AAU steeplechase and won a trip to Europe. He injured his back shortly before leaving and was lucky to be able to run at all in Russia.

Extensive treatment sped his recovery but he was unable to regain full strength throughout the Germany, Poland and England tour. Vic feels, however that the experience gained from such strong competition will be invaluable to him this year.

Next summer holds promise of even better things, the 1964 Olympics, for instance. The trials are in September, and Vic hopes to enter the 5,000 meter run.

This is not one of our country's strongest events but more than likely, he will continue the reputation of former Villanova Olympions.

An Explorer Once

Zwolak hails from Wilmington, Delaware and Salesianum High School, of football renown. Upon graduation he entered LaSalle, but dropped out the following spring.

He then joined the Marines for three years and then came to Villanova. As a sophomore, he won the Mile Run in the IC4A Indoor Championships and Villanova walked away with the team title.

The following year the Wildcats again won the team title and Vic ran on the two-mile relay team. In 1963 he won the three mile run when Villanova repeated as outdoor Champs.

In those two years he has run everything from the 880 to the 5,000 meter in addition to the relays.

Atkinson Gains Triple Honors At Annual Football Banquet

by Tom Bruderle

Villanova's football team brought its 1963 activities to a formal close with the bestowing of awards at the annual football dinner held on December 2.

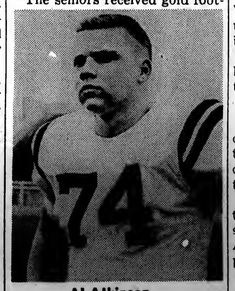
But the evening could well have belonged to Al Atkinson. The big 235 pound tackle received the Cyril J. Burke Award for showing the most consistency during the season.

He was so consistent, in fact, that he was named to the weekly All-East squad four times during the year and was named to the United Press International All-East third team at the conclusion of the season.

National Alumni Award

In addition, he received the National Alumni Award as the Team's most valuable player. Both of these awards were voted on by the members of the team, and Atkinson was the first to receive both of these honors.

For his play in the game against the Quantico Marines, he received the Amos Alonzo Stagg Medal.



The Stagg Medal is somethinr new and is awarded on a game-to-game basis.

Other winners were: Bill Sherlock, West Chester game; Jim Thomas, Toledo; John Kelleher, Buffalo; Rich Bertozzi, Boston College; Jack Clifford, George Washington; Jack Boyle, Xavier; Bob Dunn, Holy Cross; John McDonnell, Detroit; and Al Atkinson, Quantico.

Co-Captains

As if this was not enough, Atkinson was named co-captain of next year's team with McDonnell.

The seniors received gold football and Thomas, the graduating team captain, was awarded the Martin J. McLaughlin Memorial Award given annually to the outgoing captain.

Al Atkinson

William C. A. Henry, Class of '25 and a member of the Villanova faculty for more than 35 years, received the Loyalty Award, which is presented to a graduate "for unending loyalty throughout the years to Villanova."

Sailing Club Finishes Fourth In Potomic Frostbite Regatta

by Jim Proud

The Villanova sailing club took part in a regatta on the Potomic over the weekend. The meet, officially known as the 17th Annual Potomic Frostbite Regatta, was sponsored by Georgetown University.

The club raced against five other teams in the regatta including Harvard, Drexel, Georgetown, Fordam, and Columbia.

In the events on Saturday, Villanova finished fourth with a good possibility of taking a second place in the final listings but due to a lack of transportation the team was unable to participate in the events on Sunday.

In the class A races on Saturday, Dan Mullray with his crew Bunky Fox, a girl from Georgetown Academy, placed 3rd, 4th and 6th in three races which is good considering Dan is only a sophomore.

In the class B races a freshman, Jay Hallamback with his crew Jim McLaughlin, took a 4th and two 5ths for his three races which is a good finishing for a freshman in a race with such talented schools as Harvard, Georgetown and Columbia.

Weather conditions were none to good either, which was also added difficulty for the young team, for there was only a five mile per hour wind over the Potomic on this cool crisp day.

This was the last meet of this year for the club. They don't start racing again until the beginning of April.

Joe Linsalata, club captain, is planning to have more races than ever before the club this spring. He also would like anyone interested in sailing to come out for the team. No sailing experience is needed because the club members will be able to teach applicants the fundamentals of sailing in a short time and because the team is building they will be able to use as many members as turn out for the practice sessions in the spring.

Senior Class President James Murphy addresses a question to the Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, University president, (not shown), as the latter delivered the first State of the University address before the Student Council meeting last Wednesday.

'State Of The University' Series Inaugurated By Student Council

State Of The University

by Pete Mangan

The Reverend John A. Klekotka, OSA, president of the University addressed the Student Congress meeting last Wednesday to open the State of the University series sponsored by the Student Council.

In his opening remarks Father President commended the Council's efforts in initiating this policy.

He acknowledged pleasure in the avid interest the body showed in the development and future of Villanova.

Development

Concerning development at Villanova, Father Klekotka said that the Development Program as revised last year provides seven million dollars in the next five years to cancel the debt on Mendel Hall, provide for non-construction facilities, student aid, and improvement of faculty salaries.

Although substantial facilities are still needed in such areas as residence halls, theater department, library, a maintenance building, and a chapel, construction will not be undertaken because financing these projects at this time is not feasible.

Internal Improvement

Father went on to mention internal improvement in the University as being a primary objective. This includes improvement in student selection, greater emphasis on the educational program beginning with

Political Clubs Studied

by Jan Dyroff

Two new organizations were officially recognized by the Student Council at its last meeting, the Gregor Mendel Biology Club and the Conservative Club.

The Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, university president opened the meeting with an address in outlining the state of the university. Fr. Klekotka's talk was followed by a lively question and answer session.

Also under major consideration were motions concerning the state of the individual student both politically and religiously. Jan Dyroff, Philosophy Club representative, introduced a motion calling for the establishment of politically affiliated clubs on campus.

Inter-Faith Dialogues

Another motion, by Terence Cooney, NFCCS delegate, posed the question of opening the way for dialogues between various religious leaders, crossing a number of sects, for the purpose of an increase of inter-denominational understanding.

In the reports by the executive vice-presidents, it was pointed out by Neal Stoneback, educational affairs, that efforts are

Next Newport Jazz Festival Will Feature IJF Winner

by Frank Quattrone

This summer the professional Newport Jazz Festival will host the winners of the forthcoming Villanova Intercollegiate Jazz Festival.

This latest development in the progress of IJF, the biggest promotion break in its four-year history was announced by General Chairman Eddie Bride.

Bride received this news from the producer of the Newport Festival, George Wein, a jazz musician himself who has expressed a sincere and strong interest in the promotion of collegiate jazz.

Far-Flung Groups

Mr. Wein said that he was eager to afford the Villanova competition this opportunity.

Thus far groups from 16 states and the District of Columbia have written IJF headquarters requesting applications. Fifteen-minute auditional tapes submitted by each group will be reviewed at Boston's Berklee School of Music on January 2, 1964.

The extreme boundaries of the more than 32 Festival applicants are Michigan (three entries), Indiana (three), Missouri (one), and Florida (one).

Final Competition

All but the final six or seven groups will be eliminated by the Berklee scrutiny, and the finalists will appear in competition on February 7, 1964, in the University Field House.

Commenting on the Newport innovation, Bride said, "This is the fourth edition of IJF and the eleventh of the Newport Jazz Festival. Together they make 15 years of good jazz, and we're happy to be together this year."

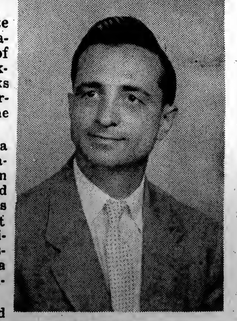
DiVincenzo Receives Award For Cultural Achievements

The Spanish Government's highest decoration for achievement in education and culture, "The Order of Alfonso X, El Sabio," will be conferred upon Vito Di Vincenzo, a member of the faculty at Villanova.

Presentation of the award will be made at Villanova at noon on Thursday, December 19, in the offices of University President, Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA. Victor Scanchez-Mesas, Spanish consul in Philadephia, will make the presentation.

Mr. Di Vincenzo, associate professor of modern languages, has been a member of the Villanova faculty for sixteen years. Although he speaks several languages, the 47-year-old professor specializes in the teaching of Spanish.



He is Director of the Villanova Spanish Club and in this capacity has cultivated interest in Spanish customs, culture, and history. The Spanish Club is one of the University's most popular extra-curricular activities and the annual Noche Espanola (Spanish Night) is a campus and community highlight.

Fellow faculty members and members of the University's administration will witness the presentation of the award and attend a luncheon in Mr. Di Vincenzo's honor after the ceremonies.

"The Order of Alfonso X, El Sabio" consists of a medal and a diploma. It is named after the scholar-king of the Middle Ages who, according to Sanchez-Mesas, "was one of the most cultured writers in Spain and in Europe of his time."

Biological Publication Slated To Bow Soon Under 'Symposia' Title

The Biology Club has received approval to edit a bi-annual publication called the Symposia. The magazine will include original research papers by faculty members and reviews of biological literature.

Biology students will also contribute articles to this publication. The magazine is expected to be published early in the spring semester.

While planning a field trip to the World's Fair in New York next spring, the Biology Club is trying to arrange a series of field trips to various museums in the area. One of the first museums on the program is the Museum of Natural Science.

Every Thursday morning at 10:30, the group holds a biology quiz program in Mendel Hall. Anyone who wants to attend is welcome.

Any biology student interested in a special research program is invited to join the Biology Club.

It's hardly the place for a star football player but Villanova's Jack Clifford seems to enjoy stuffed animals as much as eight year old Don from St. John's Orphanage (Phila.) and Clifford's friend Dorothy Dabrawsky from Morrisville.

Clifford, a star end on Villanova's '63 eleven, was among nearly 300 Villanova students who took part in Christmas outing for the underprivileged youngsters, December 14.

Delegate's Report

NFCCS Begins Layman Study And Fashioning Of A Dialogue

by Terry Cooney

The campus organization of NFCCS, in conjunction with the Religious Affairs Committee of the Student Council, has begun work on two projects which should be of interest to the students of Villanova.

First of these is a study on the knowledge of the layman about his parish and also his feelings and opinions on various aspects of the parish.

Study

This study will be conducted via a questionnaire survey administered to the seniors, since very shortly the Parish will replace the university as the center of religious activity.

The second project should hold appeal for all Villanovans. Last Wednesday, the Student Council passed a motion concerning the establishment of a dialogue here on this campus.

Dialogue

The dialogue is a series of discussions on topics of a religious nature or with moral overtones.

Ideally it consists of students of various faiths meeting to present their points of view on numerous topics.

The convening of the Second Vatican Council has set the stage for this type of endeavor. Its purpose is to increase understanding of the philosophy and faith of non-Catholics.

Viewpoint

It has always been the viewpoint of Catholic education to educate the full or complete man. his material side as well as, and more importantly, his spiritual side.

When we leave Villanova, we will be entering a world that is not made up entirely of Catholics; in fact, not even a majority. We will be exposed to the the thoughts and viewpoints of other faiths. This should not be our first exposure. As part of our complete education we should make ourselves aware of other points of view, if only to know how to handle them when we met their line of reasoning.

Aim

Our aim in the dialogue is not to score points or gain an advantage but to eradicate bias and prejudice and substitute understanding and esteem.

CAMPUS NEWS BRIEFS

Graduate Record Examinations, including General Aptitude and Advanced Achievement exams in major subjects, will be administered on Saturday, February 8. This set of exams are for senior majors in chemistry, English, geology, mathematics physics, political science, and sociology.

This is a compulsory institutional testing program and requires the presence of all seniors in the above majors. Rooms for the examinations will be announced later.

Pete Bologna, president of the Psychology Club has announced that while his organization is presently one of the largest on campus, new members are still welcome. He stated that any member of the student body, especially nurses interested in psychiatric nursing, is eligible for membership.

This organization has sponsored several guest lecturers during the past semester and intends to continue its lecture series into the second semester.

The club has had the "Father of Psycho-Pharmocology," Dr. Vincent Brady, speak on "Behavorial Stress and Physiological Change," and has also sponsored a lecture on "The Psychological Factors in Aero-Space Medicine" by Dr. Samuel Cleff of the General Electric Corporation.

The club's second semester program will include field trips and a joint symposium between the Philosophy and Psychology Departments on the role of psychology as an academic science.

The Belle Masque Society sponsored a special Christmas program for the faculty wives and their children last Saturday, December 14.

Presently they are in the process of planning next semester's production. Also on the agenda for next semester is a communion breakfast, dinner dance and a few one-act plays.

The Villanova Planetarium will present a Christmas show on Friday, December 20, and Saturday, December 21, entitled "The Star of Bethlehem." The show on Friday will run from 8 to 9 p.m. and on Saturday from 3 to 4 p.m.

Fr. Jenkins, the Chairman of the Astronomy Department, has stated that all children above the pre-school age are invited to attend. After the Friday show, if the weather is permitting, the observatory will be open for viewing.

Reservations may be made by stopping at the Astronomy Office in room 456 Mendel Hall or by calling LA 5-4600, ext. 401, between the hours of 9 a.m. and 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

The Planetarium is located on the fourth floor of Mendel Hall. The price of the show will be twenty-five cents.

This is the last of a series of three fall Planetarium shows given by the Astronomy Department this year.

Perhaps one of the most useful organizations for the students on campus is station W3-YP, Villanova's amateur short wave radio club.

With Father Jack O'Rourke, OSA as moderator, this club of 20 students sends radio messages to all parts of the world. The members have announced that they will be glad to send any messages anywhere in the country for the students.

Anyone who is interested or wishes to apply may do so by seeing any one of the members on the fourth floor of Tolentine Hall.

Radio WWVU has been selected to be the campus outlet for a special book on the assassination of President Kennedy, Four Days — The Historical Record of the Death of President Kennedy.

The book, which will be sold by the station, will cost $2.00. It has been prepared by United Press International and American Heritage Magazine. The preface has been prepared by noted historian Bruce Catton.

The volume will be hard cover printed on 128 pages of coated paper featuring both color and black and white pictures taken during the period from November 22-to-26.

The book will go on sale shortly after the Christmas vacation.

Last Saturday, December 14, the Engineering Department sponsored an "Open House" for area high school students with the science and engineering facilities available at Villanova. Tours were conducted in Mendel Science Building and Tolentine Hall.

Chairman of the event was George P. Nicolaus, head of the Engineering honor fraternity Tau Beta Pi, which conducted the open house.

The faculty moderator was Dr. Koliner of the Civil Engineering Department.

Villanova's campus radio station will take a poll to select the "Villanovan of the Year" tomorrow, Thursday, December 19.

According to Bill McCloskey, WWVU public affairs director, the balloting will go from 10:30 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. in Dougherty, Mendel and Bartley Halls. The winner will be announced on the station's "1963 in Review" presentation on Monday, January 6, 1964.

The award will pinpoint the Villanova student who has done the most for the University during the calender year.

Freshman Radowich Guest Star On Program 'Freedom Sings'

Jeffrey Radowich, a freshman at Villanova University, will be the guest star on the "Freedom Sings" ABC radio network program.

In Philadelphia, radio station WFIL will broadcast the program on January 11, at 11 p.m.

The eighteen-year old youth's appearance will be based on his award-winning talk given at the Seattle World's Fair during the finals of a national oratorical contest, which Radowich won, after competing in local, regional, and sectional events. More than 1100 high school seniors competed.

Titled "Our Grandchildren Will Grow Up Under Democracy", his talk was a "twist" on a statement made by Nikita Khrushchev.

Jeffrey's talk was selected by the high school awards jury of Freedom Foundation for presentation of "Freedom Sings," which Freedoms Foundation sponsors. He also received a special award.

Jeffrey represented the Archbishop Carroll High School, Washington, D.C., in the contest. At Carroll he was an honor student, captain of the debating team, editor of the school newspaper, and headed the National Honor Society, the Student Council, and his Senior Class.

Stressing that the University facilities were excellent, Father Klekotka stated that it was up to the student to employ these facilities in a most serious effort to develop his full potential.

Shermer Bares Racial Problem In Opening Geography Lecture

George Shermer recently opened the Geography Department Lecture Series with an address entitled, "The Urban Renewal Program." The talk was given on Monday, December 9.

Mr. Shermer began his lecture with some pertinent statistics concerning the racial problems in the United States, especially in the Philadelphia area.

He said that negroes accounted for about 10 percent of the U.S. population, or over 18 million people. Sixty-five per cent are in urban areas and only 20 per cent are in the rural districts.

Lower Wages

One-half of the negro population lives in the South, and their earning amount to only 60 per cent of the white community.

Mr. Shermer also added that this gap is becoming wider as the racial problems become more important.

Older negroes live in the South, and in a few years the negro population will be declining in the Southern areas. Consequently, their babies will be born in larger Northern cities.

Integration Necessary

The negro population in Philadelphia has risen from nine per cent to thirty per cent, while in the metropolitan area, the increase has been from 11 per cent to only 15 per cent.

Mr. Shermer concluded: "The only solution to these problems is forced integration. Every trend sees us moving toward racial prejudice and even greater social problems."

Semi-Finals Of Moot Court Held Last Night In Garey Hall

The Villanova Law School held the semi-final round of its Moot Court competition last night in Garey Hall. County court and common pleas judges presided in choosing the finalists.

The Moot Court is composed of eight clubs participating in inter-club competition under the auspices of the Inter-Club Council.

The argument is an apellate type of which the issues have not been settled by the Supreme Court. It is a hypothetical case which is presented by the student before the Supreme Court. There are no witnesses, only argumentation.

The chief judge of the finals to be held in the spring, will be William O. Douglas, United States Supreme Court Justice.

Gerald Abraham, associate professor at the Law School, composed the problem dealing with criminal procedure and constitutional law.

Literary Society Will Meet Tomorrow To Discuss Business

An important business meeting tomorrow at 10:30 a.m. will terminate the first semester activities of the Literary Society. It will be held in 204 Vasey.

Groundwork for the forthcoming semester's symposium and informal discussion programs will be laid out at this time.

One of the chief points of discussion will be the symposium "Concepts of Hell in Literature." Secretary-Treasurer Jan Dyroff, moderator of the program, has intimated that the literary versions of hell of Homer, Dante, Sartre, Shaw, and Jack Kerouac are under consideration.

A report on the Society's guest speaker program by President Frank Quattrone will conclude the meeting.

WHYY's Twaddle Tapes Program Of Discussion On Telecourse Credit

Villanova University served as host to nine Philadelphia area colleges on Thursday, December 12, for a discussion on a proposed program of widespread participation with station WHYY in educational television.

John P. Twaddle, Program Director of the television station, Channel 12, attended the meeting. Representatives of Cheyney State College, Glassboro State College, La Salle College, Lincoln University, Holy Family College, Rutgers University (South Jersey), the University of Delaware, the University of Pennsylvania, West Chester State College, and Villanova participated.

The purpose of the meeting was the formulation of a cooperative effort by the various institutions in the field of educational television. The group hopes to form a "Delaware Valley Higher Education TV Committee" and to pool its efforts in offering "telecourses" for credit.

Raymond Wilke, of the Villanova faculty, one of the active members in the group, points out that the benefits of the committee are two-fold: first, to the member schools, it would afford the opportunity to participate in the new and dynamic phase of education — educational television; and second, to vigorously support station WHYY.

The Villanova meeting provided for a frank discussion of the needs and requirements of the station and the extent of participation of the member colleges.

PORTRETTE

Emery Spirited Prexy

Studious, athletic, personable, and loyal is the President of the Junior Class, John Emery.

A Liberal Arts man, Jack is majoring in English and holds a 2.8 cumulative average.

In addition to having a good average scholastically, Jack can also hold his own with a baseball bat. This will be his third year as an outfielder on the Villanova baseball team.

Jack is a mild-mannered person, yet, unmistakably, a man of action. These traits are evident in his display of school spirit. He professes his loyalty, not by a host of hollow words, but by positive actions.

He can always be found among the spirited students who support the Villanova teams. He can also be found supporting the students through his conscientious participation in the Student Council.

Jack, a resident of Phillipsburg, New Jersey, is also a member of the Sanctuary Society and of DPE.

Currently, the Junior Class President is involved in the formulation of plans for the forthcoming Charity Weekend, an annual event sponsored by the Junior Class for the benefit of the Scholarship Fund of St. John's Orphanage.

Jack's pleasant disposition and considerate nature have won for him the admiration and friendship of a great number of the student body.

This popularity, coupled with a keen competitive spirit, is conducive to success and happiness in the future.

Archbishop Krol Discusses Council At Scholastic Press Conference

by Tom Krause

Archbishop John J. Krol of Philadelphia held a scholastic press conference on December 16 for representatives from various high schools and colleges in the area. The conference was held in the Cathedral of St. Peter and Paul and it dealt with the Second Vatican Council.

The Archbishop, one of five assistant secretaries of the Ecumenical Council, spoke of its accomplishments and problems. He explained the need for the Council, its diverse schemas or proposals, and the importance of free discussion among the Fathers.

Although the Archbishop mentioned that there is vigorous debate taking place in the Council, he asserted that all discussion is conducted in air of charity. "The soul of the Council," he said, "is the Holy Ghost, directing, inspiring, and protecting the bishops."

On the subject of time- consuming debates and a slugish Council, the Archbishop stressed the right of the bishop to say whatever they want to say. He believes that the Council will provide legislation for years to come and it must not be accomplished without consideration of all sides.

Archbishop Krol noted that the Council had progressed greatly in this session. Last year only 600 "intervention," or comments by the Council Fathers, were voiced while this year there were 1,471.

The schemas on the liturgy and communications were prime examples of the free spirit of this session, according to the Archbishop. Out of 2,200 Council Fathers voting on the liturgy schema, all but 4 voted yes.

There were a hundred different votes on the liturgy schema alone, suggesting enormous discussion. These two schemas relate to the worship of God and free expresion of speech.

When asked about quality of the secular press's reporting of the Council, Archbishop Krol replied, "Generally speaking, the secular press did a good job, with a few exceptions." He was especially dissatified with the reporting of Time magazine's correspondent.

Concerning the Protestants at the Council, the Archbishop spoke of their enthusiasm and desire for ecumenism.

Current 'Politico' Edition Honors President Kennedy

Politico, the campus' newest political magazine, will make its second appearance today in the form of a special edition in honor of the late President John F. Kennedy.

Editor Mike Magro has announced that the paper will "not be a sombre or morbid re-hash of what filled the television, radio, and commercial publications during that tragic week."

Articles on President Lyndon B. Johnson, a review of the last Political Union debate and generally related articles will also be featured.

Larger Type

While the format of the paper will remain the same, the type will be doubled in size to permit easier reading.

Because of the urgency and portent of this issue, a tripartite discussion on a current political topic will not appear in this issue.

The first edition of Politico was well received on the campus by both the student body and the faculty. Issues were distributed to the Political Union at its last debate on December 9.

Larger Distribution

The newly admitted Rosemont girls were given copies. The second edition of the magazine will be sent to the surrounding colleges in the area.

Following issues of Politico will include a special and exclusive interview with Dr. Fritz Nova, chairman of the university's Political Science department. Dr. Nova will discuss the issues surrounding Chancellor Ludwig Erhard of West Germany.

Comments on any of the articles in Politico should be placed in the Political Union box in the Student Council office on the second floor of Dougherty Hall.

SNAFU

Villanova can take just and honest pride in the number of speakers who have visited the University in recent months. The topics discussed have ranged the spectrum of opinion from one extreme to the other for the benefit and edification of the student body and the community at large.

Last Wednesday night, Villanova was fortunate enough to have three fine speakers on campus, men recognized in their fields.

The Intercollegiate Conference on Government sponsored a lecture by Socialist-Labor leader George S. Taylor, and the History Department held a lecture under its auspices featuring Dr. S. D. Gotein on "The Four Faces of Islam."

To add to the aura of intellectualism pervading the University, Dr. Howard Penniman lectured at the first in a series of lectures sponsored by the Political Science Department, his topic was "Congress and the American Party System."

All of these lectures had one thing in common: all were on the same day, at the same time, and all were directed at the same group. All were scheduled to take place on Wednesday at eight o'clock.

All three lectures were, at least indirectly, aimed at Political Science and History majors. Students in these two allied fields presented a choice of lectures which they should not have to make.

A special committee or office could be founded to coordinate various faculty and student activities, among the various student organizations, departments and colleges.

The students and faculty are supposed to benefit by these but will not if they are held at the same time and date.

No Vice-President

The most poignant commentary on the value of the office of vice-president, now that the office is vacant, is that no one seems to be affected adversely by the vacuum. Not having a vice-president does not seem to be a great loss.

The office once described as "superfluous" by one of its holders has gained stature in recent years, but very little. The vice-president is still essentially a "presidential understudy" standing by to take over in case of the death or disability of the president.

In any case, many have expressed concern with the prospect of presidential succession now that there is no vice-president. Under present laws the Speaker of the House John McCormick, would succeed Mr. Johnson, followed by the president pro-tempore of the Senate, the Secretary of State, and then members of the cabinet.

Even though President Johnson has made clear that he will inform Mr. McCormick on all important government matters he will have little of the close executive training that Mr. Johnson had. Mr. McCormick is also nearly 80 years old.

Laws have been recommended that would elect two-vice presidents, have the president nominate his own vice-president upon his succession, or permit the congress to elect a new vice-president.

Whatever the solution, it is clear that guidelines for effective presidential succession are necessary along with investigation of formulas that might give the office of vice-president greater meaning.

Drive-In Religion

by Frank Sauers

Driving through South Philadelphia recently we noticed a sign standing boldly in the middle of a vacant lot formely occupied by a church and soon to be made into a parking lot. It read, "Another milestone in Philadelphia's progress."

The theory that tearing down churches and erecting parking lots in their place is progress seems to be a growing menace these days. The incident reminded us of A.G. Nostick who recently organized this nation's first drive-in church.

He advocates the wholesale destruction of churches in favor of parking lots. We drove in the other day to try to discover how Nostick developed such a crass philosophy.

"It all began years ago when I was a student," he said, "I used to make visits to church before every test, but nothing happened.

"Then one day I found that they had demolished the church and constructed a parking lot. So I decided to visit the parking lot. I just sat in my car and read. I got straight A's from that time on and I've been making visits ever since."

Religious Service

"What kind of a religious service can you have in a dirty old parking lot'? we asked. "Well," he said, "the people simply drive in, sit in their cars, and worship the way they please."

"Are you kidding?" we asked. "That way they can close their windows and lock their doors and you won't even be able to get in and learn what they're saving or thinking!"

"That's right, why should I?" "That's typical of you radicals," we said, "always avoiding the issue."

No Gimmick

"But you must have a gimmick," we said. "How do you get so many people here? Don't you have any monopoly games or beer parties in the basement?"

"No. Just the sky above and peace to think," That's cheap, crass, and unsophisticated," we said.

"I'll bet you even let people of different races and sexes on the lot at the same time." "That's right," he said. "We are based on kindness, understanding, charity, and love."

"I don't know where you dug up those crazy ideas," we said, "but you sure do have a crazy idea of religion."

Disgusted, we drove off without paying.

Letters To The Editor

To The Editor:

Recently the Student Council passed a motion which stated that the women students of Villanova were not acceptable to take part in representing the student body as cheerleaders.

The furor that this decision caused was characterized by a great deal of emotion and pigheadedness. It must obviously be noted that the initial idea to have female cheerleaders was originated by a faction of male students, not the women students themselves.

However, since we have been dragged into this controversy we feel that we have an obligation to state our feeling on the matter.

We realize that traditionally Villanova has been an all male institution. However in reality and in fact Villanova has been the alma mater of full time women students since 1953.

We are a part of the university and like us or not, we are here to stay.

We are not so much concerned with the fact that we are not considered acceptable as cheerleaders. Yet we are disappointed and angered at the bitterness and injustice with which the worth of female students was attacked.

The Female Undergraduates

To The Editor:

Last week numerous activities were sponsored by the Junior Class. The purpose of each, namely, the Classroom Collection, the Missing Link Contest, and the Charity Ball, was to raise money for the orphans of Saint John's Orphanage.

The participation in the Classroom Collections was very commendable. We exceeded our tentative goal of $500.

Now with the weekend activities at an end, each and every person who helped in this worthy cause can have the satisfaction, knowing that the contributions given now will some day help a future orphan in attaining a college education at Villanova.

Carl Dolento
Chairman of Collections
Charity Weekend 1963

To The Editor:

This letter is written in reference to the letter of Mr. Alex Ruden which appeared in the December 11 issue of the VILLANOVAN.

In his letter Mr. Ruden made several caustic comments on the deportment of students attending a lecture held by the Villanova Student Branch of the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers.

In his list of invectives Mr. Ruden mentioned that he was horrified by the fact that some members of the audience were eating during the lecture.

I do not imagine that he realizes that many of these students have only one free period during the day, and that every speaker is advised of this fact before he appears at Villanova.

However the crowning blow by this young commentator on our times comes when he refers to the chairman of the organization as a "complete fool." Who does Mr. Ruden thinks contacts the speakers whom he listens to?

This "complete fool" has a 3.77 cumulative average in his final year of electrical engineering, is an officer in two engineering honor societies, and has more responsibilities in one week than Mr. Ruden will have in his entire stay here at Villanova.

'TIS THE SEASON TO BE JOLLY

If you have been reading this column—and I hope you have; I mean I genuinely hope so; I mean it does not profit me one penny whether you read this column or not; I mean I am paid every week by the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes and my emolument is not affected in any way by the number of people who read or fail to read this column—an act of generosity perfectly characteristic of the makers of Marlboro, you would say if you knew them as I do; I mean here are tobacconists gray at the temples and full of honors who approach their art as eagerly, as dewy-eyed as the youngest of practitioners; I mean the purpose of the Marlboro makers is simply to put the best of all possible filters behind the best of all possible tobaccos and then go, heads high, into the market place with their wares, confident that the inborn sense of right and wrong, of good and bad, of worthy and unworthy, which is the natural instinct of every American, will result in a modest return to themselves for their long hours and dedicated labors—not, let me hasten to add, that money is of first importance to the makers of Marlboro; all these simple men require is plain, wholesome food, plenty of Marlboros, and the knowledge that they have scattered a bit of sunshine into the lives of smokers everywhere; if, I say, you have been reading this column, you may remember that last week we started to discuss Christmas gifts.

Do you know someone who is interested in American history?

We agreed, of course, to give cartons of Marlboro to all our friends and also to as many total strangers as possible. Today let us look into some other welcome gifts.

Do you know someone who is interested in American history? If so, he will surely appreciate a statuette of Millard Fillmore with a clock in the stomach. (Mr. Fillmore, incidentally, was the only American president with a clock in the stomach. James K. Polk had a stem-winder in his head, and William Henry Harrison chimed the quarter-hour, but only Mr. Fillmore, of all our chief executives, had a clock in the stomach. Franklin Pierce had a sweep second hand and Zachary Taylor had seventeen jewels, but, I repeat, Mr. Fillmore and Mr. Fillmore alone had a clock in the stomach. Some say that Mr. Fillmore was also the first president with power steering, but most historians assign this distinction to Chester A. Arthur. However, it has been established beyond doubt that Mr. Fillmore was the first president with a thermostat. Small wonder they called him Old Hickory!)

But I digress. To get back to welcome and unusual Christmas gifts, here's one that's sure to please—a gift certificate from the American Chiropractic Society. Accompanying each certificate is this winsome little poem:

Merry Christmas, Happy New Year,
Joyous sacro-iliac!
May your spine forever shine,
Blessings on your aching back.
May your lumbar ne'er grow number,
May your backbone ne'er dislodge,
May your caudal never dawdle,
Joyeux Noel! Heureux massage!

Christmas Montage Portrays Beauty And Diversity Of Yule Sentiments

by Jan Dyroff

A wind was blowing from the steppe in that deep wintertide where in a cold cave slept a child upon the cold hillside.

Christmas is a cold season in this hemisphere. Its winds are bitter and the snow crunched white underfoot is chill. It scrapes the wide grey sky with black tree branches.

People rush on by, their noses red as rowan berries, more than half afraid that if they pause for a moment, the winter's damp will circle them 'round and freeze them to the spot.

For some, the sun of Christmastide shines out of the boundless arc with a double-eagle eye. At night they set their courses in the dark from the glint of a tinsel's shine.

And, shyer than a watchman's light, nor till now seen by them, a star rose shining on its way that led to Bethlehem.

Hope rises on the rising of a star on Christmas eve. Once a virgin mother rose with the star and God was born. In joyous expectation of remembering the birth, some people forget the pain that goes with birth.

So the priest wears rose vestments on one of the days of Advent. The rosy glow of his silks matches the ruddy warmth of the worshipers' faces.

For these the sun of the season need not be brighter than reflection of the wreath's candle in the elevated chalice.

The candles glimmering, the paper chains, the colored tinsel sparkling in array, . . . a wind blew fierce and wilder from the plains . . . the apples, bubbles in a golden spray.

Children are really the inheritors of the season. Christmas is theirs. They only share it with adults. We only give them gifts in return for what we receive.

Footprints in the rime, snow forts, squeals in the dusk of the short days are the notes and the monchromatic tones of the times.

Disjointed is the only way to write of a child's holiday—steamy noses pressed against window glass, watching; fists clenched over coins, waiting for the clerk to get down dad's tie, hoping you've enough money; transfixed with terror, joy, and excitement standing before Santa Claus eager to untap your wishes.

Stockings by the fire, and gaudy streamers make up a child's Christmas, happily engulfing him in a whirlpool of walnuts, angels, ribbon, and wrapping paper.

By this same road, and through the countryside, went several agnels hidden in the crowd, so unsubstantial they could not be spied, invisible, and just their footprints showed.

Angels must be like kitchen smells, unseen but there. If angels leave footprints, kitchen leave springerlies. There must be an outward manifestation of the Holy Birth.

Our parish church has bells and the bells ring to tell people things. They chime-in masses and toll the deaths of the great. On the ferias they sing "gloria." At Christmas they chorus quite simply, "veni, veni, Emmanuel," and we are glad for it.

They stood in shadow in that cattle-stall and whispered, lost in awe at what to say, when suddenly a hand came from the dark and moved one of them gently from the way; He looked aroend; there, like a guest, afar upon the Virgin gazed the Christmas Star."

'Lynx' Contributions Are Sparkling But They Lack A Thematic Unity

by Matt Roche

The Autumn-Winter edition of the Lynx, Villanova's Literary magazine, has made its debut. From the cover art to the back notes on contributors we are presented with the Universary's literary contribution to the world.

How is the art? What about the make-up? Are the stories entertaining? Is the poetry novel, fresh, or is it vapid, and listless?

To answer these questions we must search for other contemporary writings and compare and contrast the Villanovan's with them.

First, we sould consider the art. The art is about ninety per cent impressionistic. The artists were competent, indeed, a few of the sketches were very pleasing: namely, the cover and the village illustrations. The trend should continue in the future.

The make-up compares favorably with other collegiate schools. One suggestion for the next issue would be a unified theme. What has the perface by the revered F. Scott to do with the content? Where was the introduction or the preface by the editor Barry Thornton? We would suggest a unified theme, introduced by the editor.

On the positive side we commend the staff for the different, novel, and satirical notes on contributors. It is an innovation which was long overdue. This transformed a blase list into a real editorial comment. More of the same in the future is hoped for.

And, now to the poetry. The Village Bare has a Rod Serling quality combined with a certain Donne concern for mankind. We are pleased to report that the Frosh author's piece was so well received that he has transferred from Engineering to Arts. The boy prodigy is due to graduate in June with acclamation, not honors.

Fruitful signs are the Alumni and faculty contributions of Garrett Evans and Denis Corish. Mr. Evans has expressed a conventional sentiment in an unconventional manner. Mr. Corish has not forgotten the legacy of the past—but he has returned it to the modern ear. Miss Shriver, a guest contributor, and Jack Sargent, a native, seemed to express opposite viewpoints of the Caesarian tribute coin of time. Loneliness, Mike Gill's poem, contained an admirable compression of emotion in contrast to J. Petraitis's Rustic After Thought which elaborated on one emotion by listing its attributes. Norm Harvey and A. Molitierno have not forgotten that rhyme exists, although Mr. Molitierno was much better in his poem J.F.K., published in the Villanovan.

And what of the prose? His Own Private Day by Eugene Fitzmaurice was structurally unified, but it had an ambiguous end. The Supermarket by George Welch finely expresses the frustration of the quotidien—the "everyday"—in the age of automation. In P. Sean Murphy's story Bile Into My Soul it seems that he tried to use the sex and sage formula of John O'Hara. But the reader is left with only a disappointed feeling of sex without a consciousness of the intended wisdom.

The thought-within-the-narrative device is well used in Arthur Chappell's Who Beat Him Every Day. It is the traditional frame story of carrying two fictions simultaneously. But here is a different emphasis and a new touch.

Kevin Keeley has given us The Last Queen—what may be described as a short-storyette. Its build-up suspense and the punch of the surprise ending combine for a tale in the O. Henry weaving manner. The short sentences drive home the entertaining point in this brief vignette.

Jan Dyroff's Rendezvous provides a realistic dialogue tinged with enough romanticism to make it worthwhile believing. He has an ease with dialogue that is most convincing. It must come from hanging around street corners.

Thomas Murray's I Tried . . . leaves one with that horror of the too-real nightmare the child wrapt in a bubble of the soon-to-break illusion.

Two Truckmen by Cornell Williams is a bit of masterfully planned coincidence. A modern Sophoclean twist in an Alfred Hitchcock manner. Too fantastic to believe, too engrossing not to read.

We would nominate the short story Nigger-Lover as the best of the list. Tom James has drawn a social indictment of modern mores. His realistic command of the give-and-take plus the thoughts embodied make this piece outstanding.

A toast, to the Lynx, to the best of the issues, and to renewed improvement in the future.

The Rising Curtain

by Paul Norton

Cambridge — November 25, 1963: The square is never exactly what you'd call a swining place on Monday nights but tonight, like so many places, it was strangely silent and empty. Surrounding the subway pillbox extrance were a few stragglers looking at the multilingual scandal sheets on the Out of Town News Stand or perhaps trying to see what the London Times had to say about it all.

Across the street in front of the Coop, huddled in the doorway and circled by the storewindows' tweedy selection of Christmas gifts was a lone group of night people waiting for the orange MTA bus. Next door Irma La Douce entertained a near empty house at the old University theater as did some Seven Deadly Sins run to hollowness at the Brattle, that citadel of art films.

The aisles at the Paperback Bookstore, always crammed with the literate and the not-so-literate, were empty and even the high schoolers appeared only briefly in front of Brighams ice cream store to find their haven of unrest closed for the day.

Along the river the banks and walks were bare of the usual couples catching quick kisses by the boat houses or discussing the esoteric. Only the reflections of the Business School on the opposite shore remained unchanged as its dining hall lit a cold harmony with the lights of the bridge which leads to the stadium.

And the stadium — this fortress of classic warfare was, above all places silent and foreboding. The promised glory of the preceding Saturday had been postponed for another week. The bout with Yale would have to wait.

Throughout the yards, shadows played against the omnipresent and often omniscent ivy. The Memorial Chapel had closed its doors this afternoon after remembering her son in a poignant ceremony. Today this oftimes cynical (but always fair in the eyes of her disciples) bastion of American education wept for her son who made good in the individual style with which she so loves.

A few weeks from now when this reporter is 359.1 miles from Cambridge and he remembers the dark city on this chilly night, he will no doubt question the rightness, the aptness, the propriety of mentioning him in a drama column. But like "Mother Harvard," surrounding this man is such a keen sense of the dramatic, a timing, a sophistication to the smallest of his moves that his memory and the reports of his life leave us with the impression of a new "man for all seasons."

Mourning

By the time this story reaches print the country will have recovered its grief and moved from the maudlin and morbid aspects of his death to an objective evaluation of his life and what his future might have been. We will have hopefully escaped from the sacrilege of the tabloid portrayed murder, the agonizing television morbidity which extended itself into a pop song from England telling about the man who rode in the bright Dallas sunshine.

Maybe by the time you read this column the dignity which his wife and family manitained throughout their ordeal will have spread itself enough to hide the words like "martyr" and the maudlin coverings of his children by some of the national press services.

Perhaps people will remember his most dramatic moments: his loss of the vice-presidential nomination in 1956, the death of his son last summer, the speeches in Hyannisport in victory and in Berlin in good faith, his breakthrough into society when he married a Bouvier, his rise to quick popularity in Massachusetts, his dynamic self confidence and self possession.

He may not have been a great president and in the minds of some people he probably wasn't even a good president. The point is, though, that he was president and he was a colorful president. The fact that he liked his job helped him bring to the House a style unfamiliar to that office. Even the intellectualism he dragged behind him filtered through as a virtue or an image for the American people.

Tomorrow Harvard will return once again to stamping out her individuals and giving them the opportunity to place themselves in history.

Co-operation

by John Roberts

A Villanova student, from the time he matriculates at the University is required to cooperate extensively with teachers, the wishes of the administration, other students and various other authorities.

The extent of his cooperation is to a large degree responsible for the over-all smooth functioning of the University. Thus, the more cooperative the students are, the higher the degree of efficiency at which the university operates.

However, there is another side to this coin which at times needs examination. Cooperation, by its very nature is a two way proposition and when one of the two parties concerned is not cooperative, the system breaks down.

Recently, the Student Council, acting on a motion to investigate the universities present policy of giving a grade for attendance, in an attempt to ascertain the faculties' opinion of the present system, distributed questionnaires to the different division heads of the university and asked them to distribute the questionnaires to the teachers in their departments.

This was the first place where cooperation failed. As was expected, most of the faculty responded honestly and promptly to the Student Council, however a noticable minority remained unheard from. Soon there came an explanation. A few of the department heads were extemely lax in distributing the questionnaires and one did not even bother to give them out at all.

Of the teachers that did receive the inquiries, most answered them immediately and honestly, even going so far as to suggest changes which they thought would be beneficial. But again, some were noticeably uncooperative. Some teachers replied not at all and some even went so far as to reply to the effect that the matter was none of the Councils business.

This revelation of an uncooperative attitude of a small minority, although not greatly significant, should stimulate some critical introspect in the faculty.

Council Affects All Students

by Rusty Miller

Over the past three years, this writer has heard many comments and questions by students on various acts of the Student Council. Some students complain about council decisions while many others constantly inquire why different problems haven't been remedied. Still others do not even know the function of the council much less its achievements.

Invariably, these students, when asked if they have ever so much as attended a student congress meeting answer, no. The complainers ask why someone doesn't "bring that up in the Student Council." Asked if they are aware that any student may raise a motion in the congress by merely having a representative co-submit the motion with him, the answer, again, no!

The decisions of the Council affect each and every one of us. Is it therefore good common sense to passively trust in the good judgement of this body? Would it not be better to take an active interest in the student goverment, to perhaps somehow personally accept your state as a students?

Significant Ruling

The fall session of the student congress has ruled on several significant and controversial bills. One motion jolted the campus frats into rather quick action on the ratification of the Interfraternity Constitution. This motion around much indignation among frat members and the council meeting was unusually well attended that night.

Another motion brought up the question of discrimination against female students in campus activities. This also created a furor and elicited many interesting discussions both in and out of the council.

It is noteworthy that this motion and its subsequent defeat received national attention by wire services and comments on it appeared in newspapers throughout the country.

A motion passed by the congress last year has resulted in an altering of semester schedules. Through the instrumentation of this body next year's fall semester will begin earlier and end before Christmas. The holidays will then become a combination Christmas-semester break.

Other motions before this session deal with greater use of the library for the students — longer hours, use of seminar rooms to increase study space etc. Suggestions have been made concerning the use of the parking lot — free parking for football games, penalties for careless parking to name just two.

Affects All of Us

Surely all these and others affect each of us to some degree. Should we not take an active interest in their outcome? This interest requires so very little time, for the council meets only once every two weeks.

Every student who feels he or she is a part of Villanova, who has an interest in the school, belongs to an activity or cheers for the Cats at the Palestra should attend the student congress meetings. Every Villanovan should take out an hour or two some Wednesday night and sit in on a meeting and see just how the student body is governed.

The student who through curiosity or perhaps indignation attends a meeting is liable to discover that the sessions are only informative — unquestionably the best way learn what is going on in the University — but also in many cases enjoyable. The council is the most important single body in the University and as such deserves the wholehearted interest and support of the active student body.

The Numbers Racket

by Jeff Radowich

Upon my arrival at Villanova, I was typically bewildered by the puzzling array of numbers which one is compelled to have constantly at one's bitten fingernails. A considerable number of fellow Freshmen confessed this same difficulty. I therefore determined to sacrifice one Saturday night of debauchery at the Penn frat parties for the greater good of Villanova students everywhere.

Now, you have to set up a relationship between the various numbers in order to facilitate remembering them.

At 7:14, I realized that my student number 61099, minus my matric number, 1813, equalled the last five digits of the telephone number of Gracemere Hall at Rosemont, 59286. If you add my post office box number (121), you obtain the last five digits of the phone number at the Convent (59407), which is, admittedly, useless, but it fits into the pattern.

And Furthermore

Subtract the combination of my chemistry lab locker (14-59-8), and you get 44809. Multiply by the number of times I've made week-end curfew (2); the product is the last five digits of one of the phones at Cabrini, 89618. Add my room number, 327; the sum is the last five digits of another phone at Cabrini, 89945. Subtract my post office box combination, 8-34-8, and you obtain the sum of the last five digits of a phone at Bryn Mawr School of Nursing, 51800, and a phone at Misericordia School of Nursing, 29797.

It was now 9:18. Flushed with success, I was determined to persevere.

Subtract WWVU's frequency (640) from WIBG's frequency (990), and you get the telephone area code number of my girl friend back home, 350. Add the number of pages of Euripides due for Monday, 90; the sum is the room number of my second period class on alternate Tuesdays, 440; divide by the number of cuts taken during the first week of class (4), and you obtain the room number of my counselor, 110.

Now, his office hours are on Monday, which is the second day of the week. Therefore, dividing by two, you get my math average, 55.

Roommate Returns

It was now 11:27. I babbled on happily, incorporating in my scheme the hours for the purchasing of tickets, the hours for the taking of showers, the hours for the cashing of checks, the hours for the using of phones.

At 2:36, my roommate returned from Penn, took one look at my night's labor, and then arranged for my committment to Pinehurst Sanetarium for the Mentally Disturbed, where I am currently admiring the clever, criss-cross stitching on the padded walls of my room.

As I have no company except one rather repulsive anteater which no one else can see, I'd appreciate a few letters. Address them to:

"Brinksmanship"

by Jim Mitchell

There is a tradition at Villanova to which even those who participate are totally unaware. Each morning certain members of the male population of this university take part in a game of "brinkmanship" to which even John Foster Dullas would be proud.

The event to which I refer is the confrontation on Lancaster Pike at the light across from C&F (Bartley Hall). It is an area in which a PhD candidate in Psychology should indeed investigate, for in keeping with the Freudian beliefs, the Villanova "wildcats" exert their masculinity in a "I dare you" attitude to the mechanized population of the surrounding area.

Simple Rules

The rules of the game are simple: first, you must cross only with the red light and without looking (usually, you just follow the crowd); second, you must proceed to the other side of the street without stopping, in an extra restrained pace (If you "chicken out" at the medial line, you automatically forfeit all points).

The point system is very rigid and is strictly enforced, being based on the number and types of vehicles stopped: for a woman driver you receive one point, the Immaculata bus is two, a worker at Wyeth is three, and a fellow Villanovan is ten.

Danger

So far this obviously dangerous practice has resulted in only a few inflated ego's at the eight-thirty classes and many extra doses of tranquilizers at such places as Lower Merion Cricket Club for Men and TV Guide, but the possibility of "overconfidence" is enough to give anyone the shakes.

native of Cincinnati, Ohio, but he was raised in Philadelphia. He attended West Philadelphia High School and Penn State University where he was a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

Following graduation in 1937, he became a teacher of English in the San Juan, Puerto Rico, school system. Two years later he returned to Penn State as an instructor in Spanish and remained there until he entered the service in 1943.

After his separation he joined the Villanova faculty where he became teacher of Spanish and interpreter of Spanish customs, music, and culture to his students. On Thursday, December 19, he will be cited by the Spanish Government for "his great work in widening the knowledge of the Spanish language and culture" and "the many spiritual ties" he has created between the two peoples.

Haskins And Sells Foundation Honors C & F And Student

Villanova's College of Commerce and Finance and senior accounting student, Neil B. Godick, were honored simultaneously by the Haskins and Sells Foundation on Thursday, December 12.

Godick received a check for $500 from the nation's third largest accounting firm for his "scholastic excellence in accounting" and Villanova was honored by its selection as one of 70 colleges in the nation to receive the award each year for the next five years.

Haskins and Sells will present a check for $500.00 to an outstanding accounting student at Villanova each year.

Mr. Lawrence Welsh who made the presentation said that Villanova was selected from over 600 colleges considered by the Foundation. The 70 schools chosen were selected on a basis of their general academic reputation and the character of the graduates employed by the Accounting Firm.

Mr. Joseph Healy, Class of 1948 at Villanova, accompanied Mr. Walsh to the presentation which took place in Bartley Hall at 10:30 a.m. Among the speakers was Villanova's President, the Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA.

Beta Gamma Society Wins Eastern Regional To Conclude Semester

The Beta Gamma Debate Society concluded its first semester tournament tour with a victory in personal competion and the debut of several new debaters.

Defending international extemporaneous speaking champion Gene Fitzmaurice won the Eastern Forensic Association's competition in that event. This brought to the school the Eastern regional title while making Fitzmaurice the only all level speaking champion in the American Forensic Association's history.

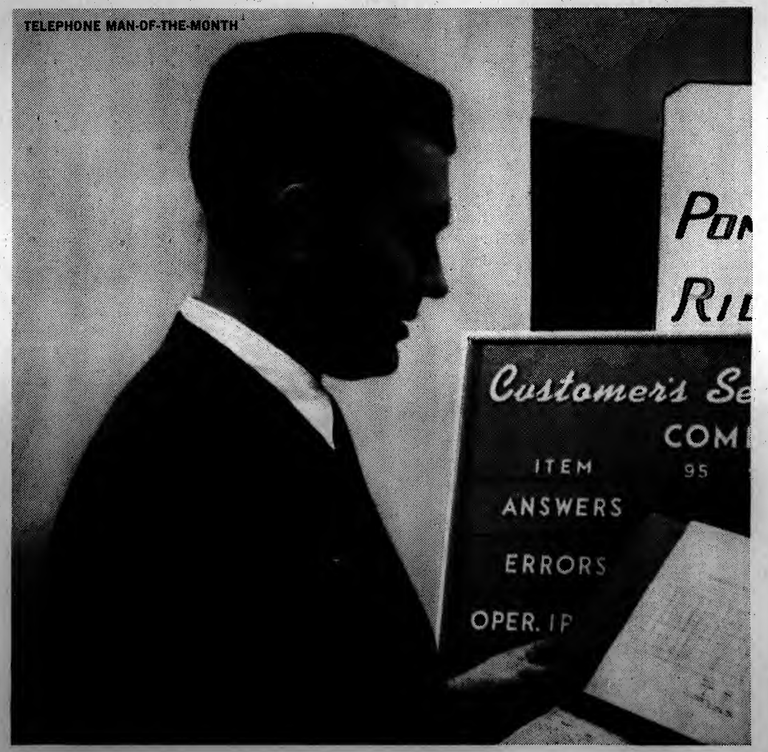
In the field of debate, Jeff Radowich, only freshman member of the debate team's varsity squad teamed with veteran Jim Griffin as the two debated in favor of the national collegiate debate topic.

Mary Lou Kiefski and Lucille Checiero argued against the topic against such power schools at Dartmouth, West Point, Holy Cross, St. Joseph's and Harvard.

Miss Kiefski and Radowich also participated in the field of persuasive oratory.

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANIES SALUTE: GENE LINDACHER

After promoting Gene Lindacher (B.A., 1957) up the ladder from Traffic Assistant in Ridgewood to Traffic Manager for the Paterson District, New Jersey Bell handed him a new challenge. They named him Plant Service Supervisor for Repair in the 43,000-customer Dover area.



This meant that after managing operators and their supervisors (all women), he was suddenly put in charge of a highly technical group of repairmen and other telephone technicians.

Gene's increased responsibilities came about because of his outstanding performance in Traffic Department. Knowing that good managers can step into new situations easily, New Jersey Bell did not hesitate to move Gene into the more technical Dover job.

New Jersey Bell considers Gene a versatile young manager with an unlimited future. Not a bad reputation to have!

Gene Lindacher, like many young men, is impatient to make things happen for his company and himself. There are few places where such restlessness is more welcomed or rewarded than in the fast-growing telephone business.

being made to bring Sen. Barry Goldwater to Villanova as part of the Council's Forum.

Stoneback urged the representatives and the presidents of the organizations which they represent to write to the senator, expressing their desire to see him at the university.

Faculty Poll

Reporting on a motion for an investigation into the possibilities of a change in attendance regulations it was divulged by Stoneback that nearly one-third of the faculty had replied to the poll sent. The tally was nine to one in favor of a change.

John Hagerty, Student Government vice-president, reported that the Student Council mixer was an overwhelming success and that two more were planned for the next semester.

When old business was called, George Valva rose to report that the motion concerning the establishment of Metropolitan Clubs was not approved by the administration because the administration would have inadequate control over the club's activities.

It was pointed out, however, that this motion was being referred to the Alumni Association for a fresh consideration and possible implementation in another form.

Breakage Fee

Other motions of significance were considered under new business. Among these was a demand made by Pat Mahady for an accounting of changes made to the student for the dispersal of the monies of his breakage fee.

Terence Cooney proposed that the Council endorse the current strong civil rights bill and present evidence of the support to the Pennsylvania congressmen.

This bill was passed, but was later called for reconsideration by Jack Emery who yielded the floor to Joseph A. McCarthy II and James Murphy. Negative debate yielded a heated discourse and the motion for reconsideration was defeated.

Fraternal Love

The last motion under consideration to be passed was one by James McErland proposing a re-establishment of a fraternal feeling of love and justice among college students across the country.

Withdrawn by the maker was a motion by Ernest Abate requesting reports on the progress through the administration on motions given them by the Student Congress.

In the closing moments of the meeting, Chairman Martin McGuinn summarized the accomplishments of the Congress for the past semester and reaffirmed the goals to be pursued in the next one.

As the long session was drawing to a close Council Secretary McCarthy was recognized and given the floor to include in the minutes of the meeting a reading of an editorial.

The editorial appeared in the December 11 issue of the Philadelphia Daily News and concerned the recent motion before the council on the question of the women undergraduate privileges.

Some bantering went on between the Chairman and the Secretary as to whether the move was out of order, but McCarthy held the floor. In the momentary absence of the Parliamentarian, George McKeon, McGuinn declared McCarthy out of order and the meeting was adjourned.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

The Rifle Team which still sports an unbeaten slate, will travel to New York this Saturday to fire against a strong Manhatten squad.

It figures to be one of their toughest matches, but depth is an important factor in this year's success story, and this above all may prove to be the winning margin. This diversity is best shown by the fact, that no team member has yet to take first place honors twice.

With ten meets left on the regular schedule the team believes it will be in top competitive form for the Philadelphia Sectionals to be held in early spring. A much improved team goes into this meet aiming to better last year's impressive second place finish.

Captain Art Blades is now shooting with authority and is within firing range of a berth on the U.S. Olympic Squad.

The Villanova Pistol Team made a clean sweep at a quadrangle match at Amherst, Massachusetts, last Saturday to raise their record to 11-0.

The Villanova squad defeated the United States Coast Guard Academy in a morning match 1377-1333. This bested the 1361 school record fired last year.

Shooting honors went to All-American George Sinclair who fired a 289 beating his old individual high record of 287. Second for Villanova was Jim Durbarow with 276 followed by Tony Marcia, 275, Mike Benson, 273, and Bud Brennan, 264.

Not being satisfied with this victory, the Wildcats went on to dominate the afternoon match by shooting a 1364 to defeat U.S.C.G.A.'s 1325, University of Massachusetts' 1317, M.I.T.'s 1311. Villanova's high five were Mascia, 279, Sinclair 278, Durbarow 275, Brennan 266, and Gary Leidecke 266.

Team coach Staff Sergeant Miguacci and captain Sinclair feel that this year's squad is the strongest Villanova has ever had and everyone is working for an undefeated season. This will be difficult but the feeling is optimistic.

Some of the other teams on the schedule include West Point, the Naval Academy, the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy, Rutgers, Bucknell, and Penn State.

The Tennis team announced that they will play a ten-team schedule this Spring. Arrangements are being made in connection with the administration to attain varsity status for the team. Captain Bob Mulligan is also hoping to set up indoor scrimmages at Haverford College in February.

Mulligan said that all interested tennis players should contact him, preferably before Christmas, at EI6-6547. If Tennis does not become a varsity sport this year, financial assistance will be needed. Tennis, however, will definitely be a varsity sport in future years.

The theme of the Billiard Team's present activity is to organize a working intramural program. With full administration and intramural council approval, the only dilemma facing the proposal is a lack of participants.

Individuals, fraternities, and dorms are being asked to support this activity by forming a team by filling out entry cards In the Intramural Office.

Movies will be shown on the sport and free trophies will be awarded to individual and team winners. Boys scoring high will be asked to join the team which is priming for the Intercollegiate Tournament to be held on February 14, 15, 16 at Gettysburg College in Pennsylvania.

upset loss to Assumption, the Friars will once again be a power in the East. Returning from last year's NIT Champions is the entire front line of 6-10 John Thompson, 6-2 Jim Stone and 6-8 Bob Kovalski.

The backcourt is in dire straits due to the loss of playmaker Vinnie Ernst and Ray Flynn, who shared scoring leadership with Thompson last year with an 18.9 average. Bill Stein, a 5-11 senior gets the call for one guard spot, while two 6-3 sophomores, Bill Blair and Jim Benedict battle for the fifth position.

Numbered among the Friars' 23 victories last year was a 78-59 rout of the Wildcats. Their biggest win so far this season is a 72-66 triumph over St. Louis, conqueror of highly-rated Ohio State.

Other teams in the festival include St. John's, Utah, Cornell, Minnesota and St. Joseph's.

St. Francis of Brooklyn

With seven lettermen returning, Coach Danny Lynch expects his Terriers to improve on their '62 log. During that campaign, St. Francis posted a 16-7 record and garnered an NIT berth. They also ranked sixth in the nation in defense, limiting their foes to 57.9 ppg.

The Terriers have won three of their first four starts this year. Tureshine has supplied the main firepower so far, averaging 20.1. Despite a 51-48 triumph last year, St. Francis still trails the series with Villanova 8-6.

Football Wrapup

by Dick Pazdan

Well, except for the usual bowl madness that strikes this country every year, football season is over for another year and this writer is out of a job.

But before this, I just can't resist taking a parting shot at the bowl games and some quick observations of the season that just passed.

The East produced a few surprises this year. Pitt surprised quite a few people by coming up with it's best season in many a moon. The Panters were 8-1, only a loss to the number one team in the East, Navy, stopped Pitt from having it's first perfect season in a long, long, time.

Navy surprised nobody by having the year that they did. Roger Staubach paced the Middies to an 8-1 record, only a loss to SMU marring the slate.

Princeton split the Ivy crown with Dartmouth. Cosmo Whats-His-Name, Princeton's hero all season, fumbled against the Indians, and Dartmouth walked off with a 22-21 win and a share of the crown.

Villanova had a so-so year, looking gloriously glorious at times, and gloriously inept at others, finishing with a 5-4 record.

The highlight of the season came at the very end when furor arose over whether we should have girl cheerleaders. It all started at the Quantico game. They said there wasn't enough spirit and that girls would remedy the situation.

After seeing the Quantico game there is no reason why we shouldn't have girl cheerleaders — most of the girls on this campus are just as mean, nasty, and rough looking as some of the Marines I saw that day.

What can be said about the Army-Navy game? Enough has been said already (besides, I'll probably be clawed to death by 214 revenge crazed females after that last sentence, so why get 2,000 cadets on my back).

The South saw some fine football this year. Auburn seems to be on its way back to national prominence finishing 9-1 and seems to be out of the NCAA's recruiting doghouse.

Alabama was 7-2 and faces unbeaten but twice tied Mississippi in the Sugar Bowl. Mississippi faced its usual not too strong schedule, but did manage to crush a good LSU team.

All-in-all, ten Southern teams have made it to post-season bowl contests. This must mean something.

The Southwest saw the nations number one team (unless you're iin the NROTC) in Texas. The Longhorns almost had Texas A & Mitis on Thanksgiving, but showed great poise to salvage a fine win.

Freshman Cagers Romp Over Scranton But Fall Before St. Joseph's 58-56

By Rusty Miller

Twice this season Villanova's freshman basketball team has been put to the test, both times on their home court. Of the first against Scranton, little need be said except that it closely paralleled the varsity game.

The ball-handling of Pete Coleman and the shooting and rebounding of Frank Gaidjunas and Bill Soens were just too much for the Miner's frosh.

The high scorer for VU in the 84-55 win was Gaidjunas with 17 points. Coach Jack Devine said he was pleased with the team's overall performance.

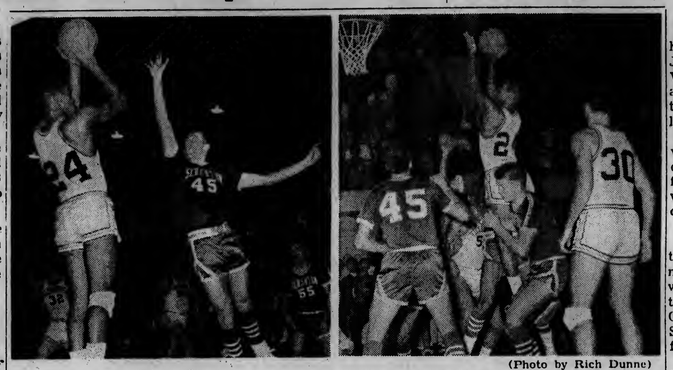
St. Joe's

The second game against St. Joe's was by no means the same. The Hawks played a dog-eat-dog game right down to the wire and took the game home by 2 points, 58-56. The Hawks masterfully applied their pattened press for no less than 40 minutes, double-teaming Pete Coleman all the way.

This type of contest so early was unexpected and it successfully unbalanced the 'Cats offense. Once again Pete Coleman did a standout job in the backcourt. He had 16 points and steals. Giadjunas had 16 points for the losers while McGuire had 10. Each were standouts off the boards.

Individually

On the players individually, Coach Devine had this to say . . . Coleman, who is being groomed to take over for George Leftwich in two years, is a backcourt ace in the tradition of Jimmy Huggard, Wally Jones etc.



He is doing a fine job on all counts. The former Darby-Colwyn star has lived up to the expectations of both Devine and Kraft.

Frank Gaidjunas, who is from La Salle has more than filled the bill in his up-front role. According to Coach Devine he has progressed rapidly and is doing even better than was expected.

Potential

Bill Soens who hails from Penn Charter has terrific potential as anyone who saw him play in high school knows. This year he has displayed these talents in fiery spurts and Mr. Devine is sure he will develop into a great all-around player.

Terry McGuire who came here from Cleveland has had trouble adjusting to the 'Cats brand of ball. He is used to a more controlled type of offense but Coach Devine is confident he will come around.

Wildcat Bowlers Re-gain First Place In Bid To Nab Philadelphia Title

Villanova's Bowling Team took over first place in the Philadelphia Eastern Collegiate Bowling Conference on Sunday by defeating the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy, 3-0. Villanova leads the league with a 20-10 record, followed by St. Joseph's and Drexel, both 19-11.

Freshman Bruce Thomas rolled the high game of 213. John Brennen and Jim Rowley had the high series total with 573 and 578, respectively.

The team averaged 185 in this, the last match before Christmas. St. Joe's and Drexel will hold a playoff to decide who will meet the 'Cats on January 12 for the first half Championships. Villanova needs only to win one of the three games to clinch the title since they are one game ahead.

Championships

The winner will go against the second half champs in April to determine the Philadelphia district titleists. Then, in New York, the Philadelphia, New Jersey and New York Champs will meet in a triangular event to decide the final Eastern Champions.

This is the second year of the Philadelphia extension of the Bowling Conference. In 1961, the Villanova keglers won the first half championships. The Bowling team was formed by Sal Rico, now a Law School student, who is the team coach.

In his junior year at Villanova Rico obtained support from former Athletic Director Frank Reagen, and organized the bowling team. This first year the matches were informal and there was no official league.

The following year, in the fall of 1961, Rico, along with a Pennsylvania student formed the Philadelphia League. The keglers won the Fall Championships, but lost to Penn, the Spring Champs.

The following year Rico graduated and the team lost much of it s organization, though they did play informal matches. This year, however, Rico returned as coach and team tryouts were held in the Fall. Sixty players showed up and 13 were chosen for the team.

Nine of these are returnees from last year and four are freshmen. Andy Razzore was named Captain for this year. The team players are Razzore, Chuck Williams, John Brennen, Dennis Henderson, Don Logan, Leo Mullen, Tom Redmond, Howard Riley and Jim Rowley. Spence Jones, Dick Broderick, Bruce Thomas and John Therkleson are the Freshmen on the team.

Brennen and Rowley have the highest of the year, each at 185. Brennen also has the high single game for the year of 246. Broderick has turned in the high series with a 631 total.

In Memoriam

The WWVU banner, which has become almost a landmark at athletic events of the University is missing.

The large blue banner, which displays the station's call letters at remote broadcasts disappeared from the Buffalo Memorial Auditorium during the Villanova-Buffalo game last Thursday.

It had been hanging behind the station's announcer when it was moved. The loss was reported to the building's superintendant by a member of the WWVU staff.

Monmouth Hockey Team Falls To Strong Wildcat Attack 5-2

by Bob McIntyre

After a long and cramped two hour ride to Asbury Park, New Jersey, Sunday afternoon the Wildcat Hockey team scored an impressive 5 to 2 victory over the Red Wings of Monmouth College.

The 'Cats showed that team work really works as both lines, defense and offense, put on a first rate passing display which was the key to their first victory of the current season.

Tiresome Victory

The key goals that changed the complexion of the game were made by Birmingham and O'Shea while the other goals were attributed to Dick Thackery, Dean Goodwin and Brian O'Shea. O' Shea scored the final two goals for the Blue and White.

Since the team started practice November 20 with two practices a week, they have played two games including the one Sunday, and one scrimmage.

Bright Outlook Seen

The scrimmage showed that this year's addition of players has much talent and should show itself as the season gets older.

Captain Frank Driscoll said, that the quality of play shown last Sunday at the shore gives him great hopes even though the 'Cats had dropped their first game by the slim score of 5 to 3.

The loss came at the hands of the Valley Forge Country Club. Nevertheless the game had its bright moments as shown by the play of Brian O'Shea and defense man Bob Birmingham. The goals by Villanova were scored by center Brian O'Shea, second line center Jay McGuire and the final score by Marc Clement.

Frosh Mermen Lose To Malvern Defeat St. Joe's Prep 55-39

by Jim Proud

In the past week the freshman swimming team has had two meets, one against the Malvern Prep team and the other against the team from Saint Joseph's Prep.

In the Malvern meet, at Malvern's pool, the frosh loat 63-32 to the best Malvern team in recent years. The 'Kittens were only able to take three of the eleven events from the Friars of Malvern; including the 50-yard freestyle, the 1-meter dive, and the 100-yard butterfly.

The 50-yard freestyle was won by Joe Parell in 24 seconds flat. In the 1-meter dive the frosh took first and second, first place going to Bill Bohrmann and second to Jay Hallenbach, a graduate from Malvern.

The St. Joe Prep meet was more pleasing; for the 'Kittens were able to top the "Little Hawks" by 55-39.

In this meet the frosh were able to cop 7 of the 11 events. The biggest win of the day was in the 200-yard individual medley where Greg Doyle set a record by winning in the time 2:20.8.

In this meet Bill Bohrmann won his third straight diving meet and Joe Parell won the 100-yard freestyle in 52.4 seconds.

The other four victories of the day were: the 100-yard breaststroke won by Tim Turvey in 1:09.6; the 200-medley relay of Doyle, Deszardins, Kielar, and Musico; the 200-freestyle relay of Conlin, Musico, Patterson, and Ancona; the 100 freestyle by Parell in 52.4 seconds, and the 100-butterfly by Mike Kielar in 1:1.8.

FOOTBALL WRAP-UP

SMU was the only team to beat Navy and regardless of six losses got into the Sun Bowl because of it. Baylor (7-3) is in the Bluebonnet Bowl and Nebraska (9-1) in the Orange Bowl.

Illinois (7-1-1) won the Big Ten Crown, surprising a leading expert-me-(I thought Northwestern would win it.) Notre Dame had a more miserable season than everybody thought they would (2-7).

Remember when you were in sister's school and you used to root for Notre Dame to beat hell out of Southern Methodist?

"Dick's Dozen" was 56 and 27 for the regular season, a .686 percentage.

Christmas Finds 'Cat Cagers In ECAC Festival In New York

by Steve Freind

Villanova's explosive basketball team begins a crucial phase in its campaign when it tackles St. Francis of Loretto at the Palestra on Friday. Following this tilt, the 'Cats travel to New York to participate in the ECAC Holiday Festival, opening against Dayton on December 26.

They finish their hectic Christmas "vacation" on Tuesday, January 7, at the Field House where they grapple with St. Francis of Brooklyn.

The outcome of these games will tell whether the cry of "We're Number One" is justified. A clean sweep would probably vault the 'Cats into the top ten and send fans prematurely searching for road maps to Kansas City. To achieve this, the 'Cats will have to be at their best. For, their competition is formidable.

St. Francis of Loretto

Losing only one man through graduation, St. Francis looks like a cinch to improve on its 10-13 record of last year. Coach Skip Hughes starting his nineteenth year at Loretto, will build his offense around Sandy Williams, 11th leading scorer in the nation last year. Williams averaged 24.4 while making 44% of his shots.

Joining Williams in the starting lineup are seniors Jerry Friedrich and Gene De Beordinis 6-5 and 6-4 respectively. The back is composed of 6-3 sophomore Rhett Jenkins and 6-0 Mark O'Malley, another sophomore.

So far this season, the Frankies have been sluggish, dropping four of their first five contests. Williams, however, has sparkled and is currently averaging 30.8 The 'Cats lead in the series 10-2, scoring an 89-77 triumph last year.

Holiday Festival

Due to the loss of five lettermen, Dayton, Villanova's first round Festival opponent, looms as a question mark. Despite these graduation losses, Coach Tom Blackburn's picture is brightened by the return of backcourt ace Gordie Hatton. The 6-1 senior averaged 15.7 last year and is the defensive stalwart of the team.

The Flyers also have three talented sophomores in 6-11 Henry Finkel, 6-6 Henry Burlong and 6-4 Bill Cassidy. Finkel is rated better than Paul Westerkamp, who led Dayton last season to a 16-10 record. If these sophomores mature as expected, the Flyers could be a suprise.

Providence

Besides Villanova, the strongest team in the Festival appears to be Providence. Despite an

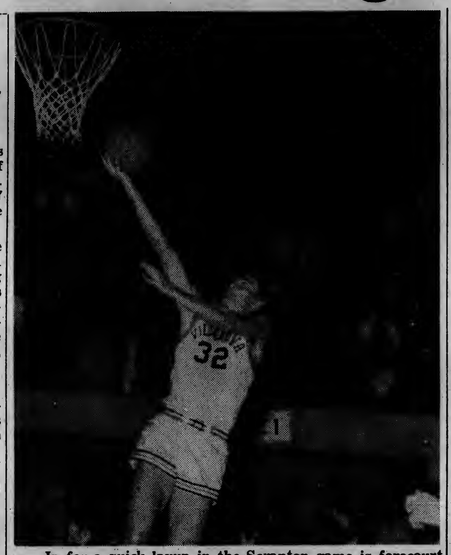
Jones Hits Milestone Leads 'Cats To Romp Over Scranton, 97-48

by Tom Bruderle



To the ringing cheers of "We're number one, we're number one," Villanova's basketball team mauled a small but spunky band of Purple Eagles from the University of Scranton, 97-48.

Number Three

When Villanova jumped to a 12-0 lead after four minutes and a 27-8 spread midway in the first half, the Mainliners were on their way to win number three.

One of the highlights of the romp was Wally Jones' arrival at the 1,000 point mark in his collegiate career. The Villanova captain hit quadruple figures with 4:39 gone in the second half on a layup, which was followed by a foul. After the successful foul toss, Coach Jack Kraft presented the game ball to the 6-1 senior.

Jones was scoring leader with 17 points followed by Richie Moore and Al Sallee with 12 each. In the process, Sallee showed remarkable proficiency from outside. Jim Washington chipped in with 11 tallies.

In for a quick layup in the Scranton game is forecourt star Eric Erickson. Erickson's hustle and fight were an asset to the Cat attack in both New York games last weekend.

Toledo, Conquerers Of NYU, Meet 'Cats In Palestra Tonight

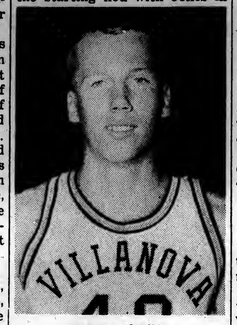
by Steve Freind

Something has to give tonight when Toledo's unbeaten Rockets invade the Palestra to lock horns with the Wildcats. Fresh off a stunning 87-74 upset of second ranked NYU, Toledo will be trying to maintain the momentum they have gained in their first six games.

Like the Rockets, the 'Cats have recently participated in an upset. The only difference is that they were on the short end of the score, a 63-57 victim of Niagara. Tonight's tilt could be a pivotal one for the 'Cats.

A second successive loss could be disastrous to the team's morale. But if the 'Cats can spin their usual Palestra magic, their chances for copping the Holiday Festival would be greatly enhanced. Their task is not an easy one.

Toledo



Coach Eddie Melvin's charges, unheralded in pre-season polls, have made it clear that they are a national power. In their first six games, their margin of victory has never been less than ten points. Besides NYU, their victims include Tulane, California-Davis, Ohio Wesleyan, Southern Illinois and San Francisco State.

The Rockets are led by All-American candidate Larry Jones. He was an all Mid-American Conference choice two years ago, averaging more than twenty points. Last year, he was forced to the sidelines with a broken wrist after playing only one game. In that one game, the 6-2 ace poured in 35 points.

Depth

Jones will have to share the plaudits with 6-6 Ray Wolford. Wolford took up the slack after Jones' injury last year and averaged 20 ppg. He set six school scoring records and tied two other standards.

Joining Wolford in the front court are 6-8 sophomore Bob Aston and Jim Cox, a 6-5 junior, who was high man against NYU with 35 points. Bob Williams, a 6-2 sophomore, will probably get the starting nod with Jones in the backcourt. Chief substitutes are 6-4 junior Bill Drenser and Jay Ball, a 6-5 senior.

Bernie Schaffer

Coach Melvin

Melvin was non-committal about tonight's game. "All I can say is that we are proud to be playing Villanova. The whole team is looking forward to the game. It should be a real good one."

In his eighth year at Toledo, Melvin is enjoying his finest squad. The Rockets are a cinch to improve on last year's 13-11 log. They also like safe bets to garner the NCAA Tournament for the Mid-American Conference. Villanova leads in the series 3-2, scoring a 73-61 triumph last year. The 'Cats game is the first of tonight's doubleheader, beginning at 7:35. Temple opposes Manhattan in the nightcap.

by Jim Proud

Villanovans last Saturday were stunned. UPI's 15th best team fell for the first time this season to Niagara 63-57. Portents of the first loss in five games appeared Thursday as the Main Liners barely edged out a 58-56 win over Buffalo.

The first was the poorer of the two halves; for during the first twenty minutes the 'Cats were totally off and the Bulls were hot. Although the score was tied at 25 all at intermission, the Bull's percentage was higher because they played a ball control game rather than slug it out off the boards with the taller Villanova team.

See-Saw

In the second half it was a see-saw battle with Hanley scoring 13 of Buffalo's 31 points to make his total for the game 25.

If there were any bright spots in the game with Buffalo, they would have to be the playing of Eric Erickson and the percentage of shots made from the foul line.

Eric, a 6-4, 185 lb. junior from Monsignor Bonner High School, was the spark who lit the offense when it was needed most. Playing for only a little more than half of the game he scored 14 points, second only to Richie Moore who had 15.

Eric's best defensive effort was the block he made with 30 seconds to go in the game. A pass was sent in the direction of Hanley, who had a shot, but Eric tapped it to Richie Moore to stop the play and save a possible score.

Foul Shooting

The other news of interest in the game was the foul shooting percentage. Making 16 of 21 from the line the 'Cats were able to break this nemesis that has been hurting the team.

In the Buffalo game it was the presence of a player that had a lot to do with the victory. In the Niagara game it was the absence of a player, Wally Jones, that had a great effect on the outcome.

Wally played for a total of only about 15 minutes out of the 40.

Unfortunate Loss

Wally's loss was compounded by the fact that he had an extremely hot hand. In the short time he was in the game Wally managed to tabulate a total of 12 points hitting 5 to 10 from the floor and 2 for 3 at the line. Wally's 12 points was good enough to earn him co-possession of top scoring honors for the 'Cats; Eric also had a 12 point performance.

Another reason for the victory over Buffalo was the team's good foul shooting but in this game it was the 'Cats inability to hit from the line that proved to be their downfall. The team was only able to hit for 12 of 21 shots while the Eagles hit 19 of 24.

Intramural Confab Decides On Replay Of Semi-Final Game

by Frank Hermes

The Intramural Staff yesterday disclosed that it had ruled that the protested semi-final game in the Intramural Football Championships between the Eliminators and the Chuggers will be replayed at a later date.

In the semi-final game played last Wednesday, the Eliminators and the Chuggers battled to an exciting 13-13 tie, a game charged with action and culminated by the protest and counter-protest.

The rift evolved from a play occuring with the score 13-12 in favor of the Chuggers. The Eliminators went for the conversion and completed the pass play to tie the score 13-13 — however the play was ruled dead by a whistle blown in error by the head linesman. The conversion attempt was ruled to be replayed. In the resulting action, the Eliminators tied the score with another successful conversion. Chugger Captain Bob Clark registered a protest to the legality of the replay. An immediate counter-protest was lodged by Eliminator Captain, Ray Grimaldi.

For Championship

The protests were brought before the Intramural Staff. The Staff announced that, in fairness to both teams, the entire contest would be replayed; the winner to face the Bulldogs, captained by Bob Shayer for the Championship.

The Staff also noted that the game will be played the next weather-permitting day, when snow is no longer a factor. The disputed game or the final will not be played while poor ground or weather conditions prevail.

Kraftmen Win NY Holiday Court Festival

Sparked by two come from behind victories over Dayton and Utah, Villanova's nationally ranked Wildcats defeated Minnesota in the finals of the ECAC Holiday Tournament 77-73.

Coming off two poor shooting games, the 'Cats Wally Jones tallied 31 points in the final to cop the Most Valuable Player Award.

The Mainliners earned the right to meet the Gophers in the finals by overtaking Dayton in the opener 77-73. More of the same came from Utah in the semifinals as Villanova again came from behind to outscore the Utes 83-76. For more on the Tournament see page eight.

IJF Winners To Play World's Fair And At July Newport Jazz Festival

"Let"s see, Kenton's number is 5461 . . . or is it 5416 . . . 4516 . . . or 4561 . . ." Eddie Bride, general chairman of the Jazz Festival ponders his dilemma in the midst of working on the festival slated for February 8.

The winners of the forthcoming fourth annual Villanova Intercollegiate Jazz Festival will be featured at the New York World's Fair this May.

The announcement, made by Director of Special Activities for the Fair, Sidney Panzer, came soon after that of the scheduled appearance of IJF's winner at the Newport Jazz Festival during the Fourth of July weekend.

George Wein, producer of the Newport Festival, had announced this promotion break for IJF late in 1963.

Kenton Out

Earlier this week IJF General Chairman Eddie Bride learned that Chief Advisor Stan Kenton would be unable to attend the Festival again this year. Personal problems in Los Angeles are making it impossible for him to leave. Noted clarinetist Buddy DeFranco will fill his role as narrator for video tapes.

Lucien Cailliet, director of Leblanc Publications, has announced that Mr. DeFranco, a native of Camden, New Jersey, and former resident of Philadelphia, will also take direct part in the proceedings of IJF.

DeFranco Performs

One of the prizes to be awarded to the winners at the Festival will be a Model "LL" Leblanc B-flat soprano clarinet.

DeFranco will perform original number on the Field House stage with a clarinet of this type, and will present the prize to the winner in the reed division. A trumpet is to be awarded to the winner in the brass division.

Chairman Bride recently released the names of the seven finalists in the February 7 competition: Michigan State, Ohio State, and Duquesne, last year's winners, will be represented in the Big Band category; Hampton Institute, Wabash College, and Potsdam, last year's "Small Group" winners, will be represented in the Combo category.

The sole vocalist will also be from Potsdam State.

Advisers

The Advisory Committee of IJF consists of Kenton; Sid Mark of WHAT-FM; Stan Getz; Bob Share, Berklee School of Music; Ira Gitler, Down Beat magazine; and John Hammond, Columbia Records. The last three were the judges of the finalists.

Other members of the Advisory Committee are Maynard Ferguson; J. J. Johnson; the Rev. Norman O'Connor; Sid Bernstein, General Artists; Horace Silver; Charles Suber, NES; and Toby DeLuca, WFIL-AM/FM.

Mccarthy Secures NFCCS Nod To VU Motion At Chicago Meet

Villanova senior Arts major, Joseph A. McCarthy, recently introduced and secured passage of an original resolution drawn up by James E. McErlane of Villanova at the Christmas meet of the regional executives of the National Federation of Catholic College Students.

McCarthy, president of the Philadelphia region, noted that McErlane had secured approval of the Student Council officers and later, passage by the Student Congress. He had also mailed copies to all Catholic colleges in the United States.

The resolution called for a reaffirmation by college students of the principles for which President John Kennedy died. About fifty colleges across the nation have mailed in adoptions.

The Chicago meeting also saw McCarthy introduce a recommendation demanding a major dues revision that would benefit the large rollege. He seeks to have a maximum ceiling of $150.00 established. From the Villanova point of view, the change if instigation proves favorable, will reduce the dues by $400.00.

The nationwide meeting also called for a stronger and more unified Catholic student voice in both campus, community and national governments.

Wally Jones Elected Villanovan Of Year; Second Score Tied

Wally Jones, captain of the 1963-64 Basketball Wildcats was elected "Villanovan of the Year" in a poll conducted by WVVU Radio.

Jim Murphy, Senior Class President and Jim McErlane, Vice-President of Student Council for Student Affairs, tied for second in the first annual voting.

The station plans an award for Jones, to be presented in the near future.

Jones polled close to 20% of all votes cast in the one-day election held in conjunction with WVVU's "1963 in Review" program. The winner was announced on the station on January 6.

Marmorstein's 'Switch Board' Next Grad Theatre Production

The Graduate Theatre Department of Villanova will present as its next Playbox offering The Switchboard, by Malcolm Marmorstein. It will mark the fourth production this season of first-run original plays.

The Switchboard will run for three consecutive weekends, January 17-19, 25-26, and January 31, February 1 and 2. Tickets can be purchased at the box office or by calling LA 5-4600, ext. 454, for reservations.

Richard F. Harshberger, a member of the Theatre Department's faculty, is directing the play. He has been working with the playwright and both feel that this new drama offers a challenge to both the director and actor as well as the audience.

Featured in the cast are: Edmund Weinheim who is pursuing a Master's degree in theatre at the University; Dr. George Spivak, a clinical director of the Devereaux Schools; and Dennis Ciesel, who portrayed Sonny in Sidney Kingsley's Night Life at the Playbox.

The Switchboard will open on Friday, January 17, at 8:30 p.m. The audience will have the opportunity of joining with the actors, directors, and playwright in a brief critique following the play when the audience can direct questions to the producer, Walter Parner, who is Associate Producer of Bucks County Playhouse.

NEW YEAR'S GREETINGS!

TO THE NURSES

When In Doubt, Bull

Courtesy: Time; Copyright: Time, Inc.

If the most popular of the liberal arts is the art of snowing the grader on exams, how should the grader respond? Last week this question cropped up in the first examination of examinations at Harvard in 25 years.

The answer given by William G. Perry, Jr., director of Harvard's Bureau of Study Counsel, is that snowbound student bluebooks should be divided into two classes.

"Bull" is opinion without supporting facts. "Cow" is facts without understanding. If the grader has to make a choice between these two sharply-drawn categories, says Perry, he should take bull every time.

According to Perry, "bull in pure form is rare; there is usually some contamination by data."

But even in its purest form, bulling "expresses an important part of what a pluralist university holds dear, surely a more important part than the collecting of 'facts that are facts', which schoolboys learn to do."

Unlike the cower, says Perry, the buller is close to behind "in a strong position to learn content rapidly and meaningfully, and to retain it.

I have learned to be less concerned about the education of a student who has come to understand the nature of man's knowledge, even though he has not yet committed himself to hard work, than I am about the education of the student who, after one or two terms at Harvard, is working desperately hard and still believes that collected "facts constitute knowledge."

CAMPUS NEWS BRIEFS

The Villanova Chapter of the Society for the Advancement of Management met Thursday, December 19, to discuss the policy concerning field trips for next semester.

Each class will have its own field trip, the Sophomores and Juniors will go to the New York Stock Exchange, and the Senior members to Schmidts in Philadelphia.

There will also be one open field trip, which all members will be eligible to attend. This will be to the Atlantic Refining Company at 28th and Passyunk Avenue in Philadelphia.

President Buckley announced that the policy is to keep the field trips closed to each class unless more students are needed to fill the exact number that are proportioned to visit a plant's facilities.

Excused cuts will be given to all members who participate in the field trips.

The Villanova Singers have announced their schedule for the second semester. It includes two concerts at Villanova, appearances at various colleges in the East, and a mid-West tour toward the end of the semester.

The program formats will consist of the Singers under the direction of Mr. Herbert Fiss, numbers by the Spires, the folk singing group, and solos by Andy Prestileo.

The highlight of the semester will be Villanova's joint appearance with Immaculata College accompanied by the Curtis Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of William Smith. Mr. Smith is the assistant conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra.

John Sperger, publicity director for the Singers, said: "This concert is the first major step the Glee Club has taken in the cultural vein, with an eye to a future appearance with the Philadelphia Orchestra. The program will feature the Bach Cantata No. 4."

The Psychology Society will have a joint meeting in late February with the Education Society.

An address will be given by Dr. Bernard B. Bonniwell of the Villanova University Psychology Department.

The Psychology Society is trying to obtain membership in Psi Chi, the national honor society and a concerted drive with this goal in mind will be carried on next semester.

The Club will continue to show films at all of the meetings and, in the second semester, will try to get a speaker of national recognition to deliver a guest lecture.

Jack Ames, president of the Conservative Club has announced that material is now being accepted for Libertas, the club newspaper.

Editor of the newspaper is Joe Ragonese. Articles concerning political science and economics are requested from anyone interested in contributing. All contributions should be left in 252 Sheehan Hall.

Dr. James Dougherty, associate of Foreign Policy at the University of Pennsylvania, and a professor at St. Joseph's College, will deliver a speech Tuesday, February 11.

The topic will be "Soviet American Arms Relations."

Ames has also stated that he hopes to bring some congressmen to speak at Villanova during the second semester.

★ ★ ★ ★

The Chemical Society will sponsor a lecture on Thursday evening February 6. Jake Brokars, Class of 1963, is presenting a representative of Union Carbide to speak of "Sales as a Career."

Opportunities will be available at this time for appointments for interviews with interested students. Refreshments will be served after the meeting.

During the spring semester there will be the annual meeting in miniature of a regular American Chemical Society meeting. It will take place in Philadelphia from April 5-10.

Reading And Study Schedules Planned By Psych Services

Dr. W. Porter Swift, Director of the Office of Psychological Services, has announced the schedule of Reading and Study Improvement Courses for the second semester.

Courses begin Monday, February 10, with classes meeting twice weekly for ten weeks. Classes are held in the Reading Clinic in the basement of St. Rita's Hall.

The primary aim of the course is to assist students to study and read their textbooks more effectively. Through specialized techniques and equipment, various aspects of comprehension and vocabulary are improved.

Students are shown how to "speed up" their reading and maintain adequate understanding at the same time. Past experience points up the outstanding progress that has been made by many of our students.

All students are urged to consider a course of this type.

The schedule of classes is:

SECTION A:
Monday and Wednesday	10:30
SECTION B:
Tuesday and Thursday	1:30
SECTION C:
Monday and Tuesday	2:30
SECTION D:
Monday and Wednesday	12:30
SECTION E:
Tuesday and Thursday	9:30

For further information and registration, please report to the Office of Psychological Services, basement of St. Rita's Hall.

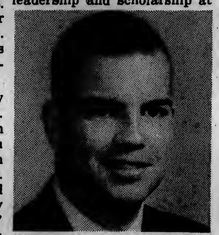
Humor + Intelligence - Art

A warm sense of humor coupled with intelligence makes Art Chappell stand out from the crowd. He might be called Villanova's Music Man.

As a four-year member of the band, Art this year was elected president of the marching and concert bands. Last year the cool trumpeter was Secretary-Treasurer. Tutoring Jackie, the band's only female member, also occupies his time.

Concentration is the key word for this talented senior. Concentrating his activities in a few major spots gives him the chance to devote time in depth to his many projects.



Villanova radio fans will know Art as the past dee-jay of such shows as "Encore" and "Night-Life", which this year earned for him the position of WWVU Program Director.

His record in the Student Council shows membership in numerous committees from the Publicity and Religious Affairs Committees in his sophomore year, to the Junior Mothers' Day and Junior Steering Committees last year, currently to the Nick Basca Committee.

This sociology major is a three-year member of the Tutoring Program and a four-year member of the Sanctuary Society.

Last year he was on the staff of Concept, and readers of the Lynx will remember his contributions in the past, as well as his short story "Who Beat Him Every Day," which appeared in the 1963 Fall edition.

His deserving record of leadership and scholarship at Villanova was the basis for his selection as a member of Delta Epsilon Sigma, the honorary Arts fraternity, and also membership in Who's Who in American Universities and Colleges. No small achievement in itself is Art's scholastic record of a 3.70 cumulative average.

This graduate of Aquinas Institute has finished with quite an honorable record. Art is hoping to do graduate work at either Boston University or Catholic University. After studying on a possible fellowship, he plans to do psychiatric case work with children.

Augustinian Fathers Began Tradition For Shamokinaki

Spanish Augustinians first entered Japan in 1603 from the Philippine Islands and established five parishes, the largest at Nagasaki. In 1614, all foreigners were banished by Imperial Edict.

By 1630 five daring Augustinians had been martyred while trying to keep alive the outlawed faith. In 1867 they were beatified by Pope Pius IX.

In 1952 Bishop Paul Yamaguchi, Bishop of Nagasaki, invited American Augustinians to return to his diocese where members of the Augustinians had been martyred.

Pennsylvanians Chosen

The Very Rev. Joseph M. Dougherty, Superior of the American Augustinians, chose the Rev. Thomas Purcell of Shamokin and the Rev. George M. Krupa of Lancaster to establish the new mission. They landed at Yokahama in November 1952. Father Krupa died on February 19, 1961 at the age of 45.

The Nagasaki mission is located one mile from the center of the atom bomb devastation. The parish is built on the site of an anti-aircraft battery from World War II. Within the parish limits from Nagasaki Bay to the East China Sea, approximately 15 miles, are 50,000 pagans.

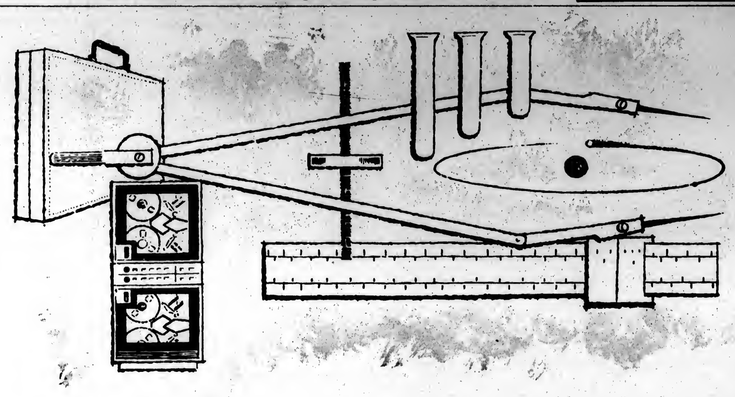
American Augustinians are on foreign mission service in Nagasaki, Hatano, Fukuoka, and Nagoya, Japan, in Peru and formerly in Cuba.

Shamokinaki is a dance to support these missions and is held annually on campus. The dance this year is scheduled for early March.

Pi Theta Chi Dance At Greenbrier Club

The Greenbrier Country Club will by the site of the annual Pi Theta Chi Sorority Dinner Dance to be held on Saturday night, February 8, 1964.

A cocktail hour for the junior and senior members of the sorority will begin at 6:30 p.m. The dinner will be served at 7:30 p.m.



Dancing will follow immediately with music by the Melody Makers.

Jeanne Burke, a junior nurse, is General Chairman of the affair. Rachael Marta, social director of the sorority, is in charge of tickets and invitations.

On the ticket committee are: Trish Berry, Pat Blake, Kathy Roos, Eileen Walters, Margie Kurewski, Betsy Grabowski, Betty Kelly, and Annette Paczkowski.

Tickets may be purchased from any of the above or from the sorority officers.

COUNT ON CHEVROLET TO BUILD THE ONE YOU WANT

ONE-STOP CHEVROLET SHOPPING never meant more than it does today. Five lines to choose from—starting with the Jet-smooth luxury Chevrolet, then the totally new Chevelle, the better-than-ever Chevy II, sporty Corvair, and the exciting Corvette Sting Ray. And you've got 45 models and 22 engines to choose from.

Chevrolet's Impala Super Sport series tops the lineup with luxury you'll love to get used to. Chevelle has the room you want in a size you can handle. Chevy II's handsome in sparkling new trim. Corvairs for '64 enjoy crisp styling accents and more power—nearly 19% more horsepower in the standard engine. The famous Corvette Sting Rays have a smoother ride and smarter interiors.

Put all this choice together and you see why you can count on Chevrolet to build the one you want in '64! And it's at your Chevrolet dealer's!

The Honeymoon Is Ending

Lyndon B. Johnson, since his succession to the presidency, has enjoyed a political honeymoon devoid of severe criticism.

But President Johnson realizes that the honeymoon will soon be over and he'll have to run for re-election on the basis of what he himself has accomplished and not on his predecessor's achievements.

Therefore Johnson sees the Tax Revision bill as a necessity to his 1964 campaign, for this most popular piece of legislation will surely impress the voters.

In order to secure a swift passage of the Tax Cut, the president has promised to cut government spending especially in the defense expenditures, thereby appeasing the budget-minded senators. This appears to be a wise compromise.

A Tax Reduction along with more economical government spending seems like a perfect solution to our economic problems until you stop to consider the incompatibility of the two measures.

The purpose of the tax cut is to increase our growth rate by stimulating investment. However the effect of the decrease in government spending will be exactly the opposite.

Will investment increase in the major growth industries which are dependent upon government contracts? There will be an increase in unemployment and therefore a decrease in consumer spending will discourage investment in consumer products.

It is evident that the ill effects of the decrease in government expenditures may completely negate the growth effect of the tax cut.

President Johnson is an astute politician and is perhaps putting his politics before his common economical sense. Johnson probably does not intend to do all that he is promising and these budget cuts might hopefully be just paper cuts.

Fatuous Reasoning

One of the reasons senator Goldwater gave for voting against the nuclear test ban treaty was that the Soviet Union, unprincipled as they are, would not hesitate to abrogate the treaty if they thought it would be in their best interest.

Last Sunday on "Meet the Press" the senator from Arizona said that if elected president he would not hestitate to abrogate the treaty if it appeared to be in the best interest of the United States.

What the senator is saying in essence is that when the Soviets abrogate a treaty in their best interest the act is evil and despicable, but when the U.S. abrogates that same treaty in its best interests that same act miraculously becomes good and praiseworthy.

Such fatuous reasoning seems to be a Goldwater weakness.

It appears that we are again entering that period of political hilarity known as election year. We welcome the senator to the campaign. It can always use a little humor.

Tasteful Memorials

Since the assassination of President Kennedy there has been a barrage of renaming and rededications of schools, bridges, parks, and streets to his memory. Many have criticized these efforts as getting out of hand.

Granted, many of the memorials have been in poor taste and signs of over-commercialization are already evident, but understandable. Mr. Kennedy was a well-respected and extremely popular president who continually sought to identify himself closely with the people.

These excesses should not discourage tasteful commemoration of those things for which Mr. Kennedy lived, and fought, and gave his life.

WWVU radio in a recent editorial suggested that an appropriate memorial, perhaps a bust or plaque, be placed at a prominent point on campus to commemorate President Kennedy's reception of an honorary degree here at Villanova back in 1957. The suggestion is a tasteful one which should be considered by the Student Council.

Human beings are inclined to forget. History will have to be the ultimate judge of Mr. Kennedy's concrete accomplishments as president. But courage in war, his passion for peace, the dynamic vigor he gave to the office of chief executive, and his devotion to those principles he believed to be right are worth remembering.

Letters To The Editor

To The Editor:

I do not attend Villanova but I receive your paper, the Villanovan regularly. In your December 11 issue there was a letter to the editor which I think deserves comment.

The attitude of many students concerning the death of the president was shockingly the same.

I am glad that someone recognized this and thought enough of this great man to say so.

DLM

To The Editor:

In the December 18, 1963, issue of the Villanovan I made certain remarks concerning the women on Villanova's campus. Apparently these remarks were taken as being insulting and derogatory. My actual intentions were only to evoke good-natured humor.

I wish to offer my apologies to any girls who were offended by these statements.

Richard Pazdan

To The Editor:

As a freshmen I strongly support the recent semester realignment as submitted by the Student Council. Even though the new system will put greater pressure on the incoming frosh, I believe that this pressure will serve the University in two basic ways:

Only the more responsible and mature student will be able to make his class commitments on time, and the relaxation period provided by the month long vacation will allow the student an adequate time of rest before he begins his next effort in education.

My compliments go to all those connected with this program. From a realistic point of view, it looks as though the Student Council has finally done something besides debate on the world shaking topic of girl cheerleaders.

President's Report

Class Attendance Proposal

by Martin McGuinn
President, Student Body

Villanova's Student Government has increasingly committed itself to greater concern in educational affairs. Legislation reflecting student opinion in this area of primary responsibility has created much attention and interest.

An effort to re-evaluate the existing class attendance system resulted in the submission to the student-faculty committee of a proposal supporting a change in the present attendance regulations.

This committee is composed of three students and three faculty members representing all the colleges of the University. Rev. Joseph J. Gildea, OSA, Vice-President for Academic Affairs, is chairman of this group whose responsibility it is to decide on legislation to be presented to the University President for implementation.

On December 19, 1963, the Committee considered the following proposal which was subsequently unanimously passed: 1) That the Committee affirm and support a change in the present system of class attendance by which it is meant that credit not be given for class attendance; 2) That the over-cut features causing class failure be eliminated; 3) That instead of a grade for attendance, the number of absences in each course will be included in the progress report and the semester grade report; 4) That all other features of the present regulations (reporting, excusing, etc.) will be retained.

The above proposal and the results of the vote were forwarded to the Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, President of the University. The Father President did not approve of such a change at the present time.

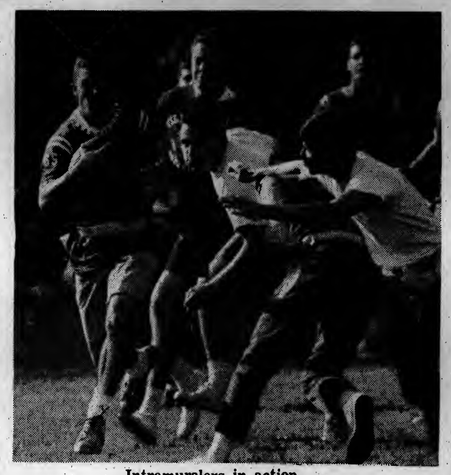
The Student Congress has recessed for the current semester and will reconvene on February 19. The first half saw greater participation in student activities, more cultural events, and many controversial legislative measures. All of this resulted in a busy year and has provided the framework for an expected productive second semester.

The most important matter pending before the Congress will be a Constitutional revision which will effect far-ranging changes in the structure of student government.

Sports For All — Intramural's Aim

by Jeff Radowich

The aim of the Villanova University Intramural Department and its staff is to provide every student with the opportunity to participate in intramural sports activities. To realize this aim requires many hours of intense effort by three full-time administrators and a whole host of student volunteers.



Director Ed Geisz is quick to give credit to the Intramural Council for the extraordinary success of intramurals at Villanova this year. This organization, headed by President Bob Shayer and Commissioner Ray Curran, is primarily responsible for officiating in the various sports. The forty-four students comprising the Council are the result of a long gradual process of elimination designed to weed out the unqualified.

Mr. Geisz became director in 1953. His job is twofold: overall supervision of the intramural program and head coach of the varsity swimming team. The intramural program has tripled under his able direction. For example, there are now eighty-six basketball teams (thirty in 1953), and sixty-one football teams (twenty-two in 1953).

Last year he coached the varsity swimming team to a seventh place national ranking; a poll of college swimming coaches earlier this year predicted that Villanova would be again among the top ten in the country.

Intramural Council for two years, Jim graduated from Villanova in 1959 as an education major. He worked as a theatre and sporting ticket manager for such enterprises as the Liberty Bowl, and various Convention Hall programs. Jim's principal responsibility is the actual intramurals, functioning seven days a week.

intramural director and the varsity swimming coach for LaSalle when he was only nineteen years old. Mr. Lumsden is a former two time NCAA All-American freestyler from LaSalle. Under his direction, the Freshman team has always had a winning season.

Intramuralers in action.

Mr. Jim Moran, twenty-seven year old local resident, is in his first full-time year as Assistant Director of the Intramural Program. Former president of the Intramural Council for two years, Jim graduated from Villanova in 1959 as an education major. He worked as a theatre and sporting ticket manager for such enterprises as the Liberty Bowl, and various Convention Hall programs. Jim's principal responsibility is the actual intramurals, functioning seven days a week.

Cooperation

Director Geisz is very appreciative of the cheerful cooperation the intramural program receives from the varsity sports.

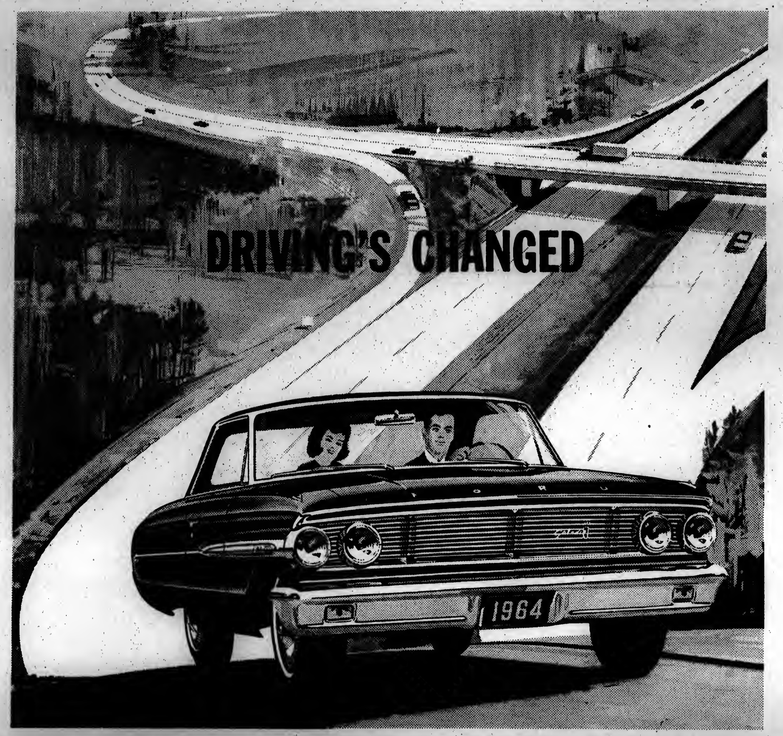
The varsity track team provides invaluable help for the intramural cross-country and track programs. Mr. Moran points out that almost eighty percent of the undergraduates participate in intramurals, as opposed to usually only sixty percent in most other schools. "This indicates the large interest students at Villanova have in the program;" he asserted "it is therefore most important that all should be treated impartially."

Coaches Bell of the football team and Kraft of the basketball team provide rule consultations in cases of protest. Mr. Geisz notes that this makes for a much fairer program: there are no snappy decisions in protest cases. In fact, several judgments of this type have switched the outcome of a game.

Girls Welcome

Despite recent Student Council decisions regarding feminine rights, the Intramural Department is proud of the fact that many girls participate in intramural activities such as basketball, tennis, hall decorations and swimming.

Naturally, because of their natural physical capabilities, there are more programs for boys. Among the less well-known are foul shooting, volley ball and golf. Jim Moran emphasizes the fact that no varsity player may participate in his particular sport, although he may play in other sports. But even here, only one varsity player is allowed on a team.



Expansion and Concern

There will be an intramural program of Bridge, Checkers and Chess in Dougherty Hall one night a week starting on February fourth and continuing for the entire second semester.

There will be no drastic expansion into new sports although the Volley Ball program will be enlarged. Senior Red Cross and Water Safety Instructor courses will be offered in the second semester, as will golf, track and soft ball.

The Directors express appreciation for the understanding afforded by the Administration.

Furthermore, as Jack Lumsden explained, the whole object of the building program is to increase the number of students attending Villanova. If the department is to be as effective as it has been this past year, the increased attendence will require more facilities for intramurals.

ONLY FORD-BUILT CARS MEET THE CHALLENGE WITH TOTAL PERFORMANCE!

Something wonderful's happened to Ford Motor Company cars! Under the freshest styling seen in years, there's a new kind of durability and vigor that more than meets the demands of today's and tomorrow's high-speed turnpike driving conditions.

What's the secret? Quality engineering for total performance. Quality engineering so outstanding that Ford Motor Company received the NASCAR Achievement Award for engineering excellence which "superbly combines the prime essentials of great automobiles—performance, reliability, durability, comfort and safety."

Total performance makes a world of difference. Bodies and frames are solid and quiet even on the roughest roads. The ride's so smooth, so even-keeled, it seems to straighten the curves and shorten the miles. And nothing matches the spirit, sparkle and stamina of advanced Ford-built V-8's and thrifty Sixes. Total performance is yours to enjoy in all our 1964 cars—from the frisky Falcon to the matchless Lincoln Continental.

lineup are 5-11 sophomore Bill Lawrence, and juniors Ken Wirell and Jerry Houston, 6-5 and 6-1 respectively. Despite yielding to the 'Cats 52-32 last year, St. John's holds an 18-9 edge in the series.

Xavier

With four starters returning from last year's 12-16 campaign, the Musketeers wield both height and speed. The height is suppled chiefly by 6-7 Bob Pelkington, who last year was second in the nation in rebounds. This year the talented senior is averaging 19.4 snares while scoring 13.6 ppg. Aided by 6-7 senior Joe Geiger and Bryan Williams, a 6-5 transfer, Pelkington will provide Jim Washington with his greatest challenge.

The Musketeers big scoring threat is Steve Thomas, a lightning fast junior with a deadly eye. The 6-1 guard is currently averaging 28.8 while burning the nets with a 50.1 shooting percentage. In Xavier's 76-75 triumph over St. Joseph's this year at the Palestra, Thomas netted 32 points.

West Chester

As far as basketball is concerned, West Chester has a good football team. The Rams have a 5-6 record with triumphs over absolutely nobody. The leading scorer is 6-5 Ron Hall, averaging 17.1.

Rebounding is evenly divided among the starters, each man snaring at least six per game. The 'Cats lead the series 6-0, scoring a 71-59 triumph last year.

Penn

Graduation has taken its toll on the Penn campus. Only Ray Carazo, a 6-0 senior, remains from the Quaker five that posted a 19-6 record and shared the Big Five championship with Villanova. The Quakers still have coach Jack McCloskey, however, and that alone makes them rugged.

Detroit

Despite a 5-6 record, Detroit could present Villanova with one of its stiffest. Coach Bob Cailhan's Titans are averaging 96 points per game, fifth best in the nation. Detroit also boasts the nation's top rebounder, 6-5 senior Dick Dzik. Dzik has 201 grabs for a 20.2 average while leading the team in scoring with 24.9 ppg.

American University

Coach Jim Williams' Eagles will be hard pressed to match last year's 10-12 record. The Eagles have had their problems this year, winning only twice while dropping nine decisions.

Jim Shickora, a 6-4 senior, is the top point producer, averaging 14.9. He is joined in the front court by 6-5 senior Carl Aspenburg and Jack Townsend, a 6-6 senior. Ron Rawlins, a 5-11 senior, and 6-0 sophomore Tony Jirorle fill the backcourt berths.

Villanova 82 — Utah 75

In the semi-finals, Villanova had to do the catching-up. A nine point deficit was lowered to one point as the first half came to a close.

In the second twenty minutes of action, the lead went back and forth until Richie Moore settled the issue by ripping of five points in 55 seconds to take a lead never lost. Moore was top-Cat with 24 points while Schaffer, Washington, Jones and Bill Melchionni chipped in with eleven each. Doug Moon led the Utes with 21.

Villanova 77 — Dayton 73

The Villanova - Dayton game was the one the New York typewriter jockeys thought should have been the Tournament finale. Henry Finkel, the key to Dayton's offense was only able to get eight points in the first half as the 'Cats left the court at halftime with a 37-31 lead.

The Finkel-led Flyers came roaring or better, scoring back in the second half, as the center began to score. The Flyers moved from a 47-49 deficit to a 64-55 lead as Finkel scored 15 of the 17 points, mostly on taps and shots around the basket.

Both Finkel and 6-2 George Izor had four fouls and the 'Cats had a time trying to get them out. With 7:37 showing, Izor fouled out and he was joined 43 seconds later by big Henry.

Villanova finally got the lead with 2:30 left on a drive by Melchionni and sewed it up with two foul shots by Moore. Finkel led all scorers with 31 points and grabbed off 16. rebounds. Melchionni as a replacement for George Leftwich had the fans on their feet as he scored 23. Jones and Washington had 21 and 17 respectively.

Jones vs. Jones Duel Highlights Toledo Hardwood Triumph

by Roy Baron

The strongest team that the Villanova Wildcats faced before the holiday competition was 15th ranked Toledo University. The Rockets, 13 point conquerers of a highly rated N.Y.U. quintet, were unbeaten at that time. The Wildcats, recent victims of Niagara had to beat Toledo, if they were to establish themselves as a bonafide national power.

This was to be the battle of the Jones boys. Larry Jones of the Rockets entered the game with a 24.7 average. The Wildcats Wally Jones, entering with only a 12.0 average, was expected to meet the challenge with one of his better performances. The result was an 18-17 decision in favor of Wally and a 63-59 win for Villanova.

Strong Defense

The Wildcat defense, as in so many games over the three years of Coach Kraft's tenure, was the big factor in the victory. At the outset the Rockets were so harassed by the Cats' zone that they were unable to hit from the floor for the first five minutes. More important than that was the fact that they only were able to get off five shots in that span.

The early Villanova lead of 7-0 was soon erased, however, as Larry Jones began finding the range. He made 12 of the Rockets' first 15 points. Although he was only able to garner five more points after that, he still proved himself to be one of the most outstanding visitors to the Palestra thus far. Although only 6-2, he managed to pull down 20 rebounds and was credited with 5 assists.

The 63-59 score was closely paralleled by the 62-59 Villanova lead in the rebound category. Jim Washington (20), Bernie Schaffer (15), and Richie Moore (11) stood out for the Cats in this important department.

Toledo's 6-6 Ray Wolford took game point honors with 20.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

by Jerry Bruderle

The Monk's Basketball team, entered by some of the more enterprizing and youthful of the Augustinians into the Intramural Basketball League has suffered its first defeat of the season. They have yet to enter the winning column.

Their only loss this year was a close one, by three points. One member of the club grimly noted that the "game was fixed" and called the attention of The Villanovan to the existence of "bad refs."

Villanova's Rifle team continued its winning streak by dumping Manhatten College to remain undefeated in intercollegiate competition.

A nip and tuck match, the outcome was decided only when the last shooter left the firing line. The final tally of scores found the Wildcats on top by a slim four point margin, 1373-1369.

Villanova's Patricia Berry, a senior nurse, paved the way for the Main Liners by posting the match's high score of 278 out of a possible 300. Backing up Miss Berry were Mike Wilhelm, Ed Casper, Joe Smith and Captain Art Blades.

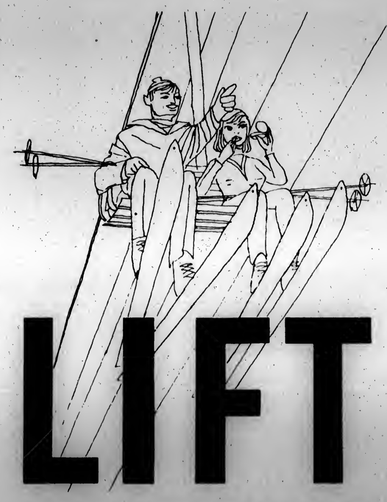
The newly-formed Basketball Club of Villanova is fast gaining recognition as the nucleus of rabid Wildcat rooters. Since the Toledo game, when the Club was first formed, attendence of the 100 members has been over 80%.

Coach Jack Kraft said he was pleased with spirit shown by the student body, headed by the Basketball Club, especially in New York over the holidays.



The Spirit Committee in charge of the Club is working on arrangements for the Villanova-Canisius away game on February 14. St. Joseph's plays in Buffalo that same night and an excursion by train for both schools has been suggested.

This will cost $26. Tentative arrangements are being made concerning a bus trip which would cost approximately $13 per person. This, of course, will depend on the reaction of the students.

The swimming team returns to action with a meet at Fordham on Saturday, January 11. This past Wednesday the team traveled to Seton Hall for their first competition in more than a month.

The Mermen entertain Army in the Field House starting at 2:30. A Freshmen meet will precede it.

ECAC Basketball Notes

by Tom Bruderle

Jim Washington must have been the best percentage shooter in the whole Tournament. The agile, 6-7 "Wash" tallied 45 points on 20 field goals in 29 attempts for a sizzling 68.9%. To complement his shooting, Washington pulled down 46 rebounds, 21 in the Minnesota game. In addition, he bushwacked an attempted Minny field goal to the side of the basket in what some fans say was the straw that broke the Gophers back . . .

Expect to see a lot more of Bill Melchionni. He tallied 23 points as a replacement for George Leftwich against Dayton, and despite his slender 6-0, 160 pound physique he loves to drive in and mix it up with the big boys under the basket . . .

Although Coach Jack Kraft hasn't had much of a bench to speak of in his previous two years, he has used the current crop well and it should improve with each outing. If any of you have lingering doubts about the soundness of Wally Jones' knee, fear not. He moves around the floor better than he ever did and in the Dayton battle, he backpetaled nearly the entire length of the court turning to his left and right. . . .

Dayton's Henry Finkel is no gazelle but for a 6-11 sophomore who is the basis of his team's offense he played well. When he had the ball and was moving toward the bucket, it took something short of an act of God to stop him. But when he had to do something with the apple other than shoot, he occasionally appeared puzzled. Villanova's seemingly frantic, pell-mell defense did little to solve his problems. . . .

Imagine a front court of 6-5 Henry Burlong, 6-11 Finkel and 6-11 Bill Chimielewski, the former Flyer and NIT's Most Valuable Player. An interesting thought. . . .

Don Yates, a 6-3 soph jumping-jack from upstate Uniontown, Pennsylvania, tallied 20 points against St. Joe's in Minnesota's 69-63 edging of the dearly beloved Hawks. He was assigned Wally Jones in the Gophers man-to-man defense but wound up being assigned to a seat on the bench; he picked up his third personal with nearly ten minutes left in the first half and had to be taken out. He fouled out with 9:21 showing in the game, with two field goal attempts and four points . . .

Jones joins select company in the MVP Club following Barry Kramer, last year's selectee. Other members included blokes named LeRoy Ellis, Tom Stith, Oscar Robertson, Tony Jackson, Elgin Baylor, Jim Cunningham, Si Green, Tom Gola (twice) and Dick Walls. . . .

Dayton shot a torrid 57.7% (34 for 61) which should be good enough to win almost anywhere at anytime. Villanova was 31 for 73 for 42.4%. The difference in the game can be found on the foul line where the Kraftmen hit 15 of 21 to Dayton's 5 for 13. In fact, in the entire Tournament, Villanova was 52 for 85 from the line while the opposition was 31 for 50 . . . Villanova's next game is against St. John's on January 18 up in Jamaica, New York.

Rumor has it that N.Y.U. has been plagued by dissension. Rumors are very often just that, but other times, well . . .

Jack Kraft on basketball ratings: "They are only for the spectators." . . . Villanova, St. Joe's and Penn will act as hosts for the Fourth Annual ECAC Quaker City Tournament to be held at the Palestra on December 26, 28, and 29. Other entrants include Illinois, Wichita, Holy Cross, Pittsburgh, and N.Y.U. The field for the 1964 Holiday Tournament (December 28-30 and January 2) includes St. John's, Manhattan, Princeton, LaSalle, Cincinnati, Michigan, Syracuse and Temple.

1964: YEAR OF DECISION

Well sir, here we go into 1964, which shows every sign of being quite a distinguished year. First off, it is the only year since 1954 which ends with the Figure 4. Of course, when it comes to Figure 4's, 1964, though distinguished, can hardly compare with 1444 which, most people agree, had not just one, not just two, but three Figure 4's! This, I'll wager, is a record that will stand for at least a thousand years!

1444 was, incidentally, notable for many other things. It was, for example, the year in which the New York Giants played the Philadelphia Athletics in the World Series. As we all know, the New York Giants have since moved to San Francisco and the Philadelphia Athletics to Kansas City. There is a movement afoot at present to move Chicago to Phoenix—the city, not the baseball team. Phoenix, in turn, would of course move to Chicago. It is felt that the change would be broadening for residents of both cities. Many Chicago folks, for example, have never seen an iguana. Many Phoenix folks, on the other hand, have never seen a frostbite.

This would not help make you NATO-minded!

There are, of course, certain difficulties connected with a municipal shift of this size. For instance, to move Chicago you also have to move Lake Michigan. This, in itself, presents no great problem, what with modern scientific advances like electronics and the French cuff. But if you will look at your map, you will find Lake Michigan is attached to all the other Great Lakes, which in turn are attached to the St. Lawrence Seaway, which in turn is attached to the Atlantic Ocean. You start dragging Lake Michigan to Phoenix and, willy-nilly, you'll be dragging all that other stuff too. This would make our British allies terribly cross, and I can't say as I blame them. Put yourself in their place. What if, for example, you were a British costermonger who had been saving and scrimping all year for a summer holiday at Brighton Beach, and then when you got to Brighton Beach there wasn't any ocean? There you'd be with your inner tube and snorkel and nothing to do all day but dance the Lambeth Walk. This, you must agree, would not help make you NATO-minded!

I appeal most earnestly to the residents of Chicago and Phoenix to reconsider. I know it's no bowl of cherries going through life without ever seeing an iguana or a frostbite, but I ask you—Chicagoans, Phoenicians—is it too big a price to pay for preserving the unity of the free world?

I feel sure that if you search your hearts, you will make the right decision, for all of us—whether we live in frostbitten Chicago, iguana-infested Phoenix, or narrow-lapelled New Haven—are first and foremost Americans!

But I digress. We were speaking of 1964, our new year. And new it is! There is, for one thing, new pleasure in Marlboro Cigarettes. How, you ask, can there be new pleasure in Marlboros when that fine flavorful blend of tobaccos, that clean efficient Selectrate filter, have not been altered? The answer is simple: each time you light a Marlboro, it is like the first time. The flavor is such that age cannot wither nor custom stale. Marlboro never palls, never jades, never dwindles into dull routine. Each puff, each cigarette, each pack, each carton, makes you glad all over again that you are a Marlboro smoker!

Therefore, Marlboros in hand, let us march confidently into 1964. May good fortune attend our ventures! May serenity reign! May Chicago and Phoenix soon recover from their disappointment and join our bright cavalcade into a brave tomorrow!

We, the makers of Marlboros, available in soft pack or flip-top box in all fifty states of the Union, wish to join Old Max in extending good wishes for a happy and peaceful 1964.

'We're Number One'

by Rusty Miller

On December 26 in a small establishment across the street from Madison Square Garden, business started to pick up about noon. A younger crowd started to filter in, one or two at a time. They all seemed to know each other at least vaguely. One of the men asked the proprietor what was attracting the crowd so early that day. Across the street, the Garden marquee read: BASKETBALL—3:45—Villanova vs. Dayton. "But that doesn't start for over three hours." "A three hour head start? That's about right for these guys."

Meanwhile you sat and stared at the yellowed picture of the boxing match in front of you. "Hey Andy what's the story behind that "Sixty-seven rounds; they knocked the ref out in the forty-second." "Howcum nobody in the picture's watching the fight, huh? Hey Andy, howcum?"

By three o'clock they were three deep. "Hey pal!" "Yo buddy!" "His name is Andy." "Thank's. Hey Andy, over here! Get him for me will you?" "Hey Andy!" And so it went!

Suddenly at 3:45 the place was empty. "Where'd everybody go?" "To the game!" "Game? What game? Hey did we come here to see . . . Oh, the game!" CRASH!!! "Here, let me help you up son. Untangle your leg from the stool. That's it." "Gotta she th' game." So, the employees rested up for the post-game show. What a show!

The Wildcats looked good but not really impressive that afternoon (or was it night? I don't remember) in beating previously undefeated Dayton.

And then the fun began . . . "What are they doing here? I didn't come ninety miles to go out with a Rosemont girl." "Well they're staying across the hall and . . ." "I don't care if . . . Wait a minute. Let's not be too hasty about this." "Get the phone!" "It's Kel! He says he's lost someplace in the Village. But he's got these two . . . " And so it continued.

The next day the New York papers began to talk about us, some favorably some unfavorably. One writer spoke about Villanova's "hot dog." Wally Jones, who played liked he was being scouted for the Globetrotters. Others commented on Villanova's unusual Jones — type defense—a frantic jumping and arm waving that had been successfully adopted by every member of the team. On Saturday the Post played up Utah's Doug Moon but finished the article by saying that unfortunately Villanova had four guards who could run circles around Mr. Moon. And they did! The Cats looked a little better that night, (to those who could see them). There was this guy behind me who was so . . . And so it got even better.

"What are they doing here?" I didn't come ninety miles to go with a nurse!" "Hey there's a party up in 1232." "Let's go!" "You can't get in it's wall to wall people. Besides there's a big guy named Smith who's playing bouncer and . . . "

"forget it. I've got the bathtub filled with ice, so bring in . . ."

By this time the New York papers had decided on a nickname for coach Kraft of Villanova. They were sure that his coaching tactics resembled "witch Kraft!" They harped of the fact that despite this witchcraft, Kraft had a problem—his team leader, one Wally Jones would not shoot. He persistently passed-off even when he had a clear shot. Well, Monday night when the Wildcats met the Gophers of Minnesota, Wally shot. He shot 12 for 22 and converted 7 of 8 free throws—high scorer for the night. That night Wally looked like the Wally of two years ago. Hubie White should have been there!

That wasn't all. Jim Washington ripped down 21 rebounds, 17 points and on several key plays shoved the ball down the throat of some hapless Gopher.

When the buzzer sounded, one side of Madison Square Garden went berserk. When the cheering subsided the team captain, Wally Jones, was called out on the floor to accept the trophy for the winning team. Suddenly a chant of MVP broke out and it lasted until Wally went back again to accept the MVP award. Somebody said Wally turned around to go back even before they announced he had won. So maybe he knew ahead of time? Why not?

It's a good thing there weren't any parties that night! The next day the papers decided that Wally wasn't a "hot dog" after all. He was a "natural." They also mentioned the Villanova fans that day. One writer said that it sounded like twenty thousand of them, but that that was impossible because there were only fifteen thousand in the Garden.

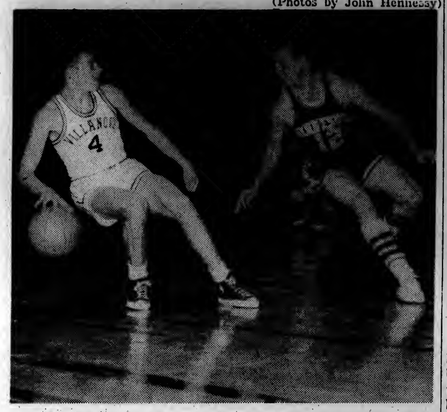
With regard to the spontaneous "we're number one" cheer at the buzzer, they conceded that we were entitled to our opinion about the team, but as far as the Villanova fans go — they were a rare and special breed and surely rated number one.

'Cat Basketball Team Sets Palestra Record In St. Francis Tilt

In a pre-Christmas encounter, the 1963-64 Wildcat basketball squad left its first indelible impression on the Palestra record book.

While romping to a 113-64 victory over St. Francis of Lorretto college, the tenth ranked 'Cats compiled the highest amount of points ever scored on the Palestra floor. Their 60 points at half-time also tied the record for total half time points.

Leftwich Pages



Leading the Main Liners' attack was George Leftwich with 21 points with Captain Wally Jones contributing 20. Three other Villanovans also hit double figures. Richie Moore hit for 12, Jim Washington for 12, and sophomore backcourt substitute Bill Melchionni for 17.

Only Al Sallee failed to enter the scoring column. Every other Wildcat had at least one field goal. The Friday evening game also saw the 'Cats hit for 48 out of 101 attempts for a 47.5 percentage.

'Cats Face Four Games On The Road After Six Consecutive Victories

by Steve Freind

It's out of the clouds and back to reality for Villanova's Holiday Festival Champions. Beginning with St. John's tomorrow night the Wildcats face six opponents in the space of 19 days, four of which are on the road.

After battling the Redmen on their home court, the 'Cats travel to Xavier and West Chester before opening their Big Five season against Penn on January 25. Following the tilt with the Quakers, Villanova hosts American University at the Field House, then travel to Detroit to do battle with the high-scoring Titans.

These six games could make or break the Villanovans' drive for national recognition. If the 'Cats can emerge from their four road games unscathed, they stand a good chance of making it to the top. Though the 'Cats face stiff competition in the season's homestretch, they play away from home only once.

A six sweep would probably vault the 'Cats past thrice beaten Duke and Cincinatti in the national polls and assure them of a tournament bid. This will be no easy task, for the opposition is brutal.

St. John's

Rebounding from a 9-15 record, Coach Joe Lapchick's charges will be a rugged assignment for the Wildcats. Despite a 4-6 log, the Redmen sport victories over George Washington, Seton Hall, Dayton and Syracuse. Their offense is built around a brother combination, Ken and Bob McIntyre. Ken, a 6-1 junior, paces the team in scoring with a 15.5 average, followed by his 6-6 brother, who is tallying at a 14.1. Ken also leads in rebounding, snaring 6 per game.

Kraftmen Cop Festival Title DownDayton, Utah, Minnesota

by Tom Bruderle

Sparked by two come from behind victories over Dayton and Utah, Villanova captured the twelfth annual Holiday Basketball Tournament at Madison Square Garden by outscoring Minnesota in the finals, 77-73. In the process, Wally Jones was named the Tournament's Most Valuable Player.

The 'Cats march into the finals was no mean trick. They had to overcome a tall Dayton five sporting an eight game winning streak and led by 6-11 Henry Finkel. Next came Utah with a nine game spree and rated among the nation's top twenty.

Villanova 77 — Minnesota 73

Minnesota fought its way into the finals with an 89-77 drubbing of Cornell and a 60-53 triumph over St. Joseph's.

The Wildcats made a switch by coming out of their customary zone in favor of a man-to-man defense to confuse the Gophers. Funny thing, because the Gophers had the same thing lined up for the Main-Liners. The game had to go three minutes before Minnesota's Mel Northway tipped in a missed shot for the first field goal.

With 1:51 left in the half, Villanova owned a 40-27 lead but the Minnies narrowed it fast on three jumpers by 6-5 Lou Hudson and a tap-in by 6-6 Bill Davis. Jones tallied 19 points in the first half as the 'Cats left the floor with a 43-35 lead.

The Gophers came back with a roar in the second half. Popping away from the side of Villanova's zone defense, Northway reduced the lead to 48-46 with the second session only three minutes old. Two jumpers by Jones sandwiched around one by Bernie Schaffer boosted the 'Cats to a 54-46 lead.

With only 57 seconds left in the game, Hudson sank a free throw and drove for two more to make the score an uncomfortable 74-71. Twenty-five seconds later Jones fouled Hudson but the big sophomore missed the shot.

Seconds later, Eric Erickson was fouled and made the first of a one-and-one situation. Washington tapped in the second try which was missed to sew the game up. Wally led all scorers with 31 points while Washington chipped in with 17. Minnesota's Indoor Track—Tomorrow!

by Joe McCarthy

A "very, very, thin" varsity track squad sojourns to Boston tomorrow for their first meet on Coach Jim Elliott's 28th indoor season. At least, this is how Assistant Coach Jim Tuppenny looks at the 1964 Villanova track squad.

Dwarfed considerably by the "We're number one " chant this season, track, nonetheless, should provide Villanovans with stars of national reputation and All American abilities.

Returning from his NCAA Cross County win, Vic Zwolak will be expected to lead the 'Cats in the Boston meet. He is entered in the mile run, an event with which he has experienced difficulty over the past two years.

But his experience while participating in the European tour last year and some good health could prove to be a strong asset for the Main Liners.

Junior Marshall Uzzle and Sophomore Earl Horner will participate in the 50 yard dash. The sprints have been sadly hurting since the graduation of Frank Budd and Otie Drayton. Uzzle, however, is counted on to provide the 'Cats with strong performances in this type of event.

Sixteen foot pole vaulter Rolando Cruz, now in his senior year, is hoping to match that height again this season. Poor practice weather will impose limitations on any expectations of Cruz in Saturday's meet.

As in the past, Coach Elliott has aligned two mile and one mile relay teams that could easily surprise. He is, however, trying to overcome the loss of Don Webster and Ron Hangey. Both were members of the very promising all-sophomore mile relay team last year.

Composing the mile relay team for 'Cats in the Boston meet will be Marshall Uzzle, Larry Livers, Stan Koslowski, and running the anchor leg, Noel Carroll. Carroll experienced a mediocre cross country season, but should bounce back strongly with the conditioning of cross country and his return to the shorter distances.

Livers will also compete in the hurdles along with sophomore Ken Congilio. Both could develop into consistent point scorers.

In the Two Mile Relay, the Main Liners will have sophomore Bob Cuban passing the baton to Senior Al Adams, to junior Tom Sullivan, and to anchor man Noel Carroll.

Sullivan who has yet to equal the expectations aroused when he came from Chicago high school competition with a 4:02 clocking in the mile, last year gained recognition in cross country.

St. Francis Defeated By Main Liners, 84-48 In VU Field House

by Steve Freind

Villanova defeated St. Francis last Tuesday, 84-48, in the main event of a variety show that gave the sellout crowd of 3200 a little bit of everything.

For pure emotion, there was the presentation of Most Valuble Player award in the Holiday Festival to Wally Jones and the triumphant return of football stars Larry Glueck and Billy Joe.

For pity, there was the sight of St. Francis' inept gladiators, quaking in the face of the Wildcat defense. And for unmigated fury, John Stevens, the rotund referee with an acute case of blindness, was in a class by himself.

Add to this the comic effect of Villanova's adopted mascot strolling out to midcourt to chat with Stevens, and you have quite a night.

The game itself was a lackluster affair, with the 'Cats toying with their conquerors of last year. Six Wildcats hit double figures, with game honors going to Jim Washington who netted 17.

George Leftwich added 15 while Bill Melchionni and Richie Moore each tallied 12. Jones chipped in with 10 markers while garnering 7 assists. In all, 11 'Cats hit the scoring column.

Terrier coach Dan Lynch was less than happy over the "enthusiasm" of the Villanova fans. As a matter of fact, he called it downright disgusting. Somehow, though, he made no mention of Stevens.

In a preliminary game, Villanova's Freshmen defeated the Temple frosh 86-65. Bill Soens and Pete Coleman led the Kittens with 22 points.

Mr. Warren Graham, President of the Middle Atlantic Chapter of the Institute of Environmental Science, presents test chamber to the Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, O.S.A., University President. Chamber was presented on January 28th as a memorial to Father President's late brother Francis X. Klekotka.

Concept Editor Norton Sets Deadline For Student Themes

The deadline for submitting articles to Concept — A Student Journal of Fact and Opinion — will be February 21. This was announced recently by the journal's co-editor, Paul Norton.

Concept was originally planned to appear bi-annually but several snags in the first semester production have resulted in a postponed deadline and just one edition.

Articles on virtually any topic are perfectly acceptable, including revised term papers. According to Norton, "these often turn out to be the best." The article is supposed to be essay in nature, well documented, and can be of any length.

Articles on philosophy, art, literature, music, religion, and scientific and political theory have already appeared in publications of past years. Creative photography will also be accepted and welcomed in addition to provocative reports.

Camus Symposium

Some titles of manuscripts already submitted and expected to appear in Concept are "The Modernity of Saint Augustine," dealing with his relevance to our times, "A Symposium on Albert Camus," "A Metaphysical Poem," and "Visions in Philosophy and Poetry."

According to the co-editors, Concept is "A chance for students to express themselves in a non-literary sense."

Material for the journal may be presented by undergraduates, graduate students, professors, and students from other schools. Norton has pointed out that only a limited amount of articles can be used from the latter three as Concept is primarily an undergraduate publication.

Manuscripts

Manuscripts may be submitted to either room 5 in Delurey Hall or the Concept box in the Student Council office. It can also be mailed in care of Concept, Villanova University, Villanova, Pennsylvania.

Several openings on the staff are available. They are expected to be filled at the next staff meeting scheduled for Thursday afternoon February 6, at 4:30 pm. in room 207 Vasey Hall. All those interested are invited to attend. Most members of the present staff are expected to graduate in June, affording a special welcome to sophomores and juniors who would like to head next year's publications.

Concept, described by Norton, "as an organ of student expression," is the first publication of its kind in a Catholic college. It has been well received since its inception three years ago. Co-editing with Norton is Pete Murray, a senior from Long Island, New York. Associate editors are Joseph Petraitis and William Iorio. The moderator is Father George P. Lawless, OSA.

Intercollegiate Festival Ready To Go With Cool Jazz-Keen Competition

by Bob Dowling and Frank Quattrone

Villanova makes its fourth annual contribution to modern jazz this Friday evening with the presentation of the Intercollegiate Jazz Festival in the University Field House. Starting time is 8 p.m.

Seven groups from the East and Mid-West will participate in the contest. Competing in the Big Band Division against defending champions Duquesne (the Ray DeFade Orchestra) will be the Phi Mu Alpha Jazz Workshop Band from Ohio State, and the Michigan State TV Orchestra.

From Virginia's Hampton Institute, the Bill Barnwell Quintet will be pitted against Wabash College's Dick Durham Trio and the Potsdam State Jazz Quintet, IJF winners in the Combo Division in 1963. Potsdam will also be represented by a vocalist, Miss Jan LeFave.

Immediately after the competition, famed clarinetist Buddy DeFranco will perform as guest soloist with the highly-touted Hall High School Band from West Hartford, Connecticut.

DeFranco, recently named best clarinetist for the fifteenth consecutive year in the Reader's Poll conducted by Downbeat Magazine, also took the top position in a jazz artists' poll conducted by Playboy Magazine.

While soloing with the Hall High band, he will be demonstrating one of the more important prizes, a Model "LL" Le Blanc clarinet, which will be awarded to the best instrumentalist in the reed category.

LeBlanc is sponsoring a whirlwind tour of the country for DeFranco, who is filling in for chief advisor Stan Kenton, as narrator for video tapes. An advertising executive for the company said that his IJF appearance is perhaps the major stop for DeFranco's tour.

The Mutual Broadcasting System will be on hand to tape the proceedings. The Festival will be broadcast on "Bandstand USA" on three consecutive programs, February 15. 22. and 29.

Local Radio Station To Tape Next Edition Of 'People To People'

Philadelphia Radio Station WIP will tape next week's edition of "People to People" at Villanova tomorrow, Thursday, February 6.

The program, a weekly presentation by WIP, will be recorded in the studios of WWVU between 10:30 a.m. and noon. The studios are on the top floor of Dougherty Hall.

Villanova students, faculty members, and other members of the Villanova staff are invited to air their opinions on any subject of mass audience interest, to the WIP microphones.

Dick Reynolds, WIP Public Affairs Director, will host the program, to be broadcast over WIP (610 k.c.-93.3 m.c.) on Monday evening at 8:05 p.m.

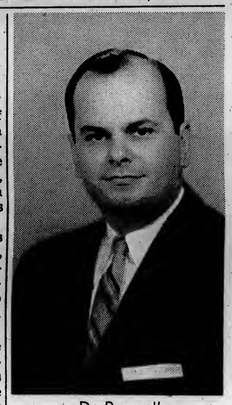
WIP and WWVU have cooperated on many features in the past, including the broadcast of the Cooper space flight last May. WIP is Philadelphia's Metromedia station.

Campus Literarians Planning Discussion Of Negro In Ferment

"The What and the Why of the Angry Negro Authors," a vital topic of widespread contemporary interest, will be the featured discussion tomorrow, February 6, as the Villanova Literary Society resumes activity.

The works of such writers as James Baldwin, Ralph Ellison, and Richard Wright will be considered in light of recent developments in the American Negro Movement for freedom, equality, and recognition.

The meeting, the first of the Society's discussions this semester on major trends and authors of the twentieth century, will be held at 10:30 a.m. in 207 Vasey Hall.



Secretary Jan Dyroff, Esq., has announced the tentative date of the Society's major symposium, "The Concept of Hell in Literature," as being Monday evening, February 17. The students will dissect the infernal works of Homer, Dante, Shaw, Sartre, and Kerouac.

For the first time in its history, the Literary Society will be inviting local colleges to attend its symposia. Members of the Villanova faculty and studentry are always invited to attend and participate.

Some officers of the club are now doing research on The Roman Catholic Index, Librorum Prohibitorum, in preparation for a stimulating and informative discussion. The time of this meeting has been set for the activities period on Thursday, February 13.

Among future programs on the literature of the twentieth century will be three on modern drama — "Avant Garde: The Theatre of the Absurd," "The Decline of the American Theatre," and "Tennessee Williams, His Mind and Art."

In the Spring, Moderator James J. Mitchell of the English Department will conduct a seminar on A. E. Housman.

Dr. Paparella

TV School To Feature Villanova Ethics Prof For Spring Semester

Dr. Paparella, associate professor of philosophy at Villanova, will appear on the TV series "University of the Air." He will begin the semester on Wednesday morning, February 5, at 7:30. The broadcast will be live from the news studio of station WFIL, channel 6, at City Line and Monument Ave.

The Course, "Ethics and Contemporary Man," will be given by Dr. Paparella for 17 consecutive weeks with each session lasting one-half hour.

Villanova is one of a group of colleges providing faculty members to give courses on this TV series which began in 1951. Dr. Paparella is the only Villanova faculty member to appear on a sustained TV series. "University on the Air" has a wide audience in the Delaware Valley.

Dr. Paparella received his B. S. and M.A. from Georgetown and his PhD from Catholic University. He served in World War II and the Korean War and has been a member of the Villanova faculty for nine years. His wife, Mrs. Julia Paparella, is a member of the faculty of the College of Nursing.

Writing Contest And Awards Announced By Philosophy Club

John Brown, President of the Philosophy Club, announced that for the spring semester the society would sponsor an essay contest. For the best essay submitted a medal will be given.

Requirements for the award state that the essay must be on the topical theme of "Philosophy and Literature, the Contemporary Situation." Length for the essay is a minimum of 2,000 words and it must be submitted before April 20, 1964.

Contestants may turn in their work to Peter Kreeft in the office of the Philosophy Department. Any member of the undergraduate body may submit an entry. In addition to the medal, the name of each year's winner will be inscribed on a plaque in a prominent place somewhere on the campus. The winning essay will be published.

Activities for the first semester saw an unprecedented interest in the workings of the society — lectures, symposia, etc. The group joined with the philosophy clubs of neighboring colleges on many instances.

Last semester marked the true beginning of a period of intercollegiate communication among the philosophy clubs. As a result the society has thrown its membership open to interested students in schools other than Villanova.

In connection with membership, the club is still accepting members this semester. Any student may join by contacting either Mr. Kreeft or Mr. Brown.

The first meeting of the semester will be a general business meeting on February 6, at 10:30 a.m. in Seminar Room 3 in the Falvey Memorial Library building.

Activities slated for the spring semester are a series of lectures. The first will be by John G. Tisch of our Philosophy Department on "Yogi and its Philosophical Implications" and will be held at a date to be announced.

Second will be by Dennis Corish ongeneral topic of philosophy and poetry. There will also be a series of symposia, one on Soren Kierkegaard and another on Gabriel Marcel.

Competition Will Be Fierce In Villanova Jazz Festival

Although the fact is not widely known, Mutual is the largest radio network in the country.

The groups, aside from the radio, television, and newspaper exposure and the chance to perform before some of the best known personalities in the modern jazz scene, will also be competing for a number of valuable prizes and awards.

Probably two of the most outstanding incentives for the winning groups will be the bookings open for the Festival winners in the '64 Newport Jazz Festival and the New York World's Fair. Following these awards, the winners will also be the recipients of the many prizes donated by various instrument manufacturer's and the Festival itself, including a cash award of $250 dollars to go to the best big band, to the best combo, and the individuals of these groups.

In addition to the group awards, there will also be a number of instrument presentations based on individual merit. The Le Blanc clarinet will go to the best reed player, a gold-plated engraved Gretsch snare drum to the best drummer; and in the brass division, a Holton trombone to the best trombonist, and a Martin trumpet to the best trumpet player.

In keeping with the Festival's aim of encouraging amateur jazz talent, there will be a Most Promising compensatory award for the non-winners in which four scholarships to the Berklee School of Music in Boston will be presented to the performers showing the most promise in the categories of rhythm, brass, reed and the best arranger-composer. This will not be a second place award, but will go to those individuals who show a great degree of potential but as yet undeveloped talent.

Shamokinaki Dance Plans Are Finalized Friend Is Chairman

The Shamokinaki Dance, the biggest charitable event of the season, will be held this year on Friday evening March 6 from 9 pm to 1 am at the Villanova Field House.

Continuous music will be provided by the Villanovans and the Revelers, a private band detached from the University but composed of Villanova Graduates, will play during the intermissions. Both groups played at last year's dance.

Tickets will go on sale in Bartley Cafeteria and the Pie Shoppe in mid February at the low price of $2.00 per couple and will be available at the door on the night of the dance at $2.50 per couple.

General Chairman for the affair is Steve Freind and moderator for the dance is the Rev. George Reilly OSA. Edward Halahan who was in charge of the Dorm decorations for Home Coming Weekend is Publicity Chairman. Jim Griffin, a former OC, is responsible for finances.

Brain Banmiller who was head of the decoration committee for the Sophomore Cotillon is Decortion Committee Chairman.

An imported Tea Set will be awarded as a door prize. There is a possibility of a celebrity making an appearance.

Students who are interested in obtaining ads which are the major source of contributions may contact Steve Friend in the Student Council Office.

On Monday, January 20th at approximately 9:05 a.m. an automobile accident involving two cars occurred at the corner of Lancaster Ave and Ithan Ave. A Villanova student or faculty member assisted one the of injured persons following the accident. The family is anxious to contact the person who extended this kindness, and has asked the Office of Public Information to attempt to locate the individual. The student or faculty member involved is asked to stop by the Office, located in Austin Hall.

Grad Theatre Presentation Opens Three-Week Run Friday

The Graduate Theatre has announced that a new play, We Shall Have Larks, will open on Friday evening. Written by Samuel Rulon of Philadelphia, the play is directed by Thomas Nevins who also designed the set.

We Shall Have Larks is a medieval comedy about love and a miracle with an unexpected twist. The playwright described his play as having a medieval milieu when "knight-hood wasn't the only thing in flower."

Mitzie Smyth will play the lead role as Modesta. She is a graduate student in the Theatre Department and made her debut at Villanova in Sidney Kingsley's Night Life.

Meehen Returns

Mike Sutherland, appearing for the first time in the Playbox, and Johnny Meehen, of Belle Masque, will have major roles in the play. Meehen last appeared in Belle Masque's production of Inherit the Wind.

Other members of the cast include Irene Walsh, portraying Madeline; Carol Schminkel, a Rosemont graduate; Mary Maezel, a Law School secretary; and Ed Weenhein, who has appeared in four Playbox Productions.

Completed Cast

Paul Buckley will portray Brother Sebastian and Eileen Shea will debut at Villanova in the role of Kunigonde. Tom Grace and Don Doyle complete the cast.

Mr. Nevins described We Shall Have Larks as follows: "Besides its frivolity, it is a play with religious overtones when it becomes concerned with the reality of relationships between internal and external values. The play should prove a lot of fun for any audience."

The comedy will be presented on three successive weekends, February 7-9, 14-16, and 21-23. Show time is 8:30 p.m.

Monthly Paper Issued By Political Union

One of the newest publications to appear on the campus is Politico, the official paper of the Villanova Political Union.

According to Sike Magro, Politico's Editor-in-Chief, this paper should appeal to anyone interested in the political and social forces acting on our nation as it presents an impartial look at contemporary issues.

The January issue of Politico was cancelled due to the semester break, however, the February issue will be doubled to compensate for not publishing in January.

Regional Convention Has ICG's Attention In Next 4 Meetings

ICG will spend the next four Thursday meetings in preparation for the regional convention to be held on February 29 at Rosemont.

The task before the ICG this semester is to draw up a model of national political platforms.

Planks will be submitted by the chairmen of the nine committees, and debated by the members.

The civil rights committee is due to report on February 13 along with the committee for judiciary and governmental organization.

This is an excellent opportunity for the new and prospective members to witness the work of the ICG.

Meetings are held Thursday at 10:30 in 105 Vasey. All are most cordially invited to lend their gracious presence to the noble minds who are working on these committees.

Articulate President

Senior Class President James Murphy is a well-prepared man for the job. From class president in his senior year at Bonner he became Secretary of his Junior Class at Villanova to Class President this year. To this job, Jim brings a ready smile, an articulate vocabulary, and an agreeable disposition.

But one may ask, "Does this alone qualify him for office?" The refuting answer is in his experience in Council Activities. Starting with his Sophomore year and the Spring Outing Committee, and continuing into his Junior year with the Charity Ball, the Concert, and the Dinner Dance Committee, Jim has been an active and quietly effective committeeman.

Jim's modesty is reflected in his attitude towards his class responsibilities. When asked how he leads the Senior Class he replied, "I regard my job as a coordinator rather than an administrator." Continuing, he said, "This is because the present Senior class is so cooperative that it practically leads itself."

But Jim has participated in extra-council activities, also. This philosophy major is a two-year member of the Philosophy Club. Last year he was a co-chairman of the club. He has been a member of the Political Union and the track team as well as the Knights of Columbus. After a one-year membership on Lynx last year, he became Layout Editor this year. His literary interests extended to O'Neil and T. S. Eliot, while he prefers contemporary music.

"A president's work is never done" is one slogan Jim realizes. He is planning participation in the Senior Dinner Dance, Parting Festival, and Fathers' Day.

When complimented on his active class, Jim replied "I feel that this is the best class in reaping the benefit of hard work." Jim's plans for the future include possible graduate works towards an MBA at Rutgers Law School. Jim has been nicknamed "Gypsy", but his hard work and responsibility spurn it.

Council Concert Series To Feature Combined Harvard, Radcliffe Singers

Harvard and Radcliffe, who have long sung together on the shores of the Charles River in Cambridge, travel to Villanova to sing on February 21.

The cause for this shift of locale is explained by noting that the Harvard University Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society will combine to give the fourth concert in the Fall and Spring Series.

The two glee clubs will offer a pleasant evening of song, singing both secular and classical works. accoustically-improved Field House provides the setting for this Student Council sponsored event.

Campus Culture Booms

Previous Concert Series offerings have brought such musical geniuses as Leopold Stokowski and Rise Stevens to Villanova. In addition, a Christmas Concert by the Villanova Singers, Band, Woman Glee Club, and Georgina Court College Glee Club, performed to a capacity audience.

Under the guiding hand of the Student Council, the Concert Series has helped to lend a more cultural aura to the Villanova scene.

Remaining concerts in the series include this Harvard Radcliffe concert on February 21 and a performance by the Curtis Symphony Orchestra on April 14.

Symphony Orchestra Date

Both the Villanova Singers and the the Immaculata Glee Club will join William Smith, the assistant conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra performing Bach's masterpiece, "Christ Lag in Todesbanden," with the Curtis Orchestra. The concert will be the first time the Villanova Singers have sung with a major symphony orchestra.

The director of the series expresses hope of continued support of the series in these final two concerts.

Dr. Dougherty Of St. Joe's Will Address Conservatives

The Conservative Club of Villanova will present Dr. James E. Dougherty on Tuesday, Feb. 11 at 7:30 in 110 Bartley Hall. His topic will be "Soviet-American Arms Relation."

Dr. Dougherty is presently professor of Political Science at St. Joseph's College. He is also associate professor in the Foreign Policy Research Institute at the University of Pennsylvania and visiting lecturer in the graduate seminar in International Relations.

Lecturer

He has served as lecturer at the National Strategy seminars and conferences on International affairs and disarmament problems at Army, Navy and National War Colleges. Dr. Doughtery also participated in strategy conferences at Arden House, 1960-61 and at Airline, 1962, besides attending the State Department seminar for Foreign Service officers.

Among his other accomplishments, he is Chairman of the Arms Control Committee of the Catholic Association for International Peace. He was consultant on NATO Political Affairs to the U.S. Army Chief of Staff from June to May, 1961 and participated in International Arms Control Syposium at Ann Arbor Michigan, 1962.

St Joe's

Dr. Dougherty graduated from St. Joseph's College in 1950 and received his Master's Degree in Political Philosophy at Fordham in 1954. He received his doctorate at the University of Pennsylvania in 1960.

He is the author of several books. His first was Protracted Conflict in 1959, followed by Morality and Modern Warfare, and A Forward Stategy for Ameirca. His latest book is Building the Atlantic World in 1963.

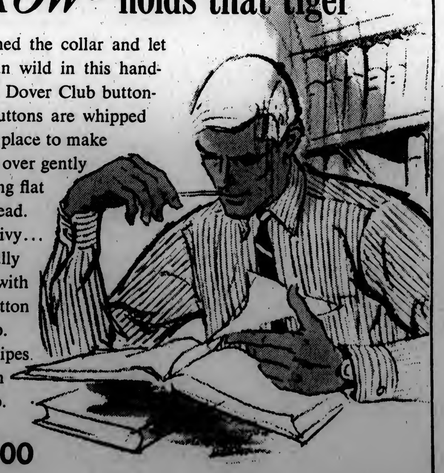
Among the magazines to which Dr. Dougherty has contributed to are Orbis, Russian Review, Vertical Science Quarterly, U.S. Naval Institute Proceedings and Catholic World.

Concert And Dance To Highlight Annual Senior Weekend Plans

The highpoint of a student's social career at Villanova is the annual Senior Weekend which will take place this year on the weekend of April 3 and 4.

The memorable weekend will commence Friday night, April 3, with the Senior Concert. The Concert is under the chairmanship of Edward Weille who has promised a prominent personality to headline the show.

As is the tradition, the Concert will be held in the University's Field House.



The Senior Dinner Dance will be held Saturday night at the Sheraton Hotel. Chairman of the event, Edward Coffey, has not announced any specifics as to the guest band.

Senior class President Jim Murphy has not made any commitments as to the personalites who will entertain the couples, but they will no doubt be in the fine tradition of previous performers at the affair.

First of a Series

An Introduction To Discussion

With the next edition the Villanovan will inaugurate a series of editorials reviewing the many diverse aspects of university life that have been topics of continuing concern.

Our objective will be not to resolve with finality, but rather to bring to the surface issues of vital concern with the view toward stimulating consideration, thought and discussion. The appraisal will neither be too general nor too particular. We do hope it will be fair and effective.

Every effort will be made in the series to lay bare the various viewpoints on the questions considered with soundness and objectivity. Criticism, if solely negative, is seldom valuable and almost never productive.

Also, the motive behind criticism is too frequently construed as malicious. The motive behind these editorials will be affirmative — to focus attention on those issues that are essential to the continual evolution of a healthy and dynamic university.

In the coming weeks we will examine areas such as student government, the value of dissent, rapport, between the student body and authority, extra-curricular activities, channels of student expression, the student-teacher relationship, and other topics of general concern.

It would be foolish to contend that there is nothing right with higher education. It would be naive to contend that everything is wrong with it. From all indications discontent among undergraduates concerning higher education exists, and to no small degree. It seems to be a common view that higher education in the U.S. is not the challenging, refreshing, stimulating experience it should or it could be.

With the first of the series in the next edition we will review the current program of extra-curricular activities, especially in terms of interest, organization, and value.

Ineffective Blockade

The incident in Panama illustrates the danger of a Communist Cuba. As in many other Latin American countries Communist agitators sent from Cuba instigated violent demonstrations.

The US government realizes that to protect this continent from Communism the Communists must be forced out of Cuba. But what has the United States done It has imposed an ineffective economic blockade.

This blockade is failing because our NATO allies do not observe it. Therefore, although Castro is currently having serious economic problems, the economy of Cuba appears to be on the upswing due not to Russian aid but to Western countries more interested in their own material improvement than in halting the extension of communism in the Western World.

If Canada and Britain would not trade with Cuba, the economic blockade would be more effective since Khruschev currently has too many problems with Russia's own economic problems to aid Cuba much longer.

United States' admonishments have been unsuccessful. Therefore we should call a meeting of the NATO nations and force them by any means available to respect out economic blockade. It would be even better if the NATO alliance as a whole declared an economic blockade on Cuba. If the western world refuses to observe this blockade, then there is little reason for continuing it.

Demoralizing

by Eugene Wicks

One of the most demoralizing things that I have noted on the Villanova campus is the ignorance of the students concerning civil rights — its moral and legal implications.

As a Catholic student and Negro, I am quite disheartened by the lack of interest in one of the most critical problems confronting our country today — not to mention the world.

If one considers a gross exaggeration one has merely to ask oneself what he knows about Folcroft, the Catholic intergroup relations council, 'SNCC' (pronounced SNICK — student nonviolent coordinating committee), of Albany, Georgia.

To further demonstrate ignorance and lack of interest in the area of civil rights, we may take the cases of two civil rights speakers who came to Villanova's campus about a month apart.

In the first case, George Shermer, an experienced member of the Human Relations Commission, opened the floor to questions and received queries which were highly indicative of the students' lack of knowledge of the Negro or the problems involved in his quest for first-class citizenship.

This brings us to the second speaker, Miss Joyce Barrett, graduate of Temple University. A Caucasian, and an active member of SNCC, Miss Barrett was asked to speak on the experiences she and fellow workers of SNCC encountered in their attempts to register Negro voters in Albany, Georgia.

In the announcement it was mentioned that she was a victim of arrests and bombings. Judging by the attendance, none of the above information stimulated the desire on the part of the students to hear what she had to say.

It is high time that Villanovans extend their activities to off-campus endeavors and display the same vigor as they do for campus activities.

To enhance or initiate knowledge of the civil rights issues and the view of the Negro on the matter, it would be well to check into the programs of the Catholic Intergroup Relations Council, CORE, SNCC, and the NFCCS (National Federation of Catholic College Students).

Information concerning these groups can be readily obtained through the department of Sociology here on campus.

Travelling Officials

Throughout the history of the world it has been the custom of governments to send repesentatives to other governments for one matter or another.

Of late, Robert Kennedy seems to have done his share of travelling and to what effect? The situation between Indonesia and Malaysia does not seem to have been resolved. Our splendid little war in Vietnam still seems to be in progress, if that is the apt term.

Perhaps it was the result of Mr. Kennedy's visit and report that enabled the Secretary of Defense to issue two completely contradictory reports on our effort against the Viet-Cong in as many days.

It is wondered if the Attorney-General's visit really had a purpose. One may make note of the crime and other matters which rightly belong in the domain of the Attorney-General and of their profusion. One may then wonder why the Attorney-General had so much time to go travelling in the southeast of Asia.

Sending special envoys abroad is an excellent idea, provided the envoys are qualified and they are sent to the right place in the right time. With hindsight we may view events since the beginning of the year that should have required a special representative of the government — Panama, Zanzibar, East Africa.

The year is but one month old. What lies ahead?

Master Schedule

The waning days of January have generally been filled with all manner of confusion, discomfort, and frustration for the student registering for the second term at Villanova.

Following an unecessarily long period of waiting — either in the cold outside the Field House or the over-heated building inside — the student has been required to run the gauntlet.

After concluding his necessary business with his adviser, he was then required — if he so cared — to step onto the stage (a most appropriate place for this activity) to learn the results of his semester's study—or lack of same.

The last step in the procession then took him to the chilly lobby of the gym, where he could find only two sets of schedules — the room listings of all his classes; provided, of course, he could fight off the large crowd of returness, all seeking the same end.

But all this — well, most of it, anyway — is gone. For a foresighted administration this year has finally managed to send out semester grades prior to registration, and has introduced a Master Schedule of courses, replete with times, places, and names of professors .

Letter To The Editor

To The Editor:

The Villanova University library has been a subject of much controversy on the campus.

Although not much can be done immediately to make the library fully sufficient, there are some improvements which can be made which will be beneficial to the student body.

Because the main rooms of the library are too small to adequately accommodate a great number of students at one time and since no student should be denied use of the library for this reason, library administrators should make all seminar rooms, not in use, available for study.

Another improvements which can and should be made by library officials is that of extending the hours of the library during the week preceding and during the week of final exams. Is it not apparent that students must contribute more time to their studies during the exam period? I am sure that the administrators of the library are aware of this fact, but yet do nothing to better the situation.

More students use the library during the week preceding and during the week of finals than at any other time. These students should be allowed, at least, two extra hours of study each day in a relatively quiet enviroment when it is most needed.

'Cardinal' Effectively Illustrates Preminger's Box-Office Artistry

by Frank Quattrone

The name Otto Preminger illuminating the upper line of a movie marquee generally spells box office smash.

Recently, as I was soaking up the atmosphere (the biting air of a wind-cut night, colorful mink stoles, and Roman collars) at the Pennsylvania premiere of his latest offering, The Cardinal, I began to wonder about the almost unfailing magnetism of the intrepid producer-director.

Reaching back among the gossamer-like reaches of a frequently neglected section of my mind, I recalled somehow the man's phenomenal unevenness in past productions — despite their showing at the box office.

Reflection on Success

After some reflection, I came up with a number of apparent reasons for his successes: a sorely negative reaction by the Legion of Decency (The Moon Is Blue); the selection of an inexperienced and totally unknown schoolgirl (Jean Seberg) to play the lead role in a major spectacle (Saint Joan); the electric-charged nature of a theme (dope addiction) previously considered unhealthy for general patronage (The Man with the Golden Arm); the hot press coverage of the Eichmann capture and trial in Israel (Exodus and Judgment at Nuremburg); and the perennial popularity of a sure-fire Heyward-Gershwin operetta (Porgy and Bess).

Three hours later, however, I realized that a combination of these elements — experimentation, controversy, and good timing — generously tempered with Mr. Preminger's inherent artistic touch, were the real reason for his past successes as well as the reasons for the current popular success of The Cardinal.

Based on the highly-acclaimed novel of Henry Morton Robinson, the film version of The Cardinal cannot fail to impress in some way each and every viewer. For it is a production catholic in appeal, and its scope — on a number of levels, is tremendous.

Traces Travail

It traces the career and internal struggles of a young American priest from the time of his ordination in 1914 to his elevation to Prince of the Catholic Church in 1939.

Mr. Preminger employs a uniformly superior international cast, tracks his technicolor cameras to no less than five locales on both sides of the Atlantic, and plunges fearlessly into a moral and social issues.

In the process we are treated to a thumbnail sketch of recent Western world history, embracing among other crises the First World War, the prohibition era, the race problem in the South, and the rise of the National-Socialist Party in central Europe. Set against a background of the Church's rites and role during this period — and tied together by the same — each crisis is tastefully handled.

The producer, a non-Catholic, is not always so successful, however, in his treatment of the moral issues — such as euthanasia, comparative religion, mixed marriage, and the like — and displays a superficial understanding of the Church's position on these matters. He often reaches suddenly for a cliche to solve the problem temporarily and then skillfully switches the scene to another part of the world and another issue.

Walk-On Star

The title role of this ambitious effort is admirably played by rugged Tom Tryon, previously relegated to secondary or walk-on parts. The first few moments are awkward. Then one quickly becomes accustomed to the nearly unfamiliar face (he is on camera for practically the entire three hours running time), and soon realizes the potential of this extremely sensitive young actor.

The problems of Father Stephen Fermoyle (Tryon) are both spiritual and intellectual. A proud, intelligent, and ambitious young man, he is painfully unsure of his priestly vocation. It had always, from his Irish Catholic youth in Boston, seemed the proper course to pursue.

But when confronted with such decisions as the life and death (in childbirth) of his prostitute sister (Carol Lynley) or her unborn child, or his inability to convince a high-ranking Vatican cardinal (Tullio Carminati) of the gravity of the race issue in Georgia, he falters in his faith and seeks solace in a rare two-year sabbatical from his clerical duties.

Collar Loosened

During this time, he takes to teaching in Vienna, falls in love with a beautiful and aggressive student (superbly portrayed by Romy Schneider), and . . . somehow . . . decides to return to the collar and Rome.

The fault of the ambiguity in the motivation of Father (now Monsignor) Fermoyle, both here and at other times, lies chiefly with scenarist Robert Dozier, who never really clearly delineates the character of the priest. Despite this deficiency — probably the production's weakest link — Tom Tryon carries off the part with unusual aplomb.

Playing With Fire

Spectacular scenes dominate the second half of the movie. At Lamar, Georgia, with crucifix in hand, Fermoyle is viciously whipped by the Ku Klux Klan at the foot of a blazing cross for his interference in their Negro church-burning and priest-beating games.

In Vienna again, he barely escapes with his life as a mob of fanatical Nazis storm and ransack the Cathedral. His cinematic spiritual adventures end shortly as he is consecrated Cardinal in Rome.

Vivid performances by the accomplished cast ably support Tryon's Fermoyle. Joseph Meinrad is excellent as the repentant Viennese cardinal whose imprudent adherence to the ideals of Hitler nearly causes the downfall of the Church in Austria. John Saxon is surprisingly witty as the willing Jewish boy (in love with Fermoyle's sister) whom Tryon attempts vainly to convert.

Carol Lynley's cherubic face is a definite asset to her role, but not sufficient enough to make her portrayal entirely convincing. Also excellent are Burgess Meredith, as a priest who considers himself a personal failure to his archbishop, and Raf Vallone, as Cardinal Quarenghi, Fermoyle's loving mentor and friend in Rome.

Oscar Performance

But cameo honors go to director-turned-actor, John Huston, a sure bet to capture a best-supporting actor nomination in the April Oscar play. Huston turns in a blusteringly magnificent portrait of the vain but lovable Cardinal Glennon, both foil and friend to Tryon in his climb up the hierarchical ladder of the Church.

His best scenes are the sensitive death-bed sequence with Meredith and his warm, eye - to - eye confrontation with Tryon as the latter announces his abdication from the priesthood.

One question remains unanswered — exactly what has Mr. Preminger tried to convey in his latest success?

There is no pinpointing the answer, for again the wily producer has tricked us into thinking about issues both controversial and timely, but matters which profoundly affect each of us today, especially in light of the recent racial violence in the South, the rapid rise of dictatorships all over the world, and the ecumenism of the Church.

One leaves the movie theatre either stimulated to thought or entertained . . . or both.

T'nT Tryouts

by Rusty Miller

This Thursday night, February 6, a tradition which was started at Villanova way back in 1932 will once again be revitalized. The Turf 'n Tinsel Club, an organization of talentless wonders, will once again begin practice for its annual musical farce. So far this year the club has to its credit two riotous skits, one on parent's weekend the other performed on request by the mother's club of St. Thomas of Villanova parish.

Tryouts

The tryouts for this year's play, will be held in the field house Thursday night (at 8:30 pm) it was announced by Vice President, Bob Spellmeyer (also known as superskier). These tryouts will include all those who wish to participate in any phase of the play whatsoever. This covers a very wide range of opportunities: speaking parts, chorus (which includes singing or dancing or both), stage crew, piano accompanyment, publicity, program and numerous other jobs.

Villanova Author

The play, as always, was written by a member of the Villanova family. This year's was authored by the well known and much liked Rev. George P. Lawless O.A.S. A member of the student body known for his campaigning, cheerleading, and all-around joviality, Pete Smith is aiding Fr. Lawless with his comic ability. The setting of the play is a western dude ranch.

"SPIRIT"

by Steve Freind

To the surprise of absolutely nobody, Coach Jack Kraft has assembled a basketball machine that ranks as one of the nation's finest. Sporting a 16-1 log and rated sixth in the national polls the 'Cats display a hardwood circus that makes them the city's top drawing card and keeps their followers hoarse.

While all this is obvious to any local sports fan, the story of the team's student support is not as evident — and just as important.

Basketball Club

Emerging from a football season that gave little occasion for cheering, Villanova students looked toward the basketball season with anticipation. The word spread throughout the campus that "this is the year." Loaded with returning talent, the 'Cats were expected to make their bid for national recognition and Villanova followers awaited the chance to give their vocal support to a winner.

Because of this campus-wide basketball enthusiasm, the Basketball Club was formed. Under the leadership of co-chairmen Brian Banmiller and Pete Smith, the club succeeded brilliantly in harnessing student spirit and using it more effectively.

Publicity

As the season wore on, Villanova fans began to attract more and more attention. Bulletin columnist Sandy Grady described them as "screaming banshees." Coach Dan Lynch of St. Francis was somewhat more caustic as he regarded their enthusiasm as "disgusting" and referred to our hallowed Field House as a "snakepit." Despite the nature of Lynch's remarks, they still must be regarded as publicity, which is always welcomed.

As a matter of fact, Villanova spirit has risen to such great heights that most impartial observers admit that the 'Cats have displaced St. Joseph's for cheering supremacy. The fair-weather throats of the Hawks have been somewhat stifled by six losses, including the Penn rout last Wednesday. At present, Villanova spirit is so high that it could be improved only by the presence of some female cheerleaders.

Berets

Another aspect that has enhanced student spirit is the newly formed tradition of wearing berets. Credit for beginning this fad belongs to a certain Wally Jones, who also has been known to play a little basketball for Villanova.

Mike Ferrara, a senior Villanova student is the man responsible for continuing this tradition. Taking advantage of the situation, Mike is selling berets at 150 Sheehan Hall. These berets sell for two prices, $1.95 and $2.95. Members of the Basketball Club can procure berets at the special price of $1.50. It is Ferrara's aim to have the entire student body wearing berets for the LaSalle game this Saturday night.

Sports Illustrated

As if in response to the spirit epidemic, Sports Illustrated has invaded the campus to do a feature story on the Wildcats. Included in this story will be an explanation of the Basketball Club and Villanova's "rare breed of fans." Photographers from Sports Illustrated were present at the American University game last Thursday. Neither the team nor the fans disappointed them.

After toying with American through a quiet first half, the 'Cats switched back to their normal zone accompanied by fanatic screaming which rocked the "snakepit" and blew the Eagles off the court. It should make for quite a feature. Possibly people will now talk about Villanova and UCLA in the same breath.

So far this year, the 'Cats have been great. But the road ahead is rugged and no one knows what the end of the campaign will bring. But no matter how the 'Cats fare the rest of the season, one thing is certain. Villanova fans will always love their 'Cats.

Caught In Passing

Hit Plays In Town

by Jan Dyroff

A Man For All Seasons, Robert Bolt's six-time prizewinning drama will return to the Walnut St. Theatre, the scene of its American premiere, on Tuesday evening, February 11, for a two week engagement through February 22.

Winner of the New York Critics Circle Prize and five Antoinette Perry Awards as the Year's Best Play for the 1961-1962 season, A Man For All Seasons stars William Roderick, Bruce Gordon, and Albert Dekker.

William Roderick assumes the robes of Sir Thomas Moore now as he did in the Broadway production of May 1963, his American debut. Albert Dekker, who plays the role of the Duke of Norfolk, has been with the company since its opening. Bruce Gordon plays Thomas Cromwell.

Initial Sparkler

This much-acclaimed drama about the clash between Henry VIII and his Lord Chancellor will be presented at evening performances at 8:30 p.m., and there will be 2 p.m. matinees on Wednesdays and Saturdays. A Man For All Seasons is the first of the sparklers on the spring stage scene. There is a second.

There is a popular superstition in the theatre that events run in threes. The creators of the new musical Anyone Can Whistle, opening at the Forrest for three weeks on March 2, are hoping that this third effort will match the success of their first two.

Author Arthur Laurents and composer-lyricist Stephen Sondheim already have to their credit West Side Story and Gypsy, two musicals that won praise for their originality and ranked high among the long-run successes of the American stage.

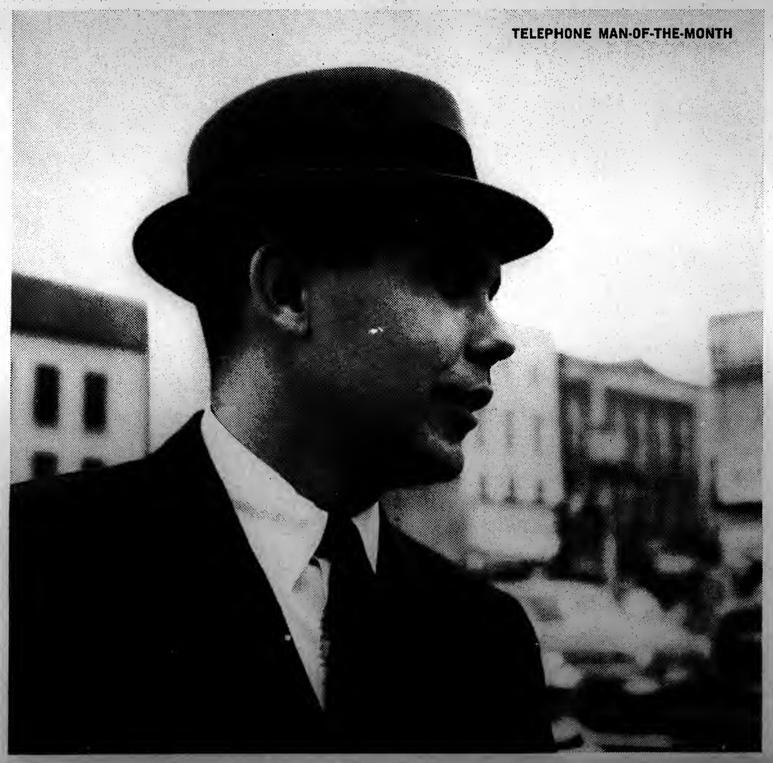
In Anyone Can Whistle, which they describe as a wild musical, the authors have the services of Lee Remick, Angela Lansbury, and Harry Guardino, three noted performers who will be making their musical comedy debuts in the show.

Laurents and Sondheim have thrown convention to the winds, as they did in their previous shows, creating an immensely comic musical free-for-all set in a bust town that suddenly booms. The cause for the sudden boom is the discovery of a cure-all by the lady mayor (Angela Lansbury).

Arthur Laurents will direct the play, as well as having written the book. He staged last year's musical "I Can Get It For You Wholesale." He has been represented by such distinguished dramas as Home of the Brave, "The Time of the Cuckoo" and "A Clearing in the Woods."

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANIES SALUTE: JACK DALY

Soon after Jack Daly (B.S., Economics, 1958) joined New Jersey Bell, he was handling the work of an Assistant Manager in a large metropolitan District Sales Office.



Responsible for five salesmen, Jack grew into his job quickly—he had to. Because he showed he could adapt quickly, he was soon assigned supervisory responsibility for 35 clerical people.

Jack next moved to a promotion which put 10 salesmen under his control in the Morristown Sales Office, a job similar to his first, but with greater responsibility. And his skilled handling of it convinced his management that he would be effective as Sales Staff Supervisor. So he was promoted to this job—his most responsible to date—and after less than two years with the company.

Jack Daly, like many young men, is impatient to make things happen for his company and himself. There are few places where such restlessness is more welcomed or rewarded than in the fast-growing telephone business.

Joe Kennedy, composer/arranger, French-hornist, and pianist in the Ray Charles vein (he dons sunglasses for his keyboard stints) is one of the most promising musicians to be viewed this year. The (Duquense) band will be playing at least two of Kennedy's compositions, and those with good memories will look forward to a repeat soulful solo which won him the "most promising bass" award last year.

Buddy DeFranco, outstanding clarinetist of the era, will be a guest soloist with high school band from Connecticut. Aside from this performance, DeFranco will narrate video tapes and present the best reed player with a LeBlanc clarinet, which he will be demonstrating in his solo work.

Pictured above is this year's edition of the Potsdam State Jazz Quintet, last year's winners in the Combo division. The group consists of (l. to r.) Russ Muesseri, tenor sax; Bart McLean, bass; leader Carl Sullivan, valve trombone; Tom Farmer, piano; and Sandy Feldstein, drums. The rhythmic section plus Sullivan also provide the background for Miss Jan LaFave, the vocalist for IJF '64.

This is BILLY TAYLOR, noted Jazz pianist, composer and arranger, and presently a New York radio announcer, a rarity in AM broadcasting (Jazz, that is). Taylor will be present as a talented observer, and will present several of the awards following IJF '64.

Blowing tenor saxophone is Ray DeFade,,co-leader of last year's winning Duquesne aggregation, which returns in the big band category under his sole leadership. DeFade is a talented musician and a fascinating writer, as will be ascertained further on Friday.

Villanovan Of The Year . . . ?

by Jeff Radowich

The smallest article on the front page of the January 10, 1964, edition of the Villanovan is perhaps the most significant. Wally Jones, captain of the basketball team, defeated the President of the Senior Class, the Chairman and the Vice-Chairmen of the Student Council, in the polling for "Villanovan of the Year."

In short, athletics triumphed over academics.

The criteria by which the poll was conducted were not revealed in the article. However, if one assumes the obvious, if one interprets "Villanovan of the Year" as the student who has contributed most to the University, then the poll and its results are indicative of a major fallacy among colleges today.

There is far too much emphasis on athletics in colleges throughout the country.

Value of Athletics

Don't misunderstand me: I'm an ardent sports fan. I've played competitive baseball, basketball, golf and football. I've run track; I've swam in competition. I realize the value of sports as recreation and as relaxation. But they are not, and cannot be, a reliable method of determining the excellence of a university. In this regard, they are meaningless.

No Connection

To say that Wally Jones has contributed most to the University during the past year is to say that a great basketball team means a great university. Yet, as should be obvious, there is absolutely no causal connection.

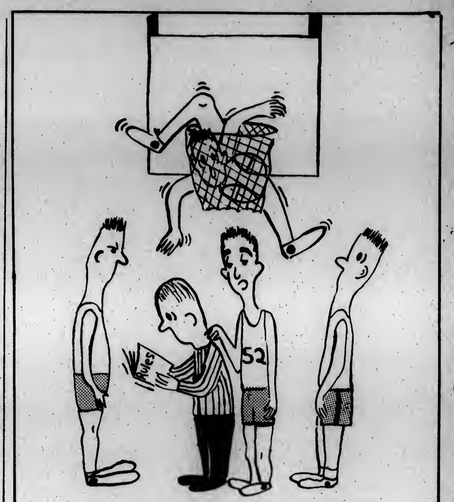
Despite the fact that Texas massacred Navy in the Cotton Bowl, Navy's outstanding reputation as a producer of disciplined men remains unquestioned.

Even in the state of Texas itself, a degree in liberal arts from Georgetown, which has no football team, is esteemed far more than the same degree from the University of Texas.

And where would you send your son to college? To UCLA, the possessor of the top basketball team in the country, or to neighboring Cal Tech, notoriously weak even in their own impotent conference?

More Emphasis

But the truly lamentable aspect of the situation is that more and more emphasis is being placed on athletics every year.



"Red-shirting", the practice of deliberately failing an athlete so he can play one more season, is becoming more prevalent.

Every June, more and more super-stars graduate without a degree.

For the first time, Princeton granted swimming scholarships for incoming freshmen. Princeton's freshman swimming team is superior to their varsity; undoubtedly, in two years Princeton will be the number one swimming team in the nation. But will Princeton's reputation as an excellent engineering school be affected by their having a championship swimming squad?

In other words, the only meaningful reputation that a school can possess is based on academic achievement and academic excellence, never on the records of its athletic teams.

Practices such as red-shirting, extensive recruiting and large athletic scholarship programs, are all manifestations of an over-emphasis, a pre-occupation with athletic matters.

"I still say it's four points . . ."

Wildkittens Win 4 Of Last 5 Games Soens, Gaidjunas And Coleman Star

by Jim Proud

Due to the success of the Varsity the frosh basketball team has been partially overlooked, but the 'Kittens are also having a fine season.

Of their last five games they have won four; beating Temple, West Chester, Penn and Temple again, losing only to LaSalle in a thriller at the Field House.

Since their loss to St. Joe's, the night before the Varsity's loss to Niagara, and since Bill Soens has donned his spectacles the team has been playing excellent ball both home and away.

Temple

In the first Temple game, played before the St. Francis varsity game, the Kittens showed their shooting potential with Pete Coleman annd Soens hitting for 22 points with Frank Gaidjunas stuffing in 14.

The West Chester game was comparable to David and Goliath where David had a hole in his sling. Winning by 91-47 the 'Kittens romped their biggest winning margin of the year, once again led by Soens in the scoring department with 19. A sub, Rich Kelleher ,sank 16 for his season high and added a spark to the frosh reserves.

Penn

The next opponent to fall under the 'Kittens claws was Penn but they didn't go down without a struggle. Losing by 42-45 at half the frosh came out in the second half to pull of a 76-74 victory over a tough Penn squad.

In this game the All-State forward from Ohio. Terry McGuire, pitched in 17 points to spur the team but again the big man, Bill Soens, was high scorer with 26.

The LaSalle game, only the second loss of the season, was perhaps the best "game" seen in the field house, varsity included, this season. Three times the frosh were down by more than eight and were able to bring themselves within two points.

At the buzzer the 'Kittens finished one point behind the frosh from LaSalle but not without a final scare for the Little Explorers.

Coleman

Pete Coleman, on a fast break, drove towards the basket trying to avoid a lone defender but because of lack of time had to rush the shot and it rolled off the rim giving the Little Explorers a well earned victory.

The fourth recent win for the 'Kittens was over Temple again by 78-77. In the game, played at Temple's South Hall gym, the frosh had to go into overtime to subdue the Little Owls.

Leading at the half 40-32 the 'Kittens held off a rally by the Temple frosh to collect their fifth win of the season.

The leading scorer for the frosh was Frank Gaidjunas who tallied 34 points bu the game winning goal was made by Dick Rago with 13 seconds to go in the overttime.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

Villanova's Ice Hockey Club lost to the Merrimack College 10-1 last Saturday night at the Main Line Ice Skating rink on Lancaster Pike.

At the end of the first period the score stood at 1-0. But the end of the second period Villanova seemed to run out of steam as they succumbed to the best team in New England. Paul Puchalik scored the only goal for the Wildcats in the losing effort and Bernie Trott, the goalie for the Cats, played probably his best game as he blocked numerous shots thrown at his cage

Probably the most significant reason for the defeat was that Villanova had been on Christmas vacation and semester break and there were no practice sessions held during this time.

Up-coming meets are with Lehigh this Saturday, Monmouth College, and the Eagle Hockey Club, which is the final meet of the current season.

The Villanova Club of South Jersey will hold its fourteenth annual banquet in honor of Coach Jack Kraft and the Villanova University basketball squad on Wednesday, April 1, 1964, 7:00 p.m. at Kenney's Surburban House, Route 70, Cherry Hill, New Jersey.

The South Jersey Club extends an invitation to all students to attend Students will be admitted for $4.60 the base price of the dinner.

Tickets will be obtainable very shortly in the University Shop.

In Intramurals, the Football season came to a close on Friday with the Championship game. The Bulldogs, under Capt. Bob Shayer, defeated the Eliminaters, 2-0 on a safety when the Bulldog quarterback dropped the ball in the end zone.

The basketball season continues with 73 teams in 8 leagues. Among the leading teams are Alpha Sigma, Staff, Charley Co., Raiders, P.W.S, Tollentines, No-Names, Rejects, Lushes, Hoopers, Swishers, and Phi Kappa Pi. The two evening leagues are virtually tossups between numerous teams.

The Chess, Checkers and Bridge games are expected to start on Monday February 12th. Anyone interested can sign up in the intramural office or in 334 Sheehan Hall.

The new officers are Bob Shayer, who repeats as President, Phil Gormley, Rick Livingston, Ray Curran, and Tim Coyle.

EXCITING THINGS HAPPEN AT FORD MOTOR COMPANY!

Good news for aficionados of medium-cubed V-8's who prefer to remain shiftless!

Four-on-the-floor is fine but not everyone's cup of tea. If you're an automatic devotee, we think you'll be cheered by what Ford Motor Company transmission engineers have designed in the way of exciting goodies to go with our new hotter V-8 mills in the medium-displacement class.

It's a spanking new 3-speed automatic drive that adds more hustle without extra muscle in Comet, Fairlane and Ford models for '64. Among its many virtues: less avoirdupois . . . fewer parts . . . smoother take-offs . . . up to 35% more go in Low . . . extra braking in downhill work . . . whisper-quiet in Neutral . . . quarterback-style passing performance!

The men at Ford who design such intricacies as transmissions are not just walking slide rules or talking computers. They're men who get excited about cars and the fun of driving them. They enjoy meeting challenges like "Design a new automatic drive with 4-speed stick-shift performance built right in." Frankly, they are among the most avid car buffs around and it shows in their work!

More proof of the exciting things that happen at Ford Motor Company to bring brighter ideas and better-built cars to the American Road.

'Cats Roll As Pennsylvania, Xavier, St. John's Fall

Villanova's basketeers opened their defense of last year's co-Big Five Championship with a resounding 72-48 shellacking of the University of Pennsylvania on January 25.

Kraft started 6-4 Eric Erickson in place of 6-6 Bernie Schaffer. Erickson took over in the key as Jim Washington moved to one of the corners and chipped in with 12 points, 9 rebounds and three assists.

By George

A rejuvenated George Leftwich scored 10 himself and played a fine defensive game The 6-0 Leftwich also went after rebounds and his tremendous leaping brought him nine snares

Wally Jones was his typical self as he poured in 20 points and received some "ohs" and "ahs" with his Cousy-like passing.

Battling a 6-7, 220-pound Joe Andrews and 6-8 John Hellings, Washington added 15 for the cause and grabbed one less rebound.

Although on the short end of a 32-27 halftime score, Penn's defense was troublesome and it promised an interesting second half.

Before 5000 screaming Xavier fans at Schmidt Fieldhouse in Cinncinnati, Ohio, the Villanova Wildcats nipped a tough Xavier five on January 18, 90-88. Sophomores Bill Melchionni and Richie Moore paced the Wildcats, who lost Wally Jones on fouls with 9:50 remaining in the game.

It was the outside shooting of Jones, along with Melchionni and Moore which kept the 'Cats close at half time, though trailing 45-43. Jones scored 19 points in 26 minutes of play, leaving the game with Villanova ahead 67-66.

From here, Villanova spurted to a ten point lead. Jim Washington's tap-in made it 82-72 with 5:13 left. This however, was the 'Cats' last field goal of the game. Xavier came back with a rush on a three point play by Steve Thomas and two field goals by Joe Geiger.

With the lead cut to two points, 86-84, and 37 seconds remaining, Melchionni made two free throws in a one-and-one situation. Thirteen seconds later Eric Erickson did the same and the lead was six points, 90-84, with 24 seconds to go.

Xavier quickly came down court and scored again. When Geiger stole the inbounds pass and went in for a lay-up, the Cats lead was again down to two points. This time, however, Melchionni tossed the ball high into the air as the seconds ticked away and Villanova had won its toughest road contest of the year.

St. John's

Villanova, with the aid of a 20 point performance by Captain Wally Jones, captured its eleventh win in 12 startts by downing Joe Lapchic's "Redmen" of St. John's 55-44 in the losers Alumni Auditorium.

Jones, shooting 9-19 from the field and 2-2 from the foul line, was pressed closely for top scoring honors by fellow backcourt ace George Leftwich, who contributed 18 points.

The Wildcats, hampered in their point output by the methodical St. John's offense, managed a 24-17 halftime lead, and continued to outscore the Redmen 31-27 in the second half.

The individual point producers behind Jones and Leftwich were center Jim Washington with 9 points (and 14 rebounds), Richie Moore with 5, and Bernie Schaeffer 3.

Hitting on 23 of 52 floor attempts, the Cats shot a respectible 44.2 percent as compared with the New Yorker's less impressive 33.3 percent (18 for 54).

The Coach Makes Success

by Jim O'Brien

The situation was late in the Dayton game in the first round of the Holiday Festival. Coach Jack Kraft, acting to combat the effectiveness of Henry Finkel, the Flyers' 6-11 pivot man, had just switched into a 1-3-1 zone.

The middle is usually more clogged by a 1-3-1 zone than by Kraft's normal 1-2-2. Not only that, but the 1-3-1 calls for less switching by the back men. A switching zone can often cause fouls. If the defensive man is too late in switching, he is caught moving toward the offensive player, a definite disadvantage. The result is often a foul.

At the time Jim Washington had three fouls, and Kraft hoped not only to bottle up the middle, but also to help Jim stay in good defensive position, and thereby avoid foul trouble.

It was a strategic move. Perhaps it even won the game, for Finkel fouled out with Dayton ahead by nine and Washington finished the game.

Just how many of the Villanova fans knew why the shift in zones was made, or even that it was? From the way they were screaming there is no doubt that they would have loudly acclaimed Jack Kraft as a great coach. Their reasons would have been two post season tournaments and a fine 40-17 record.

Ah yes! Success is wonderful. But success doesn't make a great coach. The coach makes success. 40-17 isn't the reason Jack Kraft is great. Switching into a 1-3-1 is the reason. And if lean years come, we'll all do well to remember it.

What does make Jack Kraft great? First of all, he knows what five men to play. This, of course, is an essential requisite. Next comes the fact that he is pleasant and likeable. Don't laugh, it's vital. A well-liked and well-respected coach, such as Mr. Kraft, can do wonders with the emotions of his players.

Other type coaches simply cannot. How did we beat St. Joe's after six straight losses? Wichita?? You have the answer—he had us wanting victory more than anything.

Next, comes his ability to appraise situations as they arise. One of the starters is cold, so in comes Melchionni. Bill scores 23. Great job, Bill, but also great job Kraft. Knowing when to substitute, if and when to switch zones, when to call what play, when to slow down, when to break,—all this makes him great.

But there is one other factor. He lets newspaper reporters call his defense anything they want. He wouldn't care if they called it man-to-man. Actually, however, his bread-and-butter defense, the one he uses 90% of the time, is a 1-2-2 zone.

The confusion arises from the fact that almost every game brings a slight adjustment to the zone. Manhattan rotates away from the ball,—he adjusts. Temple sends the right guard to the left corner, or vice-versa, — he adjusts. St. Joseph's keeps Wynne on the weak side,—he adjusts.

The man makes fantastic use of his scouting reports. For every game, he studies movies and goes over scouting reports with Mr. Joe Walters. The result is usually that airtight defense about which Villanova fans are so often heard screaming.

There is no doubt that Jack Kraft is a defensive coach, and there is no doubt that it is the adjustments which make him one. He'll be the first to admit that any zone can be beaten. But a zone geared to a specific offense is tough to crack.

Let's hope those lean years never come.

BSEE, MSEE, MS/Math or Physics Degree Candidates: ease your transition from college to the aerospace industry

Join General Precision/Aerospace's Training Program. Some of the most advanced, complete aerospace systems are now being developed at General Precision Aerospace's Northern New Jersey Laboratories. This has led to a major expansion in our professional engineering training program.

Flexibility is the program's keynote. Long experience with graduates proved it necessary — both from them and for us. In fact, we've found that about 70 per cent of engineers on their first job are not at all sure of the career direction they want to follow. Here you can move around. Most do.

Other advantages inherent in the flexible training program are: a project engineering philosophy which gives you a bird's eye view of both technical and administrative engineering . . . opportunity to apply theoretical analysis & optimum design techniques . . . everyday, direct contact with some of the finest engineering and scientific minds in the industry . . . advanced facilities including a new Research Center and Astrodome . . . ideal location . . . advanced study programs . . . semi-annual merit reviews . . . promotion by merit policy.

Note These Comments of 4 June '63 Graduates About Their GP/A Experiences:

From the outset, GP/A's broad digital systems held this young engineer's interest. After just six months' rotation, and gaining broad experience, his mind is made up to stay in the computer field. A stranger to this part of the state, he was particularly impressed with the abundance of well-accredited graduate schools in the area: Columbia, N.Y.U. . . . midtown New York is just 40 minutes away . . . Stevens, Newark College of Engineering are all close by. This semester he has enrolled in one of the schools — taking full advantage of GP/A's tuition refund plan.

BS, ME — Stevens Institute of Technology

Bill was in for a big surprise from his first day at GP/A. He hadn't realized that all phases of engineering, science and mathematics are utilized in an inter-disciplinary effort to resolve the numerous and diversified problems related to Space Age Advanced Systems. As a Junior Project Engineer, he soon found that he was called upon to delve into electrical and mechanical as well as structural problems. He was surprised to find himself looking into all phases of design, development, procurement, construction and even shipment of the finished product. Above all, Bill accredits his successful start to the helpful attitude of the competent senior engineers and from the excellent facilities — the technical information center, complete environmental test lab, and electronic test equipment.

From Dick's first assignment in the Computers and Controls Department, he has found that the training program has spurred his creative imagination. As a Junior Product Engineer he has attended many classes and has become well acquainted with all of GP/A's product lines. In one year's time he will have experienced four departmental rotations of three months each. Right now he's busy working with a development group studying a miniature navigational computer program. He's found the work challenging and unique in that there is a blending of ideas and design with the actual hardware. Dick gets a great deal of satisfaction from staying on "his" project from its design to its development and sale.

Norman Bloom
BS, EE — Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute

Norman started his career with GP/A during a special summer program. He attended two classes two mornings a week while working in the Guidance & Navigation Department. His work included the torquing of an inertial platform digitally using pulses instead of the conventional analog techniques. It was a "first" for GP/A and Norman received a great feeling of personal satisfaction from his own contributions. Still not sure of the exact direction his career will take, Norman is now ready to enter a completely different aspect of the Aerospace industry — Flight Control. At the same time, he is participating in a GP/A sponsored Graduate school program at Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute. To quote Norman: "I found that one way of learning is to ask questions of the engineering personnel. At GP/A they have always been willing to take time out to answer any of my questions."

Mermen Shatter Freestyle Record, Win Three Of Four, Frosh Split Two

by Jerry Bruderle

The swimming team moved toward the ECAC championship at Dartmouth and the National Finals at Yale next month with caution. After two impressive victories and setting an American relay record, the Mermen dropped an important meet to Army. The Cats rebounded with an overwhelming triumph.

On January 23 the Wildcats were asked to appear at the dedication of Memorial Hall pool in Philadelphia, in hopes of breaking the 200 yard freestyle record. The Villanova quartet of Ray Donnelly, Jack Geoghegan, Rick Girdler, and Dick McDonough responded by turning in a 1:29.4 performance.

This was 0.2 seconds better than the existing record set by the New Haven swim club in 1953-54. The same record breaking quartet has subsequently been invited at the Yale Water Carnival on February 8, to swim against a Yale quartet to again lower the mark. Earlier the Mermen defeated Seton Hall and Fordham by wide margins.

In the Seton Hall meet the Cats took 10 of 11 meets and ran up a 67-27 majority. Against Fordham, they took 11 of 11 and scored again 73-22.

The Army trip was the only trip of the year for the highly rated Cadets and they made the most of it before a Field House crowd. They swept to 63-32 victory.

The only VU triumph was the 400 yard freestyle with Donnelly, Girdler, Geoghegan, and McDonoug'. McDonough lost the 200 yard freestyle to Tony Clay whom he had beaten by ten yards last year. Dick had been sick for two weeks and will again meet Clay in the Eastern and National finals. McDonough's sub-par performance spelled the Cats' downfall.

Fast Rebound

The following day, however, the Cats rebounded with a lopsided 67-28 victory over West Chester.

The freshmen meanwhile followed the varsity by dropping a decision to Army and then bouncing back with a victory over West Chester.

The Frosh took three events against the Plebes and Bill Livingood set a Villanova pool and varsity record in the 50 yard backstroke. However the score was still one-sided, 63-27. Joe Parell took the 50 yard freestyle, Mike Kieler won the 100 yard; backstroke Bill Bohrmann won the diving event.

Livingood lowered the varsity record set last year by Jack Geoghegan at the Eastern championships. The pool record dates back to 1955 when high school champion Frank McKinney set the mark. The record was 0:58.2, 0.8 of a second better than Geoghegan's mark.

The frosh have now beaten West Chester and St. Joseph's Prep while losing to Princeton, Malvern, and Army. Scholastic difficulties have kept some of the frosh from competing.

On February 12 the varsity and Freshmen teams travel to Annapolis to face a strong Navy team. After that, the varsity has Pennsylvania, LaSalle, and Rutgers before the Eastern finals.

The Eastern championships will be held at Dartmouth March 12, 13, 14. The Cats rate as one of the top teams in the nation. On March 26, 27, 28, the NCAA championships will be held at Yale. Last year the Cats finished fourth in the national championships, equivalent to a fourth place national ranking.

'Cats Bulled Early By Rams But Rout West Chester, 78-61

by Bob McIntyre

Villanova's sixth ranked Wildcats ran their winning streak to nine straight as they took the Rams of West Chester on a long nerve-racking ride before pulling away to win by 17 points, 78-61, before a sellout crowd at West Chester's fieldhouse Wednesday night, January 22.

Scare Thrown By Ram

The 17 point victory however doesn't tell the whole story as Coach Kraft's Cats were thrown a stiff scare at the beginning of the game. West Chester came onto the court looking very high in spirit and showed it when they won the opening tap and spurted to a 9-2 lead before the Wildcats realized what had happened.

However, just as in the previous game against Xavier of Ohio, Richie Moore got hot and burned the nets for 7-9 in the first half, missing his first and last shots, and led his cohorts to a 33-28 half-time lead.

Washington Takes Over

The second half belonged to Jim Washington and Richie Moore. Moore sank 5 more jump shots for a total of 26 points. It was Washington who showed what a tremendous defensive and offensive power he is. He dunked the ball at least three times, getting well into orbit doing it, blocked at least 10 shots, rebounded a game total of 24 and scored 17 points in the winning effort.

Sixth-Ranked 'Cats Sporting 16-1 Record

by Steve Freind

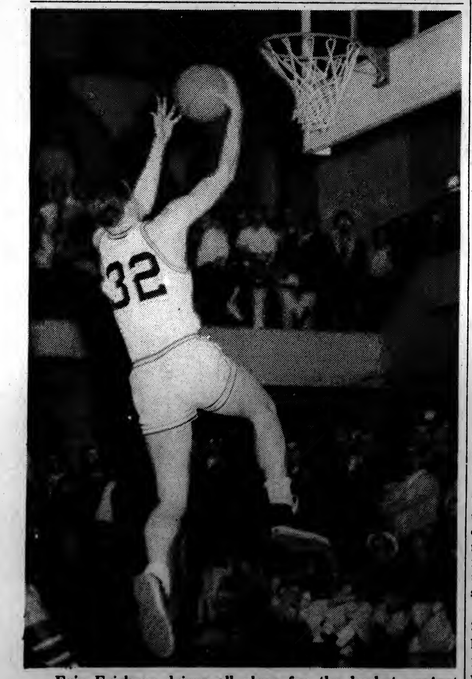
A small team blazzing with speed and a towering squad loaded with power. This is the competition that the 'Cats face as they take on the talented mites of St. Bonaventure tonight before locking horns with LaSalle's lumbering giants on Saturday.

St. Bonaventure

Torn by team dissension last year, tthe Bonnies struggled through a 10-10 season. This year, Coach Larry Weise's charges have jelled and currently sport an 11-3 log. All three Bonnie losses came at the hands of Villanova opponents, LaSalle, Canisius and Detroit. They hold victories over Xavier, Duquesne and Niagara, sole conqueror of the Wildcats.

With the loss of Miles Aikens through a knee injury, the Bonnies have been hampered by a lack of height. Center Fred Crawford measures only 6-4. Despite his size, Crawford has scored at a 29 ppg. clip while hauling in 170 rebonds. Crawford's scoring ability should present the Villanova zone with a stiff test.

The series is currently tied at 10-10 with the Bonnies handing the 'Cats a 79-58 setback last year.



LaSalle

As usual, the Explorers of LaSalle loom as a question mark. A change of coaches does not seen to have solved their riddle of inconsistency. At times, LaSalle has appeared to be the class of the East, as during their nine game winning streak. During this skein, the Explorers captured the Quaker City Festival Championship, defeating Northwestern, Loyola-conquerering Georgetown and St. Bonaventure.

At other times, LaSalle has displayed less cohesion than a high school five, as during their 58-89 humiliation at the hands of Duquesne. Overall, the Explorers' record stands at 11-5 including a 61-58 win over Penn in their only Big Five encounter.

The only consistent play that Coach Bob Walters has received comes from Frank Corace, the Upper Darby bomber who has poured in 23.1 ppg. George Sutor and Walt Sampson, the other members of their towering frontcourt, have been erratic giants.

Villanova holds an 8-6 lead in the series, defeating the Explorers last year 63-47.

Eric Erickson drives all alone for the bucket against American University. Cats won 84-49.

Kraftmen Jolt Detroit Titans After Trouncing American U.

by Ed Farrell

Clutch foul shooting in the last minute and a half of the final period enabled the Wildcats of Villanova to stave off a University of Detroit rally and garner their 16th victory in 17 games, 79-70. The action occurred at the University of Detriot Memorial Stadium last Saturday night.

With 1:42 to go in the game, the Cats were up 69-68 when Richie Moore hit one for two at the line. Wally Jones single charity toss on two attempts and George Leftwich double made it 73-68 before Detroit's Al Cech hit on a jump shot. Four more charity tosses by Leftwich then iced the contest.

The Mainliners aggressive zone defense once again made part of the difference as they forced the Titans into numerous ballhandling mistakes.

Rebounding

The Titans wound up with a slight edge in rebounding, 54-50 with 6-8 center Dorie Murrey grabbing 18 and Dick Dzik hauling down 17. Dzik seemed almost up to par despite rumors of a bad ankle sprain the day before.

The game was close until midway in the first period when the Cats rolled up five straight goals; three by Leftwich, and one each by Jones and Washington, to put the Cats ahead by 11.

From then on the nearest the home team was when with three minutes to go in the game; they came within one point of catching the Pennsylvanians Foul shooting then put the game away for the Cats.

Led Twice

The Titans led only twice in the contest, 9-8 and 11-10 early in the first period. A jumper by Eric Erickson with five minutes gone in the game gave the Cats a lead for the balance of the game.

The Wildcat defense showed signs of weakening at times when the Titans worked the ball to Murrey in the low post. However inexperience caused him to lose the ball several times and he shot only six for 19, mostly from underneath.

Last Goal

The last bucket of the game came on the out-of-bounds play used several times this season. Villanova had the ball out-of-bounds with one second to play underneath its own goal. Jones lofted a high pass to Jim Washington who redirected it to the bucket in mid-air for the game's final tally.

Leading Wildcat scoring was Jones with 21, Leftwich, 20, Moore, 18, followed by Dick Dzik, 15, Al Cech, 16, and Terry Page, 15.

In the rebounding department, the only other player in double figures besides Murrey and Dzik was VU's Richie Moore with 12. A below par performance by Jim Washington netted him only six point and 7 rebounds.

The Wildcats were 30 for 63 from the floor for a torrid 47.5 percentage, while the Titans managed only 29 for 76 for a 38.7 percentage after a miserable 30.8 per cent performance in the first half.

Playing cat-and-mouse in the first half, the Villanova Wildcats turned on the steam in the second period and clawed the Americans from American University 84-49 last Thurday in the Field House.

Managing only a two point lead at the end of the first 20 minutes, the Cats exploded after the intermission to whip the opposition 48-15 in the last period.

Part of the lack of steam may be blamed on the unfamiliar man-to-man defense utilized during the first half, but for the most part the Cats were off. A return to the regular zone at the beginning of the second half sparked the Cat rally.

Richie Moore led the Cats with 21, followed by Jones with 19, Leftwich, 12 and Washington, 10. Ben Still was high for the Washingtonians with 13, followed by Ron Rawlins with 10.

Sam Iorio (52) puts one upagainst American University. The ball failed to drop but Sam converted two foul tosses.

Wildcat Two Mile Relay Team Sets World Record In Boston

by Roy Baron

All season long Vic Zwolak, Al Adams, Tom Sullivan, and Noel Carroll knew that they could break the world record in the indoor two mile relay. What they did not know was when they would be called upon to run together.

Last Saturday night at the Boston AA games Coach Jumbo Elliott gave them the call. The result was a 7:26.4 victory, a 3.6 second slice off the previous world record.

The records was an especially fine achievement since it was set on an eleven lap track. Thus it wiped out the eight lap record of 7:30.0 set in Louisville by Georgetown, as well as the eleven lap record of 7:30.8 which belonged to Kansas.

Mile Relay

In the mile relay a brilliant final leg by Stan Koslowski brought the Wildcats a second place finish behind St. John's. Two nights previous in New York's Millrose Games the mile relay team of Marshall Uzzle, Larry Livers, Koslowski, and Carroll had finished first in its heat only to lose on time to Morgan State.

Pole vaulter Rolando Cruz reached 15-6 at both New York and Boston. It was good enough to win in the Millrose games, but in Boston Dave Tork took first place on fewer misses. Cruz had missed his first try at 14-6.

In the Millrose 1000 yd run Carroll took the lead with two laps to go but this turned out to be fatal. Canadian Bill Crothers was able to overtake the Irishman on the gun lap, and Carroll did not have enough kick left to win.Crothers time of 1:50 set an American record.

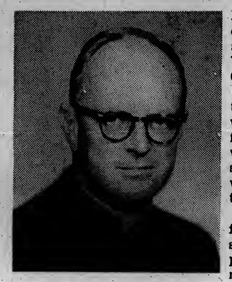
Early Lead

In the two mile relay, Zwolak, who specializes in the distance events, ran the opening leg in 1:55.1. When Adams took the baton for the second leg he had a healthy lead. His 1:51.0 and a 1:51.6 third leg by Sullivan gave anchor man Carroll a half lap lead.

Carroll put on a tremendous show on the final leg. With 13,535 fans cheering him on, he ran a fantastic 1:48.7 anchor leg. This was the fastest half mile ever run on boards with Carroll lapping a thoroughly beaten Georgetown runner.

Inquirer Games

How long will the record last? It won't be broken Friday night at Convention Hall. In the Inquirer games Zwolak will be running the two mile, Sullivan the mile, and Carroll the 1000. Thus they will not be saved for an all-out run on the clock in the relay. In fact it is unlikely that they will run as a team in the two mile relay.



However, it is quite likely that Elliott would like to get the foursome together in the New York's Madison Square Garden. The usual search for individual performances in the IC4A and AAU meets at the garden leaves only the N.Y. A.C. and the K of C games as possibilities for a relay record.

Because Carroll has an individual title to defend at the K of C meet, there is a strong possibility that the assault will be made at the N.Y.A.C. games February 13. This could be followed by another attempt two nights later in Louisville, where the previous record was set last year.

Rev. Joseph A. Flaherty Appointed Vice-President For Academic Affairs

Rev. Joseph Flaherty

Rev. Joseph A. Flaherty, OSA, has been appointed Vice President for Academic Affairs it was announced yesterday by the Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, University president.

Father Flaherty will replace the Rev. Joseph J. Gildea, OSA, who will resume studies in the field of Modern Languages in which he holds a Ph.D. The studies in which Father Gildea will be engaged will eventually take him abroad.

Villanova's new Vice President for Academic Affairs is presently serving as Chairman of the Department of English at Merrimack College in Andover, Mass.

Father Gildea will remain at Villanova temporarily until his successor becomes familiar with his new duties in one of the Administration's highest positions. The new appointment becomes effective on Friday, February 14.

Father Flaherty, a native of Philadelphia, is a graduate of St. Joseph's College, class of 1938. He attended the Augustinian College in Washington from 1940 until 1943. He earned the Master of Arts Degree at Catholic University in 1944.

In 1949 Father Flaherty took his Ph.D. in English at Harvard.

Villanova's new Vice President for Academic Affairs was on special assignment at St. Augustine's Parish in Lawrence, Mass. during his period of study at Harvard.

The Four Preps

Senior Weekend Activities Slated For April 3 And 4

Jim Murphy, senior class president, has announced that definite plans are now set for Senior Weekend, slated for April 3 and 4.

The vocal group, The Four Preps, and female vocalist Sarah Vaughn will headline Friday night's concert, while Adam Wade and his Orchestra will provide the music for Saturday night's wind-up at the Sheraton Ballroom.

The Four Preps are considered by some to be the best known and best loved of the various close-harmonied vocal groups. Their "26 Miles," "Big Man", and "Lazy Summer Night" all earned gold records on the Capitol label.

Satirists Deluxe

In addition to their refreshing singing style, the Preps are also noted for their biting satires. They have been known to mimic anything from college fads to international events in their pleasing way.

They even went so far as to poke fun at other groups in the music field in a record titled "More Money For You and Me." The Fleetwoods, The Platters, The Kingston Trio, and The Four Freshmen all incur the wrath of the Preps who, by the way, faithfully duplicate the sound of these groups in the process.

As Concert Chairman Ed Weille puts it, "The Preps alone would make for a banner concert, but the Senior Class has always been known to do things big and this concert is no exception."

Sarah Vaughn, long time television and recording star, takes a pause on the usual night club circuit to do this performance at Villanova.

Moving Style

Miss Vaughn has a sometimes dynamic, warm, & moving style and a particular finesse uncommon to the ordinary female vocalist. As one critic aptly remarked: "Listening to Sarah makes you feel warm all over."

Sarah regards each song and its lyric as a self-contained story. She becomes a teller of tales, a sensitive, impeccable, musical narrator who moves you with each offering.

Adam Wade's Orchestra is rapidly becoming one of the most sought after bands for collegiate social affairs. Though known primarily for his Johnny Mathis-type vocals, Wade has proven himself in both fields.

Party Also Planned

Ed Coffey, appointed chairman for the Dinner Dance, remarks that because of the better orchestra, and a year of experience this year's event should surpass the gala Sheraton affair of last year.

Finally, a Senior Class party is planned immediately following the concert Friday night. Several locations are now being considered with a decision soon to be announced.

Belle Masque Group Offers Several Events For Second Semester

The Belle Masque Drama Society begins its second semester with several events in the offering. Tentatively scheduled to be the major production is The Desperate Hours, a thriller from the pen of Joseph Hayes.

However, the selection remains subject to the approval of Belle Masque Moderator, Father Marshal Halphen, OSA.

In a related development it has been announced that this semester's major production will be presented on two successive weekends. The dates are set for April 10-11 and April 17-18, in Vasey Hall Auditorium.

Auditions

Auditions are scheduled, again tentatively, for later in this month or in the early weeks of March. These will be announced in the Villanovan.

Jim Mason, the drama society's president, has announced that the organization also hopes to present two one-act plays. One is to be a part of the Chestnut Hill Drama Festival. The latter is to be performed for the Pennsylvania State Education Association Convention.

Communion Breakfast

The annual Belle Masque Communion Breakfast is slated to be held in early March, while the group's dinner dance will be held in late May. The senior awards will be distributed at the dinner dance.

Membership Open

In light of the society's announced plans for this semester, Mason has pointed out that membership is open to all undergraduates. The next meeting will be held on Thursday, February 20, in 102 Classroom Annex.

Student Council Day's Goal: Greater Student Participation

In order to promote greater student interests and more active participation in student government, the Student Council will hold a special Student Council Day on Wednesday Feb. 19.

The special aim of this project, as announced by Tom Furst, Student Council vice-chairman and chairman of the affair, is to acquaint the students with the activities, achievements, problems and goals of the Student Council.

Tom Furst

It is felt that there is a severe lack of interest and most probably a misunderstanding conconcerning the Council in general. This problem must be alleviated since the Student Council is the strongest and most effective student organization on campus.

This has been a problem in many universities and has come to the attention of a few nationwide magazines which have expressed an interest in featuring this problem using Villanova as a focal point.

The Student Council day will be aimed at making the Council more accessible to the students. A display will be set up in Dougherty Hall from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. to explain the organizational set-up of the Council through charts and posters as well as display the minutes of past meetings.

A representative will be on hand to answer any questions the students may have.

The entire day's program will center around the Student Council meeting at 6:30 p.m. in Dougherty's East Lounge. The meeting will be broadcast on WWVU and plans call for an address by the Rev. Robert Welsh, OSA, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences.

The Student Council has invited the heads of student government from neighboring colleges to discuss this problem of a lack of student interest in student government affairs, and means of solving it.

Many important motions are presently under consideration by the Council and will be discussed and voted on. All students are urged to attend, since any member of the student body is entitled to speak on the floor of the Council.

Those students who attend the Student Council Day will be able to vote intelligently in the upcoming elections. The Council feels that well-informed students will be in a better position to choose a candidate who is fully qualified for office.

Thus, this will improve the quality of student government and increase the communication between the government and the student body.

Commonwealth Provides Jobs For Interested College Grads

One area of employment which has gained tremendous impetus in the last decade is state government service. Yet, comparatively few college students know even the basic facts about their state government and the career opportunities in it.

The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania employs over 80,000 persons, 50,000 of whom have civil service status. These employees work in over 1,000 different classes of positions in many diverse fields.

Social Welfare, administration, business, forestry, agriculture, education, public health, and highways are a few of the occupational areas of your state government.

Within the occupational structure the college graduate will find some 55 entry-level positions for which he can qualify according to his major course of study.

The opportunity to help fellow citizens and concurrently develop professionally is outstanding. The Commonwealth recognizes that professional development is one of the major aspirations of ambitious young men and women. The opportunity to work with qualified, competent personnel will help to attain professional growth. Formal training is also considered in helping a person develop.

Accordingly, agencies have planned training programs to this end consisting usually of lectures, outside courses, on the job training and, in some instances, higher educational programs leading to a masters degree.

Commonwealth employees command salaries comparable to any other type of employment. In addition, substantial increments are given annually, contingent upon the satisfactory performance of duties.

Annual leave and paid holidays amount to 28 days. Fifteen days of sick leave are granted annually. Generally, Commonwealth employees work five days a week, 7½ hours a day. Usual hospital and medical deductions are made for employees participating in these plans. State employees belong to a combined Social Security and State Employees Retirement Plan which ultimately provides a high retirement income according to years of service, age and salary.

Generally about the same type of employee benefits are found in government as in other types of employment.

Students interested in careers with the Commonwealth may meet with the Commonwealth's Civil Service representative on campus. Examinations in certain fields may be given on campus provided significant interest is obtained. See your Placement Officer or write to the Bureau of Recruitment and Training, Pennsylvania State Civil Service Commission, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania for further information.

Student Commentary Prompts WIP Radio To Feature Two Shows

Comments from Villanova students were so good last Thursday that WIP has decided to use the tapes made as the basis for two editions of "People to People."

Dick Reynolds, WIP public affairs director, spent close to three hours at the studios of WWVU taping the feelings of several students.

The response was so good that Reynolds, on the spot, decided to use the comments as the basis for the "People to People" presentations on February 10 and 17. The program is heard at 8:05 p.m., on WIP.

Main topics included the candidacy of William Green III, 25, a student at the Villanova Law School.

'Four Days' Chronicles Shocking Kennedy Assassination News

Four Days the historical record of the assassination of President Kennedy and the events that followed is now on sale on campus, as a joint venture of the Student Council and Radio station WWVU.

The book, the first hard covered compilation of the events of November 22-25, 1963, is published by American Heritage from materials supplied by United Press International.

Student Council Office

For sale at $2.00 a copy, the book may be purchased in the Student Council office on the second floor of Dougherty Hall. The book goes on general sale later this month, it will cost $2.95 in book stores.

Illustrated profusely with UPI newsphotos, the 143 page historical record includes reproductions of color movies of the actual assassination.

Exclusive Photos

These are exclusive UPI pictures, different from those featured in a recent magazine article.

Bruce Catton, senior editor of The American Heritage Magazine, wrote the introduction. Other writing was done by UPI staffers including the dean of White House reporters, Merriman Smith.

Limited Supply

Also included is a reproduction of the most dramatic wire service copy ever moved by UPI to WWVU: The original flash from Dallas, along with the copy that followed for the next several minutes.

Many of the dramatic pictures are printed for the first time in this book.

Only a limited number of copies is available at the special price.

Villanova Symphonic Band To Perform At World's Fair

The Villanova Symphonic Band has been invited to perform a concert at the New York World's Fair on May 11. This concerts will close a season highlighted by concerts at several girls' colleges and a tour to the nation's Capitol.

The Executive Committee of the Band has accepted the Fair Committee's invitation to play a one hour concert in the special band "shell" on the fair grounds and to spend the remainder of the day touring the exhibits.

This invitation is indicative of the strides in both music and musicianship which the Band has made in the past two years.

Spirit Abounds

To a great extent, this honor has been made possible by the spirit and dedication of the members themselves. Although relatively small in numbers — 50 guys and a girl, its public influence as an extension of the University should not be overlooked.

A division of the Villanova University Bands, the Symphonic, or Concert, Band relies heavily upon the Marching Band for its best musical talent. New members are now being accepted, however.

Students, both male and FEMALE, wishing to join the Symphonic Band or to receive more information should contact Art Chappell in 119 Sheehan Hall or come to the Band Room in the Classroom Annex any Monday or Wednesday night between 6 p.m. and 8 p.m.

Marine Corps Officer To Conduct Interview Of Officer Candidates

The Marine Corps Officer Selection Officer will be on campus February 17, 18, 19, 20, 1964 to interview students for Marine Officer Training Programs. The Officer Selection Team will be at Dougherty Hall to provide information and interview applicants.

All Marine officer training is conducted at Quantico, Virginia. Qualified seniors who accept the challenge of Marine Leadership training will be draft deferred upon enrollment until they have met the requirements for their degree and graduate. Upon graduation they will attend a 10 week training course and then be commssioned.

Qualified applicants may choose to go on to Marine flight training, after commissioning, to win the coveted 'Wings of Gold" of a leatherneck pilot.

Beta Gamma Society Plans Top Competition In Second Semester

The Beta Gamma Debating Society has added a number of top quality tournaments to their second semester schedule. On February 14, Terry McStravick, John Fitzpatrick, Terry McGinley, and Carl Green will compete in the Rutgers Debate Tournament at Rutgers.

Other upcoming tournaments include Capitol Hill Tournament at the University of Maryland, February 21-22, Liberty Bell Tournament at Penn, February 28-29, United States Naval Academy Debate Tournament, February 28-29, Cherry Blossom Tournament at Georgetown, March 6, 7, 8, the National Novice Tournament at Wayne State, March 6, 7, and the District VII finals at Penn, March 13, 14.

On January 30, Joe Rohrer and Terry Cooney represented Villanova at the Harvard Invitational Tourney. They posted a 4-4 record to place 40th out of a field of 116. The freshmen team competed in a varsity tournament at the College of William and Mary on the same weekend.

Harvard And Radcliffe Grace Concert Series Bill

The Concert Series will present a concert by the Harvard University Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society at Villanova on February 21. The two glee clubs will combine to give a concert of both secular and classical works in the accoustically-improvised Field House.

Other Concert Series have included Leopold Stokowski and Rise Stevens. A capacity audience heard a Christmas Concert by the Villanova Singers, Band, Women"s Glee Club and the Georgian Court College Glee Club.

Remaining concerts in the series include the concert on February 21, and a performance by the Curtis Symphony Orchestra on April 14. The Concert Series, sponsored by the Student Council, has provided Villanova with a cultural aura.

The Immaculata Glee Club and the Villanova Singers will assist William Smith, the assistant conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra. Mr. Smith will perform Bach's masterpiece, "Christ Lag In Todesbanden," with the Curtis Orchestra. This concert will be the first time the Villanova Singers have sung with a major symphony orchestra.

Twelfth Annual Shamokinaki To Take Place Friday, March 6

Steve Freind, chairman of the forthcoming Shamokinaki Dance, has announced that the event will take place on March 6.

The dance, held for the benefit of the Augustinian Missions in Japan, has been a tradition at Villanova for the past twelve years. Father George F. Riley, OSA, is the moderator of the affair.

Tickets for the event will be sold from 9:30 a.m. until 2:30 p.m. in the Pie Shoppe and in Bartley Cafeteria at $2.50 until March 4. Tickets purchased after this date will be $3.00.

Committees for the Shamokinaki Dance include: finance headed by Jim Griffin; publicity under Ed Hallahan; tickets run by Jim Morgan; refreshments handled by Bob McIntyre; and the committees for coats and patrons headed by Bob Cowan and Betsy Grabowski, respectively.

Brian Banmiller is chairman of the decorations committee for the dance.

Revelers Entertain

Entertainment for the dance will be provided by the Revelers alternating with the Villanovans for continous music throughout the evening. Both groups have offered to perform for half their normal fee in view of the charitable nature of the dance.

Drawing To Be Held

There will also be chances sold for a drawing to be held at the dance. The prize, donated by Dieges and Clust Jewlers, will be one of the following: a Linde Star Sapphire valued at $75.00 or a 15 point diamond valued at $60.00 either to be placed in the winner's class ring.

If the winner has not as yet acquired his class ring he may put the value of the sapphire toward the purchase of his ring, or have the diamond or sapphire placed in his ring when he purchases it.

Grad Theatre Plans Premiere Of John Arden's 'Happy Haven'

The Graduate Theatre department, currently involved in the production of We Shall Have Larks, has just announced plans for an exclusive American premiere of a new British play and for the initiation of a lecture series hosting some of the outstanding figures of contemporary American theatre.

The play described by faculty director Mr. Richard Duprey as "definite break" for the Graduate Theater, will be British playwright John Arden's work, The Happy Haven.

The production. which has been successfully performed in England and Ireland will make its debut at the Villanova Playbox on March 6, and will run the 7, 8, 13, 14, 15, 20, 21, and 22.

A New Brecht

Mr. Duprey, who terms Arden the "British answer to Bertold Brecht," describes the play as a satirical farce on socialized medicine. True to the style of Brecht's epic theatre, the play will present its message through such devices as masks, songs, dance, and an invisible dog.

The lecture series, titled "The Theatre In Revolt," will feature as guest lecturers four major figures from the American theatre.

Broadway producer Arthur Cantor, with such notable works to his credit at The Tenth Man, All The Way Home, Gideon, A Thousand Clowns, and the current production of The Passion of Josef D, will open the series on March 1.

Bolt Lectures

Other speakers who have offered to appear at later dates are stage designer Mordecai Gorelik, and playwrights Sidney Kingsley, whose Night Life was recently performed by the theatre department, and Robert Bolt, who wrote the screenplay for Lawerence of Arabia and the current hit play, A Man For All Season.

The March 1 lecture will begin at 2:30 p.m., the hall to be announced at a later date. Attendance will be limited by invitation and those making reservations with the theatre department in the Classroom Annex building.

The current Playbox production under the direction of Thomas Nevins is We Shall Have Larks, by Philadelphia playwright Sam Rulon. The work is described by Mr. Nevins as a romantic comedy of bawdy humour which is light but meaningful. It will be presented in the Playbox on the nights of the 14, 15, 16, and the 21, 22, and 23 of March. Tickets may be obtained during the day at the Playbox.

Conning The Student?

by Frank Sauers

A recent article in Time magazine pointed to the uncovering of a method commonly being used by college students in this country to impress their professors and improve their grades without doing the usual amount of work. They called it "conning the professor."

Some of the techniques mentioned by the report were things such as sitting in the second row, laughing at the professor's jokes, asking questions, (especially after class), and looking interested.

The article indicated that the student able to blend these techniques perfectly would undoubtedly make a great impression on his professor and improve his grades substantially.

Two-Sided Coin

As a student we do not deny that such a method is being used, but we do think that the coin is two sided. And so we decided to conduct a secret investigation on a world-wide basis to discover whether professors ever employ techniques aimed at impressing the students in the same way thereby avoiding the usual amount of work.

Oddly enough we found that some did, and so we have articulated another method which we quite originally dubbed, "conning the student."

One of the most successful techniques is something called "playing Socratic." If a professor has not read the poem, book, play, or text to be covered on a particular day he simply "plays Socratic" and asks various members of the class what their opinions are.

When five or six students have given their views, the professor synthesizes them and uses the synthesis for his lecture.

This technique is particularly successful since the synthesized view seldom represents any one of the individual student views and is therefore very hard to detect.

Standing By The Window

Another gimmick frequently used by teachers to deceive students is the one called "standing by the window." You will note that most professors make frequent use of this rather simple device because of its utility in tight situations.

If, unable to answer a question, a professor is standing next to a window he can simply stare out the window and thus avoid the embarrassment of having to stare into the blank face of the pupil for an extended period.

This technique also enables the professor to: 1) stall if he needs time; 2) think of an excuse if necessary; or 3) consider jumping.

Elimination Technique

By far the most popular method used by professors in "conning the student" is the "elimination technique." Especially attractive to unoriginal professors, this method is particularly useful in organizing an entire course.

In the beginning of the course the professor simply takes one particular book, dealing with the subject he is going to teach, from every available local library. He then teaches the course from that book as if from his own notes.

This delightfully leaves the student with the impression that his professor is an exquisite scholar presenting a refreshingly original point of view. After all, the student cannot find a similar view in any of the available books at the local libraries.

Letter To The Editor

To the Editor:

Representing WWVU, the campus organization which sponsored the "Villanovan of the Year" poll, featured in Jeff Radowich's column in your February 5 issue, I would like to clarify a point.

The exact wording of the ballot, offered to all students of the University, called for "the student whom you feel did the most for Villanova during 1963."

We did not call for the student who contributed most to the University, but rather "did the most" for Villanova.

Without downgrading the other nominees mentioned in Mr. Radowich's article, I think we all must admit that WWVU's "Villanovan of the Year," Wally Jones, has done much to bring Villanova national recognition.

Whether athletic recognition is as valuable as academic recognition is up to the individual to decide. Villanovan's also had the opportunity to decide the "Villanovan of the Year." They chose Wally Jones.

Extra-curricular Activities

The program of extra-curricular activities has always been an area of intense discussion and concern. Notions of what the activity should accomplish and how it should function within the University have always been vague and unsettled.

The value of the extra-curricular activity seems clear. It has always played a vital role in adding depth to the minds of its members and in functioning as a channel of accomplishment in areas that can never be adequately undertaken within the usual curricula.

The demands of the classroom, for example, often preclude the possibility of discussion and the exchange of ideas so essential to the development of the healthy mind. The most physical limitations of time and numbers make effective discussion and similarly imaginative ideas virtually impractical.

It would seem that the extra-curricular activity should reasonably begin to function where the province of the class falls short. The free exchange of ideas and discussion can become integral features of the worthwhile activity. Imagination can be used with agility. The activity is not bound by requirements of time and numbers. They should provide the student with something beyond the realm of the curricula.

The effectiveness of the extra-curricular program in the past has been limited. The programs that achieved the most success have those involving the most controversial of issues and the most prominent of personalities.

Apathy and disinterest are recognizable, and their scope is more than minimal. Literary and journalistic publications often go begging for contributors. WWVU radio finds it difficult to find anyone interested in participating in discussion programs. Most organizationally sponsored lectures and programs have a sad history of support. Responsibility for what seems to be widesread difficulty is hard to determine.

Perhaps it rests partially with the student body. We cannot help but feel that many students are apprehensive about joining organizations such as publications or the radio station, out of doubts concerning their abilities. If this is so, we point out that these organizations are essentially amateur. They demand only a will to learn-not professional competance. They provide a vital opportunity for the student to broaden his mind and expand his ability of expression.

Responsibility, on the other hand, probably rests equally with the organizations themselves. So much of the organizational leadership here is pallid and unimaginative. Also, the lack of effective coordination and scheduling results too frequently in conflicts just short of chaos.

The disorderly process of publicizing campus events is unclear and confusing. The frustration resulting from a lack of clarity is, no doubt, a basic factor in discouraging more universal support.

We suggest that everyone connected with the direction of campus activities take a long, hard, look at the present extra-curricular structure with a view toward developing a more efficient and realistic coordination of campus events. Efforts should be made to centralize responsibility for coordination.

Most essential is the necessity for clear communication to the student body of what is happening on campus. The scattered means of publicity used in the past have been largely ineffective. The most sensible solution would seem to be the establishment of a permanent single source of information concerning campus events.

We suggest the construction of a permanent promotional display similar to the Jazz Festival display currently in front of Dougherty Hall. Publicity might be handled through the same authority that coordinates the scheduling of events.

Coordination and imagination have largely been lacking in the past. A more effective agency of coordination in addition to a more centralized and imaginative system of publicity is essential if the program of extra-curricular activities here at Villanova is to be meaningful.

Re-Evaluation

Every intelligent and concerned American citizen should be distressed by the course of world events in the last two weeks. The United States government has suffered setbacks and humiliating defeats with regard to its foreign policy, at the hands of friends, neutrals, and foes alike.

France, in its bid for world power and influence, has recognized Red China; a step which may prove important in regard to the entry of the Peking regime into the U.N. and is advocating a policy of "neutralization" in Southeast Asia.

Cuba is receiving valuable imports at the hands of Britain and Canada, making the U.S. embargo meaningless.

Three airmen were shot down and killed over East Germany, bringing the number of Americans killed by Russian air attacks since 1950 to 70. At the same time, America is selling wheat to the Soviet Union.

The military situation in South Vietnam has been admitted to be crucial by Secretary McNamara.

It has been demonstrated in these and other crises that American policy is in need of a re-evaluation. The time has arrived to realize that France, England, and our other allies always do what is most advantageous to themselves.

The time has arrived to realize that the money being pumped into Latin America and other non-communist countries will not buy their friendships.

The time also has arrived to realize that the U.S. is fighting a war, a cold war, but nevertheless a war with communism.

Only a foreign policy that is unified and primarily concerned with American interests can hope to be successful.

IJF '64 — A Success, But No Contest

by Art Molitierno

In a near capacity-filled Field House last Friday night Villanova took another step forward towards becoming the collegiate jazz showplace of the East.

IJF's '64 completion marks the fourth year of the festival's existence. Starting from a local level the contest has grown in its short period to become one of the most widely publicized events of its kind.

Contestants from as far away as Michigan and Ohio made the long trip just for the chance of showing the listening audience they deserved the right to be there. Finalists for the IJF were selected from tape recordings submitted by each group. As Eddie Bride, general chairman of IJF '64, mentioned, it was a long and tedious process by a panel of impartial judges.

The net result was the selecting of three big bands, three combos, and one vocalist. Competing groups included the defending big band from last year (Ray DeFade, Duquesne), Michigan State University Band, and the Phi Mu Alpha Jazz Workshop Band from Ohio. Defending its title as best combo of IFJ '63, the Potsdam State Jazz Quintet from New York State University ran into stiff musical competition from the Dick Durham Trio of Wabash College and the Bill Barnwell Quintet from Hampton Institute, Virginia.

The singular vocalist to make the finals, Miss Jan LaFave, was under no strain since she was automatically selected as winner in her category from the judging of the vocal tapes.

Viewed solely from the standpoint of appreciation in collegiate jazz, IJF '64 is a qualified success, although somewhat less exciting than last year's contest. The first contestant, from Ohio State University, certainly had a professional sound, as experienced in Lush Life and the chorale-modern-swing-waltz-jazz arrangement of the Wiffenpoof Song. But although Jim Huntzinger did receive the award for best trombone, the Phi Mu Alpha Band failed to place in any of the remaining categories.

The judges must have kept their eyes and ears glued to the Bill Barnwell Quintet from Hampton Institute, Virginia. Being second and following a big band didn't seen to have any effect on the cool five.

Selections like Barnyard Waltz and Like Cookin', and what Bride called the Baptist Bossa Nova showed the amazing agility and tonal compliment of fluegelhorn and alto sax. If Barnwell (on alto) didn't capture the audience with his solos, he surely did so when he walked away with nearly every major prize in the festival. His group was selected as the finest jazz group, the best combo, and Barnwell himself received the prize of best reed man.

Preston Williams, who accompanied him of fluegelhorn, received the award for best on trumpet. On the whole the group had a mild-mannered soul-type jazz style that never became boisterous or overbearing in its search for ideas. It was, as evidenced by the awards, the finest group to listen to.

Buddy DeFranco presents the award for best overall jazz group to Bill Barnwell of the Bill Barnwell Quintet after the Intercollegiate Jazz Festival last Friday night.

Defending their title as best combo in the IJF '63 gig Potsdam Jazz Quintet was definitely hurtin' from the loss of personnel, especially alto sax genius Joe Roccisano. Tom Farmer on piano received the award as most promising rhythm, while Carl Sullivan's performance on valve 'bone should have received some comment from the judges.

Those that missed the free flowing style of the group were able to catch them down at Peps in Philadelphia the following night. The interesting rhythmic and polytonal patterns must have pleased those at Peps as easily as those at the jazz fest in Villanova.

The most Michigan State University Band could do in its bid for the big band title was to place two of its members in the most promising division. Dellere and Barone received awards for the most promising reed and trumpet respectively. The big group had a fine sound. The countermovements of sax, bone, and trumpet lent a distinctive sound to the arrangements. Barone (on trumpet) was wild in his improvisations; he always had some new idea to convey to the audience.

Ray DeFade and his Duquesne Big Bands were the only ones to successfully hold their title from last year's contest. As second time winners of the best big band, the Dukes also suffered from a loss of personnel. In this case it was the screamin' horn of Paul Hubanon, Joe Kennedy, who doubles on french horn and piano, received the prize for the best arranger/composer, while Lou Carto received a new pair of skins for the best drummer in the contest.

From the moment Duquesne commenced its wild and soul-searching sensuous arrangements there was no contest for the big band title. The arrangements were alive with a musical frenzy that was dynamic in its tempo, screaming trumpet unison, and tonal qualities. They were without doubt the most provocative group to sit in on.

It was the Dick Durham Trio's unfortunate task to follow the Dukes. The rhythmic changes and development of an almost classical theme in the second set were interesting, but yet almost of a stale and lifeless character.

Miss Jan La Fave, last in order first in beauty, was the only vocalist in the contest. She was also the only "group" to be as beautiful as desafinado. Although backed up by her own Potsdam State Quintet, Miss La Fave managed the incredible task of being in discord with her own voice.

On the whole, of all the groups entered none had the over-all ability of last year's winners, nor for that matter did they have the soloists who could claim undisputed right to the crown. Many who remember the screaming trumpet of Paul Hubanon, the smooth but big sounding trombone of Bob Curnow, or the fantastic alto sax of Roccisano will not remember such sparkling performances in IJF '64.

As far as the rhythm sections are concerned, Ray DeFade's Band was the only group in which the pulse of jazz was felt. In many cases there seemed to be a quiet despondency in the rhythm sections.

JAN LA FAVE

One of the notable things about contests in general is the air of excitement which usually surrounds them. The air of excitement last Friday was almost stale, but it wasn't merely from the lack of a duel between two opposing styles (such as last year). One wonders who can be enthusiastic about the winner of a contest if he has had to sit for over four hours on unpadded seats, while someone on stage is stalling for time by trying to sell programs. If it is true that the operation may be a success but the patient fail, then IJF '64 was a success as a concert, but somewhat dying as a contest.

Double-Date In A Gold-Fish Bowl

by Jeff Radowich

Few of us, I think, object to double-dates per se. Oft-times, they are a lot of fun.

When double-dating, there are certain traditional rules and niceties observed by the incumbents, i.e, repartee contribution proportional to intelligence quotient; a scruplously cooperative attention to expenses by male ends of the tandem; and a spirit of mind-your-own business during close-of-evening amenities.

There are other rules, of course, but I think that I have mentioned the most important areas. Now, if any of these traditional niceties and rules are abrogated, the evening isn't a total loss, but how would you like to embark on a double-date and know — in advance — that parties thereto are duty-bound to shatter tradition in all of the three important areas?

This admittedly is a long way into the subject but it has been selected so that you will have assembled the proper amount of sympathy for Lynda Bird and Lucy Baines Johnson, who are shadowed wherever they go by the Secret Service.

College soph Lynda and high school teener Lucy make no move without the assurance that there is a watch-bird watching them. And how about the poor fish who are their dates? The designation of "fish" becomes clearer later in the story.

The two young ladies have a poignant problem, whether it be dinner dates — because there is always the watchful coffee-drinker two tables away, and evening dates always find the mysterious stranger lounging in the lobby, strolling in the park, perched in the seat behind at the movies, or hootin' at the nanny.

Tender moments spent in appraisal of the moon must be shared with these silent companions; the tactical operation known technically as the "last stand at the doorstop" is foredoomed to failure, what with the shadowy figure hurkling and hurrumphing a few feet away.

And let's not even speculate as to how captivating the Johnson gals and their dates can be when bundled in a car with a middle-aged father-type, attuned and alert to every sound and movement!

From the standpoint of the double-daters, one might assess the situation as deplorable, frustrating, or tragic. And you probably would be right.

I record it, simply and sadly, as double-dating in a gold-fish bowl. And who wants to swim under those conditions?

The Rising Curtain

A Lark From Begining To End

by Paul Norton

Samuel A. Rulon's "We Shall Have Larks" gives us just that — a lark from beginning to end. Now in its second week at the Villanova Playbox, it is as gay and light as any entertainment we've seen at Villanova since the buffoonery of last season's "Imaginary Invalid."

The show is played in a medieval castle and is complete with knights, fair (and not so fair) damsels, friars, and even a witch straight out of one of Shakespeare's cauldrons. The plot is frivolous and the acting is broad and even bawdy in spots, but they fit each other neatly and bounce around in a somber setting.

The Miracle

The story is about Modestra, a young maiden about to be bargained off as a business deal by her father to a bearded allergic knight. The fair lady in an effort to avoid the hirsute nobleman delves into black magic, prayer and lotions. It doesn't really make much difference which of the methods work but presto! Modestra is transformed.

Now there are new complications in the great hall when Modesta discovers that the shaggy gentlemen with the hay fever is really Prince Charming. Surprised? You're not supposed to be. At least, the author leaves us with the impression that he knows that you know what is coming all the time but it doesn't make much difference because nobody gives a darn anyway.

It is in this spirit of lightness that the story is interspersed with some of the most typical and yet delightful characters. First, there's the bumbling nurse, then the roguish minstral. (Can you imagine a medieval play without him?) Next a waspish little witch flys in to upset the old household, followed on the drawbridge by a conniving countess, a hangman, and last of all a devastating woman of the world, sarcastic, venomous, and enchanting.

Fine Acting

Kudos have to be given to Irene Walsh's portrayal of Lady Medeline. She sets the pace in each of her scenes and provokes some delicious repartee. Her remarks are worthy of Jean Kerr and her acting bubbles with overtones of Auntie Mame, Tallulah Bankhead, and even a little Bettie Davis.

Running a close second for top honors is Ed Weinheim as Jaques, a moronic hangman turned servant. His comedy is broad simple, loud and always colorful.

Mitzie Smyth and John Meehan as the maiden and her greedy father are effective in their respective roles but unfortunately suffers from some slow direction in the first act.

The initial humor of the opening scenes depends on sight gags which make for a weak start. However, as the evening progresses the comic suspense heightens and the dialogue picks up nicely. Once this structural defect is past both Miss Smyth and Mr. Meehan move quickly along with the tide of good humor.

The direction and set design by Mr. Thomas Nevins are clever and original. Rarely, does the play lapse into trite humor and when it does, it is done merely to emphasize a character. The medieval castle setting is complete with stone floor and dark passages. The gray color scheme is unobstrusive and ideally fitted to the limitations of the Playbox.

On its opening night "We Shall Have Larks" was an enjoyable piece of theater. Its flaws were small but evident. With two more weeks of performance these spots will be ironed out to present the gayest and most light-hearted shows to be presented here in some time.

What To Do?

by John Riggs

"Well fellows, where shall we go tonight? 69th St., Rosemont's "T" or Howard Johnson's?

This is the question asked among Villanova students when Friday night rolls around. A debate inevitably arises as to what we are going to do for excitement this week-end.

There're only a few things wrong with the standard answers. First of all, I, like most guys begin to feel a little guilty after a few nights of sitting in the lounges of some of the girls' colleges in this locale. This feeling is brought about because the girls eventually begin to wonder why we don't date them.

Where To Go

Secondly, who can afford to frequent the few places of entertainment that we have here? Then there's also a problem of transportation which is brought about by the ban on cars for all residents except seniors. Besides this, where can you take a girl on a date?

Let's face it, most of the college girls have a curfew and if you take time out of your evening to take a bus, subway and then the 'ole P&W to get her back to her dorm you won't have much time to spend on the date itself.

Of course, if you happen to be stag for this particular evening you can always go down to Ho-Jo's and meet the high school femmes. But, after a while, this gets to be a rather uninspiring situation.

Why should such a situation exist? This was the question asked by five Villanovans recently, and here is the solution we arrived at. I don't think that it is too far-fetched.

What about the possibility of a casual dance (under the guidance of the administration) which could be held once a week in the Field House or some other convenient location?

There could be a nominal admission of 25c upon the showing of a matriculation card from one of the neighboring colleges, or a $1.00 admission for those who don't possess cards. This would be desirable to keep this "mixer" almost exclusivly on a college student level.

Committees

Committees could be appointed to perform the necessary jobs such as: cleaning-up, collecting admissions, selling refreshments, taking care of the music, etc. Possibly the administration would be willing to act as chaperone.

The music could be supplied by a record-player and soft-drinks could be sold at a profit.

The benefits of such a function are obvious. That it would supply a week-end recreation for the resident students, act in the same facilities and for the same reasons as any mixer, and provide profits which could go to charity are only a few.

The nurses would also benefit from a function such as this. It would provide them with something to do in the line of recreation if they stay at the convent over the week-end.

Maybe this, or something similiar, would put an end to the Villanova resident student's quest for economical entertainment.

Perhaps this is a goal which cannot be obtained immediately. Even so, if there is a possibility of obtaining it in the future, the sooner the action is started, the sooner this goal will be reached.

MOVE AHEAD WITH IBM DATA PROCESSING

Caught In Passing

Leader's Awareness Lacking Now

by Jan Dyroff

A singular and most disturbing thing happened in Europe 'long about the middle of the fourteenth century. People began to die. The quality of death was not unusual, but the quantity was.

Death wore the mask of Plague, and within a twoscore span of years brought a quarter of the continent under her sight. Nothing like the Black Death, the Great Dying, call it what you will, had ever happened.

It was a sudden and lasting thing, not without effect. It produced at the same time an increase in religious devotion. What other choice is left for people who realize that they may be mortally ill before the day they are living ends?

Reflected Problem

The literature and art of the times reflected their problem. Boccaccio wrote his Decameron, a story of the morals of illness-ridden Florence. There were others. The spectre of Death became common in the graphic and plastic arts.

But the people at least had hope. They knew that while some may die, all wouldn't. The intellectuals knew that their civilization would recover, and they felt that eventually the mind of man would conquer the Plague. It eventually did.

Condition Up

Conditions improved with the industrial and scientific revolutions, and nature no longer took her exorbitant toll. Man could only count on war as a sure way of keeping the population down.

War was glorious. It gave the nobility something to do. In the long run everybody recovered fairly well. Thinkers were content that war, as a real threat to their civilization, was as impotent as the Plague.

War gave the dashing youth something to dash about. After all, wasn't that action of ours in 1898 "the splendid little war?" Also, weren't things so stable that in 1914 there wasn't one weapon in Europe capable of leveling a four-story building with one shot?

We in America were complacent. Europe was for the Europeans, let it stay that way. Perhaps one of the great historical tragedies will be that, as of the middle of the twentieth century, the American continent was relatively unscathed by war.

Only in the last quarter of a century has man become capable of destroying not only himself but also his civiliation. This should have been evident with Hiroshima and Nagasaki. It wasn't.

Not Known

When one reads the writings of political, economic, and social commentators of the late '40's and early '50's, one is appalled by their lack of comprehension of their world.

One is left with the impression that the change wrought by the introduction of nuclear warfare had escaped them. One would be kind to believe in their naivete. But these were the leaders.

The marriage of death and security turned sour with Korea, and the honeymoon was well over by Sputnik. Too many people in a position of responsibility both in the East and in the West are oblivious to this fact.

Two Queries

Can I support this? Answer the two questions following and the first will answer itself. What is Senator Goldwater's campaign? Who lured the American trainer plane into East Germany and shot it down?

It is doubtful if anything real can be done except for more people to try to understand. We must try to understand our fellow man. We must try to understand the nature of our world. We must try to understand ourselves!

In the time of the Black Death, the great impossible intellectual goal for the people was that all could read and write.

In the time in which we are living, the great impossible goal seems to be that all men can understand and turn that understanding into mutual respect and love.

Role Of A University

by Jim Mitchell

The most important aspect of any university should be a stimulating intellectual environment. This is not the area of a Student Council or various other student organizations but the role of the university itself.

It has attempted to solve this problem by a speaker program, but these continually only attract the same students, unless they are presently controversial as in the case of Buckley or Golden, and then you find a large majority of non-Villanovans occupying the seats.

For example, one evening last year the Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, President of the University, gave a lecture before a campus organization on his recent trip to Russia with regards to their educational system. The attendance was so sparse that the chairman had to ask a night school class to sit in.

Judo Is Popular

And yet a few hundred feet away in Vasey auditorium there was present an overflowing crowd to observe an exhibition of judo.

The answer lies in changing a way of thinking, and this can only result from a more personal connection between the administration, the educators, and the students.

And this can not be accomplished by daily lectures or from a speaker's dais, for there is little emotional attachment or intellectual effect from a typical American speech, and the case of Mr. Buckley is certainly proof of that.

Otherwise a student must create his own stimulating environment, and in this case it would be away from the university.

Unintellectual Education

The average Villanova student has been geared to the practical. This is the natural response for a minority group which less than 50 years ago was denied jobs because of its religion and nationality. To them education is not the spear of intellectual progress but social advance. The most perplexing question before Catholic educators is: how many generations must Catholic universities endure until they produce?

This is, indeed, the sign of a successful man and of an efficient university, one which places all forms of activity in their right perspective. Let us talk about sports over the Daily News and play sports, but let us not deify it.

The Greeks considered activity in sports a vital feature of life, but the professional football games played across the nation after the assassination of our President was not a part of life, it was an alienation from it.

The Student Council prides itself on its accomplishments but in so doing it shows the weakness of the administration. For a strong student government (being one which is accomplishing a constructive program) means that the administration has abandoned certain areas of this university to the care of others.

Literary Society Seminar Deals With Literary 'Hell'

Officials of the Villanova Literary Society have announced plans for a seminar on "The Aspects of Hell In Literature" to be held in Bartley Hall on February 17.

Participants in the seminar will be interested students who have mastered the opinions of Homer, Vergil, Dante, Sartre, and Kerouac. After the talks, the program will be opened to general questioning and commentary.

In line with a wider scope in the literary field, plans have been announced to invite students from nearby colleges to attend the seminar and, in a way, to participate.

Other Socials

Other socials with the nearby girls' schools, Rosemont, Cabrini, Immaculata, Chestnut Hill, are now in the preparation stage. Reports are that response to preliminary overtures has been more than good.

All students and faculty members in all colleges of the University are invited to attend the Monday evening seminar.

Bartley Hall

The exact room for the symposium will be 110 Bartley Hall, and the time will be 7:30 p.m.

LYNX Chosen Twice To Make Presentation Of Madeleva Medal

Barry Thornton, chairman and editor-in-chief of the Lynx, has announced that the literary magazine will be permitted by the National Poetry Society to award the Madeleva Memorial Medal for the second successive year. The prize is given for a poem appearing in the Lynx and the recipient is chosen by a committee of the administration and faculty.

This is the first time in the thirty-eight year history of the medal that it has ever been awarded to a school for two successive years and only the second time it has been awarded at Villanova. Any poem published in the Lynx is elligible.

Thornton also announced new staff appointments for the spring issue. Taking over layout editorship and holding other positions on the editorial staff will be Dennis O'Hara, a sophomore accounting major.

He will be replaced in his former position as publicity director by Charles Masch, a freshman.

Prentice Yancey, a sophomore political science major, will assume the duties of copy editor.

Navy Information Team Here In Dougherty Hall On February 25, 26, 27

A Navy Information Team will be located in Dougherty Hall of Villanova University on February 25, 26, and 27, to discuss the Navy Officer Candidate Program with interested students.

The Naval Officer Candidate School is a program whereby young men and women possessing college degrees may obtain commissions after four months of schooling at Newport, Rhode Island. Classes convene every month for men and every four months for women.

The basic requirements for selection are a college degree, United States citizenship, and an age between 19 and 25.

Applications are now being accepted for the 1964 classes.

Faculty Wives Club Sponsors Fashion Fete For End Of February

A card party and fashion show sponsored by the Villanova University Faculty Wives Club will be held on February 17, at 8 p.m. in St. Thomas of Villanova parish hall, Rosemont, Pa. for the benefit of the Student Loan Fund which has been organized by the club members and is financed from the proceeds of club activities.

Mrs. Harold G. Reuschlein of Villanova is chairman for the event. She will be assisted by Mrs. Alexander R. Bell of Broomall, Mrs. Charles P. Bruderle of Havertown, Mrs. George J. Chorba of King of Prussia, Mrs. Vito J. DiVincenzo of Malvern, Mrs. James F. Elliott of Ardmore, Mrs. John J. Gallen of Havertown, Mrs. Richard L. Jewett of Berwyn, Mrs. James F. O'Brien of King of Prussia and Mrs. Theodore H. White of Ardmore.

A tombola table will be featured together with chances on a basket of cheer. All kinds of cards can be played.

Tickets will be $1.25 and may be obtained by contacting Mrs. Leo Zuckowsky, III, Brownlee Road, King of Prussia. 265-4563.

The fashion show which was arranged by Mrs. William Murphy of King of Prussia will feature Mrs. Anne Ware of Havertown, a professional fashion commentator. Maffei Hair Stylists of King of Prussia and Manoa will arrange the coiffures and makeup for the show.

Two senior students in the University school of nursing will also be lending their modeling talents. They are Lois Greyson and Martha Podolsky.

As 'Cat Mermen Place Second Yale Swim Team Breaks Mark

by Jerry Bruderle

The Villanova swimming team failed in an attempt to lower its American record for the 200 yard freestyle relay last Saturday night, at New Haven, Connecticut.

Instead the Yale varsity relay team smashed the record of 1:29.4 which the 'Cats had established only 3 weeks ago. Yale's new record was :04.4 better than the 'Cats' best.

Carnival

The occasion was Yale's 42nd annual swimming carnival. Villanova's four man team of Dick McDonough, Jack Geoghegan, Rick Girdler and Paul Winn finished second to Yale. The Yale freshmen finished third.

Actually the relay team that had set the record for the 'Cats in January consisted of McDonough, Girdler, Geoghegan and Ray Donnelly. However, Coach Ed Geisz held a three day swim-off for positions on the relay team and Winn beat out Donnelly for the fourth position.

The Mermen travel to Annapolis for an important meet with Navy on Wednesday, February 12. The Midshipmen will be out to avenge last year's upset at the hands of the Wildcats.

The Wildcats will try to break the American record in the 200 yard medley relay currently held by Yale this Friday. This will be an open AAU meet at the New York Athletic Club. Yale set the mark in 1960.

Inter-City Meet

The LaSalle College swimmers come to the Main Line Saturday for a inter-city meet. The Explorers boast a 5-1 record against a comparatively weak schedule. They have set numerous Middle Atlantic Conference and LaSalle pool records.

Many of these records, however, are several seconds below the standards set by the Villanova swimmers.

The freshmen team will also travel to Navy on Wednesday and then return on Friday to swim against Monsignor Bonner High School in the Field House.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

The Intramural Department is now organizing a billiards club. It will be conducted under the Butera handicap system whereby all participants will have an equal opportunity to win. No experience is necessary to become an active member.

There are experts available to offer instructions and advice to players of every calibre.

Prizes and awards will be made to individuals showing excellence in their category. Any student interested in signing up may obtain application cards from the Intramural Office or in 114 Sheehan or 217 Fedigan.

The Villanova Bowling team defeated LaSalle 3-0 to move the Wildcats into sole possession of first place.

The team competes in the Delaware Valley Division of the Eastern Intercollegiate Bowling League.

The win makes Villanova's record 11-1 and puts them three games ahead of second place Drexel.

John Brennan lead the 'Cats with a 612 series on games of 188, 211, and 213. Team Captain Andy Razzore supported Brennan with a 567 series, his high game being 241. Freshman Bruce Thomas continued to impress Coach Sal Rico with a 224 singleton.

High scorer for the LaSalle Explorers was Joe Hoffman with a solid 613 total. He bowled games of 195, 206, and 212 for his match high series.

On Saturday, February 15 the Wildcat bowlers will travel to Gettysburg, Pennsylvania for an invitational tournament.

* * * *

The Villanova Varsity pistol team spent their semester break on a mid-western pistol tour.

The team departed on January 18 for a shoot-out against Michigan State in East Lansing and defeated the Spartans, 4020-4005. Top man for the Wildcats was All-American George Sinclair with an 846 out of a possible 900.

He was followed by Tony Mascia with an 820, Dick Hunter, 792, Ted Laven, 786 and Bud Brennan, 776.

The next day found the team in South Bend, Indiana at Notre Dame where the Irish took a 1317-1210 pasting. George and Chuck Sinclair and Mascia had 270s while Laven and Hunter had 258 and 249 respectively.

Next stop was Cincinnati where the 'Cats dropped Xavier, 4015-3735. G. Sinclair led Villanova's shooters with 859 followed by Mascia's 804, and C. Sinclair's 792. Sinclair, (George, that is) set a new school record as he fired a 291 in the individual competition. The national collegiate record is 292.

The following Friday the squad was in Columbus, Ohio where they suffered their first loss of the season at the hands of Ohio State 4076-4005.

BSEE, MSEE, MS/Math or Physics Degree Candidates: ease your transition from college to the aerospace industry

Join General Precision/Aerospace's Training Program. Some of the most advanced, complete aerospace systems are now being developed at General Precision Aerospace's Northern New Jersey Laboratories. This has led to a major expansion in our professional engineering training program.

Flexibility is the program's keynote. Long experience with graduates proved it necessary — both from them and for us. In fact, we've found that about 70 per cent of engineers on their first job are not at all sure of the career direction they want to follow. Here you can move around. Most do.

From the outset, GP/A's broad digital systems held this young engineer's interest. After just six months' rotation, and gaining broad experience, his mind is made up to stay in the computer field. A stranger to this part of the state, he was particularly impressed with the abundance of well-accredited graduate schools in the area: Columbia, N.Y.U. . . . midtown New York is just 40 minutes away . . . Stevens, Newark College of Engineering are all close by. This semester he has enrolled in one of the schools — taking full advantage of GP/A's tuition refund plan.

Francis D. Ryan
BS, EE — Villanova

William E. Musser
BS, ME — Stevens Institute of Technology

Bill was in for a big surprise from his first day at GP/A. He hadn't realized that all phases of engineering, science and mathematics are utilized in an inter-disciplinary effort to resolve the numerous and diversified problems related to Space Age Advanced Systems. As a Junior Project Engineer, he soon found that he was called upon to delve into electrical and mechanical as well as structural problems. He was surprised to find himself looking into all phases of design, development, procurement, construction and even shipment of the finished product. Above all, Bill accredits his successful start to the helpful attitude of the competent senior engineers and from the excellent facilities — the technical information center, complete environmental test lab, and electronic test equipment.

Other advantages inherent in the flexible training program are: a project engineering philosophy which gives you a bird's eye view of both technical and administrative engineering . . . opportunity to apply theoretical analysis & optimum design techniques . . . everyday, direct contact with some of the finest engineering and scientific minds in the industry . . . advanced facilities including a new Research Center and Astrodome . . . ideal location . . . advanced study programs . . . semi-annual merit reviews . . . promotion by merit policy.

Note These Comments of 4 June '63 Graduates About Their GP/A Experiences:

From Dick's first assignment in the Computers and Controls Department, he has found that the training program has spurred his creative imagination. As a Junior Product Engineer he has attended many classes and has become well acquainted with all of GP/A's product lines. In one year's time he will have experienced four departmental rotations of three months each. Right now he's busy working with a development group studying a miniature navigational computer program. He's found the work challenging and unique in that there is a blending of ideas and design with the actual hardware. Dick gets a great deal of satisfaction from staying on "his" project from its design to its development and sale.

Richard A. Kunzier
BS, EE — Newark College of Engineering

Norman Bloom
BS, EE — Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute

Norman started his career with GP/A during a special summer program. He attended two classes two mornings a week while working in the Guidance & Navigation Department. His work included the torquing of an inertial platform digitally using pulses instead of the conventional analog techniques. It was a "first" for GP/A and Norman received a great feeling of personal satisfaction from his own contributions. Still not sure of the exact direction his career will take, Norman is now ready to enter a completely different aspect of the Aerospace Industry — Flight Control. At the same time, he is participating in a GP/A sponsored Graduate school program at Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute. To quote Norman: "I found that one way of learning is to ask questions of the engineering personnel. At GP/A they have always been willing to take time out to answer any of my questions."

Duquesne Dukes Provide Opposition At Palestra Tonight; Canisus Next

by Steve Freind

The names are different but the game is the same. Two more rugged opponents take on Villanova's high-flying Wildcats in an attempt to derail their Kansas City Express.

Tonight the 'Cats host Willie Somerset and his Iron Dukes of Duquesne before traveling to Buffalo on Saturday to clash with Canisius. Being the ninth best team in the land is a liability as well as an honor for the Wildcats. Every opponent comes in loaded for bear, nourishing hopes of upsetting the Wildcats. Duquesne and Canisius will be no exceptions.

Duquesne

Last year the Dukes struggled through a 13-9 campaign without the services of Somerset, sidelined with shin splints. Now Somerset is back and Coach Red Manning's charges are once again an eastern power.

Currently the Dukes are sporting a 10-4 log including an 83-76 triumph over powerful Xavier. Three of their losses came at the hands of fourth-ranked Wichita, Pitt and St. Bonaventure. In the Bonnie tilt, Somerset poured in 46 points, topping Si Green's Duquesne scoring record by two. This record lasted only until the Xavier game, when Somerset raised his standard by one.

Besides Somerset, who is scoring at a 25.1 clip, Manning has received double-figure production from Ron Willard and Willie Ross. The Dukes' big man is 6-6 John Cegalis, who has hauled down 147 rebounds.

Last season, Villanova triumphed 49-45, cutting Duquesne's series lead to 18-12.

Canisius

With the loss of scoring star Bill O'Connor through graduation, Canisius is in the throes of a rare losing season. In contrast to last season's 19-7 record and second place finish in the NIT, the Golden Griffs this year have been able to notch only seven victories against nine defeats.

The only bright spot in Coach Bob MacKinnon's campaign thus far has been a 78-75 upset of powerful St. Bonaventure. The Griff's poor record, though, is deceptive. Five of their losses were administered by powers such as Dayton, DePaul, Providence, Creighton and Xavier. The total margin of defeat in four of those games was a mere 20 points.

Top point producer for the Griffs has been Frank Swiatch, who has burned the nets at a 21.7 clip. Veteran Tony Gennari is second with an 18.1 average.

Tickets for Saturday Night

Tickets for the St. Joseph's game go on sale in the Field House, Thursday at 9:00 a.m.

New Ruling: Only ONE ticket per person; ticket must be picked up in person. Combinations of tickets can not be bought.

'Cats Trip Bonnies, 57-52 Schaeffer Leads Late Rally

by Joe McCarthy

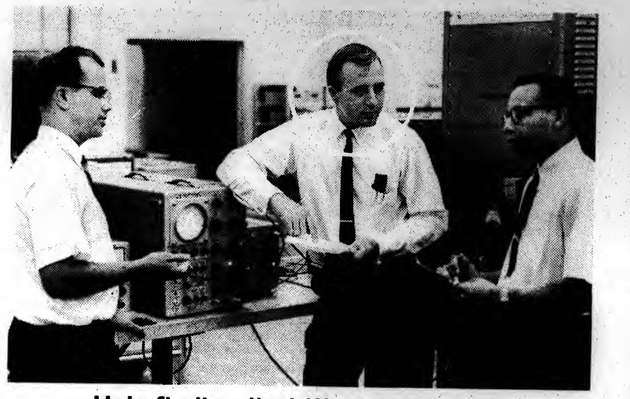
St. Bonaventure's fiery basketball squad last Wednesday became the thirteenth consecutive victim of the nationally-ranked Wildcat basketball machine of Villanova.

The 57-52 victory brought the 'Cats' record to 17-1, and gave them their thirteenth straight. The consecutive victory streak ties a school record that has stood since the early 1930's.

The first half saw the 'Cats, at one time 11 points behind, fighting an uphill battle. They finally closed the gap to three points, 29-26, when the halftime buzzer sounded.

At the beginning of the second half, the Main Liners reeled off six straight points to take a 32-29 lead. They never relinquished this lead.

Heading an unusually cold Wildcat attack were backcourt aces Wally Jones and George Leftwich, and forward Bernie Schaffer. Each contributed ten points. Schaffer's was particularly a clutch performance as he hit on five out of seven attempts from the field.



Rebounds

Richie Moore and Jim Washington each tallied eight points. Washington also paced the Main Liners in the rebound department with 12.

Final statistics indicated a poor evening from the field for Villanova. They hit for only 22 out of 71 attempts (31.0 per cent) while the Bonnies did somewhat better, 21 for 57 (36.8 per cent).

Tom Huck sought scientific excitement

He's finding it at Western Electric

Ohio University conferred a B.S.E.E. degree on C. T. Huck in 1956. Tom knew of Western Electric's history of manufacturing development. He realized, too, that our personnel development program was expanding to meet tomorrow's demands.

After graduation, Tom immediately began to work on the development of electronic switching systems. Then, in 1958, Tom went to the Bell Telephone Laboratories on a temporary assignment to help in the advancement of our national military capabilities. At their Whippany, New Jersey, labs, Tom worked with the Western Electric development team on computer circuitry for the Nike Zeus guidance system. Tom then moved on to a new assignment at WE's Columbus, Ohio, Works. There, Tom is working on the development of testing circuitry for the memory phase of electronic switching systems.

This constant challenge of the totally new, combined with advanced training and education opportunities, make a Western Electric career enjoyable, stimulating and fruitful. Thousands of young men will realize this in the next few years. How about you?

If responsibility and the challenge of the future appeal to you, and you have the qualifications we seek, talk with us. Opportunities for fast-moving careers exist now for electrical, mechanical and industrial engineers, and also for physical science, liberal arts and business majors. For more detailed information, get your copy of the Western Electric Career Opportunities booklet from your Placement Officer. Or write: Western Electric Company, Room 6405, 222 Broadway, New York 38, N. Y. And be sure to arrange for a personal interview when the Bell System recruiting team visits your campus.

ECONOMICS CAN BE CHUCKLES

Many of you have been avoiding economics because it is so widely known as "the dismal science." Oh, good friends, stop cheating yourselves of many a laugh and cheer, because economics is a positive riot! True, it is called the dismal science, but that is only because it was invented in 1681 by Walter C. Dismal.

It is easy to understand why Mr. Dismal's discovery of economics is today almost forgotten, for the fact is that he himself only stayed with the subject for two or three days. After that he took up embonpoint, which means fatness. It is said that at his apogee, Mr. Dismal reached 1200 pounds. This later became known as Guy Fawkes Day.

It was not until 1776 when Adam Smith published his Wealth of Nations (or Ozymandias, as it is usually known as) that the world came to realize what a rosy, twinkly, fun subject economics is. As Mr. Smith showed in his jocular little treatise, there is nothing complicated about economics.

This later became known as the Louisiana Purchase

When there is a great demand for a product, a great supply is placed on the market. When there is a small demand, there is a small supply. Take, for example, castanets. You walk into any average American town today and I'll wager you won't see more than eighty or ninety castanet shops. That is because the demand is small.

For Marlboro Cigarettes, on the other hand, the demand is great. Thus, you will find Marlboros—with all their yummy rich tobacco flavor and pure white Selectrate filter and pliable soft pack and unpliable Flip-Top box—at any counter where cigarettes are sold in every one of our fifty great States and Duluth.

To Adam Smith, I say, belongs the distinction of popularizing economics. Mr. Smith was followed by David Ricardo. In fact, everywhere he went he was followed by David Ricardo. Mr. Smith finally got so annoyed that he summoned a bobby, as British policemen are called, and had Mr. Ricardo arrested. This later became known as the Louisiana Purchase.

Upon his release from gaol, as a British jail is called, Mr. Ricardo reported to his parole officer, Thomas Robert Malthus. They soon became fast friends, and one night over a game of whist they invented the stock exchange, or chutney, as it is called in England.

Well sir, with the British having, you might say, a corner on economics, the French decided that they wanted some economics too. Being, however, a proud nation, they refused simply to borrow British economics, but insisted on inventing their own. At first they tried using the truffle hound as a medium of exchange. When this proved less than satisfactory, they switched to pomade. Discouraged by this second disappointment, they finally shrugged and said, "Oh, who cares about economics anyhow?" and returned to the guillotine and Maurice Chevalier.

America, I am pleased to report, had much better success with economics. Our early merchants quickly broke down economics into its two major categories—coins and folding money—and today, as a result of their wisdom, we can all enjoy the automatic toll station.

Well sir, I could go on and on about this fascinating subject, but I know you're all in a tearing hurry to rush out and sign up for Econ I. So I will leave you now with two kindly words of farewell: Gresham's Law.

We, the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes, are tobacconists, not economists. But this much we know about supply and demand: you demand full flavor in a filter cigarette; we supply it—Marlboro!

LaSalle Frosh's Hubie Marshall Pushes Explorers To 85-78 Victory

by Jim Proud

LaSalle proved to be a double nemesis this week-end, beating the varsity on Saturday and the Wildkittens on Friday evening.

In the game at LaSalle's home court the frosh lost their third game of season by the score of 85-78.

The 'Kittens were unable to hold onto their 45-41 lead at halftime due to a late surge by LaSalle's Hubie Marshall. The back-court ace from Coatesville High collected most of his 20 points in the last ten minutes of play.

Unlike the first game against LaSalle, the 'Kittens were in the lead for most of the game and did not have to keep coming from behind but rather it was the Explorers who had to overcome a deficit in points.

In the first thirty minutes it was Bill Snow who carried most of the weight, scoring 23 points for the game high while pulling down enough rebounds to offset the efforts of the 'Kittens big men, Billy Soens and Frank Gaidjunas.

Led by 6' 7" Frank Gaidjunas' 22 points, the 'Kittens were in command throughout the entire game, save the last ten minutes, and threatened to hand the Explorers their second loss in the junior big five circuit.

The game was won on the foul line. The Explorers scored 21 free throws while the 'Kittens hit only ten. Although the frosh had a high charity toss percentage, 10 for 14, they weren't able to draw the fouls which would have given them added opportunities on the line.

The 'Kittens outscored LaSalle from the floor, 34 completions to 32 but the eleven point difference from the foul line outweighed this floor point advantage and gave LaSalle their second win of the season over the 'Kittens.

The remaining games for coach Jack Devine's quintet are: Penn, St. Joe's, and Seton Hall, in that order. Penn and St. Joe's, both big five games, are rematches. The 'Kittens beat Penn 76-74 at the Palestra on January 25 and lost to the Hawks 58-56 in the Villanova Field House.

The Seton Hall game, to be played before the varsity game, will be the last test for the frosh and could leave them with an 8 and 3 record for the season.

At the present time the Frosh record is 5 and 3 with their big five log at 3 and 3.

Due to their recent loss to LaSalle the 'Kittens have been eliminated from any chance at the junior big-five crown.

Intramural Office Offers New Activities, Basketball

by Jerry Bruderle

The Villanova Intramural office will be busy in the coming weeks with the start of five new activities and the continuation of the basketball leagues. In events ranging from card games to volleyball, the Intramural Department presents a well-rounded schedule for campus specialists.

The new activities will be the chess, checkers and bridge games the Foul-Shooting Contest, the start of volleyball and softball, and the Red Cross Life Saving Course.

Football

The football season stretched from the end of September to the end of January. The championship game was postponed due to inclement weather, exams and the mid-semester break.

The Bulldogs led by Capt. Bob Shayer defeated the Eliminators, 2-0. The only score came when the Eliminators' quarterback dropped the ball in the end zone for a safety.

The chess, checkers, and bridge games will start this Monday, February 17, and continue every Monday night. All interested should come to the Day-Hop Cafeteria in Dougherty Hall at 7 p.m.

The foul-shooting eliminations will start on Friday, February 28 They will be held in Alumni Gym from 2 to 4:30 p.m. Those interested should apply at the Intramural Office.

The softball league will not start until March 23. Entries, however, will be accepted from February 27 to March 16. Volleyball starts on April 2. Entries will be accepted from March 9 to March 24.

Those wishing to take the life-saving course should apply at the Field House. The course is the Senior Life-Saving Course. It will begin on April 1. The Instructors Water Safety Course will also be given.

Basketball

The eight basketball leagues are now moving toward the Play-offs next month. With 73 teams still competing. the league-leaders are by no means safe.

The leaders continue to be: Alpha Sigma, NROTC Staff. Charlie Co., Raiders, P.W.S., Tolentines, No-Names, Rejects, Lushes, Hoppers, Swishes, and Phi Kappa Pi. Once again, it is virtually a tossup in the two evening leagues.

Explorers End Wildcat Streak, 63-59

by Steve Freind

In the course of our nation's history, there have been two major disasters. One was Pearl Harbor. The other occurred on Saturday night as LaSalle's towering Explorers handed Villanova a 63-59 defeat before a sellout Palestra throng of 9233.

By winning, the Explorers ended the Wildcats' 13 game victory streak and gained the inside track to the Big Five Title. The only remaining roadblock to LaSalle's first City Series Championship is Temple, who clashes with the Explorers on Saturday night.

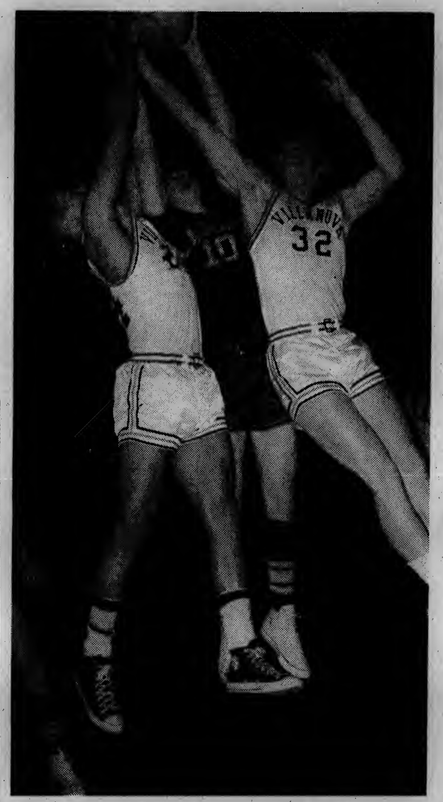
Clutch foul shooting in the waning minutes provided the Explorers with their margin of victory. Curt Fromal and Harry Carpenter each converted both ends of one-and-one situations to seal the 'Cats' fate.

'Cats Lead at Half

The first half was nip-and-tuck with the 'Cats taking a 37-34 advantage to the locker room at intermission, largely through the efforts of Richie Moore and Jim Washington. In this stanza, Washington tallied 18 of his game-high total of 21.

Twice during the second half Villanova ran its lead to nine points, but the Explorers were not to be denied. Taking advantage of its edge in height, LaSalle fought back, with Frank Corace finally knotting the score at 57 all with two minutes remaining. Washington's foul shot seconds later gave the 'Cats their last lead.

Leading Scorers



Leading point-maker for the Explorers was George Sutor, who netted 18 points with 12 rebounds in a brilliant performance. Following Sutor in the scoring column was Frank Corace with 17 markers, seven below his average.

Joining Washington in double figures for the 'Cats were Moore and Bill Melchionni, notching 12 and 10 respectively.

The major factor in the LaSalle triumph was their great height advantage. With a front court measuring 6-8, 6-7 and 6-6, the Explorers completely dominated the boards. Of LaSalle's 63 points at least 20 came on follow shots or taps. The towering trio was especially successful in blocking out Washington, the 'Cats' lone big man, during the second half.

Jones

The Wildcat attack was severely crippled by the loss of back court ace Wally Jones midway through the first half with a hip injury. According to Coach Jack Kraft, Jones suffered bruises and a pulled muscle in the left hip. How long he will be lost to the 'Cats is not yet known.

A Guy Named Jones

by Rusty Miller

Imagine a guy with a common name like Jones being elected Villanovan of the year. What could anybody with the ordinary name of Jones possibly do to attain that honor?

This Jones boy's first name is Wally — short for Walter. Wally Jones is a 6-2, 21 year old senior from Overbrook, Pa.

It seems that the main consideration for this Jones' selection as Villanovan of the year was his ability in basketball, which from all appearances is rather popular on this campus.

As a high school senior Jones played on a team that included Ralph Heyward, Wayne Hightower, and Walt Hazzard. They copped the city championship and Wally was voted to the all-tournament team.

In his sophomore year Wally was part of an unforgettable threesome, Leftwich, Jones, and White — showboating, inc—and thefansloved it. Those three not only won the games but put on a show that rivaled the globetrotters — until the night that Hubie missed that two-handed backward dunk. There'll never again be a trio that can work the ball as they could.

Jack Ramsey, coach at a small area college, one-time president of the national collegiate coaches' coat throwers association, and a staunch backer of Villanova . . . admits . . . that Jones "is the most valuable player we've played or will play against. He's great in finding the open man. Some guards may score more," says Jack, "but scoring isn't the only determination of a player's worth."

Harry Litwack of the Temple Owls also concedes that Wally is "one of the outstanding players to come out of this area . . . in a class with Guy Rodgers, Tom Gola and Hal Lear."

Since his sophomore year this Jones boy has reaped numerous honors; All-Big Five two years running, MVP with a guy named Lynam last year, MVP — by the Villanova Club of South Jersey this year, NCAA regional team at College Park as a sophomore, NIT All-Tournament last year, and he is the only player to have been named MVP in both major ECAC invitational tournaments, Quaker City Festival and Holiday Festival.

Eddie Melvin the outspoken mentor of basketball at Toledo, though somewhat less enthusiastic considers Jones a "very fine guard" who rates with his own Larry Jones and Manny Newsome of W. Michigan as an All-American candidate.

To watch Wally thumping the ball down-court yelling "Sidney, Sidney!" or to observe his patented Jones style defense or his post-foul-shot arm manuvers you would swear that he was an unequaled extrovert. Nothing could be farther from the truth. This guy is the Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde of the short shorts set. In civilian life he is quiet, and unassuming. His favorite expressing is "How'ya feeling?" "He loves to eat", says Coach Jack Kraft, "especially shrimp cocktail and steak".

Kraft is the first to extol Wally's abilities. "He does everything well and under pressure he really shines."

Bob Calihan of the University of Detroit Titans contends that "there are a lot of real good guards on teams that we've played like Loyola, Purdue, Penn State and Holy Cross but I feel that the best two around are Steve Thomas of Xavier and Jones."

Utah's Jack Gardner considers Wally "a once-in-a-lifetime player" who has "the ability to kill you on defense." On his weekly TV and radio shows, Gardner frequently interviews his own guards, Doug Moon, himself of All-American caliber, and Skip Kroeger. Says Gardner, "I frequently ask the boys to comment on a opposing guard and their answer is always the same. The basic comparison has to be made to Wally Jones because he's the best backcourt man we've faced all year."

Wally is unquestionably the team's leader. However, he asserts his leadership not through the conventional "push" method but rather through inspiration and example. For the first 18 games of this season Wally has hit 116 for 271 from the floor and 63 for 80 from the line.

Long time coach and former pro player John Kundla of Minnesota hails Wally as an "outstanding All-American candidate. He's a bit fancy but he gets the job done." Kundla who faces some of the top teams in the country feels the only guard around who compares to Wally is Cazzie Russell of Michigan — and his whole team in the locker room backed him up.

The fiery Red Auerbach of the Celtics, though he saw Jones play only twice — in the Holiday Festival — says "if he proves strong enough he is definitely a fine pro prospect."

On being asked who he though gave him the toughest time this year Wally named Larry Jones of Toledo, Steve Thomas of Xavier, and Doug Moon of Utah. He added that Bill Bradley of Princeton and Henry Finkel of Davton gave the overall defense the most trouble. He feels that his greatest honor was MVP in the New York Holiday Festival.

In the final analysis, W. Jones, hotshot extraordinary, is recognized by all as a first class prospect to be added to Villanova's long line of All-Americans.

Trackmen Garner Four Medals During Annual Inquirer Meet

by Roy Baron

A pair of gold medals and a like number of silver medal performances highlighted the Inquirer Meet for Villanova fans last Saturday night at Convention Hall.

The first place finishers who took home gold medals were Noel Carroll in the 1000 and ex-Villanovan Pat Traynor in the two-mile. The two second-place performances came from Rolando Cruz in the pole vault and the mile relay team.

Carroll, who was content to hang back in fourth place for most of the race, moved into second position behind John Dunkelberg with two laps remaining. It was not until he came out of the last turn that Carroll was able to pull even with Dunkelberg.

The Irishman beat him in the run for the tape with Georgetown's Ed Duchini closing fast. Carroll's time of 2:09.7 was two-tenths of a second off the meet record.

Traynor Sets Record

In the Robertson Two-Mile, which featured the finest field of the evening, Traynor held back in sixth position most of the way. Having moved up slowly the 1963 alumnus blasted into the lead with a lap and a half to go.

He finished in the meet record time of 8:52.6, with runner-up Pat Clohessy also breaking the old record of 8:53.8.

One miss each at 15-6 and 16-1 kept Cruz from gaining a share of first place with John Uelses in the pole vault. Uelses cleared 16-1 without any misses. Going for a new world indoor mark with the bar set at 16-5, Cruz failed in three attempts while Uelses barely missed in his only try.

Crucial Second Leg

The Wildcats mile-relay quartet of Larry Livers, Al Adams, Stan Kozlowski, and Carroll ran a 3:19.9 in pushing Morgan State to a record equaling time of 3,19.5. The crucial leg for the 'Cats was the second leg run by Adams.

He sprinted into the lead shortly after taking the baton from Livers. But with about a half lap remaining in this three-lap leg, Adams ran out of gas. Morgan State reassumed the lead and held on for the final two quarters.

Student Council Day's Goal Is Greater Student Awareness

The Student Council, in an effort to encourage greater awareness, interest, and participation in the Villanova student government, has designated today, February 19, as Student Council Day.

This project, under the direction of Student Council vice-chairman Tom Furst, will be primarily a promotional affair which will focus on the activities, achievements, goals, and problems of student government at Villanova.

It will be one of the first projects of its type ever attempted by the Council, which has expressed alarm at the apathetic attitude of the Villanovan toward the campus government.

Purpose

It is hoped that this project will be able to clarify many of the student misconceptions concerning the Council, and at the same time present an accurate picture of the various branches and functions of the organization, which are at best only vaguely known to most Villanovans.

A number of events have been planned for the day, all of which will be open to student attendance and inquiry.

From 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. a dis-

Villanova Participates In Medical Program

Villanova University will again participate in the Smith, Kline, and French Foundation Medical Science Program this year. The purpose of the program is to identify and attempt to influence toward medicine able students who might otherwise choose different careers.

Anyone interested in participating in this program should contact Dr. John A. McClain, chairman of the Biology Department, in Mendel Hall.

Harvard-Radcliffe Concert Slated For Friday Night In Field House

by Bob Fennel

A concert by the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society will be given under the auspices of the Student Council Lecture and Concert Series on Friday evening, February 21, in the Field House at 8:15 p.m.

Tickets

Tickets may be purchased in the Pie Shoppe or at the Victor Cafe, 1303 Dickinson Street, Philadelphia. Mail orders may be placed through the Villanova Student Council.

There are two prices for the tickets. General admission is $1 per person, and student admission is $1 per couple.

The program will consist of two segments with an intermission. Works scheduled for the first half include "Magnificat" by Deutsche, "Cantata No. 65" by Bach, the Gloria from "Missa Mater Patris et Filia" by Prez, and Hassler's "Gratias Agimus Tibi."

After Intermission

Further selections in this segment are Grantini's "Dulcis Christie," Handel (Gallus)'s "Regnum Mundi," and "Sie werden aus Sada Alle kommen" by Bach.

After the intermission the program will start off with "Defense of Corinth" by Carter, then with Coleman's "I Know Where I'm Going".

e. e. cummings

Two works based on texts of e. e. cummings are Mennin's "Tumbing Hair" and "Bought Locks." Another pair of works are by Copland, his "Boatman's Dance" and "Dodger." Thompson's "Feast of Praise" is slated to close the evening.

Club History

The Harvard Glee Club, founded in 1858, is the oldest in the United States. It gained national recognition in a performance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1917.

International honors came to the group in 1921 when, at the invitation of the French Fourth Republic, they made a triumphal tour of the continent of Europe.

Boston Symphony

Since 1924, the Harvard Glee Club has presented an annual concert with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. They gave a performance of "The Damnation of Faust" by Berlioz, which was later recorded.

One of the club's firsts is a premiere performance of Stravinsky's "Oedipus Rex" with Leopold Stowkowski in 1937. They have won many awards, including the Grand Prix du Disque de 1955.

Recent Tour

Recently they won acclaim under the tutelege of Elliot Forbes with their tour of the Far East in which they traveled 25,000 miles in 61 days with 42 concerts.

Earlier Concert

Earlier concerts in the Villanova series have included Stowkowski and the American Symphony Orchestra and Rise Stevens. A Christmas concert featured the Villanova Singers, the Band, the Women's Glee Club, and the Georgian Court Singers.

Future offerings include the performance by the Curtis Symphony Orchestra on April 14. Future selections have not yet been announced.

For Friday's Concert there will be free parking in the University's lots and programs will be distributed at the doors.

Mayor Daley

Law Forum Series Closes February 27 With Richard Daley

The third meeting of the Villanova Law Forum to be held on Thursday, February 27, will feature the Honorable Richard J. Daley, mayor of Chicago. This meeting will be the last of a series on the topic "The City Faces Its Problems."

Mayor Daley was born in Chicago and is a graduate of DePaul University and its School of Law. He was admitted to the Illinois Bar in 1933 and was a democratic member of the Illinois House of Representatives from 1936-38. Mayor Daley was also a member of the Illinois Senate from 1939-46 and served as Director of Revenue for the State of Illinois from 1948-50.

First elected mayor in 1955, he was re-elected in 1959 and during this year he served as President of the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

Under the leadership of Mayor Daley, Chicago has been undergoing a muncipal renaissance and has been a center of interest for all those concerned with urban affairs. The city has developed a strong transportation system and improved municipal service.

Mayor Daley has been interested in the planning for Chicago but even more in the execution of these plans saying, "Blueprints for better living means nothing unless something is actually done to get them off the drawing board."

The meeting will take place in Garey Hall at 8:30 p.m. All members of the faculty and student body are invited to attend,

Shamokinaki Tickets On Sale; Dance Scheduled For March 6

General Chairman Steve Friend has announced that Shamokinaki, the dance which benefits the Augustinian Missions in Japan, will be held on March 6 in the University Field House.

Tickets are on sale now at Bartley Hall Cafeteria and the Pie Shoppe from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. The price of the tickets will be $2.50 until noon of March 4, after which they will cost $3.

Entertaining continuously from 8:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. will be the Villanovans and the Revelers. They have agreed to play for a reduced fee because of the charitable nature of the affair.

Celebrity Appearing

The T-Tones of Rosemont will make a gratuitous appearance, and there is a good chance that a noted celebrity will also attend the dance.

Those who purchase tickets will have an opportunity to win the door prize — a tea set from Japan. Chances will be sold along with the tickets for a drawing to be held at the dance.

Prize Awarded

Dieges & Clust Jewelers will donate the prize which will be either a Linde Star Sapphire worth $75 or a 10 point diamond valued at $60 to be placed in the winner's class ring.

Tutorial Project Requests Student Aid In Finding Tutors

As a new semester begins in local schools, the Philadelphia Tutorial Project is anxious to find tutors to help junior and senior high school students who are having academic difficulties. Large quantities of tutors are needed to meet the requests which continually pour in.

The Philadelphia Tutorial Project is a unique experiment aimed at aiding students in their weak subjects. Any college student or college graduate, who desires to tutor, should think seriously about volunteering for only an hour and a half each week, in neighborhood churches, YMCA's, etc.

Desperately Needed

Tutors are desperately needed. They have more than 450 students who want help. They have no more tutors available.

Latin Students Speak On Current Crises At IRS Discussion

The International Reations Society will conduct a unique panel discussion on Tuesday, February 25, at 7:30 p.m. in 110 Bartley Hall.

Two Panamanian girls attending Rosemont and a Villanova student from Cuba will discuss the current crises in Latin America. They will attempt to give the wealthy person's view of the reasons for the peasants' current plight, and how, perhaps, the condition could be remedied.

The discussion will be open to the public and the audience is urged to submit questions to the panelists.

The entire event is being staged in preparation for the "Conferene on Latin America" to be held at Immaculata College on March 7.

play featuring the Council's organization, which will be explained by pictures, charts, and minutes of past meetings will be set up in Dougherty Hall.

It wil be staffed by a Council representative, who will be qualified to answer student questions and to give a general explanation of the display.

Council Meeting

Following this, at 6:30 this evening, the Council will hold its regular meeting in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall, to which the student body has been expressely invited.

The meeting will feature a speaker from the administration who will discuss the importance of the Council, and will also include an address by Furst, who will summarize the day's events and give reasons for an interest in the student government.

Also, at this time, the Council will conduct its regular business, voting on a number of current motions, one of which will deal with a change in the grading system. The entire proceedings will be broadcast on WWVU.

Magazine Coverage

Beause the Council feels that the problem of lack of student interest is one that is prevalent in the majority of colleges and universities today, a number of area shcools have been invited to attend the meeting.

Furst also stated that a few well known magazines have expressed an interest in using the Villanova project as a focal point for illustrating the problem.

It is hoped that the project will not only bring a greater awareness of the Council to the student body, but that it will also provide an intelligent basis for voting in the spring elections.

Student Council Slates Trips For Villanova Students, Staff

The Student Council, in conjunction with Rogal Travel Service of Philadelphia, is sponsoring two separate trips to Europe.

The trips, of 70 and 45 days respectively, will depart from New York for London around June 10. They will likewise return to New York.

The trip is open to students, faculty, alumni, and administrative staff of Villanova, as well as their spouses and other members of their immediate family. The person actually associated with Villanova must acompany any members of the family making the trip.

Round trip air fare (New York-London) is $323.00. A $50 deposit must accompany all reservations, the remainder payable 60 days prior to departure.

Tourists will fly via Pan American jets. The flights will be nonstop.

The $323 will cover only the cost of the New York to London trip. All other expenses will be incurred by the individual tourist. Any arrangements for travel other than the overseas flight will be made directly with Roga' Travel, an established travel agent with offices in all major cities on the east coast.

Pamphlets with further details concerning the trip may be obtained in the Student Council office at any time. People seeking information about the trip may call Ext. 265 Monday through Friday from 10:30 to 11:30 and from 3:30 to 4:30 or write to Ed Coffey, c/o, the Student Council Office, Dougherty Hall, Villanova.

ICG Readies For Convention; Members Preparing Platform

The Villanova Chapter of I.C.G. is presently preparing for its regional convention, to be held February 29, and for the state convention in Harrisburg for three days in April. At this convention will be representatives from approximately 10 schools in Southeast Pennsylvania..

Meet Weekly

The I.C.G. members meet weekly on Thursdays at 10:30 a.m. in 105 Vasey Hall. Until the convention in February, they will be busy drawing up a model national political platform.

Thursday meetings are conducted by parliamentary procedure. There are nine committees, each concerned with a major issue in the political platform.

Each week, various committees are expected to report. Statements are drawn up, debated, and passed or vetoed according to parliamentary procedure.

The passed measures are incorporated into the Villanova I.C.G. platform.

At the convention, there will be a committee meeting and an entire group meeting.

On Thursday February 14, there was a Regional Workshop for I.C.G. members at Temple University .

I.C.G. is constantly looking for new members. Anyone with a sincere interest in politics and government is invited to attend weekly meetings and observe the worthwhile work being done by this burgeoning Villanova group.

Temple Recruiter On Campus March 10

Mr. John A. Moritz, Placement Director, announced that a representative from Temple University will visit the campus Placement Office on Tuesday, March 10, from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. to interview candidates for graduate work in education.

Temple offers Liberal Arts graduates an opportunity to earn a Master's Degree in Secondary Education, and at the same time, the graduate is given an assignment as a teacher in the Philadelphia or suburban schools. Thir program has a salary of approximately $5000.

Also known as the Intern Teaching Program for College Graduates, this program includes on-the-job training leading to professional certification, placement, and tenure. The program may normally be completed in two to three years.

Portrette

Burning Idealist

There is a Villanova counterpart to the dedicated men and serious thinkers of the past. Perhaps you have seen him pacing the campus walks, absorbed deeply in abstract or practical thought.

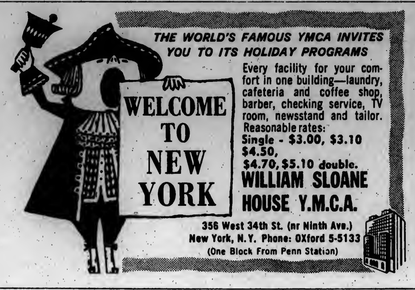
His name is Joe McGill.

"It may seem strange to deride material success, but such a goal seems somewhat incomplete." Joe is a man of latent creative fire, and possesses a burning idealism tempered with the practical.

Judging by his words above, it becomes obvious that he is seeking much more from life than simply status. Joe hopes to reach the modern-day "Everything" and achieve his goals through teaching and writing.

There is a consistent strain underlying McGill's philosophy: "It seems to me that many lives are formed and often destroyed by goals which are strictly concerned with the world as their object. I would like to devote my life and thought to the communication of truth to others which may possibly help them."

In preparation for his future, then, this senior English major has been doing a great deal of tutoring on campus, and plans to pursue a post-graduate degree in either philosophy or English.



While awaiting his actual test with the world, however, McGill has not been standing idle. He enjoys "contributing to the University through the extra - curricular activities each of which has proven a new and welcome challenge."

These challenges have worked both for and against him. Whereas his most successful endeavor to date has resulted from tireless efforts as Chairman of the Chad Mitchell Trio Concert. He seems to have enjoyed particularly the unprecedented senior (presidential) electoral debate last Spring.

McGill's academic and extra-scholastic achievements have certainly not gone unnoticed, for he was recently selected to the national Who's Who among Students in American Universities and Colleges.

Senior Weekend Plans Crystallizing 'Another Successful Year' -- Murphy

Plans for the Senior Weekend are well under way to another successful year according to Senior Class President James Murphy.

Sarah Vaughn and the Four Preps will headline the Concert Friday, April 3, at 8 p.m. All recent concerts have been sell-outs and with the quality of entertainment, this year's concert, according to Jim Murphy, will be no exception.

Tickets for the affair will go on sale in the Pie Shoppe on March 5 at $2.50 and $3.00. The $3.00 tickets are on the floor and the others in the balcony.

Only seniors will be able to purchase them for the first three days of the sale. Mail orders should be addressed to Box 85, Villanova University.

Unlike the custom of the last few years the weekend will begin with the Senior Concert instead of the Jazz Festival.

General Entertainment

Jim Murphy and the other senior class officers believe that universal entertainment was preferred for the affair and the Jazz Festival may not appeal to the greater portion of the senior class.

Ed Weille, Concert Chairman, has expressed nothing but highest praise for the talents of Miss Vaughn and the Four Preps. He states that the calibre of performers is sufficient to insure success.

The scene of last year's highly successful Dinner Dance, the Sheraton Hotel, in Penn Center Philadelphia, will also be the location of this year's Senior Dinner Dance on Saturday night, April 4.

Tickets for the Dinner Dance will go on sale in the Pie Shoppe on March 5. Arrangements have been made by the weekend committee to provide economical prices for tuxedos and flowers.

Dinner will be served at 7:00 p.m. and the evening will extend until 1 a.m. There will be continuous music from 9:00 p.m. provided by Adam Wade and his orchestra.

Chairman Coffey

Chairman of the entire affair is Ed Coffey, a senior arts major who has been prominent in the Villanova Forum and the Villanova NROTC.

Also co-chairman Rich Corona and Jerry Campane have promised that the favors will be the most pleasing and delightful ever given.

The deadline for the senior queen contest has not been decided as of yet but Jim Murphy urged the submission of the candidate's pictures as soon as possible.

There will be a box provided in the Student Council office for this purpose. Seniors wishing to submit candidates should consult the senior bulletin board for time, size and other pertinent facts concerning the pictures.

Contrary to previous tradition the Dinner Dance is being held in the spring months instead of the severe winter months of previous years. This is a precedent established by the senior class. Mike Ferrara has been appointed the co-ordinating publicity chairman for the entire weekend.

Robert Strong, WWVU Station Manager presents a copy of "Four Days" to the Rev. Louis A. Rongione, OSA, librarian. The book tells of President Kennedy's assassination, and will go on sale soon.

Roman Catholic Index Is Discussion Subject Of Literary Society

The Literary Society will hold its third meeting of the semester on Thursday, February 20, in 207 Vasey Hall. At this meeting, the Society will discuss the Roman Catholic Index.

The Index is the Church's official guide to publications. However, as of late, the Index has received much criticism because it is not updated or reflexive in its views.

The Society's discussion will be primarily objective in nature. Much of the discussion will center around the effect of the Index upon the modern reader.

During March, two programs on the theatre will be presented. "The Decline and/or Direction of the Modern Theatre in America" is tentatively scheduled for March 2. This program will be symposium in format. Then, on March 5, the Society will discuss a trend in Twentieth Century drama, "Avant-Garde: The Theatre of the Absurd."

'Belle Air' Themes Announced Book's Goal Is Simplicity

Dick Tucker, editor-in-chief of Belle Air, has announced the themes and innovations of the 1964 Villanova yearbook.

The theme will be the educational and academic aspects of collegiate life, rather than social or campus life, as was true in the past. Emphasis will be on the individual.

This year's Belle Air will be experimental in terms of layout and photography. Returning to traditional lines, however — that is, with meaningful copy to supplement the pictures — it has aimed at simplicity.

Captions have largely been eliminated. Identification and subtle humor in the copy will replace them in what the editors describe as a fairly radical change and recent development in yearbook publications.

This de-emphasis almost forces the student to concentrate on significant copy rather than on banal captions. Tucker said that there is "a poetic image between the mass of the copy and the photography," and praised Copy Editor Faith Connor for her work.

The photographic theme, announced the editor, is "to place the camera just enough out of focus so that we are reminded of the good things but can't distinguish the bad." Where possible all pictures were taken in natural or available light with a diffused or blurred background.

Eight color shots are expected to be used in this largest edition in the history of the University. Accuracy in all aspects of the yearbook is being stressed.

The tentative publishing date is May 25.

Pre-Law Club Collects Law School Catalogs For Student Body Use

The Pre-Law Society announced that they have collected approximately 60 catalogs from various law schools. These schools are located primarily in the northeast section of the country. The Bartley Library houses these books and they are available for student use.

Vice-President of the Society, Tony Fulginitti, stated that he is now making plans for the Pre-Law Journal, which will include articles dealing with any aspect of law. Any undergraduate student may submit articles to this journal.

Memberships are now being accepted for the second semester and students may join at the law meetings which are held on Thursdays at 10:30 a.m. in 204 Bartley.

Letter To The Editor

To the Editor:

Though this letter was occasioned by the letter of Mr. Ernest Abate '65 to the Editor (Villanovan, Vol. 39, No. 13, p. 4), it is neither an answer to nor a rebuttal of the sentiments expressed therein. However, it seems to me that some comments of clarification might be productive of better understanding relevant to the use of the University Library.

Let me begin by saying that a man who wears two hats must occasionally encounter the inevitable dilemmas of a bicephalous person.

As moderator of the Villanovan, I consider it among my several duties to respect the freedom of expression of students and others who care enough about Villanova to suggest possible improvements and who think well enough of the Villanovan to use it as a medium for the improvement of the status quo.

As librarian, it is my duty to do all that I can to give the best service to the greatest number of persons using the Falvey Memorial Library.

The following, excerpts from a letter addressed by me, on January 10, 1964, to Mr. Martin G. McGuinn, President of the Student Council, will, I hope, afford some solace and satisfaction to our students:

"When not in academic use, you may consider the seminar rooms in the basement and on the second floor available to the students for studious purposes."

"With proper permission the Music Room and the Villanova Room are hereby made more accessible for student use."

"It is the earnest desire and even dedication of the Library Staff to give the maximum service to the Students and Faculty."

Permit me, at this time, to state what should be, but apparently is not, an obvious fact. The library is not and cannot become a study hall. The place to do your "home work" is at home. This means your own home for the commuters and the residence halls for the campus students.

I'm sure that no restaurant owner would be so broad minded as to permit people who bring in their own lunch to take up the space in their dining room which is reserved for patrons who come to partake of the food supplied by the restaurant.

I hope that the analogy is clear and valid. We cannot possibly give the greatest possible service to those who come to the library to use its collection and facilities if we dissipate and clutter up the already very inadequate space for purposes not pertinent to or beyond the functions of a University Library.

Third in a Series:

The Class Format

Bland, unimaginative, worthless, are but a few of the terms that have frequently been used to describe the current classroom format at most U.S. colleges and universities.

Recent Student Council debates, for example, centering on the question of whether class attendance should be compulsory seem to indicate something more than passing recognition of the advantages of class cutting.

They reflect a more deeply felt disaffection with the value of class itself. Criticism of the curricula, especially in terms of the function and value of classroom instruction, has been widespread and vocal.

Critics of the present classroom format have noted that it has, for the most part, failed to challenge the student to stimulate his mind further than the simple accumulation of fact. It seems clear that the class in which a professor simply reads off a barrage of notes is of dubious value.

Class might just as well have been dispensed with and notes published and distributed for the students to study on his own.

The student in this sort of situation finds it difficult to keep up with the dictation of the professor let along attempt to comprehend the material. In addition, the "you go home and memorize these notes and give them back to me in a blue book Friday" attitude unfortunately seem to be the rule rather than the exception.

Educators reply that the present situation is unavoidable, that the class format is the way it is due to sheer physical necessity. The lack of a sufficent number of teachers in addition to limited funds, for instance, renders more liberal discussion and other efforts at a more informal approach to classroom instruction impossible.

This is not to say that there are no imaginative professors. But their efforts are frequently hampered by an outmoded and outworn curricula structure.

The financial and related problems experienced by any major university are no doubt immense. But it would seem that there must be ways of effecting change and improvement in the curricula that do not involve money or numbers of students.

It is difficult to believe that the present format of the typical class is the final stage in the evolutionary development of the educational process. If there is a better way, if a more imaginative and worthwhile format can be supposed, it ought to at least be considered with a view toward innovation.

One of the major attempts at innovation in the direction of improving the curricula has been at St. John's College in Maryland. The curriculum there consists of a reading by the student of a hundred selected books over a four year period. Instead of formal classes the readings are discussed by students with professors at informal sessions.

Though the St. John plan might be too extreme for application at most schools it, nevertheless, provides an example of how much more worthwhile education can become imaginative.

A more broadly based program of reading, for example, might be developed, perhaps within the individual departments. The books might in turn be discussed by professors and students at informal, seminar-like sessions.

Experimentation has no doubt been attempted in the past. Yet, by observing general student dissatisfaction with a great deal of the curricula and classroom format, it seems clear that more energetic experimentation has for the most part been lacking.

Only through a continual review of the method of instruction can constructive steps toward innovation be developed with a view toward making the educational process ar exciting experience rather than a dreadful bore.

President's Report

Council Reconvenes

by Martin McGuinn
President, Student Body

The Student Council has reconvened for the second semester and immediately encountered controversial legislation. At the Senate meeting, motions concerning the academic grading system and a change in the elections procedure were introduced.

Jim Griffin, Sophomore class treasurer, presented a motion calling for the student-faculty committee to re-evaluate the present marking system so that academic grades will more equitably reflect a student's achievement.

Second Motion

A second motion proposed by Richard Connors, chairman of the Election Committee, proposed a registration process during the three days preceding the general spring elections. The Senate recommended the above proposals for passage to the Student Congress which will consider them tonight.

Freshmen elections for resident and day student representatives to the Student Council will take place on February 27. These elections mark the commencement of class activities for Freshmen who in April will elect four class officers and two additional Student Council representatives for their Sophomore year.

Appreciation

The Student Council would also like to express its appreciation to the Rev. Joseph J. Gildea, OSA, who is leaving his post as Vice Presient for Acaemic Affairs. Father Gildea has been outstanding as chairman of the student-faculty committee and earned the admiration and respect of all those associated with student government.

Council Day

Today is "Student Council Day" and serves as an attempt to promote the aims and purposes of student government. Although all Congress and Senate meetings are open, a more concerted effort is being made to publicize the work of Student Council in order to encourage a greater awareness and increased participation.

Student interest can insure the most effective and representative student government. We welcome you to tonight's meeting in the East Lounge, Dougherty Hall at 6:30 p.m.

There will be no Villanovan next week.

Deadline for the next edition is February 26.

There will be a meeting of the copy staff tomorrow at 10:30 in the Villanovan office.

TW3 Brings Rain To Wasteland

by Frank Sauers

The unfortunate barreness of that vast wasteland called TV has in the past few weeks been blessed with a refreshing oasis of vitality with the appearance of NBC's That Was The Week That Was.

Dubbed TW 3, the neophyte satirical review has taken upon itself the weighty job of looking with jaunty eye on happenings throughout this ironic lump of interplanetary dust that we call home.

In their first four programs the creators of the show have served notice that no aspect of our civilization is going to escape satirical onslaught.

Already the cast has lampooned the new president, birth control groups, the Pope and the Patriarch, and even Lucy Baines Johnson's collegiate boyfriend.

Hilton Chain Blasted

The miraculous creation of the Hilton hotel chain was unabashedly compared to the miraculous creation of the universe as set forth in Genesis. Burr Tilstrom played Khrushchev having an imaginary conversation with a bearded puppet.

The programs have become more devastating as time progresses. More recent programs have derided the U.S. Olympic team by complimenting them for their ineptness, scorched Time magazine for slanting the news, and delivered a stunning assault on the recent uncovering of former Nazi exterminators in the cabinet of German Chancellor Erhard.

This sort of sardonic fun is long overdue. A healthy society needs satire, and never has a civilization been more ripe for it. We are taking ourselves too seriously at a time when the actions of the race of men have never been more laughable.

Congressmen shriek in horror at the relationship between two well publicized movie stars, then go about their own little vices, consoled by the fact that their misdeeds are not so well publicized.

Hypocrisy Decried

We scorn the klansmen for donning their hoods of hate, only to turn and don our own private hoods, invisble, but not less real. We attend card parties for charitable relief and between hands talk about how the poor deserve what they have.

Actions laughable, and at the same time pitiful. Perhaps that is the essence of satire. We pity ourselves by laughing at ourselves — humor begetting purgation.

Appeals to Intelligence

Compared to other TV fare That Was The Week That Was appeals to the intelligence of the viewer. Unfamiliarity with human affairs would make appreciation of most of the satire difficult.

The program does have its shortcomings. The nervous unsureness of the first few weeks, however, has given way to a smoothly integrated, fast moving production. Tied together musically by the lovely Nacy Ames, the program is also served well by the writing and performing ability of the very witty Henry Morgan.

Deficiencies being in the minority — cheers for That Was The Week That Was! We can only hope that out of the early clamor and smoke of those who deem themselves offended, NBC and the sponsors will understand that satire must unavoidably offend somebody, and that this delightfully brash business of balloon pricking will survive and prosper.

EVOL SPELLED BACKWARDS IS LOVE

They met. His heart leapt. "I love you!" he cried.

"Me too, hey!" she cried.

"Tell me," he cried, "are you a girl of expensive tastes?"

"No, hey," she cried. "I am a girl of simple tastes."

"Good," he cried, "for my cruel father sends me an allowance barely large enough to support life."

"Money does not matter to me," she cried. "My tastes are simple; my wants are few. Just take me riding in a long, new, yellow convertible and I am content."

"Goodbye," he cried, and ran away as fast as his little stumpy legs would carry him, for he had no yellow convertible, nor the money to buy one, nor the means to get the money—short of picking up his stingy father by the ankles and shaking him till his wallet fell out.

"I am clean and fresh and relaxing," she admitted

He knew he must forget this girl, but lying on his pallet at the dormitory, whimpering and moaning, he knew he could not.

At last an idea came to him: though he did not have the money to buy a convertible, perhaps he had enough to rent one!

Hope reborn, he rushed on his little stumpy legs (curious to tell, he was six feet tall, but all his life he suffered from little stumpy legs) he rushed, I say, to an automobile rental company and rented a yellow convertible for $10 down plus ten cents a mile. Then, with many a laugh and cheer, he drove away to pick up the girl.

"Oh, bully!" she cried when she saw the car. "This suits my simple tastes to a 'T.' Come, let us speed over rolling highroads and through bosky dells."

Away they drove. All that day and night they drove and finally, tired but happy, they parked high on a wind-swept hill.

"Marlboro?" he said.

"Yum, yum," she said.

They lit their Marlboros. They puffed with deep contentment. "You know," he said, "you are like a Marlboro—clean and fresh and relaxing."

"Yes, I am clean and fresh and relaxing," she admitted. "But, all the same, there is a big difference between Marlboros and me, because I do not have an efficacious white Selectrate filter."

They laughed. They kissed. He screamed.

"What is it, hey?" she asked, her attention aroused.

"Look at the speedometer," he said. "We have driven 200 miles, and this car costs ten cents a mile, and I have only $20 left."

"But that is exactly enough," she said.

"Yes," he said, "but we still have to drive home."

"Oh," she said. They fell into a profound gloom. He started the motor and backed out of the parking place.

"Hey, look!" she cried. "The speedometer doesn't move when you are backing up."

He looked. It was true. "Eureka!" he cried. "That solves my problem. I will drive home in reverse. Then no more miles will register on the speedometer and I will have enough money to pay!"

"I think that is a smashing idea," she said, and she was right. Because today our hero is in the county jail where food, clothing, and lodging are provided free of charge, and his allowance is piling up so fast that in two or three years he will have enough money to take his girl riding again. ©1964 Max Shulman

Caught In Passing

Folk - Fertilizer?

by Jan Dyroff

I think that I would trade you a quart of humus for every modern folk LP that you'd bring me. I'd do it on a one to one basis. You'd wind up with a good base for a garden, but what'd I have?

I think that I would have an equal volume of the other kind of fertilizer that those with the thumbs of green prize.

Current Maxim

There is some sort of maxim current in the music world, current with everybody but Sid Mark, that says even if you don't dig someone, don't knock them.

It's a nice little maxim, but every so often somebody has to introduce a point of criticism. Folk is popular now and has been for a while.

I'm glad to see that a number of legitimate artists have finally gotten a chance to quit starving.

Much Trash

On the other hand I'm distressed by the huge amount of trash that's come out under the general head of "folk."

What is folk music but music of the folk? This obvious fact presents us the problem of deciding who the folk are. I'd say that a Pennsylvania Dutch farmer is folk, an Ozark hillbilly, or a Colorado lead miner.

I wouldn't call most of the synthetic groups or individuals in the game today folk, but merely some sort of commercial species of bird of prey. It shouldn't be necessary to mention any names.

Folk music is music of the people sung by the people, or by others who are serious in their work and do it the right way.

America's heritage is compassed quite nicely in its folk music. Strains of our European ancestors mix with those of our pioncer fathers. Their toils, woes, gladnesses, and disasters echo in their song.

By their nature the songs are simple, passed down by word of mouth. They are a part of everyone's cultural national resources.

As tangible natural resources fall into the hands of unscrupulous operators, so to do the intangibles.

When this observation was made at the start of the fad, the retort was given that although folk would be commercialized at least it would be brought to wider audiences.

Real Stuff

Besides, my opposite said, eventually the public taste would mature and with the training given it by commercial folk it would turn to the "real" stuff

I doubted it then, and still do. Everybody likes the song "This Land is Your Land." Not so many know it was written by Woody Guthrie (you know, "Woody Guthrie, who's he?"). Like nobody knows that you can still buy Woody Guthrie records and that they're pretty good.

Shoddy Seconds

Most people will settle for second-rate copies, and that's unfortunate. If you like inferior products, fine. If not, my offer still stands.

I can't knock things too much, but I can ask that you look around a little and think about what you're listening to and maybe plant a few morning-glories in the humus.

In The Public Eye

by John Riggs

A college has as many security and publicity problems as any film star or nationally-known politician. All it takes is one slip and immediately there is a local or nation-wide scandal.

Stop a minute and take enough time to ask yourself, and honestly answer, this question: How does V. U. shape as a university in the public eye? — locally or otherwise. Does it measure up to the expectations that a catholic school is always subjected to?

Popular Opinion

Popular opinion, once it is formed, is slow to change. It takes a concentrated individual effort to accomplish any significant reversal of viewpoint.

From what I have observed and heard, it seems that feelings toward Villanova University are mixed, depending on the relation people have with the school itself. For example, merchants and store owners who get most of the resident students' business are, or course, our best friends. Families whose children studied here naturally feel a strong interest in our academic activities and extra-curricular functions.

Average Family

Now, how about the average residential family which is in no direct way connected with V. U.? How do they feel about us? Some are, as they are in everything else, very critical. Others are proud to be living in the area of a well known catholic university. A few are totally unopinionated.

With all these diverse viewpoints and variations of opinions concerning our school, there remains one aspect in which almost everyone takes some sort of interest. And that is our athletic prowess. We are definitely a large topic of conversation in this respect

The local population takes a definite interest and, in most cases, a definite pride in Villanova's outstanding progress in basketball.

Students' Responsibility

A college is judged by its students; and therefore, in an effort to raise the public respect of any school, the students are individually responsible. They must constantly be aware that their behavior is being observed by people who are apt to make judgments by their first impression.

Therefore, as Villanovans, we should try our best to keep and extend our University's good reputation.

Wine, Women And Danger

by Ray Ritter

Stockholm is the city of intrigue and espionage. Sweden, being neutral in both World Wars, has served as a barnyard for spies, counterspies, and James Bond mystery thrillers. But Stockholm with its Grand Hotel, Supreme De Poulet Farci' A' La Royal, and Concert Hall, serves as much more to the Swedish population, especially during Nobel Week.

This is the setting for Metro-Goldwyn Mayer's newest adventure extravaganza The Prize, starring Paul Newman, Edward G. Robinson, Diane Baker, and the explosive new German star Elke Sommer.

Adopted from Irving Wallace's best selling novel, The Prize concerns a young American novelist, Andrew Craig (Paul Newman) who comes to Stockholm to accept his Nobel Prize in literature, and walks into wheeling-dealing murder, suspense, and uninhibited love affairs.

No sooner has he stepped from the plane bringing him from New York than he becomes involved in one of the most embracing and romantic plots ever thought up.

First he meets the blonde, blue-eyed Elke Sommer, who is a member of the Swedish Foreign Office, and who is assigned to guide him during his stay in Stockholm.

He then meets the brunette, Emily Stratman (Diane Baker) who is the niece of another Nobel winner, Dr. Stratman (Edward G. Robinson).

It is when Newman suspects Dr. Stratman of being an imposter that his chain of suspenseful escapades begins. He is hurled into a canal, comes close to being run down by a tug boat and a car, takes refuge in a nudist camp meeting, is involved in a murder case, and a Russian freighter called no less, The Seagull. All this is casted around the majestic events of Nobel Week.

It might be hard to understand, but under this shadow of intrigue, humor is the mainstay of "The Prize." The cameras run on and on as Paul Newman is pictured giving comical expressions, lowering his glasses, and hustling his Swedish guide. One scene pictures Miss Sommer and Andrew Craig riding in the back of a limousine. Craig is bragging about his love affair in America, and is trying to explain to his Swedish partner that he is experienced in the art of making love.

With outright clarity and a straight face Miss Sommer turns and says, "Mr Craig in our country you would be considered a mere amateur in love. Why settle for one dish when you can have a smorgasboard?"

Much of the casting of the movie was done expertly. Paul Newman is perfect as the happy go-lucky author from America who doesn't give a "hang" about anything and has only come to accept the money part of the award. As he puts it, "It ain't hay."

Upon reading the novel and seeing the movie, you would think the part of Emily Stratman was written especially for Diane Baker, Trying to live down her teenage image on the screen from The Diary of Anne Frank, she comes from The Prize portraying exactly, a girl with devious ways, not innocent, but sweet, and trying to hustle Paul Neuman for herself.

A Worthy Organization

by Steve Freind

Although followers of Jack Kraft's magic circus may disagree, the most important student organization on the Villanova campus is the Student Council. The reason for its paramount importance is its main objective. Without flowery phrases or verbose sentences, the primary function of the Student Council is to serve the student body.

Achievements

In this respect, this year's Student Council has been especially successful. The Council's accomplishments throughout the year have been many and varied. Perhaps the most noteworthy achievement is the new semester realignment plan. Under this schedule change the first semester will now end before the Christmas holidays.

Another motion passed by the Council was a measure calling for non-compulsory class attendance. This motion went as far as Father President before being vetoed, thus giving hope for eventual passage.

Undoubtedly the one Student Council accomplishment that has gained the most publicity, both on and off campus, in the Concert-Lecture Series. So far, this series has presented such prominent figures as William Buckley, Harry Golden, Leopold Stokowski and Rise Stevens. A Spring appearance of Senator Barry Goldwater and Hubert Humphery is still a possibility.

And, of course, no review of Student Council motions is complete without mention of the issue of girl cheerleaders. This somewhat touchy subject ravaged the campus for weeks, gaining attention in national newspapers.

Despite these invaluable functions, the Student Council still remains the victim of student apathy. Many students regard the Council as an elite organization, aloof from the student body. These students reason that, since they have no voice in the Council, the functions of that body concern them in no way.

Nothing could be farther from the truth. As has already been stated, the primary concern of the Student Council is the student body. Any student, even though he does not belong to the Council, can initiate a motion. The only stipulation is the the motion be co-signed by a Student Council member.

Student Council Day

In response to this feeling of lethargy toward the Student Council, a special Student Council Day is being held today. This affair, headed by Tom Furst, vice-chairman of the Student Council, will attempt to acquaint the student body with "the activities, achievements, problems and goals of the Council." It is hoped that this event will make the Council more accessible to the students, thus encouraging greater participation in student government.

The focal point of the day is the Student Council meeting this evening at 6:30. The Council has invited the heads of student government to attend and discuss the lack of student participation in student government and offer solutions to this situation. All students are urged to attend to observe the Council in action. Any member of the student body is allowed to speak at the meeting. The entire meeting will be broadcast on WWVU.

No Academy Award

by Paul Norton

Take a little bit of pretty Jean Simmons, add a large amount of strong man, Robert Preston, toss in cute little Michael Kearney and mix slowly with much pathos by James Agee, adapted by Tad Mosel and produced by wonderboy, David Susskind, and presto! — a tear jerker, a whole lot of philosophizing and a dull movie.

All the Way Home is a two-time Pulitzer prize winner, first as a novel and later as the Mosel play. The gray tone movie version is an uninspired attempt to recreate its previous success by employing camera techniques and trite movie situations, somewhat reminiscent and more ably handled in The Dark at the Top of the Stairs, To Kill a Mockingbird, and Long Day's Journey Into Night. As a matter of opinion the whole production leaves one with the impression of having seen it all before.

Dull Plot

The plot plods through the trials of an atheistic father who loves a very Anglican mother who is expecting a "surprise" and who doesn't know how to tell her child about it.

The surprise, of course, is a baby and throughout the movie you get the impression that the little boy knows all about just about everything but isn't letting on to a soul, — least of all to the audience.

The major conflict comes by way of an unfortunate accident in which the father is killed, thus subjecting the mother to more somber emoting than in the past, especially when the little boy is beginning to ask a lot more stupid questions.

As portrayed by Jean Simmons, the mother is an uneven character. She is a woman torn by her own desires and strongly limited by her religion. Miss Simmons maintains a certain dignity in the face of death but in more complex moments of emotion she fails miserably.

Weak Satire

There is an unsuccessful attempt at satire pointed at the Anglican Church and this is most haphazard. It gives much of the script an unreal atmosphere by skirting some of the main issues.

It is this constant detour of direction which makes the whole movie so superficial. In one instance we see death through the eyes of a devoted wife, then the whole point of view changes to that of her child. When these directions overlap, the total vision is blurred.

Robert Preston, as the ever-present music man, is sufficiently brash and even manages a clumsy sort of warmth. His reactions to Miss Simmons were real enough but in our mind we couldn't wait for him to tell all the people they had trouble, friends!

Preston, for some reason, always seems the same and this is not necessarily bad. This show would be more effective if we could in some way erase any preconceptions about Preston.

No one could be so ruthless as to say anything about Michael Kearney's deplorable acting. So, enough said about the little boy.

High Point

Outstanding and overshadowing everything, including the script and weak directon, was Aline MacMahon's performance as the kindly aunt. Her acting is precise, and a role that could be merely a representative type is a clear and full characterization.

Susskind attempted a great deal in bringing this novel and play to the screen. He has overshot his mark because by translating this to a mass medium of entertainment, he has failed to enlarge the depth and insight of the script in relation to the scope of its production. It rings of a little toy in a large hollow box being played with by people who just rattle it around.

Wildcat Football Is Assembled In One Tome By Fr. O'Donnell

by Tom Krause

In the University Shop there lies a veritable treasure for all Villanova football aficionados. The Rev. Michael J. O'Donnell, OSA has compiled a record of Villanova football from 1894 to 1962 in his new book, Villanova Football: A Statistical History.

Published by Villanova University Press, the book is well worth its $4.50 price tag. It begins with a discussion of the evolution of the sports' fields on campus, then points out the early differences in the point-scoring system, and how the dimension of the gridiron has fluctuated since 1881.

There are separate sections on Varsity, Freshman, and Junior Varsity Football. Included in the Varsity section is a year-by-year compilation of their opponents and the score of each game.

The author has extracted comments from various sources depicting game events which occurred during the season. In compiling and collating these statistics, Father O'Donnell has rejected hearsay and attempted to remain accurate at all times.

Sports Lover

Father O'Donnell, an associate professor of English, has been at Villanova since 1932. Graduating from Villanova in 1927, he received his Master's from the Catholic University of America in 1931.

Father notes in his preface that due to lack of available information there may be "gaps in a history such as this devoted to hard cold facts." However, the omissions are few and the need for a comprehensive compilation of existing records was urgent.

In 1928 and 1932 there were two fires which left a hiatus in the Villanova athletic records. Father O'Donnell, an ardent sports fan, had always felt that something had to be done about this.

Rev. Daniel P. Falvey, librarian in 1953, had asked Father O'Donnell to re-organize the rare book section. While involved in this task, Father O'Donnell would answer questions which were sent to Villanova concerning the sporting scene.

Records Are Hobby

When swimming coach Ed Geiz took over the reins in 1953, he asked Father O'Donnell for all the swimming records. The trouble Father had in rounding up these statistics made him decide to write his sports' histories.

Working on this impressive job in his spare time — Father calls this his "hobby" — he made many trips to the Logan Square Library to gather the immense amount of material found in newspapers, magazines, etc.

All this has resulted in a basketball history published late last Fall and upcoming volumes on baseball and track. Another book covering diverse sports will be published in the near future.

BEAUTY and the BEARD
(YOU'LL LOVE THE BLENDING)

When an irresistible force like Ann-Margret meets an immovable object like Al Hirt... POW! You know she can sing but wait 'til you hear him! And with Al on his horn for extra good measure, "Beauty" and "The Beard" make a most happy "Bill Bailey," "Just Because," "Personality" and many more. Get this joyous album today. You'll love it. It's the blend.

Pie Shop Parody

by Jeff Radowich

Every great institution, no matter how large, has a focal point. an identity that people instinctively recognize.

For example. the Capitol in Washington has the Rotunda: Rockefeller Center in New York has the Plaza; the Gettysburg battlefield has Cemetery Ridge.

We here at Villanova likewise possess a focal point, a definite identity that easily distinguishes this institution: the Pie Shoppe.

The Pie Shoppe is actually a misnomer. This snack bar, located in the northwest corner of Dougherty Hall, sells not only pie, but also sandwiches, cake. ice cream and various non-alcoholic beverages.

Various Reasons

Permanently packed during school hours, this room has a seating capacity of 135 normal-sized collegiate-type people. Yet, in moments of great excitement here on campus, such as during Home-coming or when the Beatles are guests on the Ed Sullivan Show, the Shoppe has been known to accommodate 1641 students, much to the consternation of the building's architects, who still insist, somewhat dazedly, that this is impossible.

There are many reasons why people congregate at the Pie Shoppe.

When I asked a group of Sophmores why they were going from Mendel to the Pie Shoppe to get a coke, as there are coke machines in Mendel's cafeteria, one of the boys replied that he was going because Jim was going. Now Jim was going because Harry was going, who was going because Dave was.

Dave said he was going over to the Pie Shoppe because Janet was going. However, Janet said that she was going because all the boys were going.

Psychology

Hoping for better luck, I next chanced upon one of the professors in the Psychology Department. The gentleman, who wishes to remain unnamed, very genially agreed to fill me in on the "psychological justifications" of the Pie Shoppe.

"People, particularly these childishly insecure college students require some constant of environment. In this period of thermonuclear insecurity, with instantaneous destruction a definite threat, the possession of such a sanity-saver, as I like to call them, is felt to be a particular aid to the individual"

"It must be emphasized that there exists a direct correlation between the need for these mental crutches and one's relative security in the world. That's why college professors, for example, have no 'pie shoppe', while students do."

Noticing that he became signficantly more nervous and fidgety as time wore on, I glanced at my watch, remarked that it was getting towards lunchtime, and asked him if I could walk him to Dougherty, as I was going to eat.

He sighed in obvious relief, and then related how he eats lunch with his friends in The Faculty dining room every day at precisely twenty minutes past twelve.

When we arrived at the front steps of Dougherty Hall, I mentioned that it was now 12:35. The gentleman squeeked twice, waved hurriedly good-bye, lowered his head, scurried up the stairs and stumbled right through one of the plate glass doors.

Whatever the reason, an amazing number of Villanova students regularly gather in the Pie Shoppe. Most simply find a seat (without buying anything), and begin to debate and discuss the great issues of the day, such as: Shall we go to the Hi-ski hop this Saturday night? Are nurses for real.

These discussion periods cannot be made light of. Many times they evolve into serious considerations of important matters. Some very grave questions have been answered by prolonged, and often heated, deliberation in the Pie Shoppe.

All kidding aside, Villanova's Pie Shoppe, in a very real sense, is the social, economic, transportational, political and even cultural center of the campus. The only consistent criticism of this snack bar is it size. Many students feel that the Pie Shoppe is entirely too small. But, except for this one relatively insignificant blemish, the Pie Shoppe remains one of the most pleasant memories of graduating Villanovans.

DEVELOPMENT OF MANAGEMENT IS OUR MOST IMPORTANT FUNCTION

At the 1963 stockholders' meeting, Arjay R. Miller, President of Ford Motor Company, emphasized the Company's far-sighted recruitment program and its accent on developing management talent:

"Obviously, our long-run future will be determined by the development of our management. Here, every one of us—at all levels of supervision—recognizes this as his most important function. Since 1946, the Company has recruited widely varied talent—talent that can be blended to give us the required combination of tight administration and creative scope.

"Under a carefully conceived management development program, we try to recruit the best personnel available, both in training and experience. Once we get them, we have a program for giving them varied opportunities and increasing responsibility. This program is in force in all parts of the Company—in manufacturing, finance, styling, engineering and marketing.

"The program is paying off. We have developed a real depth of management talent in the Company, and we are dedicated to seeing it continued and reinforced. Because of this, I feel not only very fortunate in being associated with this management group, but also very confident of its long-run success. We know our goals and how to achieve them."

Pysch Club Begins Semester; President Outlines Activities

The university's Psychology Club will hold its first meeting of the second semester during the activities period tomorrow, February 20, in room 158 Mendel Hall.

The club has already outlined its plans for this semester. Its president, Peter Bologna, a senior from Detroit, Michigan, has announced that they will be culminated by the annual open house, given by the society in conjunction with the Psychology Department. The affair is scheduled for the week of April 6 and will take place in the psychology wing on the third floor of Mendel Hall.

During the event several noted authorities on psychology from across the nation are expected to give lectures. In addition, those attending will have the opportunity of viewing and using all types of psychological equipment.

Refreshments will be offered to visitors. Following the scheduled events, the club plans to hold a dance for its members.

Two lectures are planned for this term. One will be given by Dr. Bernard Boniwell of the Psychology Department. His topic and the other lecturer will be announced later. The club also has several movies scheduled for its members.

Bologna has announced that the society hopes to sponsor some interdepartment debates this semester with the Philosophy Club. Hopes have reportedly been spurred toward this goal by a couple of preliminary meetings.

Haverford Show Features D. Brubeck Concert On Feb. 28

The Dave Brubeck Quartet will be in concert at Haverford School's Ryan Memorial Gymnasium on February 28 at 8:30 p.m.

Tickets for the Brubeck concert will go on sale February 19, 20, 21 in the Pie Shoppe. The tickets are priced at $2.50 and $3.50.

Brubeck is currently, and has for some years been the most sought after personnality in the world of jazz. The success of the "Time" series of albums and his most recent release, a record version of Dave Brubeck's musical show, "The Real Ambassadors," is well known.

Brubeck's quartet features artists such as alto sax player Paul Desmond. Desmond recently won first prize in Down Beat Readers Poll. Joe Morello, on drums, was also recently honored by Down Beat.

The newest member of the group, Gene Wright, is an outstanding bass player and has been featured with Count Basie, Cal Tjader, and Red Novo, before his association with Brubeck.

Dr. James Dougherty To Speak On US-Soviet Arms Relations

The Conservative Club's first lecture of the semester, originally scheduled for Tuesday, February 11, has been rescheduled for Thursday, February 20. Dr. James Dougherty of the Foreign Research Institute at the University of Pennsylvania will address the club on the subject of Soviet-American Arms Relations. The lecture will be held at 7:30 p.m. in 110 Bartley Hall.

Dr. Dougherty is recognized as an authority on this subject and on foreign policy in general. On February 19, he will participate in a televised debate in New York on the subject of disarmament.

The second lecture of the semester will be given Thursday, February 27, by David Taylor, Scotish-American historian. Mr. Taylor, is considered an authority on the Revolutionary War and the colonial era of our country's history.

He will speak on the subject, General Washington's Secret Service," at 7:30 p.m. in 110 Bartley Hall.

All paid club members are entitled to receive a copy of Democracy in America to be made available immediately after the lecture on February 20.

Any student interested in joining the Villanova Conservative Club may obtain the necessary information by contacting Jack Ames in 252 Sheehan Hall.

Villanova PSEA Hosts Annual Convention For Southeast Region

On February 29, the Villanova chapter of the Student Pennsylvania State Education Association will serve as host for the annual convention of the southeast region. This year's theme for the convention will be "Teacher's Responsibilities: realistic, reciprocal, recognized."

Following registration in Bartley cafeteria, the program will be opened with the Invocation by Reverend Richard Appicci, OSA, dean of Student Activities.

Greetings will be extended to the delegates by the University President, the Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, prior to the principal speech by Dr. Charles Boehm, superintendent of Public Schools for Pennsylvania.

The luncheon, to be held in Dougherty Hall, will feature Mrs. Ella Rhoads, a Freedom Foundation Award winner and currently a teacher of social studies at William Tennent High School.

The delegates will break up into groups for the purpose of workshop sessions. The convention will end at a general session at which time elections will be held, and next year's officers chosen.

Turf 'n' Tinsel Begins Work On Production; Final Try-Outs Held

Once again the Turf 'n' Tinsel of Villanova University is commencing production of an entertainment. The show, to be presented April 30, May 1, and 2, has for its setting a dude ranch in the West.

Final try-outs were held Thursday, February 13. Practice for members of the chorus which consists of singers and dancers began last Wednesday.

T 'n' T which has already done a skit for Parents' Weekend and one for the Mothers' Club of St. Thomas of Villanova is an all-male organization.

Girls, however, are needed to assist with the make-up and costumes.

A professional director, Betty Green, has directed the show for the past six years. Bernadette Donnelly, a former Rockette, is the choreographer.

All profits from T 'n' T productions, and there will be if people turn out for the performances, go to a scholarship fund.

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANIES SALUTE: GEORGE KATZENBERGER, JR.

An Assistant Engineer himself only a year ago, George Katzenberger, Jr., now supervises two Assistant Engineers. George (B.S.M.E., 1961) is the New Jersey Bell Engineer responsible for providing for telephone growth in two important central office exchange areas near New Brunswick.

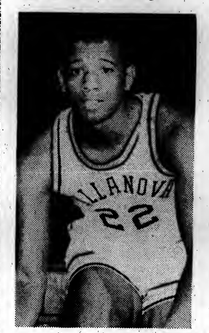
On his own signature George can approve expenditures for additional equipment and facilities costing up to $3000 apiece, a significant measure of his company's belief in his thinking and judgment.

George's outstanding contribution as an Assistant Engineer in East Orange qualified him for his latest promotion. He had gained notice for his thoroughness in programming equipment additions to central offices and in his handling of layout and building work for one of the largest telephone buildings in the district.

George Katzenberger, Jr., like many young engineers, is impatient to make things happen for his company and himself. There are few places where such restlessness is more welcomed or rewarded than in the fast-growing telephone business.

BELL TELEPHONE COMPANIES

TELEPHONE MAN-OF-THE-MONTH



The Other Half's Name Is George

by Rusty Miller

. . . George (Honeybear) Leftwich to be exact. This honeybear is a 22 year old junior from Washington, D. C. He stands 6-0 and weighs 185 pounds—like a honeybear should (George picked up the nickname when he was just a shade heavier.)

At Archbishop Carroll High School in Washington, George, like his counterpart from Overbrook, he mixed with some now famous company; Tom Hoover of the New York Knicks, John Thompson of Providence and John Austin of Boston College.

George, who was a high school headliner in Washington, had a tough problem to overcome as a freshman at Villanova—he ran into a "guy named Jones" who gives anybody a run for the headlines. But George seemed up to the task. As a sophomore he did a fine job of working (and entertaining) with Hubie White and Wally Jones. He was however, sidelined last year with a severe leg injury.

This year the lay-off hurt George's timing and shook his confidence a bit. This was noticeable in his hesitation to shoot or drive. However as much as he might try to conceal him the old George keeps showing through. Whenever he stops thinking too much and just plays ball there isn't a guard around that can stop him.

Last week's game against Duquesne was a good example of this. In it, George exhibited fine ball-control and some clutch steals "He played daredevil ball that night," said coach Kraft.

George is well liked by everyone who knows him. "He is one of the nicest boys you'd ever want on your ball club," said Kraft. He's pleasant and easy going but serious. He is always trying to improve himself. Like Wally he is ever practicing his shooting. "It'll pay off too" says Kraft.

Leftwich has in 20 games this year shot 79 for 203—38.4%. He has converted 35 of 46 free throws—75.5%. This adds up to a total of 193 points scored, an average of 9.7 per game. George has snared 60 rebounds for a 2.9 per game average. He has been charged with only 28 personal fouls.

Mermen Defeat Navy, LaSalle; Relay Squad Sets Pool Mark

by Steve Freind

Paced by All-American Dick McDonough, Villanova's swimming team splashed to two more victories last week, boosting their record to 6-2. After edging a powerful Navy squad, 50-45, last Wednesday, the Mermen avenged Villanova's basketball loss to LaSalle with a 75-20 romp.

Navy

Blazing to a pool record, the 'Cats 400-yard freestyle relay team provided the margin of victory against the Middies in the last event of the day. Rick Gridler, Jack Geoghegan, Paul Winn and Ray Donnelly were timed at 3:14.5.

Two other pool records were set. Geoghegan churned through the 200 yard freestyle in 1:48.9 to erase one standard while Middie Mike Collins' 0:14.1 clocking set a new mark in the 100 yard freestyle.

As usual, McDonough provided the 'Cats with two first places, notching wins in the 200 yard butterfly and the 500 yard freestyle. He also teamed with Bill Livingood, Ken Hurr and Ray Donnelly n the 400 yard medley relay to tie the pool mark of 3:43.8. Girdler took the 200 yard individual medley in 2:09.2.

LaSalle

Taking first place in 10 of 11 events, the 'Cats submerged LaSalle in a meet that saw three records smashed and one tied. Double winner Dick McDonough breezed through the 200-yard individual medley in 2:07.7, topping his own varsity record. He also raised his varsity and pool standard in the 500-yard freestyle with a 5:13.3 timing.

Bill Livingood was the other Wildcat contributor to the record books, tying Don Reed's varsity mark of 2:11.4 in the 200-yard backstroke.

Co-captain Jack Geoghegan matched McDonough with two wins, taking the 50 and 100-yard freestyle. Rick Girdler placed first in the 200-yard freestyle while Bob Biese took diving honors.

The Mermen also splashed to easy triumphs in the 400-yard medley and 400-yard freestyle relays. The Explorers' lone victory was supplied by Joe Dieterle who copped the 200-yard breaststroke.

Intramural Office Slates Chess, Bridge, Foul Shooting Contest

The intramural office is going to have their foul shooting contest on February 28 between 2 and 4:30 in the afternoon. The contest will be based on a best of 50 basis.

All students who are interested in signing up can do so in either the Intramural office or room 13 Sullivan. Awards, intramural keys, willbe given to the winners of the first three places.

The Chess and Bridge tournaments are underway and have matches each Monday evening in the day hop cafeteria of Dougherty Hall.

Interested students in this also can sign up in the Intramural Office.

Coach Devine's Wildkittens Vanquish Penn Frosh, 69-53

by Jerry Bruderle

Villanova's freshmen basketball team rolled to an easy 69-53 victory over Pennsylvania freshman at the Field House, on February 13. Terry McGuire and Frank Gaidjunas led the Wildkittens with 19 and 18 points respectively.

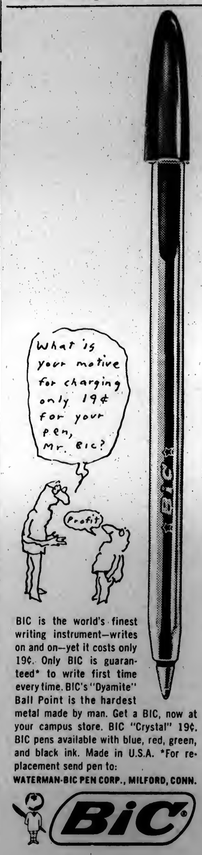
Dave Felser was high man for Penn with 16 points.

Last month at the Palestra, Villanova defeated Penn by only six, but this time they took control at the outset and kept mounting the lead throughout the game. The biggest spread came with a little over six minutes remaining in the game.

33 Point Spread

At this point the 'Kittens led 64-31, and Coach Jack Devine cleared his bench to reduce the score to the final margin.

The Frosh took the lead at 7-6, and were never headed. Pete Coleman, who had 11 points, directed the Villanova quintet to a 31-18 advantage. They didn't let up in the second half, as McGuire, Gaidjunas, Coleman and Billy Soens consistently outshot and outrebounded the smaller Quakers.



Soens Below Average

Soens finished with 13 points, well below his average, although he and Gaidjunas controlled the boards. As the lead mounted over 25 points, the subs gradually took over. Gaidjunas was the last starter to leave with four minutes left in the game.

With Frank hitting from around the basket, Soens driving and jumpshooting, and McGuire bombing from the corners, the Frosh scored almost at will. Coleman and Joe Turk, alternating with Dick Rago, moved the ball well against the Quaker defense.

6-3 Slate

The Frosh are now 6-3, with losses coming at the hands of La Salle and one to undefeated St. Joseph's. The loss to St. Joe's occurred on the same night as the Varsity's loss to Niagara, but they meet the Hawklets at 54th and City Line on February 21.

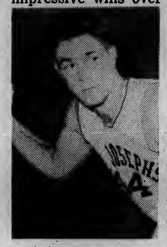
Four Tough Foes Provide Opposition As Kraftmen Head Into Homestretch

by Steve Freind



Turning into the homestretch of a fabulous campaign, Villanova's hustling Wildcats face four stiff tests before hitting the tournament trail. Seeking their twentieth win, the 'Cats tackle St. Joseph's in The Game on Saturday night.

Following the tilt with the Hawks, Villanova faces Marquette on February 26 at the Palestra before meeting the Temple Owls in another Big Five encounter the following Saturday. March 3 finds Werkman and his Pirates from Seton Hall at the Field House in the season finale.

St. Joseph's

With the graduation of Jimmy Lyman and Tom Wynne, basketball experts expected a lean season for St. Joe's. But the Hawks still have Coach Jack Ramsey and that's the main reason for their surprising 14-7 record.

Included in their string of victories are impressive wins over NYU, Providence and Georgetown. In Big Five competition, the Hawks have bowed to LaSalle and Penn, claiming Temple as their lone victim.

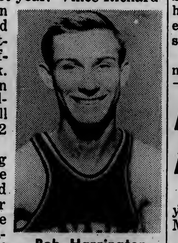
Tom Duff

Leading the scoring parade for the Hawks is Steve Courtin, the St. James sharpshooter who has burned the nets at a 19.6 clip. Courtin also has 75 steals to his credit, one off the team mark set by Bob Gormley in 1962.

Second in point production is Captain Jim Boyle with a 12.6 average. Larry Hoffman leads in rebounds, snaring 11 per game.

In clashes last year, the 'Cats avenged an earlier Hawk loss in the Quaker City Tournament with a Big Five triumph on Eric Erickson's last second layup in overtime. Villanova currently holds a 13-9 series lead.

Marquette



It's been a long season for Coach Ed Hickey's Warriors. With eight men gone from last year's team that posted a 20-9 log and third place in the NIT, Marquette has been able to muster only four wins against 14 losses. A brutal schedule has not helped their cause.

The only light in Hickey's gloom is Tom Flynn, a 6-5 sophomore. Flynn leads the Warriors in scoring with a 17.7 average while hauling in 10.7 rebounds. Last season, the Warriors met Villanova in the consolation round of the NIT, notching a 66-58 victory.

Temple

For the first time in his long reign at Temple, Coach Harry Litwack has a big man. He's Jim Williams, a 6-8 sophomore from Norristown who has lived up to his advance billing. In the Owl's 14-5 campaign, Williams has averaged 18 ppg. while grabbing rebounds at a 12.5 pace. He should provide Jim Washington with a rugged assignment.

Besides Williams, the Temple cast is almost the same as last year. Vince Richardson, Bob Harrington and Dan Fitzgerald continue to work Litwack's machine offense like clockwork. Frank Bishop has been sidelined with a shoulder injury but sub Bill Kelley is averaging 12 ppg.

Bob Harrington

Numbered among Temple's victims are Penn, St. John's and Navy. Two of their losses came during the Quaker City Tournament at the hands of NCAA champion Loyola and Drake, Missouri Valley Conference leader.

In last year's meeting, the Owls handed Villanova its only Big Five loss in a 50-49 cliffhanger. By winning, Temple broke a series deadlock, taking a 19-18 lead.

Seton Hall

Sporting a 10-7 log, Coach Richie Regan's Pirates feature one of the nation's leading scorers in Nick Werkman. The hot-shot senior is sizzling along with a 32.2 average. Following Werkman is Richie Dec, sinking 12.5 ppg. The Pirates have a touch of local flavor in their lineup in Sonny Sunkett who starred in high school for Camden High.

The high point of the Seton Hall campaign was last week's upset victory over LaSalle, 75-68. Their only other noteworthy victim was Georgetown's Loyola-killers, who fell to the Pirates, 94-90.

Last year, Villanova defeated the Pirates 71-64 behind a 38 point performance by Wally Jones. The 'Cats hold a 20-15 series lead.

NYC Catholic Athlete Award Goes To Frosh Bill Andrejko

Last Saturday night the Alumni Association of St. John's Prep presented the second annual Herb Hess Trophy to Bill Andrejko, a Villanova freshman. Andrejko is formerly of St. Francis Prep, also located in Brooklyn.

The award was given at the eighteenth annual reunion dinner held at the Garden City Hotel, Garden City, Long Island. The award was given on the basis of the 1962-63 scholastic year.

The award is sponsored by the St. John's Alumni Association in honor of Herb Hess who is presently the athletic coach at the school.

Candidates for the award are nominated by the coaches and athletic moderators of the Catholic high schools in the metropolitan New York area.

Names Forwarded

The names of the top-ranking athletes are forwarded to the various local New York newspapers who rank the nominees for first, second, and third place on the basis of ability, performance, and good sportsman.

Andrejko was chosen as the leading athlete in metropolitan New York Catholic high schools by a wide margin of the local New York press.

While at St. Francis Prep Andrejko participated in basketball, swiming, football and baseball and was all-Catholic in New York City for the latter two.

Frosh Mermen Dunked 65-29 By Navy; Doyle Breaks Mark

Navy's plebe swimming team outscored Villanova's yearlings by a score of 65-29, last Wednesday at Annapolis, Maryland.

Navy's plebe team, one of the best in the East this year, won every event except one, this being the 200 yard individual medley. Villanova's Greg Doyle, outstanding in this event, broke Villanova's freshman record at this distance. His time of 2:17.3 broke the old record set by Chris Fisher, a junior, back in 1962 of 2:17.7.

Joe Parell garnered two second places and the divers finished second and third as the Wildkittens win-loss record fell to 2-4.

Bonner Nips Frosh Mersmen

In a hotly contested swim meet between Monsignor Bonner High School and Villanova's Frosh Swimmers on Saturday at Villanova, the Frairs won out by a score of 52-43.

All events were swum under Inter-Collegiate rules but none-the less the Frosh lost their fifth meet out of seven.

In the 50 yard freestyle, Joe Parell and Frank Conlin finished one and two with the winning time set at 23.7 seconds. The 200 yard individual medley was won by Villanova's Greg Doyle in the time of 2:20.9 about 3 seconds off the record set by him earlier in the week. The 100 yard freestyle was won by Joe Parell in 53.1 seconds.

Pistol

team again took first place and the Villanova number 2 finished second ahead of the Valley Forge number 1 team.

George Sinclair, the outstanding marksman of the day, again led Villanova to another win, this time in the individual meet. By winning this event with a point score of 249 George was able to win the first place trophy and increase his team's win to five.

The final event of the day for men was the special ROTC meet in the international competition. Again the ROTC award was won by Gary Leidecker of Villanova with a point total of 239 which was enough to earn himself the silver medal.

The only women's event of the day, one in the Conventional and one in the international, were won by Christina Bushong, a student at Pierce College of Business Administration.

Track

were overshadowed by Tom O'Hara's 3:56.6 world record mile. This was a full two seconds faster than Jim Beatty's old mark.

Both the two mile and one mile relay teams ran to easy victories in Madison Square Garden. The two mile team, composed of Zwolak, Adams, Orr, and Sullivan coasted to an easy win in 7:36.2.

In the mile relay it was Earl Horner, Marshall Uzzle, Larry Livers, and Stan Kozlowski. These four ran a surprisingly fast 3:20 to take the event.

Carroll Places Third

A big disappointment to Villanova fans at the Garden was Carroll's performance in the 1000 yard run. Boxed in when he wished to make his move, he could do no better than a third place finish in the race won by Bill Crothers of Toronto in 1:50.8.

This Saturday many of the Wildcats will be entered in the National AAU championships in New York. There is a team title at stake there, but this is not the important trophy for Coach Elliott.

The big night for Elliott is March 7, the night of the IC4A championships. All the meets are just warmups for this big evening in Madison Square Garden. Along with the mile relay at the Penn Relays, the IC4A trophy is Jumbo's most prized possession.

Elliott Grooms Zwolak

Evidence of Elliott's planning is his use of Zwolak. Vic began the indoor season running half-miles as a part of the two-mile relay team. At Louisville he ran the mile for the first time.

But these were only a part of the coach's plan of having the distance star ready for a peak performance in the two-mile in the IC4A meet.

Kraftmen Conquer Canisius, 73-58 Melchionni, Moore Hit 56 Per Cent

by Jim O'Brien

It started with upset stomachs and it ended with upset stomachs. In between, however, everyone was fine and all went well.

United Airlines flight 682 took off from Philadelphia International Airport at 11:10 a.m. Friday, February 14. Thirty-three minutes later the team was in Williamsport, and Bill Melchionni and Richie Moore were on the ropes.

Rough Flight

It was a rough flight. The weather was bad, and Richie was soon reaching for one of those famous "bags" that airlines provide. He didn't use it.

All our players should get sick, for the next night the two "weak stomachs" shot 56%, scored almost two thirds of V. U.'s points, and led the Wildcats past Canisius 73 to 58, and right into the NCAA Tournament.

For the first three minutes and fifteen seonds of the game Canisius didn't score. It was 8-0 and looked like a mismatch. Then, suddenly, Canisius led 9-8. Wally Jones hadn't scored and had even lost the ball once.

But Richie Moore was in the process of throwing in six first half field goals, and Bill Melchionni scored nine of his twenty-one points in the first half.

Goal-Tending

The half ended with Al Sallee being called for goal-tending. This cut the lead to 34-21. Alan just about touched the net and the referee called interfering with the basket. Coach Kraft protested vigorously, but with no success.

The scouting report had been correct. The defense lagged off Bossert and he stood fifteen feet the basket looking at it. He shot 2 for 4. Meanwhile, Gennari was shooting with Richie Moore's hand in his face. He shot 6 for 19. Brennan got 20 rebounds, but Wash got the big ones.

Jones Hurting

Wally Jones aggravated his injury in the first half, and didn't play the whole second half. He finished with one point. Kraft didn't want to take the chance that Wally might do serious damage to his left hip.

The second half started with Moore, Sallee, Leftwich, Schaffer, and Melchionni. This five outscored Canisius 13-1 in the opening minutes of the second half, making the score 47-26, and the game was over.

The lead fluctuated between 14 and 21 points the rest of the way. Canisius never again seriously threatened. It was a relaxing evening for Jack Kraft.

Butch Hits

Butch Winterbottom came in and sank a 25 foot jump shot. Bill Melchionni knocked in a rebound with his elbow from eight feet out. It was that kind of a night.

Happy Locker Room

The happy locker room was made happier with the news that LaSalle had lost to Temple. Wins over St. Joe's and Temple will give the Cats a tie for the City Title. They say that Kraft is going to have Moore and Melchionni flown to those two games.

Pistol Team Wins Sectional Title; Sinclair Cops Individual Trophies

by Jim Proud

One of the lesser known, but most successful groups on campus, is the pistol team.

Led by George Sinclair, the sharpshooters won the NRA Inter-collegian Pistol sectional championship on February 9, from such fine schools as La-Salle, Valley Forge and Penn.

Sinclair who was high man for the Villanova team in the team matches, also won the individual trophies in both conventional and international events.

Championships

The meet championship which is comparable to the championship of the Big Five in basketball was held in the basement of the Naval Science building, the 'Cats' home range.

The 'Cats have the strongest team in the area. They took the first three places in all the men's events except the international team competition in which they placed first and second.

The first event was the conventional team championships in which the Villanova team took all honors, finishing one, two, three with their number one team of George Sinclair, Anthony Mascia, James Dubrorow, and Gary Leidecket taking away the coveted first place position.

In the second event, the individual conventional competition, Villanova again captured the first three places. George Sinclair who had a 295 score of a possible 300, was first with Tony Mascia and James Duborow placing second and third.

ROTC

In a special event, the ROTC division, Gary Leidecker of Villanova won the silver medal by finishing first in the field of shooters.

In the international meets, the difference from conventional being that the target is much smaller, the Cats again showed their superiority. In the team event the Villanova number 1

'Cats Return To Winning Form By Drubbing Duquesne, 73-63

by Ed Farrell

The Villanova Wildcats returned to their winning ways last Wednesday night by dethroning the Dukes of Duquesne, 73-63.

The turning point of the game may have been ten minutes before the opening tap-off when Wally Jones was announced as being in the starting line-up. Jones had been a doubtful starter because of a hip injury sustained against LaSalle.

Jones Has 22

Jones led the Wildcats with 22 points and successfully contained the Dukes All-American candidate, Willie Somerset, holding him to 15 points, more than ten below his 25.7 ppg average.

The contest was close until Jones hit two jumpers and converted a free throw with eight minutes gone in the first half, to give the Cats a 15-8 lead.

A major cog in the Wildcat machine was the inspired play of Jim Washington in the second half. He wound up with the game high rebounding figure of 18. His six for 12 shooting from the floor materially contributed to the victory.

NCAA

Villanova's 19-2 Wildcats became the second team in the nation to enter the National Collegiate Athletic Association's post-season tournament. Earlier Temple was placed in the tournament as winner of the Middle Atlantic Conference when they upset La-Salle's Explorers. This is Villanova's sixth post-season tournament bid.

The Main-Liners will go against Providence College on March 9 in a regional triple-header at the Palestra.

45.5%

The Wildcats shot 30 for 66 for a 45.5% average. Besides Jones' 22, and Washington's 14, Schaffer had 10, Leftwich, 9, Moore, 7, and Erickson, 6.

For the Dukes, who shot 27 for 78, Willard's 27 and Somerset's 15 constituted two thirds of their scoring with Dennis Cuff having 8.

The Wildcats are now 18-2, having won 14 of their last 15 games.

The loss stopped the Duke victory streak at seven. They now sport an 11-5 overall record.

Two Mile Relay Squad Successful In Quest For Second World Record

by Roy Baron

Coach Jumbo Elliott sent his two-mile relay team after the world record again last Saturday night, and for the second time in two tries this season the quest was successful. This time the Wildcat quartet was running on the boards at Louisville, an eight-lap track designed for record-breaking performances.

The Villanova team made up of Jimmy Orr (1:53.9), Al Adams (1:52.6), Tommy Sullivan (1:49.5), and Noel Carroll (1.48.8) broke the 7:26.4 record they set in Boston two weeks previous with a fantastic 7:24.9 clocking. The time was also 5.1 seconds faster than the 7:30.0 record Georgetown set in Louisville last winter.

The Quantico Marines, who ran second, were put out of contention on the second leg. Adams, who had taken Orr's pass with about a seven yard deficit, passed the front- running Marine with about a quarter-mile remaining. Then a picture baton pass sent Sullivan off with a twenty yard lead.

Sullivan, Carroll Impress

Sullivan running his fastest half-mile, and anchorman Carroll widened the gap. Only a 7:30.2 time by Quantico, the fourth fastest clocking on record, kept the Cats from making it a complete runaway.

Orr, who replaced Vic Zowlak as leadoff man, was the only runner who was not a member of the original record-breaking unit in Boston. Zwolak, who has returned to distance running, ran a 4:08.1 mile at Louisville for a third place finish.

Rolando Cruz won the pole vault with a leap of 15 9¾ for a new meet record. In the New York AC games on Tuesday night his jump of 15-8 placed him second to John Uelses, who hit 16 1¼.

Chicago Mayor Addresses Law Forum Concerning Urban Renewal Problems

by Jim Brennan

The last of a series of Villanova Law Forums dealing with the topic "The City Faces Its Problems" was recently addressed by a man who sold newspapers in his early youth, worked in the Chicago stockyards and rose to be mayor of the "Windy City."

The Honorable Richard J. Daley's dissertation was concerned with the problems of Urban Renewal and how Chicago has done pioneer work in this field.

Mayor Daley began by stating that Urban Renewal involves many aspects of the law and that many new laws are being made in this direction.

Public Housing

Under Urban Renewal are many facets. Speaking of Public Housing, he said that a community should be able to use its power of eminent domain to meet the needs of proper housing.

Chicago has been able to clear 800 acres of slums and replace it with Public Housing, and they have also been a pioneer in developing housing for elderly citizens. These homes for the aged are located throughout the city and all of the buildings have been especially designed for senior citizens.

Critics

Although there have been many critics of Urban Renewal and particularly of Public Housing, Mayor Daley asserted that these projects do not result in a tax loss, but that after improvement a greater tax yield is possible. He cited an example where before redevlopment the tax yield was $200,000 and after improvement the yield went up to $500,000.

He went on to say that taxpayers who do not live in an area of Urban Renewal do not see a need for it, but they fail to realize that crime, desolation, and poverty have no boundaries. Anything that benefits one section of a city benefits another.

Even though some of the Surrounding the Rev. George Riley, OSA, moderator of the Shamokinaki Mission Dance are members of the committee preparing the fete scheduled for Friday night.

Shamokinaki Orientalizes Field House On Friday Night

The annual Shamokinaki Dance for the benefit of the Augustinian mission will be held this Friday in the Villanova Field House from 8:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m.

Highlights of the dance include the awarding of a door-prize — an imported tea set from Japan — and the raffling of either a Linde Star Sapphire worth $75 or a 10-point diamond valued at $60, to be placed in the winner's class ring. Anyone holding a ticket to the dance is eligible for the door prize and chances will be sold at 25c a donation.

Continuous music will be provided by the Villanovans and the Revelers. The T-Tones of Rosemont College will make a guest appearance. There is also a possibility that a noted celebrity will be on hand.

Tickets are on sale now at Bartley Hall cafeteria and the Pie Shoppe from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. The price of tickets will be $2.50 until noon today when they will cost $3. Chances for the jewels will also be sold with the tickets.

Making a special appearance at the dance will be the Rev. Joseph P. O'Connor, OSA, who is currently a missionary in Japan.

Committees Named

The Rev. George Riley, OSA. moderator, and Steve Freind, general chairman for the dance, have announced the heads of the various committees. They are: programs, Faith Connor; tickets, Jim Morgan; publicity, Ed Hallahan; finance, Jim Griffin; refreshments, Tom Krause; chances, Bob McIntyre; and decorations, Brian Banmiller.

Others include: collections, Carl Dolente; novelties, Jerry Bruderle; coats, Bob Cowan; and patrons, Betsy Grabowski.

Dean's List Reveals Villanova Scholars For The First Semester

A number of IBM pages—31 to be exact — tells the story of the hard-working scholars who, by the grace of God and their professors, achieved the acme of academic success, commonly known as the Dean's List

The remarkable 866 students on the list will find their names on page 13 of this edition.

At the top of this exalted list lie 26 students in the 4.00 class. With the highest cumulative average possible in one semester, these students have proved that they are quite capable of defending themselves successfully against the pedantic projects which are thrust upon them.

Included in the perfect 'cum' class are Robert Strong, station manager of WWVU, Jacqueline Greco, a nurse, and Thomas Rzepski, a student in the College of Commerce and Finance.

The IBM pages when taped together — for no particular reason — measure 341 inches or 28.4 feet. As for a percentage of the entire enrollment. 20.9 per cent of the undergraduates were able to translate their intellectual capacity into positive

Dr. John Callahan To Deliver Annual St. Augustine Lecture

The sixth annual Saint Augustine lecture will be presented on Sunday, March 8, at 3 p.m. in Vasey Hall Auditorium. The Saint Augustine Lecture, presented annually and having for its general theme "Saint Augustine and the Augustinian Tradition," was inaugurated in the Spring of 1959.

Each year outstanding scholars from here and abroad are invited to discuss significant and timely aspects of Saint Augustine's thought and influence. These lecturers are subsequently made available in published form.

Dr. John F. Callahan, Professor of Philosophy and Classics at Georgetown University, will deliver the lecture entitled "Saint Augustine and the Greek Philosophers."

Professor Callahan received his Doctorate in Philosophy from the University of Chicago in 1940. He is a regular contributor to classical and philosophical journals and has just recently completed a critical edition of works of Gregory of Nyssa, an important and influential writer of the early Church.

Since the appearance in 1948 of his standard work "Four Views of Time," which included an important treatment of Augustine's analysis of time, Professor Callahan has continued his researches into the writings and teachings of the Bishop of Hippo, with special reference to the question of Platonic and Christian influence in the development of Augustinian thought.

Two cast members of the Theatre Department's new production "The Happy Haven" are seen in a practice session. The play can be seen on March 6-8, 13-15, 20-21.

It will be staged in the Playbox with curtain time at 8:15 p.m. each night.

Grad Theatre Production Blasts Socialized Medicine

John Arden's Happy Haven, the latest production of the Graduate Theatre Department, will open in the Playbox this Friday night.

It is a satire blasting socialized medicine and scientific thinking.

Having enjoyed tremendous success in Arden's own England and an equally successful run in Ireland, the production is being brought to America for the first time.

The very style of the play might be considered absurd. The show employs all the elements of the epic theatre—music, mime, and mayhem. With sets designed by Thomas Nevins and acting under the direction of Richard A. Duprey, the play will be presented in Comedia dell'Arte masks.

Intimates of 'Happy Haven'

Featured in the leading role is James Cristi, a new member of the Theatre Department who comes to Villanova from the Catholic University of America. Mr. Cristi plays the role of Dr. Copperthwaite, the mad-cap scientist.

Jack Black, another new face in the Theatre Department, is from Quincy College, Illinois. He plays Mr. Crape.

The money-hungry Mrs. Letouzel, is played by Chris Assini, a candidate for a degree in theatre. Miss Assini is a teacher of language and acting at Harcum Junior College. She was featured last year in The Enchanted, and The Private Life of the Master Race.

Carol Schmenkel plays Mrs. Phinnous, Happy Haven's best loved little old lady. Miss Schmenkel, a graduate assistant in the department, has appeared in several recent theatre productions.

As Debonair Golightly

Carrol Cooke, an undergraduate Arts and Science student, who is best remembered for his portrayal of the Rev. Jeremiah Brown in the Belle Masque production of Inherit the Wind, makes his acting debut in the Playbox in the role of the debonair Mr. Golightly.

Ken Resinski, former president of Belle Masque, now a graduate student in theatre, appears in the role of the hearty English sportsman, Mr. Hardrader.

Acting completely in pantomime, Winnie Buono, a recent graduate of Rosemont; Isabelle Bishop, a resident of Bryn Mawr; and Jerry Greene, an undergraduate student at Villanova, portray Dr. Copperthwaite's assistants.

Sidelines

Music for Happy Haven has been written and directed by Mitzie Smyth, a graduate student in theatre.

The dates for this production are March 6-8, 13-15, and 20-22. A special performance for the Faculty Wives Club will be presented on Thursday, March 12.

Council Forum Lists Ward And O'Faolain For Spring Lectures

The Student Council Forum has announced its plans for the second semester. A date has been finalized for Barbara Ward who is known as Lady Jackson.

Miss Ward is an author and one of the foremost British economists. She will speak at the Field House on Thursday, April 23, at 8 p.m.

The final speaker in the series will be Sean O'Faolain, author and literary critic. Mr. O'Faolain will speak on "Essential Pleasures of Fiction" on Wednesday, May 6, in the Field House.

The forum is currently negotiating for speakers for next year's forum.

Goldwater Out

The Rev. George Lawless, OSA, moderator of the Forum, used all possible means to secure Barry Goldwater as a speaker in this semester's series. Because of the Senator's heavy schedule, however, he will not be able to make an appearance.

Immaculata College To Hold Conference On Latin America

The International Relations Society of Immaculata College is holding a conference on Latin America entitled "Land In Ferment" on Saturday, March 7, at the college.

The conference will be divided into two sessions. The morning conference beginning at 9 a.m. in the Lecture Hall, Villa Maria Hall, will sponsor three lecturers. Dr. David Rivas, foreign student advisor at Villanova, will speak on "Communist Penetration in Latin America."

Rev. John O'Leary Dead At Age 73

Rev. John S. O'Leary, O.S.A., one of the oldest and most revered members of the faculty died Monday night in the Monastery. Father O'Leary had been ill for some time. He was 73 years old.

A Professor of Mathematics, Father O'Leary came to Villanova in 1908 — more than 55 years ago. He is a native of County Cork, Ireland, and was ordained a Priest in 1919.

Divine Office will be said on Thursday at 5:15 p.m. in the Chapel. Requiem Mass will be offered at 10:00 a.m. Friday.

Lectures And Field Trips Planned By Sociology Club

James McKenna, of the Sociology Department, addressed the Sociology Club on February 20. His talk dealt with "Job Opportunities in Academic Sociology."

The Sociology Club, in existence for one semester, has already held many lectures and has sponsored a field trip. The club holds weekly meetings during the activities period every Thursday followed by informal discussions.

The topics discussed include social work and crime. The club moderator, Mr. Barry Young, presides over the discussions.

Although there are only twenty sociology majors, the club has thirteen members, exhibiting the interest of those in the club.

Future plans of the club are a lecture by the head of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania Human Relations Commission, a field trip to an industrial plant or a mental hospital, and weekly films at the club's meetings. The club also expects to be recognized soon by the Student Council.

Satire, Interview, New Format To Highlight Latest 'Politico'

Politico, the only publishing political magazine on the campus, will distribute its third edition this week, announced editor Michael Magro.

In an effort to provide better readability, Politico has adopted a new format and larger type. The new format will include two-column pages with the size of the pages remaining the same as it was in the first edition of the paper. The type itself will be as large as newspaper type, and possibly slightly larger.

It will be the biggest issue of the paper since its inaugural edition in November. Highlighted will be an exclusive interview with Dr. Fritz Nova, chairman of the Villanova Political Science Department an analysis of Chancellor Ludwig Erhard of West Germany the man of his views.

Political Satire

Political satire is the keynote of this issue with the majority of the articles poking an analytical finger at major political events on the national and international scene. The regular feature of Political Union News will also be included in the issue for the members and all students interested in the Union.

Copies will be distributed in the lounges and main hall of Dougherty Hall as well as the Library, Vasey Hall, and the first floor of Bartley Hall. A limited number will be distributed in Mendel and Tolentine Halls.

As there will be only a limited number of copies available, it is asked that students take only one copy each.

Sophs Meet Tomorrow To Plan Spring Project

George Valva, president of the Sophomore Class, has announced that plans are under way for the annual Sophomore Spring Project scheduled for the weekend of May 9.

The project this year will consist of an orphans outing at Villanova. Since this will be during Junior Week, tentative plans are being considered to make this a sophomore spring weekend.

Provided Administrative approval is given, the weekend would include the Junior Concert, Friday night, the Orphans' Outing, Saturday, and a class party, Saturday night.

There will be a sophomore Class meeting tomorrow at 10:30 a.m. in Vasey Auditorium at which time definite plans will be discussed. All interested sophomores are urged to attend.

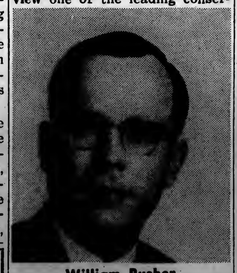
Today Is The Deadline For The Next Edition Of The Villanovan.

'National Review' Publisher To Address Conservatives

The Conservative Club of Villanova will present William A. Rusher, publisher of the National Review, on Tuesday, March 10 at 7:30 p.m. in Vasey Hall Auditorium. His topic will be "A Conservative's Strategy for the Cold War."

Mr. Rusher has been a popular speaker and debater before academic audiences and civic organizations for several years.

Education



He received his A.B. at Princeton at the age of 20, majoring in the school of Public and International Affairs. After three years as an Air Force Officer in World War II, he entered Harvard Law School, obtaining his LL.B. there in 1948.

In March 1956 he left private law practice to become Associate Counsel to the U.S. Senate's Internal Security Subcommittee, investigating domestic Communism. In this work he became personally familiar with the domestic communist conspiracy, and participated in literally hundreds of public and secret hearings.

In October 1956 he went to Honolulu to prepare the way for the Subcommittee's hearings there, and in November of the same year he was sent to Austria by the Senate on a special investigatory mission.

Conservative Publisher

In 1957 Mr. Rusher became publisher of the National Review one of the leading conservative magazines. While supervising the business operations of the publication and participating in all major editorial decisions, he has made four surveying trips to Europe, covering almost every country on the continent this side of the Iron Curtain. In addition he logs many thousands of miles each year on speaking engagements through the United States and Canada.

William Rusher

Monday, April 27, 1964, will be a University holiday. No classes will be held and all offices will be closed on that date by reason of the Augustinian phase of the dedication of the new seminary.

The Rev. William Hopkins, OSA, University Chaplain, has announced that the Senior Retreat will be held from March 11-13.

Cards for the Retreat will be issued in the center lounge of Dougherty Hall on

There will be the usual additional charges for cards picked up late and for the issuing of extra cards

Father Hopkins announced that this year's retreat will be conducted by the Rev. William Coffey, OSA, Director of the Staten Island House of Postulants as well as Prior of the community of Staten Island.

Opening exercises will be held Wednesday evening, March 11 at 7 p.m.

Council Debate Centers On Motions: Voter's Registration And Averages

by Tom Krause

The Student Council had a relatively quiet meeting on February 19. At the meeting the Rev. Joseph A. Flaherty, OSA, Vice-President of Academic Affairs, was introduced formally to the Student Congress.

Father Flaherty, in greeting the Congress, said that he would closely follow the policy of his predecessor, the Rev. Joseph J. Gildea, OSA. Commending the work of Father Gildea, Father Flaherty promised to try his best to improve the already burgeoning academic achievement at Villanova.

After the various committees reported on their activities, debate was begun on several motions. The debate was brief on most of the issues.

McCarthy Resigns

Chairman Marty McGuinn announced the resignation of Joseph A. McCarthy as Student Council Secretary. John Graziano also resigned as a member of the Student Senate and as Chairman of the Tutor Program. Ernest Abate was appointed Acting Secretary.

Of the three motions considered, the one introduced by Rich Connors was the most controversial. He proposed that a system be set up so that students wishing to vote in the general Spring elections would have to register with the Election Committee during the three days preceding Election Day.

Connors said that it is too easy for students to vote more than once in the elections and that they sometimes have no idea of the ability of the candidate for whom they are voting. By registering, a student will show his interest in the election.

Reason For Defeat

After several members of Congress expounded their views, the motion was defeated by a vote of 19-15. The consensus of those opposed felt that the proposed system would not have much effect on the alleged corruption at the polls.

Haye's 'The Desperate Hours' Is Next Belle Masque Play

by Bob Dean

Belle Masque, Villanova's undergraduate mixed theatre group, is currently deeply enmeshed in preparations for its next production, Joseph Haye s The Desperate Hours, to be staged April 10, 11, 17, and 18 in Vasey Auditorium.

Jim Mason, Belle Masque president, calls The Desperate Hours "a Hitchcock type thriller about three escaped convicts who move in on a typical family in Indianapolis."

The convicts hold the family hostage during a 48-hour reign of terror, which provides many interesting situations and puts each of the persons involved to the test of his own individual stability.

Plot

Director Thomas Nevins, faculty member of the Graduate Theatre Department, describes the plot as one in which "we examine the reactions of each member of the Hilliard family after having the tranquility of their home abruptly and violently destroyed by the invasion of the convicts, and in which we examine the convicts themselves who, in terror, can find no better way out than to terrorize others."

Mr. Hayes, the author, is also credited with The Calculated Risk, a fair success on Broadway last year. He wrote The Desperate Hours first as a novel, then adapted it to its play version when it opened on Broadway in 1954 with Paul Newman and Karl Madden heading the cast.

Frederick March and Humphrey Bogart starred in the 1955 movie version.

Casting

The play will be casted next week, and will include 14 members — with two persons sharing the leads of Glen Griffin, head of the band of convicts, and Dan Hilliard, father of the family.

Singers' Plans Include Local, Midwest Tours, Concert With Sympho

The Villanova Singers are on the verge of beginning their spring Concert Series. The highlight of the entire schedule is the midwestern tour.

The series commences on March 6 with a concert at Good Counsel College in White Plains, New York; Newton College of the Sacred Heart, Newton, Massachusetts; Immaculata College, March 22; Holy Family College, Torresdale, Penna., April 7; and Chestnut Hill College, April 10.

The midwestern tour starts April 16 at Mount St. Mary's of the Spring, Columbus, Ohio.; Mary Mance College, Toledo, Ohio, April 17; Barat College, Lake Forest, Ill., April 18; and, Mary Grove College, Detroit, Mich., April 19.

In addition, the Singers will sing with the Curtis Symphony Orchestra on April 14. This concert will be held in the Field House.

Fourth In A Series:

The Day-Hop

The day-hop has always been a prime target for criticism here at Villanova. Non-resident students have been compared to everything from a group of transients who are simply passing through, to an alienated mob, clutching little brown bags and walking though the university with blinders in place that permit perception of nothing but the job that the degree will assure.

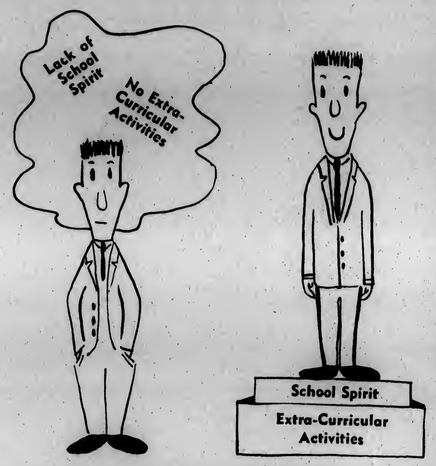
To some extent such criticism is warranted, but much of it seems based on half-truths and misunderstanding.

It is true, for instance, that the non-resident student cannot spend as much time on campus at the resident. His situation is understandable. The day-hop is faced with a number of difficulties not encountered by the resident.

Factors such as the time consumed in traveling back and forth, car pools, the necessity of making dinner, and so forth, demand the non-resident student reasonably apportion his time. In addition, a great many day-hops finance their education through afternoon work. This, coupled with the present structure of the curricula, often leaves little more than evenings for study.

Despite these difficulties non-residents have consistently made significant contributions to the vitality of the university. Day-hops head and serve as officers in numerous organizations.

Many have offered consistent leadership in student government. Others serve in important positions on WWVU and campus publications. Half of the editorial staff of this paper are day-hops, as is next year's editor-in-chief.



In short, the contributions of this group of non-residents are impressive and commendable. The problem with the non-resident situation here does not lie with this group, but rather in the gap between this relatively small number of active contributors and the greater number of student commuters who take no interest at all in affairs outside of class.

Though the difficulties faced by the day-hop are real and limiting, the lack of support typical of the great number of day-hops should not be as extensive as it is.

Participation by non-residents in the mainstream of university life is as essential to the well-being of the school and the individual student himself as participation by the resident.

It is hoped that in the future a great number of day-hops will become more aware of their place in the university and the contributions they can make, realizing that by the very nature of their more demanding situation a little more effort at participation is essential.

Wallop Poll Shakes Nation!

by Frank Sauers

One of the most astounding opinion polls ever to be released to the American public was published last week by Dr. George Wallop, head of the Wallop Poll Institute. Its impact on the political community has yet to be evaluated, so we decided to do it here in the way of a public service.

Using 179,999,999 Americans as a cross section, the latest Wallop poll shows that at least 91% of the public tends to vote against political candidates with whom they disagree. In a subsequent column Dr. Wallop proceeded to reveal the real meaning these results.

Conclusive Proof

Very simply, Dr. Wallop pointed out that the study proves conclusively that the politician who makes speeches about important topics or who takes a stand on issues tends to become unpopular with certain segments of the population and is therefore prone to defeat at the polls. Candidates who manage not to say anything, on the other hand, tend to be elected.

On reading the poll our thoughts turned immediately to the present Congress. Here is a group we thought, which has already made effective use of this idea to an amazing degree. The "Congressional Record," which is the printed record of speches by our representatives in Congress, is a case in point.

Never have so many words been used to say so little by so many. In a recent assignment a brilliant high school sophomore summarized last year's volume of the "Record" in a 500 word precis. He only received a B+ though. The teacher said the summary was too verbose.

Reaction to the poll on Capitol Hill itself was slow (just like reaction there to everything else). The entire southern delegation, however, quickly endorsed the report calling it a a mandate from the American people for their representatives to keep quiet, thereby discouraging action in any tender areas.

Long in the vanguard of those proporting congressional silence is Senator Jimmy O. Wasteland from the sovereign state of Misterhippo. One of the senator's favorite expressions is "What Ya'll think this is some sorta debating society?"

The senator said that he was surprised at the recent poll. "Ah always tell them new fellers," he said, "that once they git down hea they shouldn't say nothin'. But there's always a few radicals who ignore me and go right ahead sayin' things, and even suggestin' that we legislate somethin'! I'm always glad to see them kind leavin' after the next election."

"Yep," Senator Wasteland continued, "them sorta' doin's can sure git a fella in trouble down here. Why, in mah campaigns back home I've used the idea in that poll for years. Now, I do make speeches mind ya, even though I don't really have 'ta. What I do is find out what mah constituents agree on. Then, when I make mah speehes that's the only subject I talk about — nothin' else. The fact that I been here 76 years is livin' proof that the idea works."

We must admit that our own reaction to the poll was at first rather mixed. We were bothered by the possibility that nothing at all would be said. Then again we were happy to hear that our politicians would be talking less.

LEO GOODREAU

A Worthy Motion

The Student Council will vote on a motion tonight concerning the inauguration of an honor system in academics at Villanova. It passed the motion will go to the Student-Faculty Committee for implementation.

This motion is notable for several reasons. It originated in the Senior Class, and was passed to the Student Congress by the Senior Class Steering Committee. It also shows the interest of the Student Council in academic affairs and its expression of student concern in these areas.

Inauguration of this system at Villanova would be a step forward in increasing the individual responsibility and moral fibre of the student.

The system has been successfully used at such schools as Princeton, and Virginia, and would be an academic asset to the University.

Obviously some would try to abuse the system but it is hoped that these few would be quick to realize the damage that they would be doing to themselves and the rest of the student body.

It is to be hoped that the Congress tonight will act favorably upon this motion, and that, pending passage tonight, the Student-Faculty Committee will likewise find it acceptable for implementation.

President's Report

Rarely Used Powers

by Martin McGuinn
President, Student Body

At the most recent meeting, the Student Senate exercised its rarely used judicial powers in two separate areas. In the first case, a candidate for the Student Council from the Class of 1967 was found guilty of violating the election rules governing campaign procedure.

This decision emphasized the responsibility which is imposed on the candidate in regard to compliance with the rules. Because campaign literature was distributed prior to the legal time, a public letter of censure was determined as the penalty.

In the second case, Delta Pi Epsilon and the Blue Key Society were found derelict in their reports of off-campus social functions. The Senate suspended all activities of these organizations for the remainder of the semester.

The sentence was then suspended for one week after which the penalty would go into effect in the event that the rules were not observed.

Both organizations did comply with the necessary rules within the allotted time period and the penalty was therefore removed.

The Student Congress has unanimously approved legislation which calls for a re-evaluation of the existing academic grading system. The Academic Affairs Committee had been charged with preparing a proposal to be presented to the administration and now faces the possibility of an additional inquiry concerning the enactment of an academic honor code.

The latter motion was initiated by the senior class and will be debated on the Congress floor tonight. The supporters of this motion contend that such a code would emphasize individual responsibility and maturity in the education of the Catholic man.

These proposals are obviously of major proportions and will be considered by the Student-Faculty Committee in the near future. The Student Council encourages and welcomes the expressions of opinion by the student and faculty on these and all issues.

France And Red China - - - Quo Vadis?

What does Charles DeGaulle hope to gain by recognizing Red China? What does he stand to lose? How does this diplomatic shocker effect United States-French relations? These and other enlightening questions with just as enlightening answers are found in this exclusive interview with Dr. Hafeez Malik, of the Villanova Political Science Department in a special interview granted to Tom Bruderle, an associate editor of The Villanovan.

1. How does the recognition of Red China fit into Charles De Gaulle's over-all strategy for France?

De Gaulle doesn't believe that the world is bi-polarized, that is, divided between East and West. Thus politics and action for a two-bloc world are no longer applicable. Today the world is in a multi-bloc situation and a nation's foreign policy should be flexible and not rigid.

There is a definite rift between China and the Soviet Union and it is in the interest of the Soviets to keep China as isolated as possible from the outside world. By not recognizing China, De Gaulle believes he will be playing into the hands of the Soviets.

2. In that case, does the French President see any difference between these two Communist states?

De Gaulle sees little difference between either of them despite both China and Russia's claim to the contrary. The Communist Regime in China has been in power only for fifteen years, and, because of the relative youth of the Government, the Chinese are more militant now than the Soviets. The militancy of the Chinese is similar to that of the Russians in the early 1920's after the incepton of the Soviet Union.

3. Do you believe that the French recognition of Red China had anything to do with the recent political developments in South Viet Nam?

No, I don't believe there was any relation between the two at all.

4. In hoping to deal directly and honestly with Red China, do you believe that President De Gaulle has taken a major gamble?

De Gaulle is definitely taking a gamble with Red China. Through recognition of the Communist, he hopes to gain a neutralization of all former French Indo-China. He has no assurance of Chinese interest in neutralization in this area, and definitely not in North Viet Nam.

China would probably not be interested in a clear neutrality of North and South Viet Nam and Cambodia since she already controls one of these three and has infiltrated the other two. China wants to regain the domination and influence she once had in Indo-China before the arrival of the French.

5. Why is it that De Gaulle is so distrustful of the Soviet Union, as evidenced by France's refusals to sign the nuclear test ban treaty and taken active part in the Geneva disarmament talks, yet believes that peace in South-east Asia can only come through Chinese participation?

He doesn't necessarily trust one more than the other. He believes, as I said before, neutralization of former French Indo-China can only come with Chinese participation. By doing this, De Gaulle believes that China will come to terms with the world which is in her (China's) interest.

As far as the test ban treaty and the disarmament talks are concerned, De Gaulle hopes to create and maintain his own nuclear force if France is to play an independent role. She must have her own military arsenal.

6. Observers now believe that Red China's chances of gaining admittance in to the United Nations have been greatly enhanced by French recognition. Would you care to comment on this?

It is true that recognition by France is definitely a diplomatic boost for China. China also gained a great deal of support during Chou En-lai's recent tour of Africa. He was well received by many African leaders and statesmen and, in fact, because of this tour Tunisia has recognized Red China and has promised support for her entrance into the UN.

7. Similar to the last question, is the over-all support that China would receive from France's former African colonies. Recently a national magazine quoted Madagascar's President Philibert Tsiranana as speaking for 8 of France's 14 former colonies when he said, "For once I will not follow Charles De Gaulle." Will he and others eventually follow De Gaulle's lead?

It is too early to say whether they will or will not support China's entry. Some nations feel it is proper that Red China be brought into the UN. Despite recent conflicts with the Chinese, India will probably again support the Red Chinese bid.

8. How will De Gaulle's action affect future U.S. relations with the Nationalists and the Reds? With these recent developments do you foresee any eventual American acceptance of the "Two-China" policy?

It shouldn't have any effect on current U.S. policy toward the Nationalists and the Communists. The United States will probably continue its opposition to a Red Chinese seat in the UN. However, if China continues to gain support, the U.S. might have to alter her position. The recent statement of Senator Mansfield leads one to think along these lines.

This country should not oppose the admission of China in the UN defying the wishes of the majority of the states of the world. Recognition of Red China and her admission into the UN does not imply approval of the regime. It only means the recognition of some of the objective realities of international life.

9. It is said that De Gaulle's recognition of Red China was not done merely to irritate the U.S. and weaken the Atlantic Alliance, but to do the West a service. Do you agree, and if so, what kind of service?

DeGeulle believes that recognition of the Peking Regime will enable it to break out of the isolation imposed by the U.S.S.R. He also believes French recognition will aid the West in exploiting the current split in the Communist camp. China is being encouraged by France to deal with the West rather than the Kremlin; and in so-doing, De Gaulle is attempting to get as much out of the split as possible.

10. What will be the overall affect of French recognition on Red China's economic and political structure?

De Gaulle believes that recognition will provide an outlet for China away from the Soviets. I don't foresee any tremendous internal charges within Red China because of recognition.

Any effect on China's internal structure would require long-range speculation which would be quite difficult at this time. All that can be said is that Russia has withdrawn nearly all of her technical assistance from China, without any effective and noticeable recognition from the West, China was placed in an isolated position. With recognition of France, the Red Chinese now have a chance to regain that technical assistance which has been missing.

11. Much has been said, both for and against, about a "two-China" policy. Do you believe it is possible?

Yes, I believe it is possible, I can't see why not. The Communists could be recognized as the legal government of the Chinese mainland with the Nationalists as the government of Formosa.

One of the thorniest problems that the United States has had to face concerns the government on Formosa. Chiang Kai-Shek is 76 years old and, when he departs, the Nationalists will need a strong government on the Island. If a strong successor for Chiang is not found, Nationalist power and control could decline inviting possible action by the Communists.

12. What effect, if any, will the French recognition have on future U.S.-French relations?

Some Americans seem to think that De Gaulle is somewhat of an "oddball" in his search for the "glory of France". Once out of office, it is thought that American and French relationships will be restored to normalcy. Personally, I think some of De Gaulle's plans will also continue. De Gaulle's successor will probably continue to be just as independent of NATO as he is now, but the negative attitude held toward Britain may not remain.

One of the main-points characterizing the cool relation between France and the United States has been Great Britain's entrance into the European Common Market. In his pursuit of a European Community independent of the U.S., it is logical for De Gaulle to veto Britain's entry since Britain has had such close relations with the U.S.

With West German support, De Gaulle hopes to be able to dictate European policies; and a Great Britain closely attached to the U.S. as a member of the Common Market would definitely tend to damage his plans.

Overall, France is a medium power attempting to play the role of a major power without, as yet, being one. Although De Gaulle's departure may mean France will return to her role as a medium power, it does not mean all of the French President's policies will be dropped. Some will remain.

Caught in Passing

Lounge Features Trio

by Jan Dyroff

Washington's Showboat Lounge, literally, is a hole in the ground. From the outside there is little more than a long awning extending out to the curb.

Inside, one goes down a stairway lined with dust jackets from the artist-in-resident's LP's. The stairs bend sharply to the right and there's the lounge.

Quiet Please

On one side there is a stage with tables clustered around it and waitresses in rubber-soled shoes moving among them. There's a crowd always, and a quiet one. They don't want to miss one note of what is being played, hence the soft-shoe routine.

Sitting spotlighted on stool to the front of the stage is Charlie Byrd. Later he will be joined by the other members of his trio, Keter Betts on base and Buddy Deppenschmidt on drums.

Unique Style

Charlie plays the guitar in a way that is unique. He is without a doubt the best jazz guitarist in America today. Anyone of the LP's he's cut are destined to become classics.

He also plays the classical guitar, having studied it under Andres Segovia in Siena, Italy back in 1954. He's been at the Showboat since '57 and doesn't show signs of wanting to leave.

As a jazz group the Trio must be heard in person. None of the recordings quite come up to the real thing, but isn't this always the case?

Live Sound

Perhaps the closest recorded thing to their live sound is their "Hebrew Children" cut from their "Byrd at the Gate" album on Riverside. With them on this record are also Clark Terry and Seldon Powell, but these two aren't on the cut at hand.

There's one slight change from the trio lineup given above, Bill Reichenbach is on the drums.

"Hebrew Clildren" is really a negro spiritual, but Byrd has done a jazz adaptation of it. He does this a good deal with spirituals, folksongs, or guitar pieces from other countries.

Free Melody

It starts with Charlie stating the melody and then going into an improvisation. After a while, the rhythm slips in and Keter takes up the strain.

Byrd is so wrapped up in his work it's almost as if he wasn't aware of the other two thirds of the trio and when they do join him he turns around and gives them an angelic grin because it's as if they're thinking the same thing he is.

Betts Amazing

Keter Betts is slightly amazing in his own right. He plays solos on the string bass, fingering it just like Charlie. Most people aren't waiting for this or expecting it, 'cause who does solo improvisations on the string bass?

After a while the two of the three will silently fade out and leave Charlie with the stage, when he will do a period of unaccompanied work.

Own Adaptations

Maybe he would do one of the folk adaptations that are mentioned above. He'd surely include a Brazilian number or two. Then he'd do a classical thing or two.

We mentioned that Byrd studied under Segovia, but that is a side of the artist most jazz fans tend to forget. He's recorded at least one LP of classical guitar pieces from sixteenth century Spain, and they're worth listening to.

Real Talent

Byrd is a versatile and talented man, standing head and shoulders above his contemporaries. Hearing him is a real treat and is worth the trip to DC just for that purpose alone.

So if you happen to be in our capital for some reason or other, stop off at the Showboat. But remember it's for a good listening kind of a good time, not a loud brawl kind.

If you do go, go early. When we were down there it was a rainy Monday evening in late July — and there's nothing worse than a rainy July evening in D.C. — and the place was crowded.

Boorish Acts Prove Etiquette Lacking On Villanova Campus

"Hey Steve! Have you ever read anything by Amy Vanderbilt?"

"No. I've never heard of her. Has any of her stuff been banned yet?"

Yes. Miss Vanderbilt has been banned . . . from Villanova. The library has only one book on etiquette, but it has more dust on it than a bottle of 1949 vintage wine.

Evidently, most students at Villanova consider manners as something with which to impress their girlfriend and her parents. Everone else is left out.

Chapel

On February 23, at eleven o'clock Mass, (one which university students are requested not to attend), there were about fifty adults in the back of the Chapel, fifteen of whom were ladies. They were STANDING; at least five of these ladies were within sight of the last three pews, which were occupied exclusivcly by Villanovans.

It was obvious that all those seated were aware of the situation. Not one student offered his seat.

When riding to the Palestra, not too long ago, an elderly priest was forced to stand throughout the trip, although the train was crowded with berets.

Rush Hour

In the resident dining room, Donna receives many "thank you's" for her ministrations, but "Sarge" never hears a kind word.

However, during rush hour on the Paoli local last, week, a student wearing a Villanova blazer stood up to give a lady his seat. Within one minute the chain reaction was over and all of the other ladies were seated.

There is much talk today about achieving a meaningful reputation for Villanova University. As everyone of us is considered to be representative of our school, it behooves us to keep in mind our ambassadorial role. It does not take much, a little knowledge, perception, and consideration.

King's College Drops Football

by Ray Ritter

Varsity football has become a thing of the past at King's College in Wilkes-Barre.

It was announced yesterday by the President of the College, Rev. George P. Benaglia C.S.C., that King's has dropped varsity football.

The President stated that the football situation had been under close observation for the past five years, but the final decision was an overnight affair.

The major factor affecting the decision was the financial problem. With less of a strain on the athletic budget, the President hopes to expand the intramural scene to encompass a greater number of students. and to increase basketball recruitment.

An irate student body is still digesting the decision, and the 1-8 gridiron season.

The big repercussion is yet to come. The College alumni, long time supporters of the football program, are sure to make themselves heard.

Now, Villanova becomes the only Pennsylvania Catholic college to participate in an intercollegiate football program.

William F. Buckley, Jr., the starch Conservative thinker of Villanova fame, has become a regular weekly newspaper columnist for The Wanderer.

Beginning this week, Mr. Buckley will write a column entitled "On The Right", to express his conservative views.

The Wanderer is a national Catholic weekly published in St. Paul, Minnesota.

Students at Temple University have set the task before themselves of trying to discover why University men wear beards.

According to some "stubbles," as the bearded ones are called at Temple, a beard is a permanent chin mitten in the winter and a breeze detector in the summer.

It is also a product of vanity. Some say it helps their looks, because they look more intelligent or cool. One said, "I wear a beard because there's too much conservation nowadays."

For those who think beard-wearers are lazy, the care of a beard is more trouble than daily shaving. It involves constant pruning and touching-up of the sprouting chin.

What's a female's reaction to a beard? Most girls like them, but one complained about it ripping her entire face. Another added, "it tickles."

A packed house, reacting warmly and appreciably, witnessed a performance given by the Four Preps at the University of Buffalo.

The Preps incorporated a great deal of low comedy (that's sex and slapstick) and many local jokes into their musical act.

The main highlight of the show was a medley, composed by the Four Preps themselves, satirizing the Kingston Trio, the Limelighters, the new Christy Minstrels, and Peter, Paul, and Mary.

Dennis Moffatt sought a job with responsibility

He found it at Western Electric

Dennis Moffatt, B.A., Coe College, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, '57, joined Western Electric in 1961 after two years of graduate work at the State University of Iowa and two years with the Army. Most important to Dennis was the fact that WE offered him the chance to move ahead . . . fast. Dennis started at Western Electric's Hawthorne Works in Chicago as a Staff Trainee in Industrial Relations.

After only a year with the Company and the completion of one of WE's training programs for college graduates, Dennis became a Personnel Placement Analyst. Advancing rapidly, Dennis was recently promoted to Section Chief, Employment and Placement, Systems Equipment Engineering.

If you, like Dennis Moffatt, want a career with a company that will recognize your skills and abilities, and have the qualifications we're looking for—let's talk! Opportunities for fast-moving careers exist now for liberal arts, physical science and business majors, as well as for electrical, mechanical and industrial engineers. Get the Western Electric Career Opportunities booklet from your Placement Officer. Or write: Western Electric, Room 6405, 222 Broadway, New York 38, N. Y. The University Challenge And Change by Dr. Bernard Bonniwell of the Psychology Dept.

The contemporary problem facing the university is an increasing enrollment with a correlated loss in the identity of the individual student. In the mass environment we continue to foster, man and quality are simply unidentifiable and the rich purpose of education is negated. So long as we continue our present procedures, the future remains bleak and indifferent to the sensitive needs of the individual.

The challenge, then, is (1) to improve the quality of education within (2) the present capability of the university. Holding constant the present fiscal and physical attainments of the university, while stabilizing the presently attained faculty and classroom needs, the significant variable becomes the potential-for-change in university planning.

The change to be elicited is a change in the thinking of men, not in things. The change itself is the willingness of men to change.

Change

The university is committed to accepting men who are highly differentiated in aptitude, ability, intelligence, ideals, and those inner committments which drive some men towards excellence. Within this same fold, regardless of selection or self election, there are less clear strains of behavior and many students find the way strange, defeating and ultimately destructive to their every hope.

In turn, we cannot hope that each man shall come similarily equipped for the arduous tasks ahead. It is, to this highly differentiated group of men that we have addressed ourselves vocationally and avocationally, and if we cannot succeed in meeting the responsibility of individualized education, we offer fundamentally less than is implied in our university charter.

In planning for indivdual differences, the following procedures are suggested:

I A Four Year Degree Program as presently offered.

II A Two Year Associate Degree Program, terminal and /or transfer in character.

III A Certificate of Attendance which may be validated towards a degree when the necessary QPA has been attained within a specified period of time.

IV Trimester Operation to make more efficient use of time and to assist alert students in moving towards graduate studies at an earlier date.

V An Office of Examinations functioning continuously throughout the year and displacing entirely the present system of term examinations. Master Scheduling and the actual presentation of written and/or objective examinations to small groups continuously.

VI Departmental Board of Examiners functioning continuously throughout the year. Relieved of the time consuming examination details by the Office of Examinations, the faculty direction of the individual student. Alert students validated for advanced course work, credit being assigned if student is capable of passing the present course requirements.

VII Class Attendance not required by those students validated to do individual study by the Departmental Board of Examiners.

VIII The Student may initiate request for Departmental Board examination when he believes he is adequately prepared in a given subject.

'The Small Rain' By Fr. Roseliep Filled With Pin Point Poetry

by Jan Dyroff

The Small Rain, by Raymond Roseliep. The Newman Press. $3.95.

This little book is a collection of poems, some in a traditional vein, others in a modern one. All of the offerings are pin-point gems drawn from the range of human emotions.

One's impression from the reading, and re-reading, of the book is that Roseliep is a man who understands. He possesses an empathy for his fellow man that is rare in the modern world. moreover he is able to transmit this empathy.

Love and Beauty

What is it that he understands? He knows the love of a man for a woman, the aesthetic attraction of seer for a picture, the awful relation of a human to his God . . . all this and more.

He places his vision against a background of contemporary literature, historical continuity, and theological speculations.

The Small Rain is a book for everyone who would like an experience that is beautiful. It is deep at parts but not too deep, for, by the nature of the poet it is not such as to be obscure.

No Squares

There are those for whom The Small Rain would not be mete fare. If one likes the sentimental, the sugary, the trite, don't buy Roseliep. If one doesn't like the above, then do.

This is the second of the books by the poet. The first, The Linen Bands, was published as a kind of experiment by the publishers. The experiment succeeded.

Iden Seen

Raymond Roseliep seems to be influenced a little by e. e. cummings. In the third section of the book he experiments freely and with some success, but it is felt that in this section he does not quite measure up to the rest where he seems to be on firmer ground.

This observation, if it should be deemed a censure, should be taken lightly. It in no way detracts from the whole of the volume. It injects into it a bit of freshness.

Author-Teacher

The author teaches in the Department of English at Loras College in Dubuque, Iowa. Many of his poems have been published in national magazines and he has recorded his poetry for Lamont Library at Harvard University and for the Fenn Series of Contemporary Authors at Fenn College in Cleveland.

An interesting fact which may or may not enhance the poetry is that Raymond Roseliep is a priest as well as a poet. In The Small Rain he is a poet first but does not forget he is a priest.

College students have the capability of making a writers' sales boom. We would strongly urge those who fall into this category to consider Fr. Roseliep . . . for their own sakes.

Seven Days, Dr. Strangelove Are Two Realistic Movies

by Art Molitierno

In drama, as in real life, there are usually two opposing views to any problem. One can either cause himself to become so enamored with the situation that he is nervously distraught, or one can laugh at it in the light of man's total stupidity.

The release of two motion pictures express this theory in an adept fashion, Seven Days In May and Dr. Strangelove.

At no other time in man's history has man had the power for such unlimited destruction. Seven Days In May calls to mind possibilities that can be realized when someone with enough power and influence becomes so enamored with the problem of self-annihilation that he seeks to end the constant struggle with a military dictatorship.

The picture, both in its characters and plot, is of such a realistic nature and so close to probable truth that it leaves many with the question, "Could this possibly happen?" It is a statement of the modern dilemma: we're damned if we do have the bomb, and we're damned if we don't.

It is up to President Jordan Lyman, Fredric March, to find the answer. In his totally convincing and dramatically enjoyable role Fredric March has the entire problem thrust upon him by one General James M. Scott, Burt Lancaster, who attempts to resolve the issue by a military take-over of the government.

The discoverer of this totally believable plot is none other than Kirk Douglas, as Colonel Martin Casey. In his usual whining voice and teary eyes he puts together the parts of the military puzzle. Kirk has some beautiful one-liners, but luckily enough the scene between the President and General Scott comes off as the best example of two dramatic, skillful, and diametrically opposed forces.

In a cast that can boast of many stars one can become lost in a supporting role. This is not the case of Edmund O'Brien, as Senator Raymond Clark. If alcohol breeds such fine acting abilities for a senator, then either some of our present legislators should either stop or start hittin' the bottle.

More than two hundred years ago John Dryden wrote: "The true end of satire, is the amendment of vices by correction." It's the sad truth that today's society has become so complex that the end of modern satire can in effect by only laughter and purgation of anxieties.

After seeing Dr. Strangelove (or: How I Learned To Stop Worring And Love The Bomb) I can safely say that it was the first time I actually laughed at the idea of being blown to bits by an atomic mistake.

Dr. Strangelove is an entirely enjoyable satire of the modern race's affinity for races. In our race for the stock-piling of munitions and the race to close up gaps (e.g. the missile and olympic gaps) we as a nation have lost sight of the absurdities of man's behaviors.

Such a loss can only result in tragedy or comedy. Dr. Strangelove is only funny because we are still around to laugh about it.

If Seven Days In May was more than adequate in its characters, Dr. Strangelove was totally enjoyable in its clowns. The ever versatile Peter Sellers mantained three roles in the persons of Group Capt. Lionel Mandrake, President Muffley, and Dr. Strangelove.

No less clowns in their comic relief, George C. Scott, Sterling Hayden, and Keenan Wynn all amount to about the funniest nuts the screen has produced in a long time. But if anything deserves bravos it is the terse script. In the final analysis perhaps we have not lost sight of the problem as long as pictures such as this one can remind us of our stupidity on a grand scale.

Upper scene is from Dr. Strangelove; lower scene is Frederic March as the President of the United States in Seven Days in May.

It's Nice To Be 'In', But . . .

by John Riggs

Are you "tweedy"? Are you the proud possessor of a pair of Bass Weejuns? Yes? Well, my friend, the major problem of your life is no longer a problem; because you are a typical, red blooded, 99 1/100% pure all-American college man!! At last you've reached the goal that you've been striving for. Now you may truthfully say that you are accepted among the other stereo-types of American campus life.

The lesser(?) Faction

What about the other half? You know; those other fellows whom you often see sitting in the Pie-Shoppe dressed in the styles, or the conglomeration of styles, left over from pre-Berlin Wall days.

Their haircuts are definitely not collegiate and certainly do not reflect the university image.

I guess by now you are probably wondering what kind of point I'm trying to get across. Well, I've overheard certain individualists being "cut up" for the way that they dress, too often. I don't feel that this is the attitude that should be taken towards these people. If the person is a basically fine individual then I cannot see any reason why he should be socially condemned because of appearance's sake.

In Other Words

Don't misunderstand me. I am not, by any means, extolling the virtues of a sloppily attired person. I accept and agree with the fact that everyone should try his best to look presentable.

What I am saying, however, is that no one's character or personality should be judged on the standards of what color socks he wears or because he feels like he might like to experiment with the cultivation of a hairy chin.

Cultural Contributions

In the long run its has been proven that individualists have contributed more to culture and society than any group of conformists ever have. A cross-section of peoples always gives rise to a wider range of ideas and ideals than a certain section of people who think, talk, and believe in the same principles. And individualists are what make up the most productive type of cross-section.

A little more toleration in respect to people and objects which are a bit different from "the standard" would tend to speak well of V. U. students. Broad-mindedness, in the majority of cases is something desirable not despicable.

In conclusion, I would like to say that the scarcity of individualists on V. U.'s campus is not something to be proud of, but rather is a serious deficiency, and a product of the uncreative, unimaginative, and apathetic conservative tone.

Student Criticism Applauded

by Rev. Andrew Greeley

(The following article is reprinted with the permission of the Advocate.)

The Loyola News (of Loyola University in Chicago), one of the best Catholic campus papers in the country, is the latest student paper to become embroiled in a controversy with its college administration.

Without commenting directly on the issues in the Loyola controversy, it provides an occasion for some observations about the problems of freedom on the Catholic campus.

THE PURPOSE of a college is to train people to think (or at least this is what Cardinal Newman argued). If young people learn how to think, it is normal that they will begin to think critically. When they think critically, the first thing they will criticize is the school that taught them how to think.

This may seem like rank ingratitude on their part, but it is understandable enough. When you start to critically evaluate your society, you will turn your attention first of all to those institutions which are closest to you.

Actually a faculty ought to be flattered when the student body turns on it with criticism, because this is a certain sign that the faculty has succeeded in its purpose. On the other hand, a quiet, uncritical, docile student body is a sign either that the students are not thinking or that they are plotting revolution. In either case the school administration ought to be worried.

FROM THIS POINT of view the outbursts of criticism which have taken place recently on several Catholic campuses are a healthy sign, for they indicate that the colleges are doing a better job than they had done before.

It can be argued that the actions of editors or student leaders are often imprudent or unbalanced and surely such an argument is valid. Yet prudence and balance come only with the passage of the years, if indeed they ever come.

I am not arguing that student leaders should be given complete license; and I sympathize with school administrations in the awkward positions in which they are more and more frequently finding themselves today.

Yet it seems to me that if the Catholic colleges really expect to be accepted as part of the American college system, they must concede to student governments and student papers the same rights that the average American college grants.

ONE OF THE MOST serious elements of the problem is that the Catholic colleges are engaged in a desperate search for faculty talent. A major reason why they have a hard time recruiting is that younger Catholic academicians are often convinced that there is no freedom on the Catholic campus.

The Catholic colleges have argued with some justifcation that this charge is not true. Nevertheless, each new incident that even looks like an oppression of freedom of discussion, does substantial harm to the image of the Catholic college in the academic community.

Clearly college administrators must carefully weight the short run advantage of silencing an annoying editor or columnist against the long run disadvantage of frightening away talented faculty personnel.

On Campus with Max Shulman

(Author of "Rally Round the Flag, Boys!" and "Barefoot Boy With Cheek.")

A ROBE BY ANY OTHER NAME

With the Commencement Day just a couple of short months away, the question on everyone's lips is: "How did the different disciplines come to be marked by academic robes with hoods of different colors?" Everybody is asking it; I mean everybody! I mean I haven't been able to walk ten feet on any campus without somebody grabs my elbow and says, "How did the different disciplines come to be marked by academic robes with hoods of different colors, hey?"

This, I must say, is not the usual question asked by collegians who grab my elbow. Ordinarily they say, "Hey, Shorty, got a Marlboro?" And this is fitting. After all, are they not collegians and therefore loaded with brains? And does not intelligence demand the tastiest in tobacco flavor? And does not Marlboro deliver a flavor that is uniquely delicious? And am I not short?

But I digress. Back to the colored hoods of academic robes. A doctor of philosophy wears blue, a doctor of medicine wears green, a master of arts wears white, a doctor of humanities wears crimson, a master of library science wears lemon yellow. Why? Why, for example, should a master of library science wear lemon yellow?

Why, Why?

Well sir, to answer this vexing question, we must go back to March 14, 1844. On that date the first public library in the United States was established by Ulrich Sigafoos. All of Mr. Sigafoos's neighbors were of course wildly grateful—all, that is, except Wrex Todhunter.

Mr. Todhunter had hated Mr. Sigafoos since 1822 when both men had wooed the beautiful Melanie Zitt and Melanie had chosen Mr. Sigafoos because she was mad for dancing and Mr. Sigafoos knew all the latest steps—like the Missouri Compromise Samba, the Shays' Rebellion Schottische, and the James K. Polk Polka—while Mr. Todhunter, alas, could not dance at all, owing to a wound he had received at the Battle of New Orleans. (He was struck by a falling praline.)

Consumed with jealousy at the success of Mr. Sigafoos's library, Mr. Todhunter resolved to open a competing library. This he did, but he lured not one single patron away from Mr. Sigafoos. "What has Mr. Sigafoos got that I have not?" Mr. Todhunter kept asking himself, and finally the answer came to him: books.

So Mr. Todhunter stocked his library with lots of lovely books, and soon he was doing more business than his hated rival. But Mr. Sigafoos struck back. To regain his clientele, he began serving tea at his library every afternoon. Thereupon Mr. Todhunter, not to be outdone, began serving tea with sugar. Thereupon Mr. Sigafoos began serving tea with sugar and cream. Thereupon Mr. Todhunter began serving tea with sugar and cream and lemon.

This, of course, clinched the victory for Mr. Todhunter because he had the only lemon tree in town—in fact, in the entire state of Maine—and since that day lemon yellow has, of course, been the color on the robes of masters of library science.

(Incidentally, the defeated Mr. Sigafoos packed up his library and moved to California where, alas, he failed once more. There were, to be sure, plenty of lemons to serve with his tea, but, alas, there was no cream because the cow was not introduced to California until 1937 by John Wayne.)

Debaters Triumph

Terry Cooney (left) and Mr. James O'Toole, moderator of the Beta Gamma debating society, admire the trophy won by Cooney and Joe Rohrer at the University of Maryland Capitol Hill Tournament, quarter finals.

Grey, Radowich, Rohrer, And Cooney Garner Victories For Beta Gamma

This past weekend Beta Gamma participated in two tournaments.

Sophomore Jim Griffin and freshman Cathy Koller won two and lost four at Annapolis, beating Utah and Washington and Jefferson.

Freshmen Ed Yarrish and Dick Behrens met the same fate at the University of Pennsylvania's tournament (beating Emerson and Columbia). Senior Terry McStravick and sophomore Gene Fitzmaurice triumphed over Washington and Jefferson, LaSalle, and Wilkens.

Gene Fitzmaurice was named fifth best speaker in the entire Penn Tournament.

Beta Gamma, the Villanova varsity debating team, journeyed to Rutgers University on February 14-15. The affirmative debaters, senior Terry McIntyre and junior John Fitzpatrick, emerged with one win and three losses.

However, senior Carl Green and freshman Jeff Radowich, taking the negative side, took three wins and one loss, beating American University, Queens, and Rosemont.

LaSalle College won the tournament on a combined score basis of 7-1. There were no speaker awards.

Maryland

The following week, the Villanova varsity journeyed to the University of Maryland for its Capitol Hill tournament. This was a switch-sides contest, in which each two-man squad debated affirmatively one round and negatively the next.

Freshmen Ed Grey and Jeff Radowich achieved three wins and three losses, earning a sixteenth place in a 34 unit field. They triumphed over Rutgers, Bates and Henry Ford, while losing close devisions to Georgetown, West Virginia and Clarion.

Seniors Joe Rohrer and Terry Cooney garnered five wins and one loss in the preliminaries. Beating the University of Pennsylvania, Clarion, Franklin and Marshall, Henry Ford, and Albion, the two aces qualified for the quarter-finals on the third day.

Parents Program Drive Exceeds Aim, Father President Lauds Generosity

Setting the pace since last October for the four campaign divisions in the current $300,000 drive for general funds, the 1963-64 Parents Program was brought to a successful completion with the announcement by its Chairman, Louis C. Stengel, Jr., that $27,348 has been recevied toward the $25,000 goal.

Mr. Stengel said that since funds are still being received daily by the Development Office, the final report listing the names of all contributors will be made in the May issue of the Parents Newsletter.

On receiving the news of the campaign victory, Villanova's President, The Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, said: "Villanova University is proud of its parents for the generous support they have shown in helping the administration provide better educational facilities.

"This response clearly demonstrates the co-operation existing today between the parents and the University for the common purpose of providing the best possible education."

Mr. Stengel added his own thanks to that of the President's with the reminder: "The Parents Committee is now convinced, with this giant first step, that the five year goal of $250,000 for the Parents Program will be reached by 1968."

The following is a breakdown of funds received:

CLASS	REPRESENTATIVE	GOAL	REPORTED
1964	John R. Baliotti	$4,000.00	$3,302.00
1965	John D. Cronin	$5,500.00	$7,878.00
1966	Robert J. Lampe	$7,000.00	$6,815.00
1967	Robert F. Hurleigh	$7,500.00	$8,319.00
1963	(Graduated Class)	$1,000.00	933.00
	Total	$25,000.00	$27,348.00

SAM Members Tour Brewery, Schedule Future Field Trips

One of the most active organizations on campus, the Society for the Advancement of Management, took what undoubtedly amounted to one of their most active field trips, as some 20 of the group's 65 members journeyed to and through the C. Schmidt's Brewing Company in Philadelphia.

Ray Ritter, SAM's campus vice-president, described the trip as "enjoyable" and said there are many more in the offing.

To Atlantic and Exchange

Specifically, SAM will visit the Atlantic Refining Company here in Philadelphia on March 11, and the New York Stock Exchange in New York City on March 25. Members supply their own transportation and all absenses are excused for the trips.

In addition to field trips, the group has a speaker program scheduled which will feature, on March 5, a lecture by Dr. W. Porter Swift of the Villanova Psychological Services and Psychology Departments on the management aspects of his field.

Nationally Affiliated

SAM was organized on the campus five years ago and is one of the few national affiliated organizations at Villanova. While most of its current enrollmept are industrial administration majors, membership is open to all interested students who wish to pay the $3 per semester ($5 per year) dues.

The dues cover the cost of national affiliation as well as publication of their bi-monthly newsletter The Leader.

Last Saturday, February 29, SAM held a day-long Regional Convention at LaSalle College which was attended by Ritter, along with the club's President, Jack Mikusa.

Bruce Gordon, SNCC Representative Explains Purposes Of Negro Group

by Bob Fennel

Bruce Gordon, a field worker of the Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee, gave a talk explaning the purpose and organization of this group on Tuesday, February 18, in Bartley Hall.

Gordon was substituting for his associate, Mr. Samuel Block, who had been scheduled to speak but was unable to attend.

SNCC, according to Gordon, is basically a radical Negro organization striving for racial equality through peaceful demonstrations. He feels that this group is unique in that the field workers have nearly complete freedom of decision, and because the demonstrations are undertaken with a minimum of planning.

Origins

SNCC grew out of a sit-in demonstration in Greensboro, North Carolina in 1960, when four college students were arrested. Other Negroes decided to unite and protest. In 1962, the group became officially organized and presntly boasts a membership of 145 on the paid staff.

About 60 percent of the members are from the south and about 30 percent of them are females, including some whites. There are approximately 2,000 field workers and about 5,000 interested personnel.

The group confines its activities to southern states such as Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, Mississippi, and Alabama.

Purposes

The purpose of SNCC are generally the same as the other Negro Organizations; mainly, to change the laws in favor of the Negro and to assure him of the rights which are his under the constitution.

Attired in his faded blue-denims, heavy black boots, and cowboy hat, Gordon stated, "I don't want to integrate myself into American society, all I want is what is owed me." SNCC also gathers food and clothing to distribute to the Negroes and poor whites in the south.

Anti-Religion

Gordon attacked religions in general because there is not enough of a united effort to help the Negro. However, he did cite the valiant efforts of a Father Roulette in Salem, Alabama.

He ended his lecture by stressing the aspect of non-violence in SNCC. "By non-violence we mean passive resistance," He claims that by passive resistance he is acting on society. "Violence is an accepted thing in our society; anyone acting violently acts in a way in which society can reply; society cannot cope with non-violence.

'Lynx' To Reproduce Original Paintings In Special Section

The editorial board of the Lynx has announced their plans to run a special article on art at Villanova. The feature section will contain eight pages of plates of original oils in the University's collection.

The bulk of the paintings have been presented to Villanova by Princess Maria Theresa Ruspoli and Prince and Princess Droutskoy. The collection includes the works of such masters as Rembrandt, Eakins, Sully, and Van Balen.

Possible Exhibits

The purpose of this project is twofold: to alert the students of the existence and availability of these works of art and to facilitate an opportunity to register them with museums and art alliances.

This registering could well bring about frequent art exhibits at Villanova.

The Lynx, as usual, will run its regular format of essays, short stories, poetry, and student art work. All are reminded that the deadline for submissions is March 12.

Students may leave their work with any member of the staff, in the Lynx box in the Student Council, Office, or at the Lynx office at 447 Tolentine.

Spring Issue

The layout for the spring issue will contain the traditional "Lynx look" with emphasis on simplicity in order to highlight the work of the students. The tentative distribution date of the spring issue is April 26. As usual, the price for the student will be a nominal 25c — a mere fraction of the actual cost.

The Lynx staff is being assisted in this project by the Rev. Henry Syvinsky, OSA, who holds graduate degrees in the field of Fine Arts.

Portrette

Personable 'Singer'

To adequately describe James "Quinny" Quinn is an impossible yet unlimited task. Such phrases as lively, personable, talented, could be employed. But even these phrases are not sufficiently descriptive.

Jim hails from Columbia, Pennsylvania. During his four years at Villanova, Jim's main interest has been the Villanova Singers. In his junior year, he served as the club's secretary; and this year, he is president of the club. It is interesting to note that Jim was one of the original members of the Spires.

Music, however, is not his only outside interest or on-campus activity. During the summer months, he is a supervisor at a recreation camp.

As for campus activities, Jim was a member of the committee for the Orphans Outing, chairman of the Queen's contest for the Junior Dinner Dance, a member of the Steering Committee for the Senior Dance, and is co-chairman of the Entertainment Committee for the upcoming Senior Weekend.

It is in line with this last duty that Jim's real talents have begun to shine. He has always strived for better entertainment on campus. In this last position he was able to initiate the idea of the "package deal" concerning double entertainment for Senior Weekend.

In June, he will graduate with an A. B. in English. His immediate plans call for a six month term in the service. After completing his service tenure, Jim plans to enter the entertainment field.

He and the other members of the original Spires plan to regroup under the name of The Coventry Lads, cut a few records, and make a college folk singing concert tour. After spending two or three years with the singing troupe, Jim plans to attend law school.

In a more serious tone, Jim was asked to comment upon his four years at Villanova and tell exactly what the school has meant to him: "I found that at Villanova I have been able to combine not only education but also fulfillment in various other fields. I am especially grateful for having the opportunity of acquiring close and lasting friendships. To me, the fellows I have met, those faculty members who have guided me, and the good times I have had here, will leave a lasting remembrance."

Newly Organized History Club Slates Thomas Mentzer Talk

The Villanova History Club — newly formed under the Chairmanship of Mr. Thomas Mentzer, Associate Professor of History — held its first election meeting last Wednesday, February 26.

The group elected senior history major Joe Horn as president, and junior modern language major Joe Fitzpatrick vice-president.

Also elected to terms for the completion of this semester were Jim Mitchell and Al Verdi, both junior history majors, treasurer and secretary respectively, and Ken Curtin, junior English major, Student Council representative when the group is formally admitted to the student government.

Mr. Mentzer outlined the objectives of the organization as being twofold: to better familiarize students with the problems of historians and with the latest in the ever-changing field of historical interpretation; and to act in providing for its members a constant reservoir of information on latest graduate school and graduate school opportunities.

Tentatively scheduled as activities for the remainder of this semester are plans to bring to the campus two outside lecturers, a panel discussion program, and a social to close out the year.

Members now number between forty-five and fifty — most of whom are junior and seniors. The club, however, intends to soon begin actively campaigning for new members — particularly among underclassmen. Dues are currently set at $1.00 per semester and the organization is open to all interested students.

Lit. Society Slates Theatre Address By Richard Duprey

Richard A. Duprey, chairman of the Villanova Theatre Department, will address the Literary Society tomorrow at 10:30 a.m. in 207 Vasey.

"Avant-Garde: The Theatre of the Absurd," is the topic of his lecture, the first in a series sponsored by the Society during the second semester. A discussion period will follow the talk.

Mr. Duprey, who teaches a graduate class in theatre here, is the drama critic for the Catholic Standard and Times, and has recently written a book, Just Off the Aisle.

All members of the Villanova faculty and studentry are invited to attend this talk on one of the predominant trends in modern drama.

Last Monday, March 2, Paul Norton moderated a Literary Symposium on "The Direction of the Modern American Theatre."

Film, Field Trip Highlight Meeting Of VU Geologists

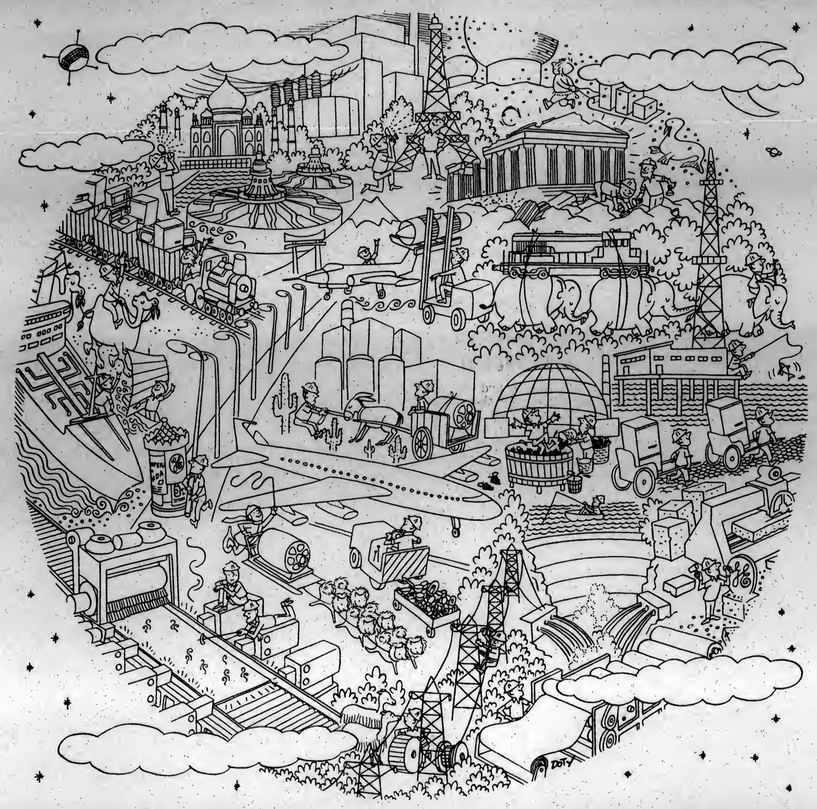
The regular monthly meeting of the Villanova Geological Society will be held tomorrow in 315 Tolentine Hall.

The major business will include plans for the upcoming field trip to Scrub Iron Mines in northern New Jersey. The members will be conducted on a tour of the underground workings of the mine during actual operations.

The meeting will conclude with the film, The Story of Phosphorus, produced by the Bureau of Mines.

The society wishes to extend a cordial welcome to any students interested in geology and who would desire to participate in the activities of the organization.

NROTC Battalion To Sponsor Valuable Navy Art Collection



U.S. Navy combat artists' paintings and on-the-scene drawings will be exhibited in the West Lounge of Dougherty Hall from Monday, March 9 through Thursday, March 12.

Hours of the exhibit will be 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily. A different group of paintings and drawings will be shown each day.

The exhibit, sponsored by the Naval ROTC Unit, will have 36 original works, selected from the million-dollar Navy art collection. These works depict highlights of the Navy's activities in the Pacific, Atlantic, Korea, Normandy, and the Philippines.

Works in oil, water color, charcoal, inkwork, scratchboard, and gouache, which have been shown throughout the United States and abroad, will be exhibited.

According to Captain Charles D. McCall, Naval ROTC Unit Commanding Officer, the purpose of the exhibit is to give people an opportunity to see the collection in the original. The exhibit is normally on display at the U.S. Navy Exhibit Center in Washington, D.C.

Ever see the "Progress Corps" in action?

Its members are at work all over the free world, helping millions of people to progress toward better lives.

In India, West Germany, Italy, and in the United States, they're building nuclear power plants, launching the age of low-cost atomic power.

In Samoa, they're developing an educational TV network to battle illiteracy . . . while in Pittsburgh, they're working with teachers to help high school students learn more about computers.

In Wales, they're putting the final touches on Europe's first computer-controlled steel mill. Near Los Angeles they've scored a world first by putting a computer in charge of cement mill operations.

In Brazil, Pakistan and Ghana, they're providing extra-high-voltage equipment for huge dams to harness these nations' hydroelectric power. For Malaysia, they're supplying high-power diesel locomotives . . . for Norway, a marine engine room to power one of the world's largest supertankers.

The members of the "Progress Corps" are the men and women of General Electric, working to provide the key to progress—low-cost electric power and better ways of putting it to work. Many are engineers. Many others are international lawyers, physicists, financial specialists, marketing experts.

General Electric is growing both at home and abroad. If you'd like to grow with us, talk to your placement director. He can help qualified people begin their General Electric careers.

Another motion ,introduced by Jim Griffin, was passed in the Council. By this motion, the Student Council will recommend to the Student-Faculty Committee a re-evaluation of the present grading system so that academic grades will more equitably reflect a student's achievement.

Seeking Accurate "Cum"

Speaking in favor of the motion, Griffin stated that a student should receive credit for marks which lie between the letter A, B, etc. One of the reasons given was that the student's cummulative average is very important and therefore should be more accurately reflected.

The final motion, introduced by Dennis Addonizio, proposed that the Student Council provide for the immediate installation of a "Coke" and/or "Milk" machine in the Library. It was defeated after brief debate.

Prior to the debate on the motions, Jim McErlane reported that Project Buffalo, run by the Spirit Committee, was a great success.

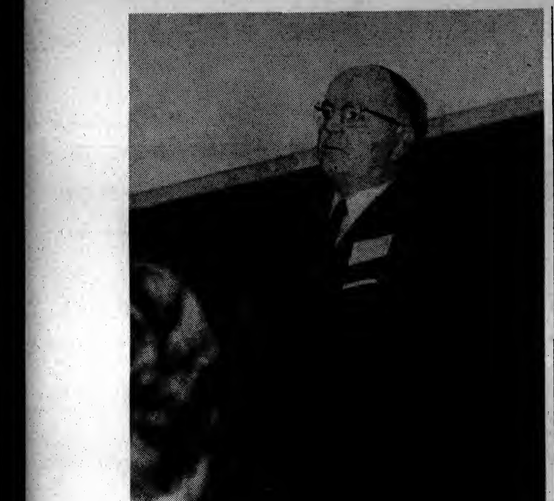
people in these projects must be moved to different residences, Mayor Daley said the "city must provide for the good of the whole."

Mayor Daley continued saying that in the past three years the number of slum dwellings has been reduced by 8000 or 9000. By 1970 he hopes to have the slum problem beaten.

Other Aspects



He further explained that today Urban Renewal is not concerned solely with slum clearance and Public Housing as it was in the 1940's and 1950's, but that it also deals with the improvement of transportation, water resources, and sewage disposal. Continuing he said, "Urban Renewal represents the objectives and very essence of government."

In ending, Mayor Daley declared that "the greatest challenge lies in the field of politics and that our greatest leaders come from politics. There is not a more honorable profession than the field of politics."

Questions

A question and answer period followed the lecture at which time questions pertaining to the topic and some not related to it were asked.

One pertained to President Johnson's chances of re-election. Mayor Daley replied that Johnson will not face the religious issue that former President Kennedy had to face and that Johnson will carry the state of Illinois in 1964 for the entire Democratic ticket.

ICG Convention Is A Success Revisions Due For Platform

The Intercollegiate Conference on Government held its regional convention on Saturday at Rosemont College. A total of 107 delegates attended the convention which had for its purpose the drafting of a model national political platform.

After registering in the morning, the delegates went to committee meetings where they worked on separate planks of the platform. Some of the committees were: Agriculture and National Resources, Foreign Affairs, Labor, National Defense, and Judiciary and Government.

Mike Rosani was the chairman of the Civil Rights committee while other Villanovans took an active part in the Taxation and Finance; Commerce, Industry and Transporation; and the Health, Education, and Welfare committees.

Immediately after the committee meetings, the I.C.G. members met to nominate presidential candidates and to sign petitions. The candidates selected included Johnson, Scranton, Goldwater, Rockfeller, and Smith.

Before the afternoon session, the Rules Committee selected a member of the Villanova I.C.G. to the post of Vice-Regional Chairman for next year. When the general session began, Bob Hacking of West Chester State Teachers College, this year's regional director, was elected as speaker for the state convention to be held in April.

Genevieve Blatt, Secretary of Internal Affairs for Pennsylvania, made a brief appearance at the convention, mentioning the fact that she was a founder of I.C.G. about 30 years ago.

At the general session, the committee reports were debated and either adopted or rejected after being considered section by section. At the end of the platform debate, the delegates were polled concerning their presidential preference.

In the first vote Margaret Chase Smith led by a close margin.

Philadelphia Tutor Project Announces Volunteer Need

The Philadelphia Tutorial Project has announced the need for tutors to help junior and senior high students.

There is an ever-growing list of students who wish to be tutored. At the present time, about 500 college students are helping 900 junior and senior high school students.

Those who volunteer are asked to donate an hour-and-a-half a week to benefit students' weak in academic subjects. The tutor will meet with his student in the neighborhood of his choosing every week.

Some of the centers are in Germantown, West Oak Lane, Tioga, North Philadelphia, Kensington, South Philadelphia, and West Philadelphia. Most of the colleges in the Philadelphia area participate in the project, and the program is open to undergraduates, graduate students, and alumni.

Any student who wishes academic help can take advantage of the project; therefore, the tutor may also meet well-motivated students who are interested in college.

Anyone interested in helping students should contact the Philadelphia Tutorial Project: 1830 N. Park Ave., Philadelphia, Pa. 19122; or phone PO 9-0335 or PO 9-0336.

David Taylor Speaks On Washington's SS To Conservative Club

Mr. David Taylor of the Freedoms Foundation of Valley Forge, was the guest lecturer at the Conservative Club meeting last Thursday night.

A speaker who has been variously accorded the titles of author, historian and lecturer, Mr. Taylor spoke on "General Washington's Secret Service," which dealt with the American intelligence system used during the Revolutionary War.

The talk centered around a number of battles and incidents of the war, particularly those occuring in the Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland and Delaware areas. Among the battles discussed were Yorktown, White Marsh and Trenton, all of which Mr. Taylor felt were won on the basis of superior intelligence.

Washington's intelligence system was based on courageous individuals, many of whom he did not know, and some of whom he even hated, believing them to be Tories. Mr. Taylor decried the fact that the modern historian often ignores these people and their efforts, peferring to give his interpretation of an event through a much larger and complex cause.

It is, in Mr. Taylor's opinion, this attitude which has led to the downgrading of many of our American heroes.

Main Point Cabaret Opened By Britton; Students Invited

The Main Point, a folk music entertainment restaurant, opened last Friday evening. The new coffee cabaret is headed by George S. Britton, noted professional folk singer, and is located at 874 Lancaster Avenue, Bryn Mawr.

Mr. Britton, a founder of the Philadelphia Folk Song Society, said: "We plan to offer the Main Line outstanding folk singers of national reputation in an intimate cabaret atmosphere that will recall the traditional community meeting places where the folk tradition has had its roots for centuries."

Professional performances at the Main Point will be scheduled primarily in the evenings, with initial operations limited to Friday and Saturday.

In addition, at other times during the week and on Saturday afternoons, the folk restaurant will sponsor amateur "hootenanies" and folk song workshops for local music students of all ages.

Associated with Mr. Britton and his wife are Mr. and Mrs. William F. Pierce of Wayne, and Mrs. Georgia M. Coxe of Strafford.

There will be three complete performances each evening between 8:30 p.m. and 1 a.m.

Kegler Captain Razzore Wins At Collegiate Bowling Tourney

by Spencer Jones

Andy Razzore, Villanova's Varsity Bowling team captain will represent the Wildcats in the National Intercollegiate Invitational Tournament.

He gained this honor by winning the singles event and placing second in the all-events in the Associations of College Unions Eastern Invitational Region three Tournament, held in Gettysburg, Pennsylvania on February 15.

Andy bowled games of 205, 224, and 227 for a 656 series. His nine game total of 1742 placed him second only to Ted DeLuca of LaSalle.

Razzore teamed with junior John Brennan in the doubles portion of the tourney. Their 1107 total was good for a fifth place finish. Brennan finished fourth in the singles by rolling a 599 series with a high game of 233.

'Cats Fifth

However, the Villanova team finished a disappointing fifth. Along with Razzore and Brennan, senior Chuck Williams and Howie Riley along with freshman John Therkelson made up the 'Cats squad.

By winning at Gettysburg, Razzore will travel to Oakland, California on April 4, 5, and 6 for the National Collegiate finals. The winner of the tournament will be the National Collegiate Champion. The Amercian Machine and Foundry Company will pay for the entire three day event.

Razzore is a senior from Elmont, New York majoring in Accounting. He claims seven years bowling experience.

On Sunday, February 16, Razzore watched his fellow keglers defeat Drexel 2-1 to keep the Mainliners lead in the Eastern Intercollegiate Bowling League.

'Cats Keep Lead

The following Sunday, February 23, the 'Cats kept their lead

Andy Razzore

at three games with a 2-1 win over Penn State.

In the latest match, held March 1, the Wildcats dropped 2 of 3 games to the Dragons of Drexel Tech. Howie Riley lead the 'Cats with a 550 series and a high game of 212.

The 2 game loss makes Villanova's record 16-5. This leaves them only two games ahead of Drexel with four weeks remaining in the league.

The Eastern Intercollegiate Doubles Tourney at William Penn Lanes will be held on April 11-12, 18-19.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

Villanova's freshmen basketball team was assured of a winning season before its closing game against Seton Hall this past Monday. The Wildkittens, 6-4 going into the Pirates game, finished 4-4 in Big Five competition.

They dropped both games to LaSalle and St. Joseph's while capturing double victories from Pennsylvania and Temple. The Little Explorers and the Hawklets tied for the Big Five title with one loss a piece.

The men of Coach Jack Devine were thrashed by the Hawks, 88-58 the night before the varsity followed suit.

NCAA Regionals Open Monday As 'Cats Battle Providence

by Tom Bruderle

Five months of practice and actual competition finally reach a climax with the beginning of the NCAA Eastern regionals Monday at the Palestra. These things are rarely easy and this is no exception as Villanova's basketball team tangles with an always tough Providence five.

Last Wednesday night, the Friars saw their 13 game winning streak snapped by the NIT-bound St. Joseph's Hawks, 67-62. Although the City Liners victory may not appear convincing to most Villanova fans, the strategy employed by coach Jack Ramsay merits close attention.

Top man for the Friars throughout the season in scoring as well as height (6-10) has been John Thompson. Long John has been averaging better than 26 points a contest and tallied 28 against the beloved Hawks.

Coach Joe Mullaney's game plans are basically simple: feed Thompson. To counter this, St. Joe's put heavy pressure on the two Friar guards. Result: the three men used at guard could get but twelve points on fifteen shots from the field and they recorded but three assists.

Thompson took only 12 shots from the field hitting on eight of them to go with his 12 for 15 from the foul line. Although he and his playmates were outrebounded by the smaller Hawks, Thompson led all leapers with 15 snares.

Despite Thompson's value to the New Englanders, this is not a one man team. His fellow cohort in scoring has been 6-1 Jim Stone, who has gained some fame or notoriety (whichever you prefer) by teaching himself to shoot off his "wrong" foot.

Versus St. Joe's, Stone contributed 19 points in a losing cause and passed off for seven assists. The other forward is 6-8 Bob Kovalski who set all kinds of records as a freshman but has been slightly over-shadowed by Thompson.

The two most valuable players to the Friars could have graduated last season, Vinne Ernst and Ray Flynn. Never a prolific scorer, the 5-9 Ernst gave the Friars that important element of leadership. Flynn, however, was the scorer.

In the Christmas tournament held in the Palestra two years ago, he poured in 34 points in a winning effort against the 'Cats.

Watch for Villanova's guards to raise all sorts of Caine with the Friars still relatively inexperienced guards to keep the ball away from Thompson. When he does get the ball, the 'Cats will need strong defensive performances from Jim Washington and possible starter Al Sallee.

A team can't shoot without the ball and against the Hawks, Providence could only manage a good yet still poor 22 for 44 from the field.

Mermen Sink Rutgers, 66-29 Take Nine Of Eleven Events

by Bob McIntyre

On Wednesday afternoon Villanova's Varsity swimmers trounced Rutgers by a score of 66-29, to make their last home meet of the current season a successful one and bring their season record to 7-2.

Those two losses came at the hands of Army and Yale, two of the best in the East this year along with Villanova.

The Cats garnered a total of nine first places as they outclassed the Jerseyites. In the opening event, before a near-capacity crowd, the 400 yard medley team consisting of All-American Dick McDonough, Frank Keim, Jack Geoghegan, and Bill Gallagher coasted to victory in the time of 3:57.9. Up next was Rick Girdler who won out in the 220 yard freestyle in the time of 1:56.7.

Paul Winn won the dash event at 50 yards in the time of 23.0. Chris Fisher and Roger Guthrie each won their specialties. Fisher won the 200 yard individual medley in 2:17.4 and Guthrie 200 yard butterfly in 2:10.2.

Diving Event

Bob Biese collected 213.50 points to lead the divers for a first place as did Dick McDonough in the 100 yard freestyle in 49.3. Bill Livingood broke his own Varsity pool record set against LaSalle when he swam the 200 yard backstroke in 2:10.9. The old record, which stood for a week was 2:11.4. Rounding out the first places was Ken Herr in the 200 yard breaststroke in 2:31.5.

Frosh Swamped

Villanova's freshmen swimming team was defeated by the University of Rutgers yearlings 68-26 in a meet preceding the Varsity meet last Wednesday.

Rutgers totaled eight firsts as they toppled the Wildkittens, whose record has now fallen to 2-7. The only first place finisher for the 'Cats was Joe Farell who won the 50 yard freestyle in the time of 23.4. The frosh have one regular scheduled meet left. That meet is with Penn and then the Middle Atlantic A.A.U. Championships in Philadelphia March 21-22.

"Catnips"

The Varsity swimmers have one duel meet left with the University of Penn which takes place today, and from then on the big ones come into focus for Ed Geisz' mermen.

The Eastern Seaboard Inter-Collegiate Championships take place at Dartmouth in Hanover, New Hampshire, March 12-14. The NCAA Championships take place at Yale March 26-28.

The Easterns will take place in Dartmouth's brand new $500,000 pool which has eight 12 foot wide racing lanes two of which go 50 meters long.

Everyone on Villanova's swimming team knows Bill Livingood and what an outstanding job he is doing in the backstroke but no one on the swimming team knows what he was a few years back and how far he has come.

In high school he swam the 100 yard backstroke in 1:12. Now as a sophomore in college he is swimming it in around 58 seconds, a drop of 24 seconds which is phenomenal for a swimmer. He is doing almost the same in 200 yard backstroke dropping 10 seconds from last year.

Walko Moves Nearer Billiards Title With Regional Triumph

by Frank Hermes

Captain George Walko of the Billard Team representing Villanova in the National College Regional Tournament took first place in the Pocket Billard Division. The tournament was held February 15, 1964, at Gettysburg College in Pennsylvania.

Because of the absence of Dom Cortellessa, Pat O'Neil represented Villanova in the Three Cushion Division, but failed to reach the semifinals, meeting last year's champion in the first round.

Besides annexing both a trophy for himself and the school, Walko will now go on to the all expense-paid super-sectionals as a stepping stone to the National championships.

Defeats 1963 Winner

In the single elimination type series, Walko drew as his first opponent, West Virginia University's Linley Perkins, who was last year's winner and runner-up in the national.

In the second match, Walko had a cold start, and it was a close to the finish duel, George beating his University of Delaware foe, 75-60.

George had little trouble in the semifinals breezing to a 75-28 victory over a Powson State player. He added a little class to his match play by running 28 balls and out in this match.

In the finals, George met highly respected Dan Flanagan from Princeton who had breezed to the finals winning his matches with scores as high as 75-3.

Overtakes Opponent

Walko jumped to an early 21-7 lead, but a hot streak by Flanagan turned the tables to 46-22. But Walko returned to form and runs of 20 and 25 to win 75-48.

With the continued success of the Billard Team, the Rev. Richard A. Appicci has taken over direction and elevated the club intramural stature to that of an accredited extracurricular activity. The Billard Club will remain as an intramural activity, with the top players fighting for berths on the team.

Exit A Legend

by Steve Freind

It's hard to say good-bye to a legend.

Villanova fans learned that last night as Wally Jones played his last regular season game in blue and white togs. When the Jones boy left the court for the last time, it was more than just an athlete closing out a brilliant career. It was the end of an era.

Few people who saw number 24 hit his first weird jumper in the season opener against Scranton two years ago were aware that a legend was being born. What followed is now history — two Big Five titles, three tournament bids, a 62-20 record and over 1300 points.

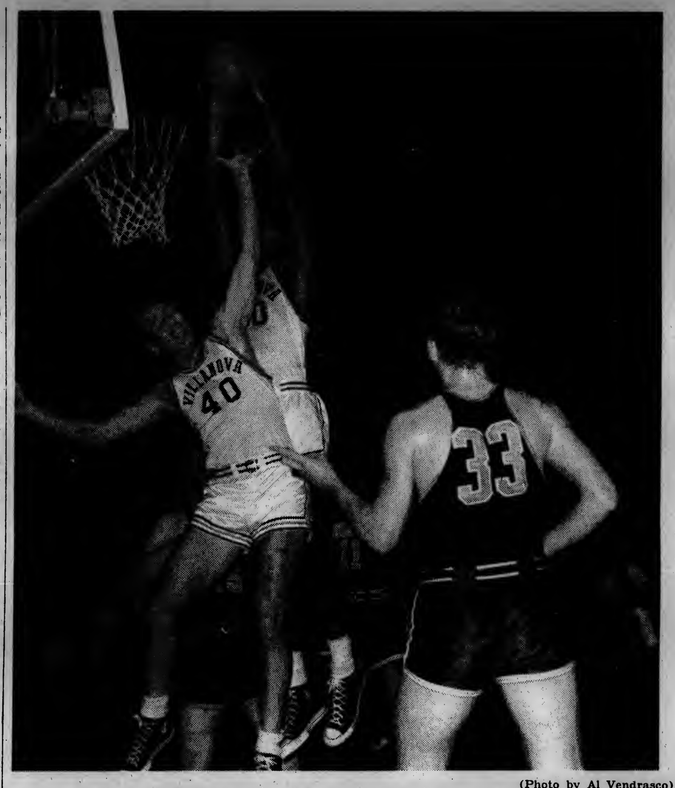
In a fitting tribute to his ability, the United Press recently named Wally to their All-American third team.

But the Jones legend is more than a list of statistics. Figures can't describe the career of the guy whom Coach Jack Kraft labeled "the greatest back court man that I have ever seen." Words are equally inadequate to do justice to his fabulous career. You have to see him in action to appreciate his greatness and even then it's hard to believe.

The mere presence of Jones on the court sends an electric wave through the crowd as they await and expect the unbelievable.

His magical moves have often earned him the tag of showboat by sour-grape cynics. Nothing could be farther from the truth. With Jones, the impossible is an everyday occurrance and even his greatest critics have been seen gasping at his hardwood antics.

Perhaps Bob Vetrone best summed it up after last year's triumph over Canisius. Quoth the Bulletin scribe, "With anyone else, it would be showboating. With Jones it is just the normal expression of a rare basketball talent."



The Jones reign hasn't been all roses. Entering his junior year, he faced his greatest challenge. Leftwich and White were now gone and on Wally's slim shoulders rested the 'Cats fate. With a lack of material, Kraft called on Wally to direct a slowdown offense, which is as familiar to Jones as modesty is to C. Clay. Added to his woes was a severely injured knee, which was to become the most celebrated joint in City Series history.

Routed by Princeton in the opener, the 'Cat cause was written off as hopeless. Three months later, the 'Cats sported a 19-10 record and a fourth place in the N.I.T. It's fatal to write off the Jones boy.

With the talent back this year, Jones has sparkled and the 'Cats have rolled to their greatest season. The tournament trail still lies ahead and Kraft's bombers could take all the marbles.

But for the local crowd, last night was Wally's farewell and as he trotted off the court, the Field House went wild. But, for once, there was a lump in the throat of 'Cat rooters.

It's hard to say good-bye to a legend.

"Aw come on Wash let me get it" could be what Bernie Schaffer is saying as Jim Washington goes over him to stuff one in against Marquette. The Wildcats defeated the Musketeers 87-64.

Kraftmen Bow To St. Joe's Hawks; Bounce Back To Defeat Marquette

by Steve Freind

Despite the sign proclaiming "The Cat is Dead," Villanova's tournament-bound Wildcats breathed hard enough to blow Marquette off the court, 87-64, before 8000 Palestra fans last Wednesday. Rebounding from the loss to St. Joseph's, the 'Cats moved into the magic 20 game victory circle for the second time in Coach Jack Kraft's three year reign.

Big Second Half

Overcoming an early 11-6 deficit, the 'Cats forged into a 36-30 halftime lead on the shooting of Wally Jones and Jim Washington. Richie Moore joined the scoring parade in the second stanza to break the game open.

Showing no ill effects from hip injury, Jones flashed All-American form in one of his best efforts of the year. Hitting on 10 of 17 shots, Jones tallied 23 points while adding a dozen steals. Close behind was Jim Washington, notching 17 markers and 18 rebounds. Moore closed the night with 16 points and Al Sallee, starting his first game in a surprise move, netted 10.

Rebounding

For one of the few times this season, Villanova held its own in the rebound department, largely through the leaping of Washington. Winning the battle of the boards, 51-43, the 'Cats got off 21 more shots than Marquette.

One of the bright spots of the night was the play of Sallee. Showing poise for the first time on the court, the ex-marine hit on 4 of 9 attempts. More important, he supplied Washington with much needed help under the boards with his blocking-out tactics. Sallee could be a major factor in the 'Cats tilt with towering Providence in the first round of the NCAA on Monday.

It was ironic that the 'Cats should notch their twentieth win against Marquette. Last year it was the Warriors who hit the 20 mark at the expense of the 'Cats in the consolation round of the NIT. That loss ruined Kraft's bid for a second straight 20 game campaign as the 'Cats finished with a 19-10 log.

St. Joseph's

Jack Ramsay did it again. For the umpteenth time since taking the reins at St. Joseph's, Ramsay pulled the strings and his hustling Hawks pulled an upset, stunning Villanova's fifth-ranked Wildcats, 69-63, before another sellout Palestra crowd on February 22.

By winning, the Hawks kept alive their hopes for an N.I.T bid and deprived the 'Cats of a share of the Big Five title for the first time under the reign of Coach Jack Kraft. The victory also evened Ramsay's rivalry with Kraft at 2 apiece.

Taking a 2-0 lead on Steve Courtin's jump shot, the Hawks were never headed, running their lead to as much as seven points in the first stanza. The 'Cats whittled the score to 33-32 at the intermission but a four minute scoring famine at the outset of the second half kept them from notching the go-ahead basket.

A Hawk shooting splurge in the last five minutes iced the game as the City Liners widened the gap to eleven points before the 'Cats cut the score to its final margin.

Leading the St. Joe scoring parade was the back court combination of Courtin and suprise-starter Billy Oakes. Courtin burned the nets for 23 points while Oakes added 15 as the pair shot at a 17 for 32 clip.

Top shooter for the 'Cats was Richie Moore with 19 markers followed by Jim Washington's 14. Back court ace Wally Jones, hampered by hip injury, hit on only 5 of 19 shots for 10 points.

As in the LaSalle game, the major factor in Villanopa's was a lack of rebounding. The Hawks completely dominated the boards, outrebounding the 'Cats 49-34. Washington matched Jim Boyle's game-high total of 17 but the 'Cats had no one to offset the work of Tom Duff and Marty Ford, who added 23 more retrieves.

Despite the loss, the 'Cats are ranked seventh in national polls, sporting a 21-3 record. Two of the three losses came in Big Five tilts. The Kraftmen welcome leaving the city to hit the tournament trail, for it seems that their toughest competition is in their own back yard.

A Sports Editorial

Disgraceful Demonstration

According to Noah Webster's latest work, sportsmanship is "skill in, or devotion to, sports; especially conduct becoming to a sportsman, involving honest rivalry and graceful acceptance of results."

Unfortunately, it seems that this definition has not been noted by many of the followers of the Hawk of St. Joseph's or the Wildcat of Villanova.

The St. Joe's-Villanova rivalry is unquestionably one of the most heated of the Big Five rivalries. If conducted along lines agreeing with the worthy Mr. Webster, the exercise of this rivalry can contribute mightily to healthy school spirit.

But when the demonstrations of this rivalry are permitted to deteriorate to such a point that they arouse nothing but distress, then the value of this rivalry is highly questionable.

Such demonstrations have occurred during two recent games in which both teams were involved. On one evening the Hawk was given cause to hang its head in shame; during the other game it was the Wildcat's turn to bow its head.

Such demonstrations obviously go far outside the bounds of sportsmanship and serve only to arouse distress in both participants and spectators. When a participant in a game held before over 9000 spectators makes unsportsmanlike gestures or when a game is delayed for several minutes to clear the court of debris, it is obvious that true sportsmanship has been left far outside the Palestra.

What should be done to prevent such unbecoming displays in the future? Most people immediately think of punishment of those involved in past displays as a deterent to future ones. But this is not getting to the real problem, the attitude toward this traditional rivalry, and the methods of its display.

Only when each and every student from both schools realizes the true meaning of sportsmanship will the traditional Hawk-Wildcat rivalry be able to maintain the respect that it should.

Perhaps Mr. Webster could help those who participated in the recent demonstrations, with the meaning of sportsmanship.

A Good Big Man

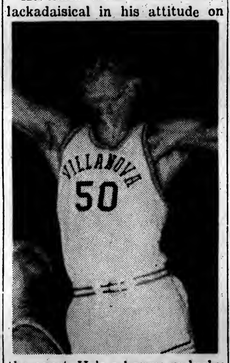
by Rusty Miller

Every team needs a good big man. Villanova's representative in that catagory in a 20 yr. old junior — James Washington.

Frank Corace, recently voted to honorable mention All-American honors, feels the Wildcats couldn't have gotten as far as they have without this tall easy going fellow, Washington. "His main asset is his ability to block your shot," says Frank, "and that jump shot of his from the corner and the key can really hurt you."

Wash went to West Catholic High School in Philadelphia. When he was a senior a fellow named Devine was coaching the "Burrs." He talked Jim into going out for the team. "The first half of the year he was useless, but he showed great potential and improved steadity," says Devine.

When Devine joined Jack Kraft at Villanova the next year as freshman coach he brought Wash with him "on the basis of his potential," the inspirational move of the year.



Fred Crawford of St. Bonaventure says Jim is "definitely the best big man he has faced all year. He's a fantastic jumper, and is great at taking out the opposition's big man . . . an excellent team player." Jim has terrific natural ability — quite obvious when you consider that he's only been playing organized ball for four years.

Coach Ed Hickey of Marquette thinks Wash is "a tremendous rebounder" who "plays real team ball." He feels Wash is definitely an inside man rather than a forward. Hickey, whose team has faced Paul Silas of Creighton, Dave Stallworth of Wichita and Bob Pelkington of Xavier calls Jim "the most agile big man in the game today. It's amazing with his height and weight." — Jim is 6-7, 205.

For 24 games, Wash has hit 134 of 274 from the field, 45 of 89 from the line and has totaled 337 rebounds.

Jim, whose aggressive rebounding has been the deciding factor in several games, at times displays his need of more experience. Consistently the scourge off the defensive board, he sometimes fails miserably on the offensive end. Through inexperience, he fails to achieve position in time.

At times Wash seems almost lackadaisical in his attitude on the court. He's a happy-go-lucky guy. "It takes a lot to rile him, but when he's mad . . ." Well maybe he should get mad more often. In the Duquesne game, an elbow did the trick — it was amazing how fast he got into position for the offensive boards.

Because of the 'Cats inability to come up with a consistant fifth man, Wash has had to assume the burden on the boards. So far the team's "Witchkraft" has been able to compensate for their rebounding weakness. Against a team like Providence however, spell may not be enough. A fellow named Washington may have to get mad to buy the Big V a ticket to Raleigh.

Richie Moore Hits Season High Of 28 As Wildcats Defeats Temple, 67-60

by Tom Bruderle

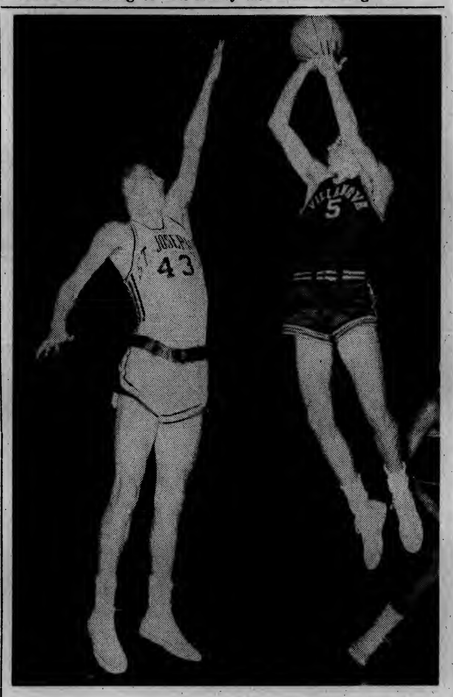
Sparked by Richie Moore's game and season high of 28 points and the incentive of not wanting to finish last in the Big Five, Villanova knocked off the Temple Owls 67-60 last Saturday night at the Palestra.

Moore's scoring came via 13 of 23 from the field and two for three from the foul line. In addition, he plucked off nine rebounds and played a fine defensive game.

The Wildcats main tasks were to nullify as much as possible the inside scoring of Temple's Jim Williams and the outside shooting of Bill Kelley and Bob Harrington.

The frantic arm-waving tactics of Wally Jones and George Leftwich limited the latter two to seven goals on 24 attempts from the field, while Jim Washington and Al Sallee worked on Williams.

The 6-8 Owl sophomore could take but eight shots from the field hitting on five. In the process, he ran into foul trouble getting three before the end of the first half and his fourth early in the second. With Williams seeing but approximately 28 minutes of action, Washington had free rein picking up 13 points to go with his 16 rebounds.



Turning-Point

Even with these heroics, the turning point came on a play some thought should have been called. An attempted lay-up by Kelley was blocked by Washington and, midst cries of goaltending by an irate coach Harry Litwack, play continued. At the time, the Owls were ahead 60-59.

After the 'Cats missed their shot, Leftwich swiped a pass enabling Jones (16 points) to tally the basket that gave the Mainliners the lead for good.

The game was no cake-walk by any means. The lead see-sawed back and forth throughout the first half with Villanova owning a 34-32 spread at halftime. Disregarding two deficits of six points and one of seven points, Temple stormed back.

Led by Vince Richardson's 14 second half points (23 overall) the Owls knotted it up at 55 thanks to a drive by Kelley at 5:58. Seconds later the 6-2 Richardson drove underneath the basket and, with defensive men dripping all over him, he scored to give the Owls their last lead at 60-59.

'Cats Defend IC4A Title Saturday; Harvard Looms As Principal Threat

by Roy Baron

The climax of the indoor track season takes place this Saturday night with the running of the IC4A's in New York's Madison Square Garden.

After participating in three meets in the past two weeks the Wildcats of Coach Jumbo Elliott appears ready to go after the "big one."

The Villanova team retired the trophy last year as they took their fifth team title in the last seven years. This weekend they will be looking forward to gaining the first step toward the retirement of the new trophy.

Harvard to Challenge Cats

Chief competion this year is expected to come from Harvard with Navy and Morgan State having outside chances. Harvard boasts a pair of talented sprinters and broadjumpers in Aggrey Awori and Chris Ohiri, as well as hurdles strength. Navy, on the other hand, depends on the weightmen to garner most of their points.

A few question marks give Villanova supporters cause for concern. First has to be the recent sub-par showing of Noel Carroll. The big Irishman has been running on an injured right leg, but he hopes to be ready to take the 1000 yard run.

Another question-mark is Rolando Cruz. The Wildcat pole vaulter cracked his pole last Saturday in Baltimore and may have some difficulty in adjusting to a new one.

Sullivan Slated for Mile

A doubtful quantity is Tom Sullivan, who is expected to run the mile. He has been somewhat of a disappointment in this event this winter, but he is expected to be ready for the IC4A's. His chief competition should come from Army's Bill Straub, the winner in the Heptagonals.

Best Chance

Perhaps the greatest opportunity for the Wildcats to insure a successful quest of the trophy lies in the performance of the sprinters and hurdlers.

Marshall Uzzle and Earl Horner could give the 'Cats some valuable points in the 60 yard dash. In the hurdles the Mainline hopes rest on Larry Livers and fast-improving Ken Caniglio.

Kurnick Wins Shotput

Two impressive performances by Villanovans in the All-Eastern track championships in Baltimore last Saturday brightened the Wildcats hopes.

Dick Kurnick's meet record toss of 57 feet, 7½ inches showed that he can be counted on for a couple of points in the event in which Gary Gubner figures to reign supreme on Saturday night.

The other man to impress was Vic Zwolak who pushed Pete McArdle to a meet record 8:52.8 in the two-mile. Zwolak figures to pick up five points with a first place finish in this event Saturday.

The 'Cats should be able to gain some more points in the mile relay. The quartet which is expected to be made up of Uzzle, Al Adams, Livers, and Stan Kozlowski could challenge favored Morgan State for first place in this event.

Dr. John F. Callahan Is Speaker At Sixth St. Augustine Lecture

by Matt Roche

Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, university president, introduced the distinguished classical and philosophical scholar, Dr. John F. Callahan, the guest speaker of the six annual Saint Augustine lecture.

The general theme for the series is "Saint Augustine and the Augustinian Tradition" while Dr. Callahan chose for his topic "Saint Augustine and the Greek Philosophers." The lecture was held on March 8 in Vasey Hall Auditorium.

The series was inaugurated in 1959 to invite outstanding international scholars to discuss significant and timely aspects of Saint Augustine's thought and influence.

Dr. Callahan traced the Greek tradition from Homer and Parmenides to Plato and Plotinus. He emphasized the development of philosophical thought as grounded on the basic principle, "God must possess the highest perfection which we can perceive."

Similarities Weighted

In lecturing on the evolution of the classic ontological argument, he weighted the similarities of the Greeks and Saint Augustine and declared, "In the Orphic argument, Saint Augustine substituted the prodigal son for Ulysses and also, seeing the god' for 'willing it'." Later Dr. Callahan continued, "The discrepancy between the ideal and the actual was the basic motivation of his writings, also the key to his preoccupation with evil in his own life."

He emphasized the personal insights of the saint while at the same time listing his similarities to Gregory of Nyssa, a subject of his recent research.

Student Congress Proposes Investigation Of Honor Code

by Jan Dyroff

Student Congress members at their last meeting passed by a vote of 25 to 13 a motion by Jim Murphy, Senior Class President, calling for an academic honor system.

Under the motion an investigation will be held into the feasibility of establishing such a system among the undergraduates to foster more responsibility in the area of testing.

Murphy feels that such an improvement would benefit the image of the university. He cited such schools as the service academies and Bryn Mawr College as successful examples of the employment of honor systems.

Final limits of the proposed system, academic as well as judicial, would be set in the future by action of the student-faculty committee. The range of the motion was left as flexible as possible by the maker.

Speeches by Candidates

Other motions successfully passed included one by John W. Emery which established a legislative precedent for the invitation of presidential candidates to rally at the university.

Need for the measure was shown by citing the last presidential campaign when both Messrs. Kennedy and Nixon were willing to come to Villanova but lack of precedent for such an event was lacking and alleged consequent feeling by authorities prevented such an event.

Two motions by Parliamentarian George McKeon were considered and unanimously passed which dealt with calling for a revision in the council delegate test to include a parliamentary procedure section. His second motion voiced disapproval of present snow removal procedures.

Last motion of the evening was by Ernest Abate. It called for a relaxation of dress regulations for Saturday dinner and was unanimously passed.

New Sound System

At the outset of the evening Vice-Chairman Tom Furst reported that in response to a motion of last semester the University would install a new sound system in the Field House. The new system will be ready by September.

Commencing the Vice-Presidents' reports was Jim McErlane of Student Affairs. He said that the Basketball Club under Brian Banmiller was a great success this academic year and should be continued in the future.

Political Union To Present Senatorial Candidate Blatt

Miss Genevieve Blatt, Pennsylvania's Secretary for Internal Affairs, will address the Villanova Political Union tomorrow evening on the subject of urban renewal.

Miss Blatt is currently engaged in a spirited contest for the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate. Judge Michael Musmanno, the Democratic organization's designee, is her principal opponent.

The meeting will be held at 7 p.m. in 110 Bartley. It will follow the Union's traditional format of a political debate with student speeches following Miss Blatt's.

Debate Topic

The debate resolution is "Resolved that this house favors substantial federal funds for urban renewal." Since her office deals with local governments, the guest speaker is very familiar with the subject.

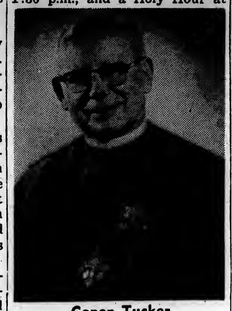
Miss Blatt was elected to her present post in 1954 and was re-elected in 1958 and 1962. She is the first woman in Pennsylvania to have been elected to a statewide office.

Starting as Assistant City Solicitor of Pittsburgh, Miss Blatt has had a long career of governmental, party, and public service. She was President of the State Young Democrats from 1942 to 1950 and has been Secretary of the State Democratic Committee since 1948.

I.C.G. Foundress

In 1934, she founded the Intercollegiate Conference on Government, and she has been its volunteer executive director ever since.

Miss Blatt has B. A. and M. A. degrees in Political Science from the University of Pittsburgh. She also has an L.B. degree from the same University. She was a member of Phi Betta Kappa.



Villanova recently awarded her the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. The Catholic Alumni Club of Philadelphia has named her as the "Outstanding Citizen of the Year."

Senior Retreat Opens, Canon Tucker, OSFS To Conduct Exercises

The Senior Retreat will begin tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the Field House with a conference and benediction. Confessions will be heard immediately after benediction.

The Rev. William Hopkins, OSA, University Chaplain, has announced that the retreat will be conducted by the Very Rev. Canon J. Francis Tucker, OSFS.

Tomorrow, the exercises include a Mass for resident and day students, three conferences scheduled for 9:30 a.m., 11 a.m., 1:30 p.m., and a Holy Hour at

Canon Tucker

3 p.m. Resident seniors will say night prayers at 7:30 p.m., and confessions will follow.

Relatives Invited

The traditional nocturnal adoration will begin immediately after the Holy Hour on Thursday afternoon until the closing exercise on Friday.

The Retreatants are urged to spend an hour before the Blessed Sacrament at this time. Day students may bring their family or friends to join them in their period of adoration.

Friday exercises will consist of a conference at 9 a.m. and another at 10:30 a.m. Closing the retreat will be a Mass and general Communion at 12 noon.

Famed Speaker

Canon Tucker is retreat master at Villa Maria in Wernersville, Pennsylvania. Known as one of America's most noted lecturers and speakers, he has been decorated for many religious activities.

Vaughn-Preps Show Heads Sr. Weekend: Sellout Anticipated

There are only 23 shopping days left until Senior Weekend.

The weekend officially begins Thursday evening, April 2, with a lecture by guest speaker William Sullivan. Mr. Sullivan, who is assistant head of the FBI, will discuss "Communism and the College Students."

Friday night, April 3, at 8 p.m. Sarah Vaughn and the Four Preps make their Main Line debut. Concert chairman Ed Weille has announced that tickets are now on sale to the entire school at $2.50 and $3.

He remarked that the first week of ticket sales were above average, and that this concert, as were the last several, will be a complete sellout prior to concert time.

Council Investigates Code

At the Seton Hall game the Spirit Committee gave a trophy to Wally Jones for being an outstanding basketball player. Closely allied to this, he reported, was the situation concerning the allotment of NCAA tickets to Villanova.

Students Disregarded

Officials granted the University 500 ducats but these went first to season ticket holders, then to people of special import to the school and Palestra season ticket holders. No tickets were available for the students.

In closing he made it known that the senior parking privilege was submitted and that the results would be posted on the senior bulletin board shortly.

Under the Student Affairs report Jan Dyroff gave a progress resume of the motion concerning the establishment of political clubs. The major political parties have been contacted and a recruiting campaign is under way at the present.

According to the elections committee, 43.1 per cent of the Freshman class voted in the recent elections which returned resident rep John Hedges and dayhop rep Jim Proud.

World's Fair

Neil Stoneback, Vice President for Educational Affairs, related that Barbara Ward would be the next speaker in the Council's series and that the World's Fair in New York had agreed to have a Villanova University Day, the date of which will be ascertained later.

On behalf of the religious affairs committee, Jim O'Conner rose in support of the Augustinian Seminary Guild collection which will be taken up on April 13-24 to supply money for the student priests.

Rising next for the Treasurer's report, O'Conner presented a balance of $667.88 for February 19. At the time of the meeting, March 4, the balance was $764.42. Just how this was so raised many questions.

Embezzlers in Council?

Inquisitors brough forth points picayune and prodigious, ranging from a query on the NCAA outlay of $500 to a debate over whether it was Mr. Furst who spent $1.62, or Mr. Stoneback who spent $1.98, or vice-versa.

After the Vice-President, Chairman Marty McGuinn took the floor. He announced that a proposed new constitution would be presented to the Student Congress on March 18 with discussion thereon at a future meeting.

Next he announced the dates of the nominations and general elections as being April 2 and April 10, respectively. New members will be seated at a joint meeting of the congresses on April 16.

McGuinn Speaks

McGuinn cautioned the organizations to remember that their new delegates must be chosen by April 16 and that to qualify the proposed member must have a 2.5 and be approved by the Dean of Men and the Chaplain.

He closed by noting that next year's social calendar is now being formed and that any major lectures or events should be made in accordance with it.

Under old business, the two new freshman members were officially recognized. Also elections were held to fill junior and sophomore vacancies in the Student Senate.

Ryan Elected

Nominated for the junior seat were Jack Ryan, Rusty Miller, and Dennis Addonnizzio. Miller was disqualified as he was not a member of the Congress, and Ryan took the contest.

In competition for the sophomore slot were Pat Mahady and Bob Gallo. In the voting Gallo took the count but there were three abstentions in the tally.

Under new business, McGuinn reported that the Student Senate had acted as a judiciary body. Its first case was issuing a public letter of censure to a candidate for the Student Council from the Class of 1967 for an infraction of election rules.

This decision emphasized the responsibility of the candidate to comply with the rules. Because campaign literature was distributed prior to the legal time, the letter was deemed appropriate.

Derelicts Suspended

In the second case, the Delta Pi Epsilon fraternity and the Blue Key were found derelict in their reports of off-campus activities. The Senate suspended all activities of these organizations for the second semester.

The organizations were given a suspended sentence for one week with the proviso that the reports were to be made. Failing this the sentence would be taken out of the suspended status and would be rigidly enforced.

After the motions noted previously the Congress was moved adjourned and closed with a prayer for the recently deceased Rev. John O'Leary, OSA, Professor of Mathematics.

History Club Aims To Assist Students In Graduate Careers

The University's new History Club under the direction of Thomas Mentzer of the department of History has outlined its aims for the future.

Mr. Mentzer feels that its program is of such a nature that it will interest all undergraduate students who are thinking about entering graduate school eventually.

Those seeking information on careers in law, government, or the foreign service should be especially attracted by the program.

Purposes

The program is integrally connected with the two basic purposes of the club. The first is to stimulate appreciation of the importance of history as a practical tool in helping to understand our complex world by reflection upon the past.

The second is to offer members a chance to keep abreast of the changing interpretations in the different fields of history by inviting competent lecturers to speak at the club's meeting.

Dr. Henry Rofinot, chairman and Dr. Alexander Rudhart, associate professor of the Department of History are scheduled to speak. The dates for these lecturers will be sometime in April or May.

Likewise, Mr. Mentzer will speak at one of the regular meetings on the topic "You and Your Choice of a Graduate School."

This neophyte organization also serves to relate to its members, or to anyone interested, information regarding graduate school opportunities.

This service will show students how they may obtain financial assistance for graduate study from individual schools.

Unique Feature

The program will function as follows: club members will be in personal contact with previous members who are now in graduate schools.

Those in graduate school will relay first-hand information regarding all phases of graduate work to the club members. Personal contact between individuals is what makes this program unique.

Obviously, because the club has just been formed, it will take a few years to get the program fully operating and running smoothly. Mr. Mentzer emphasizes the need for more students — especially freshmen and sophomores who are willing to work for the organization and make this program a success.

Anyone interested in obtaining more information regarding this program should contact either Mr. Mentzer or anyone of the club's officers.

Council Member Starts Clubs For Politically Active People

As a result of a recent Student Council motion, a nucleus for undergraduate clubs directly affiliated with political organizations is being recruited.

It is hoped that chapters of both the Young Republicans and Young Democrats will be established on campus. Approval for this establishment was given by the Student Congress in its last meeting of 1963.

Interested underclassmen who are willing to join either of these groups are requested to drop their names, addresses and choice of clubs in the Philosophy Club box in the Student Council office or in the Villanovan office in care of Jan Dyroff.

In the near future, organizational meetings will be held to start the clubs in actual operation. Enthusiasm for the project is high in both of the political parties concerned.

John Acton of the Montgomery County Republican Committee and Joseph T. Doyle of the Delaware County Democratic Committee have both expressed an interest in the campus project and a willingness to participate in its instigation.

Many benefits for the University are expected to result from these clubs in the forms of increased political awareness and additional on-campus events.

Dr. Kopper Will Speak About Joycian Religion Found In 'Wake' Book

Dr. Kopper of the Villanova English Department will address the Literary Society at 10:30 a.m. on Thursday, March 19, in 207 Vasey.

"Joyce and Religion" will be the topic of his lecture, the second in a series sponsored by the Society during this semester.

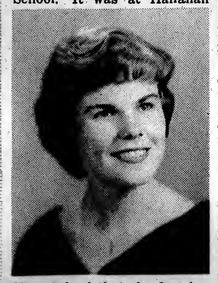
Dr. Kopper, whose special field is James Joyce, intends to concentrate on Finnegans Wake during the lecture. Frank Quattrone, president of the club, urges each member to bring along a copy of the book.

All members of the Villanova faculty and student body are invited to attend this and subsequent Society lectures.

Details concerning the Literary Speaker Program for 1964-65 will be announced shortly.

Pre-Law Field Trip

The Pre-Law Society has announced that it will conduct a field trip to Washington, D.C. on April 21. Besides visiting the Supreme Court, those attending will also hear a talk from Senator Hugh Scott. The cost of this venture will be $3.75.



Articles are now being accepted for the Pre-Law Journal. These essays may deal with any aspect or topic of law.

Portrette

Barbara Regan—Live Wire

Miss Barbara Regan is the first woman graduate of the Engineering College. In June, Barbara will receive her diploma in Electrical Engineering.

Barbara's hometown is Philadelphia and she attended John W. Hallahan High School. It was at Hallahan High School that she first became interested in science and math.

Her desire to enter engineering and the fact that she won a scholarship turned her towards the Villanova campus. Now, just four years later, this decision has proven beneficial to both Barbara and Villanova.

While at Villanova, Barbara has been a member of the Institute of Electrical and Electronic Engineers, the Belle Air Staff, Pi Theta Chi, and a staff member of the Circuit, the electrical engineering magazine.

During the summer months, Barbara along with some other students of her department, works as an engineering aid at the Frankford Arsenal. However, all her interests are not scientific. While at the Arsenal, she was co-chairman of the social committee for the student aids.

Barbara is also an avid sports fan. She claims that she "seldom misses a basketball game." She also attends most of the track meets. She likes swimming and water skiing.

In a more intellectual capacity, Barbara enjoys courses that are diverse from her major. She has taken many electives in psychology. In her words, "a person can only take so much technical material."

As a special note to her academic career. Barbara is participating in a seminar project with the Rev. Anthony J. Mullen, OSA, Chairman of the Electrical Department. This project is in connection with Father Mullen's personal research.

Being a girl enrolled in a predominantly male curriculum, naturally Barbara would feel a bit uneasy. However, she said that she was accepted by the male students and faculty and, without them and their help, she would have been lost.

She feels that she owes a great deal to the male engineers because they have both helped her and have been complacent about a certain amount of female hysterics and nonsense.

In June, Villanova University can be justly proud of its first woman Engineering graduate.

Norton Gives Promise 'Concept' To Come Out Despite Several Snags

Paul Norton, co-editor of Concept, has announced that the journal will appear by the week of April 12.

Concept was originally planned to appear bi-annually but several snags in the first semester production have resulted in just one edition for the current year.

Articles on philosophy, art, literature, music, religion, science, and political theory have already appeared in past issues.

Titles

Some titles of manuscripts which are expected to appear in the forthcoming edition are "The Modernity of Saint Augustine," "A Symposium of Albert Camus," "Two Views of Aeneas." A special feature on the controversial French Jesuit philosopher, Pierre Chardin, will also be included.

According to the co-editors, Concept is "a chance for students to express themselves in a non-literary sense." Material for the journal has been contributed by undergraduates, graduate students, professors and students from other schools.

Staffers Needed

Most members of the current staff are expected to graduate in June, offering a special welcome to sophomores and juniors who are interested in organizing next year's publications.

Concept is described by Norton "as an organ of student expression."

Freshman Vote Tally Victories For Officers K. Hedge And J. Proud

Ken Hedges and Jim Proud were elected to the Student Council as freshmen resident and day-hop representatives respectively on February 27. They were formally seated in the Council last Wednesday.

Ken Hedges, running as an independent, received 225 of the 538 cotes cast. Jim Proud, also an independent, obtained 219 votes.

In the resident race, Rich Malizia polled 128 votes and Moe Passannante had 181. Dennis Pepe came in second with 118 votes as day-hop representative.

Behind Pepe came Charles Milligan with 84 votes. Jeff Richard with 76, and Bob Smith with 41. The vote was 538 out of a total enrollment of 1231 freshmen.

Rich Connors, chairman of the election committee, said there were no apparent voting discrepancies, despite the motion raised in the Council concerning a revision of the voting procedure.

The freshmen elections in the spring will decide the election of sophomore class officers.

Tom Nevins coaches an unidentified Belle Masque actor on some of the finer points of his trade in preparation for the Society's spring production of "The Desperate Hours."

Belle Masque Announces Play By Hayes, 'The Desperate Hour'

James Mason, president of the Belle Masque Drama Society, has announced that this semester's major production will be The Desperate Hours by Joseph Hayes.

The play is scheduled for April 10, 11, 17, 18 in Vasey Hall Auditorium. Tickets will go on sale on April 6 in the Pie Shoppe at the cost of $1 per student.

The Desperate Hours is an Alfred Hitchcock-type thriller about three escaped convicts who hold a family hostage for 48 hours.

Portraying leading roles in the play are James Mason, who plays the part of Dan Hillard; Kathleen Roos playing the part of Mrs. Hilliard; and Brian Morgen, who takes the role of Glen Griffin.

Other participants in the play are Bonnie Lucas, Jim Stillwaggon, Richard Rostella, John Meihan, Bill Byrne, and his 16-year-old brother, John Byrne.

Political Science Group Plans Talk By Robert Strauz-Hupe

The Villanova Political Science Department has announced that its semi-annual guest lecturer for the semester will be Dr. Robert Strausz-Hupe, director of the Foreign Policy Research Institute of the University of Pennsylvania.

The lecture, scheduled for 7:30 p.m. on Monday, March 23, will take place in 110 Bartley.

Dr. Strausz-Hupe, who is also professor of political science and Executive Editor of Orbis, the official publication of the Foreign Policy Research Institute, will be speaking on disarmament.

Naval Consultant

Besides his work at Penn, he is a lecturer at the Air War College, the Army War College, the National War Defense College, and the NATO Defense College. He is also consultant to the Operations Evaulation Group of the Department of the Navy, and a consultant to the Defense Department.

Dr. Strausz-Hupe, also the Director of the Atlantic Council of the United States, has written articles for a number of periodicals, magazines, newspapers, and has authored or co-authored many books.

Several Books

The books he has written include: Geopolitics, The Balance of Tomorrow, The Zone of Indifference, and Power Community. Those he has co-authored are International Relations, American-Asian Tensions, The Idea of Colonialism (co-editor), Protracted Conflict, A Forward Strategy for America, and his latest, Building the Atlantic World.

Arthur Cantor Speaks On Modern Theatre In Villanova Playbox

The first speaker of the Graduate Theater Department's lecture series was Broadway producer Arthur Cantor, who spoke to a select audience on Sunday, March 1.

Mr. Cantor, a producer of such well known plays as The Tenth Man, Gideon, All The Way Home, The Passion of Joseph D. and the film version of the Miracle Worker, centered his talk around the relation of the modern theater to our society.

The second speaker in this series of six lectures, collectively entitled A Theater In Revolt, will be Kermit Bloomgarden, who will discuss the patterns seen in contempoary musicals.

Mr. Bloomgarden, presently here in Philadelphia as the producer of the new musical Anyone Can Whistle, also has made productions of The Music Man, Look Homeward Angel and Long Day's Journey Into Night.

This second lecture will be held on Sunday, March 15, at 3 p.m. in Dougherty Hall. Attendance will be by reservation, which can be made at the Playbox.

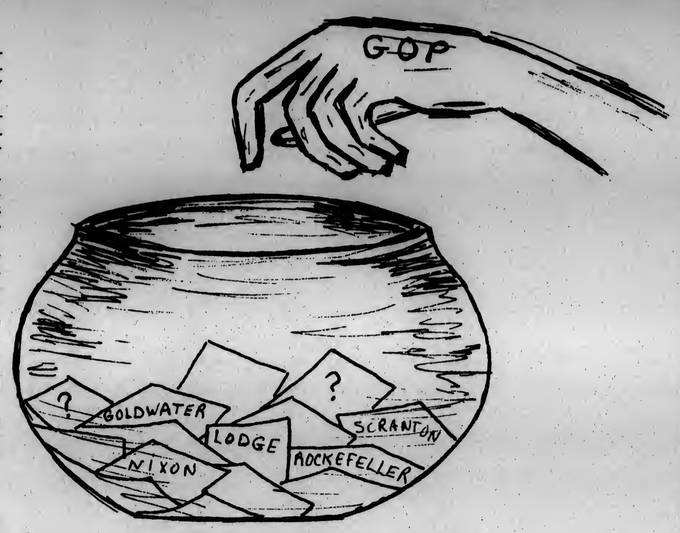
A Worthy Motion

President Johnson's political abilities are unquestionable. In his long career on Capitol Hill he rose from a congressional secretary to become the youngest Senate Majority Leader in this country's history.



But perhaps his greatest political achievement is his ability to act like a liberal and be thought of as a conservative. In Congress, he consistently voted like a liberal while speaking like a conservative.

Most voters erroneously consider Johnson to be a conservative because of the way he operates. He uses conservative ideals to back up his liberal legislation. An excellent example of this are his recent State of the Union and Budget addresses to the Congress.

His goals of reducing the national budget and decreasing poverty are extremely laudatory especially to conservative thinkers. However few conservatives appreciate the means Johnson uses to accomplish these goals. He proposes to decrease defense spending and increase welfare payments, the latter being definitely a liberal tactic.

As a result, for the first time welfare spending could exceed defense spending in the national budget. Yet, who can really complain? Every sensible person is for economy and against poverty.

Therefore any opponent of Johnson in 1964 has a very difficult task confronting him. For Johnson cannot be compared with the conservative Goldwater, the liberal Rockefeller, or the middle-of-the-road Nixon.

Fifth in a Series:

To Spark A Creative Response

Education, to be of any value, has got to spark in the mind a responsiveness that is dynamic and independent. It must essentially aid and abet the evolution of a creatively thinking human being who can contribute some semblance of vibrant individuality to a world thrusting itself more and more toward a lifeless, stagnant, and inhuman conformity.

The valuable university, it would seem, should stimulate and develop all of these things. The mark of a healthy university, therefore, should be measurable in large part, in the extent and divergence of free expression and intellectual dissent.

In this series of editorials it has been attempted to approach the state of the university with a view toward constructive criticism and hopefully, innovation. The problem of assessment is a real one. But it seems clear that if any single factor is responsible for damaging the vitality of a university it is the extensive lack of meaningful expression of intellectual creativity and imagination.

The void is real, and all-pervading.

We would not, for a moment, presume to be able to place a finger on the source or sources of the difficulty. We can only point to the existence of what we believe to be an atmosphere seriously lacking in meaningful controversy and curious intellectual dissent.

Any university is forced to face the problem of either creating an atmosphere emphasizing instruction and direction along rigid lines, tending to discourage worthwhile dissent, or in the stimulation of an atmosphere charged with the exciting free exchange of ideas, igniting the spark that can spur the development of an independent and creatively dynamic mind.

The two attitudes can mean the difference between graduating a class of individualistic, dynamic, sensitive human beings, or in "turning out" a group of colorless, unthinking and intellectually dull organisms.

The choice should not be a difficult one to make.

Letter To The Editor

To The Editor.

The recent announcement of coming events on the Villanova Forum has been brought to my attention by Martin G. McGuinn, President of the Student Council.

I note that Senator Goldwater is being sought as one of the Forum's guest speakers. As Mr. Goldwater is an avowed candidate for two public offices this year, I was pleased to learn in this way that the policy of the University has been expanded to permit active candidates for public office to address the undergraduate student body.

Prior to this, only incumbent office holders have been eligible to speak on campus (the Law School excepted).

I think it is an excellent idea to have people like the Senator from Arizona come to Villanova as guests of the Forum. The Forum, as its name implies, is open to different points of view; it is a marketplace for ideas.

Miss Barbara Ward, British economist (if she can come), or someone like her, will provide a perspective for the viewpoint expressed by Mr. William F. Buckley last fall.

Senator Eugene McCarthy, a prominent Catholic layman from Minnesota, I feel, would make a fine counter-poise to Senator Goldwater. Besides offering a different outlook from that of Senator Goldwater, Senator McCarthy is, in his own right, well worth hearing. As I am sure you know, he is an extremely articulate person of high prinlciple and intergrity.

I wish the Villanova Forum success in its efforts to further the understanding of the forces responsible for the turmoil in which the world finds itself today. How will Americans react in the face of economic and political change both at home and abroad? These are questions that each of us will have to answer for ourselves. It best not be done blindly.

Counterpoint

To Be (In U.S.) Or Not To Be?

by Frank Sauers

Every succeeding era, it seems, tries to outdo every other in claiming for itself the title of "most immoral age in the history of the world." Ours is no different.

A case in point is the current concern over the relationship between Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton. Their mutual travelings, nightclub rendezvous and airport arrivals have been given broad coverage in the world press.

Congressional Proposal

The couple has irritated one congressman from Ohio to such an extent that he recently placed a proposal before congress that would bar Mr. Burton from setting foot on American soil. The local chapter of the National Federation of Catholic College Students, in addition, quickly rushed to the congressman's support with a similar resolution.

Both resolutions expressed apprehension about the effect Burton's presence in this country might have on the morals of U.S. citizens. Maybe he should be kept out of the country — but we would suggest different grounds. It seems more realistic to believe that he would be running the risk of being corrupted by U.S. congressmen.

Presumed Innocence

Previously, the American way has been innocence until proven guilty. But evidently this concept is being challenged. Where, in this case, is there any evidence of guilt? What evidence is there that Miss Taylor and Mr. Burton are committing any act or acts that might be construed as immoral?

Perhaps the congressman has clandestinely rented a room near Liz and Richard's separate rooms at some motel, or maybe a local representative of the NFCCS has nestled at some time beneath the vanity and has in hand other interesting information. Actually, neither is the case. The simple naivete of the resolutions is outdistanced only by the simple fact that it is none of their business.

Many argue against Burton's admission on other grounds. While they admit that there might be nothing immoral involved in the relationship, they claim that the press has blown the story up to appear so, and that on this basis alone he ought to be barred.

But these grounds are even more untenable. It implies that an individual can be treated as a criminal and his rights revoked solely on the basis of judgment by the press. The idea of the press as the agency of justice is a prospect more than frightening.

Resolution Silly

Each of these points pale in comparison to the most basic point that resolutions of this sort are nothing short of silly. Does the congressman actually believe that by keeping Mr. Burton from playing Hamlet on Broadway he will bring a halt to coverage of the affair?

Does he think their relationship will be given less coverage in Rome or Berlin? And does he really think that our youth are being corrupted by petty coverage of a kind of immorality that can be found in a million other places?

Great Crusade

The congressman from Ohio and the NFCCS have obviously embarked once more on the great crusade to abolish every last vestige of evil and immorality once and for all.

It has been tried before. The only thing wrong with the idea is that if we demand that anyone displaying immorality, or immorality as judged by the press, be kept out of the country, we will soon discover that there is no one left. No one, perhaps, except the congressman from Ohio and the local chapter of NFCCS.

LEO GOODREAU

A Revered Priest

The Rev. John S. O'Leary, OSA, who has been at Villanova since 1908 and who was a former professor of Mathematics, has recently passed away.

For his special work with the young we cannot help but recall the words of Our Lord: "Suffer the little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

Father O'Leary was born in Cork, Ireland, on October 13, 1890. His family came to America when he was 12 years old. In September 1908, he entered Villanova's prep seminary, formerly St. Rita's Hall.

A special word must be said for his sermons to children. Of a very inventive mind, he would develop the most fascinating stores of his own to tell children, and he was so expert in telling these stories that he held the children on the edge of their seats.

On June 20, 1912, Father O'Leary became a novice in the Augustinian Order at Villanova. On the same day, a year later, he took his simple vows. On June 8, 1919, he was ordained at St. Charles Seminary Chapel in Oyerbrook by His Eminence, Archbishop Dennis Dougherty.

After Mass the children would flock to him to demand more. Improbable and fantastic as his stories were his listeners were spellbound by them. And always he would weave in and out of his stories little lessons on virtue, lifting his young hearers to think of better and higher things.

On June 7, 1916, Father O'Leary received his A.B. from Villanova College. He started teaching at Villanova in Summer school in 1918, where he taught Mechanics.

In June, 1919, he received his M.S. and thereafter became a professor of Mathematics, teaching calculus until ill-health forced him to retire in June, 1958. He remained at the monastery until his death on Monday night, March 2, 1964.

I feel it is a great misfortune that these sermons to children he did not write down for they would have been a most valuable and and useful aid to preachers to the young.

Father O'Leary performed week-end duties at Holy Spirit parish in Atlantic City for more than 20 years. He was always in demand as a preacher, particularly at St. Rita's in Philadelphia for the annual novena. He was a preacher at Villanova's Solemn Military Requiem Mass on May 30, 1945, for Alumni and students killed in World War II.

Monday morning, after receiving Holy Communion, he repeated over and over again: "He died for our sins, He died for our sins," his mind as ever on the Passion of Our Divine Saviour. These were the last words I heard him speak.

It was as if he was preaching his last sermon — once again on a favorite topic — the Passion and death of Christ for the salvation of mankind. A few hours later his lips were silenced forever in this life.

John Arden's 'The Happy Haven' Incises, But Not Deeply Enough

by Paul Norton

John Arden's The Happy Haven which had its American premiere at the Playbox last Friday night is like a slightly bent surgical knife. It cuts when wielded by capable hands but the cut may be a little off center of its mark and not with the force or depth of a precision instrument.

This satire pokes good fun at England's socialized medicine, the society conditioned by such an institution, and the pressures brought to bear upon it both from within and without. As a subject for American audiences who are not totally familiar with the system it misses its satirical incision.

This is not to say that an evening at the Playbox production is completely unenjoyable. On the contrary, the show provides many laughs from some broad farce to pure slapstick, all of which is carried off by performers who are competent and will directed.

White Faces

The actors are divided into groups by the use of white face delineating the masses, and the efficient administration of the masses. This lends to the point of the play and fortunately does not group personalities into an "everyman" type of casting. There are very distinct characterizations, each with a background and a direction, a story to be told and a problem to be resolved. The problem for all of the inmates of the Happy Haven Rest Home is the same and in the end it is presented to you all tied up in surgical lacings and laid at your feet.

Unfortunately we Americans are not the right feet.

For this reason the play has to stand on its own as entertainment of another nature than satire. It does this shakily especially in the first act which is too long but gets on firmer ground later in the evening with much hilarity.

The roles of the patients who are reaching the sundown of life (if you'll excuse the expression) are clever characterizations. Jack Black as the crotchery Mr. Crape comes across the strongest particularly in his misfortunes of the second act. He has an intriguing lilt to his voice and a pathetic but engaging manner.

Ken Resinski carries off his braggart's role well, as does Carol Schmenkel as the light-headed Mrs. Phineus. James Christy plays the role of the zealous, oily doctor with the skill necessary to carry off his long involved speeches.

Music Appears

Slightly Overdone

The songs injected in the play seem slightly overdone and, although successful in the hands of Carol Schmenkel, they are unclear and muddled most other times. The main saving point here is the physical construction of the Playbox, which contains the thinness of the songs otherwise lost on a larger house.

Enjoying Smoking Less?

by John Roberts

Since the Surgeon General's report on the ill effects of smoking, 40 million Americans are enjoying their cigarettes less.

Many people are taking up the habit every day and selecting the proper brand can be a traumatic experience in itself.

We have cigarettes to fit every type of personality. For the filtered personality, which is richly rewarding yet uncommonly smooth, we have the filter cigarette.

Included in this group are many personalities. For the split personality, there is the dual filter. For the introvert, there is the recessed filter and, for the inebriated there is the mentholated brand, which, it should be warned, leads to a mentholated mind.

For the crazy mixed-up teenager or astronaut, there is the spin filter, and for intellectuals there is the thinking man's filter.

For stubborn people with a pugnacious personality there is a brand which will promote fights with other smokers who are trying to get them to switch.

Then, for the backward personality, there is the brand with the all-important back of the pack although not many people smoke the back of the pack.

For sweet-toothed smokers, there is the brand with a hint of mint and then there is the brand with the micronite filter (whatever that is).

However, the best brand undoubtedly is the one that tastes good, like a cigarette should (these are made with Hershey's milk chocolate).

For the unfiltered personality, which contains all types of tars and nicotines, there are brands whose longer length filters the smoke and makes it less smokey. For the connoisseur, there is a brand with 21 vintage tobaccos and for the coupon clipper there is the brand which offers coupons with every pack(the prize for 1000 coupons is lung cancer!)

Finally, it may be noted that 99 of 100 smokers who tried camels preferred cigarettes.

Exchange Corner

A Newspaper Babysitter

by Ray Ritter

Have you ever wondered just what is the job of an exchange editor?

Seen in his lowest form, the exchange editor is a newspaper babysitter; it is his job to arrange all the one-hundred and eighty-two papers received weekly in an orderly fashion, read the exchange papers, and clip out articles of interest and importance, along with pictures of Homecoming queens, and Cotillion winners.

The editor will then rewrite the exchange news into a feature column called "The Exchange Corner."

At last a purchasing market has been found for St. Bonaventure's quarterly magazine. It seems that "Playboy" magazine has ordered four copies of their latest issue.

"The Jewel" which is written by the Bonnie students, published an article which criticized the pseudo-philosophy expounded by Mr. Hugh Hefner in "Playboy's" article called "The Playboy Philosophy Part I: Sex and Religion."

The article, written by a junior physics major, chastized "Playboy" editor Hugh Hefner for his magazine's libertine attitude towards sex and religion. The article was documented with statements from Catholic theologians, the Bible, psychologists, and sociologists.

When told of the magazine's request for extra copies, the physics major expressed stunned approval — "so long as they don't sue. Maybe they will send some Playboy bunnies."

"Playboy" will be sent the four copies requested, and billed fifty cents per-copy, plus postage.

The answers ran from the creative to the risque. One said, "Any five members of the Johnson family. I want to get information on prosperity and the tax cut."

Another said, "Jayne Mansfield, Sophia Loren, Brigette Bardot, Liz Taylor, and Gypsie Rose Lee, for obvious reasons." What about Elke Sommer?

The last response was "Barry Goldwater and Frank Hague, because I am interested in politics; my girl and Cleopatra because I am interested in women; and General Robert E. Lee because I am in the ROTC."

Jazz Festival Long-Playing Album To Be Released By Saxony Records

by Ed Bride

"Jazz at Villanova . . . The Fourth Annual Intercollegiate Jazz Festival." A long title for a product that is the result of long hours, a long show, and now a long-playing album.

The 12-inch "live" recording of the musical proceedings which took place in the Villanova Field House on February 7 is ready for release by Records of Philadelphia, and will be sold at a reduced rate of $3 on campus.

The announcement came from Saxony President Andy Davies last Friday, along with several "advance copies" of the record, which officially goes on sale today.

Featured on the album are "Best in Festival" winners, the Bill Barnwell Quintet, and "Best Big Band" winners, the Ray DeFade Orchestra.

Each of these two groups has approximately 10 to 12 minutes of their performance on the LP.

In addition, one tune each by the remaining four instrumental groups and two from vocalist Jan LaFave are included.

DeFade Selections

The album opens with three numbers by the DeFade aggregation: "Ride for Freedom," "New Frontiers" both written by DeFade, and "From Our Hearts," penned by pianist-French hornist Joe Kennedy.

The remaining two tunes on the first side are an original by Bruce Early of the Michigan State TV Orchestra, titled "Fatterflea," and an original arrangement by Carl Sullivan, leader of the Potsdam State Jazz Quintet, of Kurt Weil's "My Ship."

Side two opens with the Phi Mu Alpha Jazz Workshop Band, from Ohio State, doing leader Ladd McIntosh's arrangement of "Variations on a Song Called Wiffenpoof," excellently performed, and written with ingenuity.

Best of Barnwell

Barnwell's perforance follows, with "Barnyard Waltz" and "Scoundrelosophicalism," both penned by the leader/alto player.

Wabash College's Dick Durham Trio performs Durham's "Off Campus," a multi-tempoed Brubeck-type tune, and the vocalist closes out the LP. Miss LaFave performs "The Song is You," and "Bewitched."

Chosen as best cuts for excitement are DeFade's "Ride" and Barnwell's " . . . ism," while polished performance awards might go to McIntosh's "Wiffenpoof."

At present, the album is being distributed on an educational basis only, and is available through the mail at Jazz, Box 232 Villanova, Penna.

Sales will also be conducted in the Student Council Office, and at other spots on campus if the demand is great enough. A limited supply was pressed. With anticipation of high interest, Saxony is ready for immediate second-release.

1. I've decided on the kind of job I want when I graduate.

Knowing you, I'd guess it to be something modest—like Secretary of State or President of GE.

2. I hadn't thought of those specifically. What I had in mind was a job where they give you a lot of assistants. I think that would be nice.

Very nice. Maybe they could start you off at a hundred grand a year.

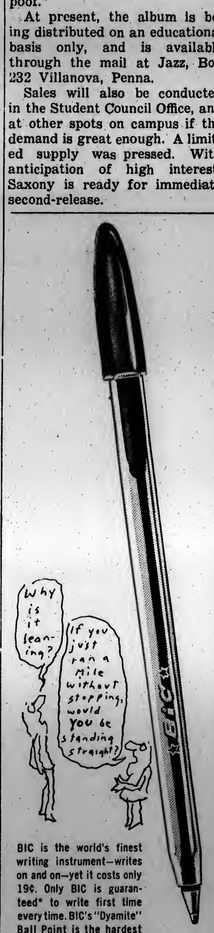
3. Well, I did run an extremely successful Nickel-a-Pickle sale.

Don't forget to demand plenty of stock options.

4. You think maybe I should lower my sights a little.

I'm afraid to tell you what I think.

5. I'd be willing to settle for a vice-presidency.



Look—why don't you see if you can qualify for one of Equitable's executive training programs. The work is interesting, the pay is good. And if you prove you have the ability, you may very well end up with a title and a couple of assistants.

6. You really have a way of seeing through a problem.

Rooming with you has taught me a lot.

Another Star Is Born

by Bob Healy

As of late, another star has been born—Ringo Starr to be exact. Anyone familiar with rock 'n roll will instantly recognize this name and its human possesor.

Ringo isn't the only star born though. There are three more such novas. Together, these four shinning lights comprise the latest immigration headache, the Beatles.

Over the belting sound of guitars and the pounding skins of Ringo's drums, these guys emit a sound that makes any teenage girl within two yards go literally wild. From the front lights of Ed Sullivan's stage to the depths of Carnegie Hall, the Beatles have caused all sorts of musical phenomena.

Popularity

Exactly what has caused this tremendously popularity of the boys from England?

The Beatles as individuals are not overly talented. They harmonize to a degree of success, but they themselves are the first to admit that they can't read a note of music.

Why, then, the success? In simple terms, success for the Beatles is based upon a gimmick.

Let's look at the components of this gimmick. The Beatles are foreigners. Immediately this fact increases their appeal. They are not Americans singing to Americans, but Englishmen singing to Americans. This personality trait can be compared to the suave, romantic Frenchman wooing the poor unsuspecting American girl.

In any gimmick, there is a need for publicity. Undoubtedly a great portion of their popularity can be traced to an advertising agency or public relations firm on Madison Avenue. For proof of this fact, just turn on any radio station. Immediately, there will be an announcement pertaining to the latest Beatle contest.

Disc Jockeys have also pushed the Beatles. Continous repetition of "She loves me, yea, yea, . . . ," after a while begins to work on the human mind and tells us to buy Beatle, think Beatle, and worship Beatle.

But the heart of the gimmick is the hair cut. New? Different? You Bet! That is what seals the Beatles — they are different.

And there, fellow students, there it is — showmanship. This is the gimmick. This sells the records. This makes the money.

Whether talent is present or not, showmanship and advertising can sell anything — even Beatles!

The Advertising Game

by Barbara Greehey

I'm sick, sick, sick of those who chronically complain about advertising. Personally, I think it's the greatest thing since the invention of the thumbscrew, rack, and water torture. I wouldn't know what to do if that little kid made out of sausages didn't shock me out of my slumber every morning.

Appeal

Advertisements have become so appealing that I say phooey to the regular programs. At a fast trot, I can make it to and from the local shopping center in seven minutes, just in time for the next advertisement.

I'm a compulsive buyer, I buy everything. Admittedly, food ads have a special attraction and I weigh in at 288. No problem, though, they have a real nifty assortment of diet foods on the market if things get too bad.

In this cold, cruel world, it's reassuring to know you can rely on something. Security is knowing that your pen will drill through wood, that your glue will hold an elephant suspended, that your cooking ware is used to make rocket nosecones.

A Problem

There is one small difficulty. Frequently, I can't discriminate between products. I have no insurance policies, belong to 23 book clubs, subscribe to 31 periodicals, use 15 brands of facial tissue, 22 kinds of toothpaste and denture powders.

I shampoo with 13 different products (one for dry hair, oily hair, normal, one for blondes, those who dye their hair, who are embarrassed by dandruff, troubled with falling hair, etc.).

I can't decide on cigarettes either. I've narrowed it down to two. Do I look more rugged and woodsy with a tattoo or black eye?

One thing I do know. I don't care what the barbers say — I wouldn't want to use that blade after 14 others got through with it.

I do have this one complex though. I always feel sorry for the underdog. That means I buy every bottle, box, can, or package of "Brand J" I can find. I even searched for that brand of coffee the unfortunate man in the psychiatric ward was pushing. All I can say is, it's lucky my father is wealthy.

CAMPUS NEWS BRIEFS

Villanova's Playbox Theatre will be the setting of the meeting of the Villanova University Faculty Wives' Club on Thursday, March 12, at 8:30 p.m.

The special performance will be a preview of The Happy Haven by John Arden. A commentary by Richard A. Duprey, Chairman of the Villanova Theatre Department, will follow.

Villanova's undergraduate Ornithological Society has done work recently in finding uses for predatory urban nuisance birds, particularly starlings and pigeons.

Starlings roost on the eaves of tall buildings and pigeons can can be found in many grassy and woody places, not to mention city centers. Vasey Hall is a good example of this.

As a result of the winter snows the club reports a very charitable activity that has been carried on by the members. They have been taking excess bread left over from their dinners and feeding their little feathered friends.

The club would like to issue an invitation for all members of the studentry who are for the birds to join.

Midwinter variations in bipolar varial oriented weather patterns have been observed over eastern Pennsylvania says the Villanova Weather Club.

These unusual patterns are quite common in the tropics, except for when they occur in the arctic zone where they are associated with noctilucent clouds.

This is the first time they have ever been observed this far in the middle. Detailed reports are being prepared and will be forwarded to the Harvard weather center.

The Weather Club is a little known activity founded in 1910 by a group of interested students. Its work has mainly been off-campus since the club is unrecognized.

It is composed mainly of science students who are interested in meteorology and who like to work on their own. Prospective members may join by applying in 451 Delurey Hall.

The Milton Society will meet tomorrow morning in Room 54 in Vasey Hall, with the topic under consideration being "Did Milton Really Write the Italian Sonnets?"

It seems that there is a question in the undergraduate mind and in the mind of many responsible authorities that while it is probable that he did, maybe he didn't.

From the above sentiment, expressed by S. Martin Gimelwitz, President and Comptroller-General of the organization, much friction is expected to be generated.

Topics to be researched in the future are the influences of Milton on Huguenot sea chanteys from the Rochelle-on-Loire area and the influences of Daruma on Milton.

This is the first meeting of the organization after its inaugural meeting held for the first time last Tuesday. The club has adopted for its moto, "Qui potest capere, capeat!"

Tutor Program Seeks Applications Today In Dougherty Hall

The spring phase of the Student Council Tutor Program has now begun and applications, for both students wanting to be tutors and those wanting to improve their grades by having outside help, are being taken at the table opposite the Day-hop Cafeteria in Doughtery Hall.

The most difficult part of the program is that of acquiring capable and willing students to devote their time to the teaching side of the program. Because the ideal of this program is to have a one-to-one relationship between the tutors and students, this problem of having teachers is compounded.

With only 866 student with a 3.0 average or better there are enough students to fill the student half of the scale, but to balance this a large percentage of those people who attained a 3.0 must volunteer for the program.

A student must know enough about the subject the is going to teach but this doesn't mean a 3.0 cum.

Placement Office Interviews Include Job-Seeking Seniors

The Placement Office interviews or signs for appointments close to 150 seniors every day. Also taking advantage of the placement service are a large number of underclassmen searching for part-time or summer jobs.

This year, 657 seniors and graduate students enrolled with the placement office, 100 more than in 1963. The number of visiting organizations has increased slightly over last year.

Among the companies visiting the campus are those on the New York Stock Exchange and some research agencies of the Federal Government. These agencies have been more selective than usual in restricing interviews to the top half of the class.

Seniors Lauded

Mr. John A. Moritz, placement director, said that the recruiters have praised the conduct and appearance of Villanova seniors.

He also announced the granting of three days of excused absences to those seniors who visit company plants for job interviews. These visits will continue throughout the rest of the semester.

The placement director predicts a rise in salaries offered by the companies due to a steady flow of salary offers. "We can predict an average rise of about 6 to 8 percent in salaries over last year," Mr. Moritz stated.

New Companies

The following companies have been added to the placement lists: Lit Brothers, Western Union Telegraph, West Virginia Pulp and Paper Co., Underwood-Olivetti, and Sunbeam Corp.

Any students who do not receive job offers are reminded that the Placement Office will make every effort to secure them a position.

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANIES SALUTE: DAVE COYLE

Dave Coyle (B.A., 1961) has a knack for getting right to the heart of a problem. His ability to comprehend the problem, analyze procedures, correct inefficiencies, and clarify operations in a succinct report, makes him somewhat of an efficiency expert.

In less than two years, Dave's talents have shown up on four assignments. As a start, he investigated the procedures for handling dangerous plant conditions in the Jenkintown area for Bell of Pennsylvania. He developed a simplified system for the handling of reports, which are the basis for quickly correcting the dangerous conditions.

On other assignments, Dave has also established new procedures for improving the efficiency of installation and repair operations. By riding service trucks and observing the men's performance, he helped the men boost their sales of telephone equipment.

Dave Coyle, like many young men, is impatient to make things happen for his company and himself. There are few places where such restlessness is more welcomed or rewarded than in the fast-growing telephone business.

'Catholic Peace Corps' Needs Students For Mexico Project

Over 65 colleges in the United States are sending volunter students to Mexico this summer. This program is under the sponorship of the Conference on Inter-American Student Projects. It will last for six to eight weeks.

This program could be described as the Catholic Peace Corps. It features person-to-person contact which fosters better understanding among peoples. The students live with the Mexican people, work with them, and share experiences with them.

The basic projects for men are teaching, building dams, churches, and schools. For the girls, teaching, painting, and jobs of a less strenuous nature are featured. Opportunities are also available for nurses.

Rigorous Life

Since most of the projects occur in small towns and villages where the people are in dire penury, the program requires a person of good physical health with a desire to help people and work hard.

Conditions are rough. Students will be expected to live with poor people, eat their food, and sleep on hard beds.

Vast Training

Any program of this nature requires considerable training. On campus, meetings will be held once a week. Spanish, Mexican culture, and plans for the projects will be the subjects of these meetings.

The entire expenses of this program, about $350 per student, will be paid by the organization. The program costs the student nothing.

The first meeting of this program was held on Thursday, March 5. Miss Terry Risberg, of the CIASP, was the speaker.

ONLY FORD-BUILT CARS MEET THE CHALLENGE WITH TOTAL PERFORMANCE!

Something wonderful's happened to Ford Motor Company cars! Under the freshest styling seen in years, there's a new kind of durability and vigor that more than meets the demands of today's and tomorrow's high-speed turnpike driving conditions.

What's the secret? Quality engineering for total performance. Quality engineering so outstanding that Ford Motor Company received the NASCAR Achievement Award for engineering excellence which "superbly combines the prime essentials of great automobiles—performance, reliability, durability, comfort and safety."

Total performance makes a world of difference. Bodies and frames are solid and quiet even on the roughest roads. The ride's so smooth, so even-keeled, it seems to straighten the curves and shorten the miles. And nothing matches the spirit, sparkle and stamina of advanced Ford-built V-8's and thrifty Sixes. Total performance is yours to enjoy in all our 1964 cars—from the frisky Falcon to the matchless Lincoln Continental.

Part-Time Students Represent 230 Firms And Area Businesses

Representatives of more than 200 Philadelphia area businesses or industrial firms are attending Villanova University on a part time basis according to figues released by Charles P. Bruderle, Dean of the University College and Dr. Albert Buford, Dean of Graduate Studies at Villanova.

University College trains students working toward the Bachelor's Degree while the School of Graduate Studies enrolls students seeking the post graduate or Master's Degree.

Overall enrollment in the University College is 1691 while enrollment in Graduate Studies for the spring semester is 1032, making a total part-time matriculation of 2723.

Figues indicate that two hundred-thirty firms have employees who are attempting to improve their educational background at Villanova beyond working hours.

Substantial enrollment of employees of the Bell Telephone Co., Boeing Company (Vertol Division), Burroughs Corporation, General Electric Company, Penn Fruit Company, Philco Corporation, Radio Corporation of America, and Wyeth Laboratories were reported.

Significant enrollments were noted from Atlas Chemical Industries, Du Pont de Nemours Co., Firestone Tire and Rubber Co., Merck, Sharp, & Dohme Co., Minneapolis Honeywell Co., Philadelphia Electric Co., Remington Rand, Smith, Kline & French Laboratories, and Westinghouse Corporation.

Courses of study for students enrolled on a part-time basis at Villanova are offered in the late afternoon, evening, and Saturdays. They include engineering, finance, arts, science, accounting, and computer technology.

Dean Bruderle praised the part-time students for, "This extra effort to improve themselves both academically and financially," and paid tribute to the firms who have urged their employees to extend their education.

"A happy combination results," the Villanova administrator said, "and the community benefits."

Rugby Strikes Back

by Ed Wilkinson

The exciting news has gone out and once again the campus is electrified. Rugby is back! Some are a bit more excited than others, of course. Among these are a group of about 45 boys on campus who believe they have discovered something very special at Villanova.

It's called rugby and to them it means a totally different idea in sports. It is one of the fastest growing sports in the United States, springing up on campuses all over the country. The unique thing is that the object of the game is purely and simply enjoyment.

If you cannot win in a way that is an enjoyable experience for both winners and lossers, or if you cannot play the game at all times like a gentleman, then you have failed at rugby.

Enjoyment and Sportsmenship

This is the rugby tradition and it places the emphasis on two things that are often sacrificed in American athletics in favor of an impressive won-lost record — enjoyment of the game and sportsmanship.

Rugby at Villanova emphasizes another valuable concept — student initiative. With the tremendously dedicated leadership of a member of our faculty, Mr. Francis Coghlan, assistant professor of History, the students carry out the entire operation on their own.

This year, with an expected third team, there will be even greater problems. The fact that the students conduct this entirely on their own, with no other incentive than enjoyment of the game, has made rugby one of the most rewarding extra-curricular activities on campus.

Talented Individuals

The rugby team this spring is a very talented group of individuals. Whether they will be a talented team is quite a different story. With returnees like "Bulldog" Shayer, Tom James, Bert Lombino, "Duck" Knrek, and Jeff Houlihan the backfield will be, man for man, the fastest and most explosive in the league.

This speed will be worthless unless they can work together and unless the forwards can get ball to them. Some of the men expected to do this are Dick Gove, Denny La Hiff, Brian Carty, George Tongring, and Hal Canty.

Patterson vs. Cassius X!!?

by Steve Freind

It takes a lot to get Floyd Patterson mad. Throughout his career, the ex-heavyweight champion has been marked by a meakness that prevented him from reaching the starry plateau reserved for ring greats. The man is a paradox in boxing trunks, dedicated to fighting but unable to enjoy butchering a victim.

There was the time in Texas against Roy Harris when Patterson refused to touch the challenger's face for the last three rounds. Questioned about his reluctance to finish off his prey, Patterson replied that he couldn't bring himself to batter Harris' already torn-up mug.

Only once did Patterson feel hate in the ring, in his second clash with Ingemar Johnannson. Turning killer for the first time, Floyd became the first man ever to retain the heavyweight title, silencing the Hammer of Thor with a leaping left. Afterward, the champ expressed shame at "acting like an animal" and vowed that he would never hate again. But an event last week has made it hard for Floyd to keep his promise.

When newly crowned Cassius Clay admitted publicly that he was a member of the Black Muslim hate group, Patterson was stirred to action. In a rare display of confidence, Floyd challenged the Louisville Loudmouth to a showdown, offering to fight for no purse. In an open letter to the world, he condemned Clay for his membership in the Black Muslims, which he considered as bad as the Ku Klux Klan.

Many consider this as a shrewdly planned publicity move to take on Clay rather than do battle again with Liston's size 15 fists. Floyd Patterson doesn't work that way. He is one of the rapidly diminishing breed that reacts to the dictates of his conscience. Patterson is acutely aware of the responsibility of the heavyweight champion. It is not enough for the champ to be the top fighter in the ranks. He must also be an untarnished example to sports fans throughout the world.

When Liston took away his crown by planting him on the canvas in record time, Patterson urged the press to give the new champ a chance to bury his past. But Clay's connection with the Black Muslims taints the symbol of the championship and casts a shadow on his race. Patterson feels that it's up to him to erase that shadow.

If Clay accepts the challenge, it could be a boxing classic. Clay's speed got him past the Bear, but Patterson matches him in that category. Patterson has been accused of having a glass jaw, but the criterion of taking a punch is not how many times one is floored, but how many times he gets up. Critics also say that Patterson can't punch but in the Johannson rematch you could have counted a thousand over the "invincible" Swede.

The life of Floyd Patterson has been an elevator ride. He may soon be lounging in the penthouse again.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

Villanova's Varsity bowling team defeated Drexel 3-0 in latest action. This victory increased the Wildcats lead in the Eastern Intercollegiate Bowling League to four games.

The 'Cats bowled a league high team total of 2964 on games of 1002, 1006, and 956.

Freshman Bruce Thomas led the Mainliners with a 657 series. He bowled games of 246, 223, and 188, the highest any Wildcat kegler has reached this year. His total is second in the league; only Jim Folgia of LaSalle has bettered Thomas' mark.

John Brennan had two good games of 218, and 246 to add to a mediocre 163 for a 627 total. Howie Riley continued his consistent scoring with a 615. He bowled games of 235, 203, and 180.

Howard Higman lead the Dragons of Drexel with a 587. He had two good games at 211 and 215.

In Intramurals, entry blanks for softball are now available at the Intramural Office in Alumni Hall. All entries must be in by March 18. There will be a rules meeting on March 19; and the season will open on March 23.

Each participant must personally sign his name on the entry list. This will avoid disqualification due to being entered on more than one team.

The basketball playoffs will begin this week ,with 6 teams involved. The playoff dates are March 11, 12, 17, 18, 19 and 20.

The Chess and Bridge players are meeting every Monday at 7 in the Day-Hop Cafeteria. There are six players in Chess and 16 in Bridge at the present time. All interested may come any Monday night to play.

There was an Intramural Council meeting on Thursday, March 5, in Room 203 Vasey Hall at 10:30 a.m. Council members and freshmen and sophomores interested in umpiring for softball attended this meeting.

In the foul-shooting contest, held on February 28, sophomore Chuck Waldron hit 44 of 50 to take the title. Senior George Nicolaus and sophomore Bob Kische each sank 42.

Penn's frosh squeaked out a 51-43 victory over the Villanova yearlings in the meet just preceding the varsity meet.

Greg Doyle, shined for the 'Cats though, as he won the 200 yard butterfly (2:41.4), the 200 yard individual medley (2:21.5) and placed second in the 500 yard freestyle.

Others who won their specialties were Captain Bill Bahrmann (diving, 161.00 points), Joe Parell (100 yard freestyle, 52.8), and Tim Turvey (200 yard freestyle, 2:33.4).

Seton Hall Routed 109-73 In 'Cats Regular Season Finale, Moore Tabs 40

by Tom Bruderle

Villanova ended its regular basketball season with a 109-73 caning of Seton Hall a week ago Tuesday in the VU Field House.

To prove that his 28 point night against Temple was no fluke, Richie Moore came back with 40 points to lead all scorers and, in the process set the highest individual scoring mark of any Wildcat during the current season.

Ably assisting the 6-4 forward was Bill Melchionni who came through with his season high of 25 points. Melchionni also picked off ten rebounds, and gave always high scoring Nick Werkman (37 points) a rough time at the game's outset.

In his good-by game in the Main-Line palace, Wally Jones tallied 23 points and picked up seven assists despite some poor passing at times.

In a surprise move, coach Jack Kraft gave Melchionni his first start of the season and he teamed with Jones, Moore, George Leftwich and Jim Washington.

In the opening minutes, Melchionni gave the Pirates workman Werkman a hard time stealing the ball on several occassions and blocking shots. Having mercy on either one or the other, Melchionni was relieved of the 6-3 Werkman after the locals had a 21-14 lead.

The game was a game for most of the first half and the opening minutes of the second half before the 'Cats exploded. Villanova owned a 49-36 halftime lead only to have it reduced to an uncomfortable 51-46 spread in the opening minutes of the second stanza.

Then the Main-Liners took off in a way not seen since the Hubie White-George Leftwich-Wally Jones heyday of yester-year. The score climbed from 72-57 to 99-61 as Kraft cleared his bench. In one three minute stretch the Wildcats ripped off 19 points and coasted in.

Kittens Lose 18 Point Lead But Defeat Seton Hall 90-85

by Gerry Bruderle

The Villanova Wildkittens closed out their season with a 90-85 over Seton Hall in the Field House on March 3. Pete Coleman scored 37 points, in a game in which Villanova saw an 18 point halftime margin shrink to one point in less than 4 minutes of play at the outset of the second half.

But led by Coleman and Terry McGuire, held off the on-surging Pirates and led all the way in posting their seventh win against 5 losses.

The men of Jack Devine took a comfortable 49-31 advantage at intermission—or at least it seemed comfortable. But at the start of the second half Jack Levin, Richie O'Brien and Rick Westover started to hit for Seton Hall, while the Villanova offense came to a standstill.

With 16:11 remaining in the game, the Pirates trailed by 1, 53-52. At this point Billy Soens fouled out after scoring 14 first half points. Three minutes later Frank Gaidjunas also fouled out and Villanova had lost both of its 6-8 men.

Richie Kelleher entered, and combined with Coleman and McGuire in keeping the Pirates at bay. Although never relinquishing the lead, the 'Kittens could not pull away from the hustling Jerseyites.

In the final five minutes of play, Coleman scored 10 of Villanova's 13 points. His 37 point total was the highest of the season for the Fosh. McGuire finished with 14, while Gaidjunas had 9 and Kelleher, 7.

Levin had 20 for Seton Hall, followed closely by O'Brien with 19 and Westover, 17.

'Cat Mermen Overpower Penn Squad Frosh Nipped By Penn Yearlings

by Bob McIntyre

Last Wednesday afternoon, Villanova's varsity swimming team swamped the University of Pennsylvania by a wide margin of points, 67-28 as they brought their season record to 8-2 for the final regulation meet of the season.

Easy Victory

In the opening event, the 400 yard medley relay, a team consisting of Sullivan, Herr, Sperr and Fisher raced to an easy victory over the hapless Quakers.

Next up was the 200 yard freestyle which was to prove the most exciting event of the day as Captain Dick McDonough showed why he is an All-American as he won going away in the pool record time of 1:51.8.

Rick Girdler won the 50 yard freestyle in 22.9 and Villanova's number one diver, Bob Biese garnered 171.15 points to win his speciality. The butterfly event was taken again by a Villanovan, Rick Guthrie in 2:12.3.

Bill Livingood, for the third straight week broke his varsity record for the 200 yard backstroke. His time of 2:09.0 snaps the record he set against Rutgers last week of 2:10.9.

In the 500 yard freestyle, revenge was the key word as Chris Fisher avenged last week's defeat by winning in 5:52.3.

Ending up the ten first places taken by the 'Cats were Frank Kiem, 200 yard breaststroke, 2:32.8; and the 400 yard freestyle relay team of John O'Brien,

Raleigh Preview

by Steve Freind

The South gets invaded once again this weekend as Villanova's Wildcats enter the Eastern Regionals of the NCAA Tournament in Raleigh, North Carolina. Coming off their impressive victory over Providence on Monday, the 'Cats face Duke the Atlantic Coast Conference champions in Friday's opener before Connecticut and Princeton lock horns in the nightcap. The winners clash on Saturday for the ticket to Kansas City and a shot at the national championship.

Duke

Ranked sixth in national polls, Coach Vic Bubas' Blue Devils are sporting a 23-4 record. Numbered among their victims are Big Ten Co-Champion Ohio State and tenth-ranked Davidson. Of their four losses, three came at the hands of nationally ranked powers, Vanderbilt, Michigan and Kentucky.

The Duke attack is paced by Jeff Mullins, 6-4 unanimous All-American choice. Breaking most of Art Heyman's scoring marks, Mullins is burning the nets at a 23.7 clip. He also leads the team in rebounds, snaring 9.1 per game.

Princeton

The Princeton basketball team can be summed up in two words — Bill Bradley. The 6-5 All-American is almost entirely responsible for the Tigers presence in the tourney. Without Bradley, Princeton is, at best, a mediocre team. With him, the Tigers stand a chance of becoming the first Ivy League squad in twenty years to reach the NCAA finals.

Scoring at a 32.7 rate, Bradley has led the Tigers through a 20-7 campaign, giving Coach Butch Van Breda Kolff his second straight Ivy League title. Leading the team in rebounds with a 12.5 average, Bradley also finds time to pass off six assists per game.

Connecticut

Boasting a 15-9 log, the Uconns are the first Yankee Conference representative to pass the first round in years. With their upset of Temple, Connecticut avenged an early season loss to the Owls and earned a trip to Raleigh.

The Uconns present a towering lineup that placed fourth in the nation in rebounding. Top scorer is Toby Kimball, averaging 20.6 The 6-8 junior has also hauled rebounds at a 17.4 clip, sixth best in the nation. Kimball receives backboard from Ed Slomcenski, a 6-11 senior.

WILDCATS STOMP PROVIDENCE IN NCAA

by Ed Farrell

The rebounding of Jim Washington and the hot hand of Richie Moore combined to send the Villanova Wildcats to the NCAA Eastern Regionals as they defeated the Providence Friars, 77-66.

With All-American Wally Jones playing one of his best floor games of the season, the Cats stopped the Friars attack led by Jim Stone and John Thompson.

The Friars led most of the first half until, with five minutes to go, Al Sallee tipped in a bucket to make the score 24-23 in favor of the Mainliners. The squad from Rhode Island never led again.

Wash Grabs 19

Jim Washington turned in an outstanding job on the boards, grabbing 19, while Providence's Thompson managed only three.

Scoring accolades belong to Richie Moore. Moore's game high total of 25 came as he hit 50 per cent from the floor (12 for 24) and converted his single charity toss.

Six for ten shooting by Bill Melchionni in the first half kept the Cats close while the Friars were ahead.

Not Shooting Enough

Had the Friars managed more shots, the outcome might have been different as they shot a red hot 50 per cent from the floor (28 for 56) while Coach Jack Kraft's crew connected on 32 of 80 for 40 per cent.

Playing his last game on the Palestra floor, Wally Jones provided the crucial bucket when needed. He put the Cats near the lead in the first half with a three point play that made the score 22-23. His seven assists and outstanding hustle on defense sparked the Cats throughout the contest.

John Thompson was Providence's main disappointment. His failure to control either board, despite his 6-10 height advantage, gave the Friars only one shot on offense. Despite their hot hands this was not enough. Part of the rebounding slack was taken up by 6-8 Bob Kovalski, but his nine were not adequate to carry the Friars. Overall, Villanova outrebounded the Friars 53-33.

In addition to Moore's 25, Jim Washington had 14, Jones 17, and Melchionni 13. For the Friars, Thompson had 18, Jim Benedict had 16 and Jim Stone connected for 14.

Besides the rebounding of Washington, Moore grabbed eight off the boards, and Sallee nabbed seven.

The Cats will meet Duke Friday night in Raleigh, N.C. in the opening game at 7 p.m. Princeton meets Connecticut in the second tilt.

The basketball game between Villanova and Duke will be televised by STATION WFIL-TV (Channel 6) on Friday evening, March 13th at 7:00 P.M.

Tickets are on sale now in the Field House Ticket Office for the games in Raleigh. Students must buy two (2) tickets, one for Friday, one for Saturday. They will be sold only in pairs. Price is $6.00.

MORE MOORE

by Rusty Miller

On Sunday afternoon the Field House was always a quiet place, until a guy they call "Mo" scored 28 points in his best home performance to that time — and decided he could do better. "Anytime you score 28 points against a tough Big 5 team like Temple, you're doing something," says Coach Jack Kraft. The day after the game Richie went to the Field House by himself and practiced what he seemed to need no practice in — his shooting. He must have known what he was doing. Two nights later he scored 40 points — season high for the team.

Up until recently, the 6-4, 200 pound sophomore was the quietest member of the 12 man squad. Suddenly however he seemed to become a part of things, an integral member of the group. This was exactly what he needed for it definitely affected his team ball. Richie Moore had found himself as a major college ball player.

There is no question about Richie's shooting ability. For 25 games he shot 167 for 355 from the floor — 49%. From the foul line he hit 59 of 81 for 72.9%. He completed the season with 393 points, 15.7 per game.

He was a standout in Philadelphia high school ball graduating from John Bartram High. His high school coach, Tony Coma says "He was always an extreme competitor." Richie played center in Bartram's man-to-man defense, and consistantly outscored the opposition's big man. In the Public League playoffs in his senior year he was given a special "Most Courageous Player" award for playing the whole game with a very serious thigh injury — "He played literally on one leg," said Coma. The schoolboy's talents were vigorously sought after by a certain rival coach in the city named Litwack. Fortunately though, Mo had his mind set on Villanova.

The one big question in everyone's mind at the beginning of this year was — can Richie Moore play defense? Would he prove to be the weak link in the defensive chain that Jack Kraft had counted so heavily upon in the past? It's common knowledge that Richie came through like a champ, learning every phase of the Jones style defense. He continued to work at it every day in practice too. Rich became so adept at this "electric fan" defense that he committed an average of only 1.6 fouls per game.

Another phase of Mo's game, which has improved steadily over the last two years is his passing. He has progressed to the point where he is second only to Wally and George in that respect.

Although he has not been outstanding in the rebounding category, he does achieve good position and proved a steady help to Wash, averaging 7.8 per game.

On the surface Richie seems perfectly normal, though at times he exhibits what might be interpreted as masochistic tendencies. He actually enjoys working. He likes to run. He even suggested to Coach Kraft that the team run more.???

Considering all aspects, Richie's finest performance came in the Holiday Festival against the University of Utah. He had had to attend the funeral of his grandmother that morning, travel all the way back to New York and under those trying conditions, play in the tournament. Without his outstanding play and game high of 24 points Villanova would surely have fallen victim to the Utes that day.

Coach Richie Regan of the luckless Seton Hall Pirates hails Moore as "the best shooter I've seen all year." Regan may be considered an authority on the subject since his own Nick Werkman is one of the top shooters in the nation. "With his hot hand the other night he certainly put on an all american performance."

If Richie continues to produce in his current fashion, if he holds on to his newly found place on the team, he can't help but fall in line behind Wally on that famous list.

Sullivan Clinches IC4A Title For 'Cats, Manhattan Second

by Roy Baron

Villanova's Wildcats fought to their third straight IC4A indoor title last Saturday night, edging runnerup Manhattan 22-21. It was a surprising victory in the mile by Tom Sullivan that saved the day for the 'Cats.

Manhattan, the meet's dark horse, pressed the Mainliners when Harvard and Navy, the expected challengers, faltered early in the evening. Going into the final event, the mile relay, the Jaspers needed a first place to tie the Wildcats. However, the favored Morgan State quartet was able to hold back the Manhattan threat for the victory.

Sullivan, who had spent most of his time this winter running with the world record two mile relay team, ran to his first individual victory of the season in 4:11.8. Passing Notre Dame's Bill Clark with a couple of laps remaining, Sullivan raced to an easy victory.

Jumbo Magic

This performance by the Chicago distance man was the only Villanova win of the evening. It was another great illustration of the Jumbo Elliott magic. Elliott has a knack for getting his men up for the IC4A's as Sullivan's fitfully illustrated.

The win by Sullivan proved to be a decisive factor as Rolando Cruz and Captain Vic Zwolak failed to produce an expected nine points. Cruz had difficulty in the pole vault, knocking the bar off several times on the way up. He finished fourth, clearing 15-6 on his final try.

Zwolak the two-mile favorite led most of the way, but the effects of a cold got the best of him with about two laps remaining. It took a gallant effort for him to hang on for a third place finish. His time of 9:10 was about 17 seconds slower than when he defeated eventual winner Joe Lynch of Georgetown the previous week in Baltimore.

Adams Anchor Man

In one of the most important events of the evening Al Adams, anchorman of the Villanova two-mile relay team, battled his way to a second place finish ahead of Manhattan. A change of position here would have given the Jaspers the 22-21 victory.

In one of the most "gutty" performances of the indoor season, Noel Carroll almost caught St. John's Tom Bauer at the tape in the 1000 yard run. Carroll, who was not in shape to run after having recovered from a thigh muscle pull, finished second by only a point.

Other point producers for the Wildcats were Larry Livers, with a third in the hurdles, and Marshall Uzzle, who garnered a point with a fifth place finish in the 60-yard dash.

Four Preps, Sarah Vaughn Keynote Annual Senior Weekend Activities

by Bob Healy

During the first weekend of April, the Senior Class will present Senior Weekend, '64.

Beginning Thursday night, April 2, with a lecture and ending Saturday night with the traditional Dinner Dance, Senior Weekend is geared to both an intellectual and a social vein.

The Weekend will be keynoted by an address from William Sullivan assistant head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, who will speak to the seniors on "Communism and the College Student."

Because of his vast legal experience and important administrative post, Mr. Sullivan is well qualified to discuss his subject. This speech will provide the intellectual part of Senior Weekend.

Social Entertainment

Social entertainment for the Weekend is in the form of a "package deal." Featured the same evening at the Senior Concert are Sarah Vaughn and the Four Preps. This "two for one" package deal is an innovation for the campus.

Miss Vaughn, and the Four Preps will appear Friday night, April 3. Tickets are now on sale in the Pie Shoppe. Prices are $2.50 for balcony and $3 for Orchestra.

Both Miss Vaughn and the Four Preps are well known recording artists. They have appeared on many television shows. However, this appearance will be their first on the Main Line.

Dinner Dance

Finally, on Saturday night, April 4, the Weekend will close with a high note. Dinner and dancing will cap the night and the social event.

The Sheraton Ballroom will be the scene of the Dinner Dance. Cocktails will be served before the dinner which is scheduled for 7 p.m.

After dinner, the Adam Wade Orchestra under the direction of Joel Scott will provide the musical setting. During intermission, the Queen of the Weekend will be chosen. Then the queen her escort, and the court will reign for the remainder of the evening.

Ghanian Ambassador Speaks To Political Union Monday

Miguel Augustus Ribeiro, Ghanian ambassador to the United States, will speak to the Political Union Monday evening on Portuguese colonialism. The meeting will follow the Union's traditional debate format. It will be held in 110 Bartley Hall at 7 p.m.

The text of the debate resolution is: Resolved, that this house favors United Nations action to end Portugese colonialism. Student speakers from the Union's three parties, Conservative, Liberal, and Moderate, will follow the guest speaker to the podium.

Miguel Ribeiro

Ambassador Ribeiro was appointed to his present position in March 1963. He has also served as his country's ambassador to Ethiopia and West Germany. Before Ghana became independent in 1957, he had a long career in secondary and college teaching.

Ghana, which is critical of Portugal for its colonial domination of Angola and Mozambique, is also under fire for its restraint of the civil liberties of its own citizens. Most African nations support Ghana's position against Portugal, and favor U.N. intervention. Portugal, however, contends that UN entrance would constitute illegal interferences in their domestic affairs.

Jr. Class President Announces Program For Junior Concert

Junior Class President Jack Emery has recently announced the details for this year's Junior Week Concert to be held Friday, May 8 in the Field House.

"Following in the footsteps of two such overwhelming successes as last year's Junior Concert and last Fall's Homecoming Concert will be no easy task," says Emery. The Juniors however are from all appearances out to give it a try. They have not the ordinary one attraction, but three, hoping to appeal to everyone's taste.

The first group is well known and liked by all, the famous Four Freshmen. The second attraction is a fast-rising young folk singer named Carolyn Hester. Miss Hester records for Columbia Records. She has appeared in many of the top "folk" night clubs in the country and was a smash success in her tour of England. More recently she has become extremely popular on the college circuit and has appeared on television's Hootenanny.

The third but by no means the least of the attractions will be the Phoenix Singers, a trio of the Belafonte school and recently an overwhelming success on the Hootenanny show.

Rev. A. McCormack To Speak At Villanova About Birth Control

by Tom Krause

The Rev. Arthur McCormack, of the Mill Hill Missionary Fathers, will speak at Villanova on March 19 concerning the subject "Overpopulation — Birth Control." His talk will be given in Vasey Hall Auditorium at 8 p.m.

Father McCormack is the author of World Poverty and the Christian in the Twentieth Century Encyclopedia of Catholicism series. In this volume, Father delineates two of the most pressing problems facing mankind today — world poverty and the population explosion.

Ordained a Mill Hill Father in 1936, he was a missionary in West Africa, and a principal of a college for African boys and a

Genevieve Blatt States Views On Urban Renewal Problems

by Tim Coyle

At the unprecedented appearance on the Villanova University campus of a candidate for an elective office, Miss Genevieve Blatt, Pennsylvania's Secretary for Internal Affairs, expressed her views on the problems of urban renewal.

The senatorial candidate spoke before the Political Union last Thursday evening.

Miss Blatt, the first woman elected to statewide office in Pennsylvania and now engaged in a contest for the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate, stated that substantial federal aid is indeed needed and inevitable.

Federal aid is necessary, she said because of the inability of the states and the cities concerned to cope with the problem effectively and the general apathy of the affected people. Miss Blatt did however feel that the initiative and impetus for any federally aided program of urban renewal and redevelopment should arise from the area involved.

She said that the problem of blighted slum areas in our urban centers is "far too expensive in terms of human suffering and monetary value" to let it slide by without any constructive corrective effort being made.

Following Miss Blatt's address were many student speakers from the Political Union who expressed their own personal views on the topic under debate.

The various and varied comments and jibes bantered and traded about by the student speakers in their attempts to bring out salient points and even pertinent information while discrediting the opponents' similar efforts were indeed refreshing and one of the evening's highlights.

Junior Week Edition Features Class History And Prophecy

The Rev. Louis A. Rongione has announced that the Junior Week edition of the Villanovan will be distributed on Monday, May 4. The paper will be under the aegis of Tom Bruderle, currently an associate editor of the Villanovan.

Thus far, the staff of the junior week edition consists of, aside from the editor, John Barrow and Bill Manfred. This edition is to be run entirely by members of the Junior Class.

As for the contents of the paper, there will be a "Diaper Dan" contest in which students baby pictures will be judged on the basis of originality and "babyfaceness."

Also featured in the paper will be a history of the class, covering the antics and dramatics of the freshman and sophomore years. A foreboding prophecy of the years after graduation will be included.

Among the twelve pages can be found information apropos of Junior Week activities, such as Turf 'n' Tinsel, the class concert, and the class party. Descriptions of the class officers and athletes, modeled on those of previous Junior Week papers, will also be featured.

Anyone interested in working on this edition should contact Bruderle in the Villanovan office on the second floor of Dougherty Hall. There will be an extremely important meeting of the Junior Week staff tomorrow at 10:30 a.m. in the newspaper office.

Rusher, 'National Review's' Publisher, Gives Strategy Concerning Cold War

by Jim Brennan

The keynote address of the Conservative Club's lecture series titled "A Conservative's Strategy for the Cold War" was recently given by William A. Rusher, publisher of the National Review.

A journal of fact and opinion, the National Review is the foremost organ of conservative communication today.

Rusher opened his talk by saying that he would rather speak to a mixed audience than one that is entirely conservative or totally hostile.

With the audience composed solely of conservatives, there is no give and take and likewise when there are just hostile listeners nothing can be accomplished.

Programmatic Liberals

Continuing, Rusher said that conservatives tend to be less programmatic than liberals. Liberals always ask for specific programs to meet problems, whereas conservatives do not feel it so easy to correct a fault just by forming a program that contains eight or any number of points.

United Nations

Concerning the United Nations. Rusher stated that the National Review does not say that the United States should leave the United Nations or vice-versa. This is not the position that the responsible conservative holds.

In the long run, either the Communist or those fighting for freedom will win out, and this will control the destinies of man for a long time.

Elaborating on the United Nations problems, Rusher said that in 1960 the admission to the former colonial territories of Africa gave them the same vote as the large responsible countries. This created a balance in the United Nations.

Not Dependable

The United Nations is no longer a dependable structure of freedom. The neutral countries can now look at the Cold War as a struggle between two great powers.

At present, the United Nations is now embarked on being a neutralist service in the Cold War. Eventually this will do a disservice to the cause of freedom.

As long as this remains the direction of the United Nations, the world will only be weakened and the preservation of liberty made more difficult.

We must study the United Nations in its relationship to the Cold War. It is important even if we lose one vote, for we are dealing with the future of mankind.

Relative Terms

When speaking of the communist world and the free world, we must do this in relative terms. The communist world is dedicated to the destruction of man's freedom, while the free world's purpose is to the construction of his freedoms.

Rusher in ending his points on the United Nations said: "I would like to see it de-politicalized." As an example he told of how the United Nations at the request of Sukarno told the Dutch to leave New Guinea, but when Nehru sent planes and infantry into Goa the United Nations did nothing. The reason for this was: "It was Nehru who did the aggressing."

Foreign Aid

Speaking on foreign aid, Rusher said that the conservatives have no intention of doing away with this necessary project. Aid to such countries as Turkey and South Korea is necessary. He feels that there should be more private aid.

Congress seems to agree with this idea because they have slashed the foreign aid program submitted by former President Kennedy and now being carried out by President Johnson.

Jump on Cuba

Rusher declared that the conservatives had the jump on the liberals concerning Cuba. In the August 24, 1957 issue of the National Review an article written by Alice-Leone Moats titled "The Strange Past of Fidel Castro" stated that if Castro was not a Communist he was at least "playing ball with them."

Rusher said that the National Review suggested an economic blockade of Cuba but the New York Times would not hear of it

Political Science Group Plans Talk By Robert Strauz-Hupe

The Villanova Political Science Department has announced that its semi-annual guest lecturer for the semester will be Dr. Robert Strausz-Hupe, director of the Foreign Policy Research Institute of the University of Pennsylvania.

The lecture, scheduled for 7:30 p.m. on Monday, March 23, will take place in 110 Bartley.

Dr. Strausz-Hupe, who is also professor of political science and Executive Editor of Orbis, the official publication of the Foreign Policy Research Institute, will be speaking on disarmament.

Naval Consultant

Besides his work at Penn, he is a lecturer at the Air War College, the Army War College, the National War Defense College, and the NATO Defense College. He is also consultant to the Operations Evaulation Group of the Department of the Navy, and a consultant to the Defense Department.

Dr. Strausz-Hupe, also the Director of the Atlantic Council of the United States, has written articles for a number of periodicals, magazines, newspapers, and has authored or co-authored many books.

VU Faculty Wives Plan Dinner Dance

A dinner dance, sponsered by the Faculty Wives Club will be held on April 11, 1964 at The Covered Wagon Inn on Lancaster Avenue in Strafford. Cocktails will be served at 7:30 p.m., dinner at 8:30 and dancing at 9:30.

Mrs. Richard Knott of Strafford is Chairman of the event. Assisting her are Mrs. Joseph DeVane and Mrs. John Donahue, Mrs. William Murphy is Chairman of the Club.

Tickets are $8.50 per couple and may be obtained by contacting Mrs. Knott at MU 8-5868, Mrs. DeVane at 687-0856 or Mrs. Donahue at 265-4412.

Sophomores Will Entertain Orphans For Spring Project

George Valva, president of the Sophomore Class, has announced that the class will hold its spring project, an orphan's outing on Saturday, May 9. The class set the date and organized committees at its meeting on Thursday, March 5.

The outing is an annual Spring affair. Some 150 orphans will be invited to participate in the day of activities. Activities planned are: a tour of the campus, lunch, a movie, and athletic events.

Benediction

The day, which begins at 10 a.m. and ends at 3 p.m., will be concluded with benediction in the grotto.

Members of the class who attend will act as hosts and hostesses for the day. Tickets will go on sale in the Pie Shoppe two weeks prior to the event.

Those purchasing tickets, can either come stag or drag. An attempt will be made to have something planned for those attending.

No Class Party

Other business discussed at the meeting, concerned the possibility of having another class party. The Rev. Richard A. Appicci, OSA, moderator of the class, said it would not be possible.

The class voted to hold a meeting on April 9. The purpose of the meeting will be to appoint members of the class to the various committees.

'Happy Haven' Closes Its Run; Pros Give Support To Playbox

The Happy Haven, currently featured at the Villanova Playbox, makes its final performances this weekend, March 20, 21, and 22.

The play, written by John Arden and directed by Mr. Richard Duprey, made its American debut at the Playbox on March 6. The Happy Haven is a satire which lampoons England's system of socialized medicine.

Student tickets are available daily at the Playbox for the reduced price of $1. Non-students may purchase tickets for the regular price of $1.50.

Rehearsals for the next Playbox production of Whipple and Himelhash's The World That Never Was are now underway. The play is slated for an April 10 premiere and will run for two weekends.

The Graduate Theatre Department has been blessed by receiving the support of many members of the professional theatre.

Producers Arthur Cantor, Kermit Bloomgarden, and Michael Ellis as well as playwright Sidney Kingsley, have shown much interest in the department, and and the Playbox in particular.

Also, the department has announced to interested seniors that several Graduate Theatre assistantships will be available in September. Applications should be submitted to Dr. Buford, Dean of the Villanova Graduate School.

Mental Hospital Trip Highlights Activities Of Sociology Group

Louis Petrillo, President of the Sociological Society, has announced the results of the meeting of March 12, for the welcoming of new members. The meeting was held in conjunction with a field trip to Haverford State Mental Hospital.

A formal petition had been submitted to the Student Council requesting recognition as an organized campus activity. The society is also anticipating acceptance by the American Catholic Sociological Association.

Petrillo has announced a schedule of lectures to be sponsored by his organization. Monsignor Riley, supervisor of the Catholic Charities of Philadelphia, will speak on April 2.

In conjunction with the Geography Club, Dennis Claik of the Philadelphia Urban Renewal Program is scheduled to speak on April 9. J. Bonner, head of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania Human Relations Committee, will appear April 16.

In addition to the lecture schedule, the society is sponsoring a field trip on April 18 to the New Jersey Reformatory for Women.

Everyone interested in joining or participating in any of the scheduled activities can receive information by attending the society's meeting during the activities period in 104 Vasey Hall.

Rutgers Prof. To Talk On 'Negro Movement'

The Conservative Club announced that its fourth lecture of the current semester will be held during the second week of April. The featured speaker is Dr. William Fitzpatrick, professor of English at Rutgers University.

Dr. Fitzpatrick will speak on "The Negro Movement."

Class Nominations, Election Campaign Are Slated For Early Days Of April

by Bob Dowling

The campaign procedure and dates for the general class elections to be held this spring have been announced by the Student Council.

The first date to be noted is Thursday, April 2, when, during the activities period, official nominations for all offices will be held. The place will be announced at a later date.

Those candidates who are nominated will then be required to take the Student Council Constitution exam on April 8, testing the candidate's knowledge of the Council Constitution, the by-laws and the forms of parliamentary procedure.

Campaign Period

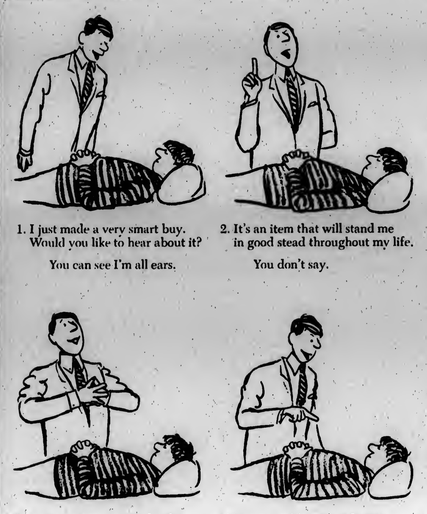
Acceptable candidates will be allowed to begin their campaigns at midnight, Sunday, April 12. They will have a campaign period of three days, which will extend to April 16, election day. Voting will be held on April 16 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Alumni gym.

Any students who are prospective candidates should note carefully the following election rules and campaign procedures.

Posters may not exceed the size of 18x12 inches and may be placed only on the bulletin boards in the resident dorms. Handbills may not exceed 11x8.5 inches.

Rules

Neat signs may be placed adjacent to the Classroom Annex Building. No campaign material of any sort may be distributed, carried, or posted either inside or outside the polling place.



All campaign material must be removed immediately following the elections.

Each candidate may not exceed $50 in his expenses and a party may not spend more than $100. A record of all expenses must be kept and turned into the Student Council 12 hours prior to election day.

And More Rules

No campaigning will be allowed for an area of 10 square feet in front of the polling place.

Public address systems may be used between class periods on the election day only.

Campus Literary Club Presents Kopper Talk On 'Joyce & Religion'

Dr. Edward A. Kopper will speak to the Villanova Literary Society and all interested bystanders on "Joyce and Religion" tomorrow morning in 207 Vasey Hall, at 10:30 a.m.

Dr. Kopper wrote his doctoral thesis on Joyce's long stream-of-consciousness novel Finnegans Wake. It will be from this work that he will draw the bulk of his opinions and conclusions.

In advance of the lecture it is advised that all those interested have at least a cursory knowledge of the tome. Dr. Kopper intends to throw the gathering open to questions and answers.

The lecturer received his Bachelor's from St. Joseph's College in 1958, and his Masters and his Doctor's degrees from Temple University in 1961 and 1963, respectively.

It is felt that among the eminent Joycean critics specializing in Finnegans Wake, Dr. Kopper is one of the world's finest.

In the future the Society plans to hold nominations for officers for 1964-1965 on April 2. At that time the group will consider John Steinbeck's The Grapes of Wrath.

All members of the University academic body are invited to participate in these and subsequent happenings.

T'n'T's 'Who's Afraid Of Utah' Opens In First Week Of May

Practice for this year's Turf 'n' Tinsel show is now in full swing. The show, "Who's Afraid of Utah ," will be performed on the first weekend in May with a special show on Sunday night for the mothers of the Junior Class.

Set in the unlikely circumstances of a Western dude ranch, the production depicts the ranch's rather unsuccessful workings. The script provides the cast with excellent opportunities for hilarious characterizations.

Fortunately the club has the talent required to give the parts that riotous touch that T 'n' T audiences love. Returning from last year's cast are: seniors Roger Sheehy, Ed Jaworowski, Don Leurie, and Barry Thornton; and junior Bob Spellmeyer.

Both the cast and chorus (supposed dancers and singers) are hard at work practicing two nights a week in the Field House. The stage crew, which involves a major role in the production, is under the direction of junior Paul Verello.

Among other things, the show will feature an old-time saloon chorus line. Unfortunately, brair-patch legs and uninspiring figures may mar these kick-line beauties.

But their exhibition will, nonetheless, be satiated with grace and agility.

Fr. John Coffey Will Give Day Of Recollection, April 3

The students' annual Day of Recollection will be held on Friday, April 3.

The Rev. John Coffey, OSA, Prior of the House of Postulants in Staten Island, New York, and former master of professed clerics at St. Mary's Hall, Villanova University, is the retreat master.

Separate exercises will be held for day-hops (morning) and residents (afternoon). Mass and a conference begin the day-hop services at 8:30 a.m. The second conference at 10 a.m. will be immediately followed by confessions. A conference and benediction at 11:15 a.m. will close thir one-day retreat.

Mass and a conference open the resident exercises at 12:15 p.m. Conferences will be held at 1:30 and 3 p.m., confessions following the former, and benediction the latter, bringing the day of prayer and meditation to a close.

Attendance cards for the Day of Recollection may be picked up in Center Lounge, Dougherty Hall, between 9 a.m.-4:30 p.m. on April 1-2.

Defeat By Pitt Costs VU Debaters Fifth Place And West Point Trip

The District VII Debate qualifications for the national finals at West Point were held this past weekend at the University of Pennsylvania.

The District is composed of teams for the States of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia.

The tournament consisted of eight rounds of power-paired debate on the national debate question: Resolved: That the Federal Government should guarantee an opportunity to higher education to all qualified high school graduates. Each round the teams would debate opposite sides of the question before two judges. This resulted in the final standings being based on 16 decisions with the top five teams qualifying for the Nationals.

The team of Joe Rohrer and Terry Cooney represented Villanova and wound up with a 10-6 record which placed them in the number six slot as first alternate should one of the qualifying teams be unable to to attend.

Villanova's victories came at the expense of St. Vincents, Lehigh, Carnegie Tech, Duquesne, Delaware and Clarion State but two losses to Pitt in the late rounds proved the deciding factor.

Those schools qualifying were: George Washington, Pitt, West Virginia, Navy and Georgetown. Villanova's sixth place showing was the closest any Villanova team has ever come to qualifying.

On March 6 and 7, two teams of novices of the Beta Gamma Debate Society participated in the National Novice Debate Tournament at Wayne State University in Detroit, Michigan.

The team of Ed Gray and Jeff Radovich compiled a 4-2 record in the switch side tournament to place fifth.

Radovich, on the basis of his individual scoring in each round was presented with the "best speaker award" compiling 126 out of a possible 150 individual points.

Also making an impressive appearance was the team of Dick Behrens and Kathy Koller who broke even.

Letter To The Editor

To The Editor,

For the purposes of easing the mind of Mr. Frank Sauers I would like to inform him as well as the readers who were deceived by his maligning article of last week that the 'local chapter' of the NFCCS did not, nor does it have any intentions at this time, of sponsoring a resolution that Richard Burton be barred from the U.S.

True, the matter was brought before the Philadelphia Regional Council of the NFCCS and it was decided to submit it to the Resolution's Committee. That Committee, after due consideration, decided it was neither our position nor our desire to take a stand on such an issue.

Incidentally President Johnson has deemed the issue of sufficient importance to especially delegate the authority to bar Mr. Burton's entry into the U.S. to the joint judgment of Secretary Rusk and Attorney General Kennedy. I do not feel it out of order that we, also, should have considered our position.

Much of what Mr. Sauers said in his article about the issue itself is true. However his implications of the involvement or committment of the NFCCS were grossly inaccurate, insulting and deserving, I feel, of apology.

Student-Teacher Rapport

The extent of rapport between faculty and student is frequently an observable index of the quality and intellectual vitality of a college or university.

A complexity of other factors involving such things as the size of the school the degree of admission requirements, tuition costs, and so on, also play a large part in determining the calibre of an institution of higher learning. They vary from school to school. But the student-teacher relationship is undoubtedly the most universally essential factor in terms of stimulating a viable intellectual atmosphere.

Informal, outside of class, interaction between professor and student has traditionally been a coveted educational tool. The tradition is a valuable one, with obvious values, that ought to be preserved.

The modern era, in terms of education, has seemed to indicate a moving away from the concept that the teacher can inspire. Inspiration is being displaced with growing emphasis on the communication of fact, and such re-emphasis in non-scientific areas is never an omen of a healthy intellectual climate or meaningful advancement of the mind.

The modern professor simply does not enjoy the valuable personal relationship with the student that is so essential to a meaningful educational experience. The situation is no doubt due to such real factors as the size of the student body and mass education in addition to the rigid formality of the curricula.

Yet these are situations that any major university cannot avoid. The problem revolves around the question of how to overcome these obstacles in developing ways of realizing a more viable interaction between professors and students.

This presumes, of course, efforts by both students and teachers to make contributions to such a relationship. The student, quite naturally, has a great deal more to gain than a professor to such a relationship, but the teacher should realize that efforts of this sort are a part of the essential responsibilities of his profession.

The teacher who holds the view that he has advanced so far in his particular field of knowledge that he can learn nothing new from the meagre efforts of students or, that listening is a waste of time, does not belong in the teaching profession. Fortunately, this point of view is not extensive, but the inclination to such a view is no doubt tempting.

Besides recognition on the part of the professor of his capacity and duty to inspire or attempt inspiration, it is essential that the student be receptive. Responsibility works both ways. The good student will seek out professors he admires and attempt to develop a relationship on an informal basis.

But while the classroom is too formal an atmosphere for developing such attitudes, the exclusively personal basis is probably too informal to be effective on a meaningful level. It is essentially a question of taking steps that will produce immediate results.

The most logical place for the stimulus to be initiated would seem to be in those administrative positions directly concerned with the problem, namely the individual departments.

In a previous editorial we suggested informal "coffee clatches" at which students and professors might discuss areas of mutual interest in an open and intimate at least in sparking an atmosphere more conducive to inspiration.

Non-compulsory attendance might also separate interested students from the rest. This is just one suggestion. There must be others. They should be considered with a view toward the imaginative innovation that has been largely lacking in the past.

President's Report

Difficulty In Justifying NFCCS

by Martin McGuinn
President, Student Body

Villanova University has had difficulty during the last few years justifying its affiliation with the National Federation of Catholic College Students. Such an indefinite situation has persisted for several reasons. Most obvious among these has been the existing inequality concerning services and privileges received for dues paid.

Apparently, our own Religious Affairs Committee of the Student Council could initiate and maintain similar projects and even use N.F.'s suggestions without being a member school.

The Student Council recognizes its position as a large school participating on the regional and national level and the importance of a unified voice expressing the opinions of Catholic college students.

However, our budget is a rather inflexible one and we must be necessarily concerned with increasingly expanding campus activities. It also seems that campus projects could be more effective with local direction and concentration.

The obvious contention then is that Villanova could do more and do so without the burden of financial obligations.

The NFCCS Senior delegate is a full voting member of our Student Government and can employ its resources and committees. It is difficult, nevertheless, to interest "practical" students in what they believe to be an idealistic endeavor.

The fault seems to lie not in the student workers (for we have had many conscientious and interested students involved) but rather in the applicable programs sponsored by the national organization.

It appears to me that we cannot resolve the financial question and, more importantly, the merit of Villanova's position within an organization of predominantly small colleges for women.

The chair has therefore submitted a motion to withdraw Villanova University from the Federation. This question will be voted upon at this evening's Student Congress meeting.

Nominations for general spring elections have been set for Thursday, April 2. The elections for the Student Council representatives and Class Officers will be on Thursday, April 16. All campus organizations must conduct their elections prior to April 16 and must submit the results for approval to the office of Student Activities.

The Student-Faculty Committee convened on Wednesday, March 11, with the new chairman, Rev. Joseph Flaherty, OSA. The following proposals were considered at that meeting:

1) The Committee advocate a policy of course, material, and instructor evaluation to be employed by the individual instructors. Such a policy is to be implemented from the office of Academic Affairs through the Department chairmen.

2) A proposal for the adoption of a new academic grading system was then considered. The suggested method was:

A	= 4.00
B+	= 3.50
B	= 3.00
C+	= 2.50
C	= 2.00
D+	= 1.50
D	= 1.00

The above grades would be defined to determine their meaning. The motion was then tabled for further study.

3) Legislation concerning the institution of an academic honor system was returned to the Student Congress for additional clarification in regard to a specific area of implementation.

Caught In Passing

Intellectual Activity Sparked

by Jan Dyroff

There has been talk of late about the lack of intellectual activity on campus, particularly among the undergraduates. This, like all generalizations, is not quite true.

One organization proves the exception, the Philosophy Club. Over the past year the members have in fact resurrected the society and its functions.

Nil to Best

From a nil of activity has sprung a lecture series that is one of the best on campus. Talks, however, are passive and, no matter how good they may be, do little to stir initiative in the individual.

Realizing this the officers have initiated competition. It is based on the models of continental schools where medals are given to outstanding student work in specialized fields.

Essay Topic

Each year the topic for the essay will vary, with the initial consideration being "Philosophy and the Arts." A correlation of philosophy to literature, history, psychology, or science is the nature of the subject.

These papers may be done by any undergraduate and are not expected to exceed 2,000 words in length. Deadline will be Apr'l 20. Completed papers may be dropped off in the Club's pigeonhole in the Student Council office or to the secretary in the Philosophy Department's office.

Prizes Offered

Prizes for the competition are a gold, silver, and a bronze medal for the three best, which will then be published in Concept. The winners' names will be placed on a permanent plaque in the Reserve Room of the Library.

This competition is a real milestone in the University. With the possible exception of the Literary Society's Lynx Award there has been no way for students of the different disciplines to present ideas in a common field.

There are as few restrictions on choice of topic as possible in order to allow the maximum amount of academic freedom.

It is pleasant to think that a tradition is being born at Villanova. Students here now can say that it was started in their time. Some lucky students will be able to say that they helped start it.

Be one those fortunate, thinking students. Enter the competition, you have nothing to lose and everything to gain.

Original Bishop Neumann Letters Appear On Display In VU Library

by Tom Krause

Directly across from the circulation desk in the Rev. Daniel Falvey Memorial Library, one notices five antiquated letters enclosed in a glass case. These epistles were written by John Nepomucene Neumann, the fourth Bishop of Philadelphia (1852-1860).

Recipient of the letters was the Rev. Maurice A. Walsh, Vicar General of the Philadelphia Diocese. Written during the years 1856-1859, they are concerned mainly with diocesan business.

These notes are significant because John Neumann was beatified in Philadelphia on October 13, 1963. Therefore, when he is finally declared a saint by the Church, the letters will become historic relics.

Villanova received the letters on loan from Mrs. Maurice D. Walsh, mother of Mary Ann Walsh, a junior in the nursing division. Mrs. Walsh loaned them to the library so that the students at Villanova would have a chance to view them.

John Nepomucene Neuman was born in the Bohemian city of Prachatitz on March 28, 1811. Arriving in this country at the age of 25, he was ordained in New York City and a few years later joined the Redemptorist Order.

Becomes Bishop

Becoming Bishop of Philadelphia on March 28, 1852, the short, stocky man readied himself for the great tasks that were to come. Although Bishop Neumann constantly evoked a self-deprecatory tone, he was a scholar, well-versed in twelve languages.

Interested in the education of children, Bishop Neumann inaugurated the diocesan school system in Philadelphia which has since spread across the entire nation. Up until this time, the parish schools acted as seperate entities; however, Bishop Neumann integrated the schools into a unified system.

Bishop Neumann succumbed on January 8, 1860 after suffering a stroke. However, the "good was not interred with his bones" for thoughts of sainthood arose in the minds of many who knew the pietistic man.

Beatification

A wait of 25 years, a thorough investigation of his life, and the sifting of evidence to find two first-class miracles, necessary for beatification followed. A careful perusal of miracles claimed to be worked through the intercession of the purported saint is conducted before they are accepted.

Rome's Sacred Congregation of Rites finally approved the miracles; one concerning a resident of Villanova, and the other an Italian, Eva Benassi, living near Modena.

In 1949 J. Kent Lenahan, then living at 802 E. Lancaster Pike, was severely injured in an auto accident. With his life tottering in the balance, a relic of Neumann's cassock was given to the Lenahan family by a neighbor, Mrs. Joseph Duffy, whose husband graduated from Villanova in 1936.

Suddenly a miraculous recovery took place and today Lenahan lives with his wife and two children in Ardmore. His mother lives a few yards from the campus.

The process for canonization continues and one can see the humility of Blessed John Neumann manifested in the letters displayed in the library. The small, slightly illegible handwriting gives us an insight into the holy man who is on the road to sainthood. His letters will remain on exhibition until the Easter holidays.

Individualists, Unite!

by Ron Gladis

Lately much has been said concerning the future of individualism at Villanova. Plenty of this "much" has been centered around the viewpoints both pro and con, north-side and south-side, by and for, the offbeat gentlemen who so unwittingly catch our eye as they "grace" the campus.

In case you haven't been informed as yet, these people are individuals. This makes me boil to the extent that I feel they should be cast out on Lancaster Avenue.

Pre-Berlin

In short, why is one called an individualist because he dresses "Pre-Berlin" style? Are wranglers really more comfortable than dacron?

A Real Individualist

C'mon, don't put me on — I'm more of an individualist than the next guy, but to prove it I don't have to wear yellow socks, purple plaid scarves, a Beatle haircut (?), and a face which looks like it has been shaven by a blade left over from a (beep beep) commercial.

Consider the situation. You are a day-hop. It's now 7:30 a.m. (EST) on a school day, when you are awakened by a car horn. You've overslept!

Your mother, the night before, had just cleaned out the back room chest (which hasn't been done for 20 years), and you inadvertently in your haste throw some of these strange clothes on (your eyes are half shut).

ZAP

It is now 9:30 a.m. Villanova time. You walk into the Pie Shop(pe). You notice people looking at you. You notice you're being noticed. You notice the nurse in the corner. She's nice. All of a sudden somebody shouts, "Hey, look, a new individualist!" All of a sudden — ZAP — you're an individualist.

All of a sudden a change — you don't know exactly why but now you start to walk differently; you start also to talk differently; and start saying strange things about things. So what do you do? You join others who obviously are now your type.

Before you know it, a new movement, the U.I.V. (United Individualists of Villanova) is formed. A criterion for U.I.V. dress and speech is formed. Rules are made. Officers are named. Combs are broken. All over the University are signs: "Be an individualist — join a club."

Conform to Individualism

It spreads and finally the country adopts the code of the U.I.V. with individualism becoming the norm. Hold it — hold it — read that last one again. There's a moral in there somewhere.

I really couldn't care less how a person dresses; but to be classified by dress is ridiculous. Personally, I don't have to carry a sign above my head saying "Look — See Me, Color me an individualist."

But let's face it, rather than challenge them, we may as well accept them. One would have to be a fool not to recognize another man's folly. I'm no fool, so I don't expect to be looked down upon by those who pretend to this obvious paradox. Do I have to be a member of a group to be an individual?

I think not. But then again I think the whole issue smells. I haven't had a bigger laugh since I first came to Villanova and saw collegians wearing suit jackets, white shirts, ties, pants and white sneaks.

Viet Nam Farce

by Steve Freind

There's one thing you have to admit about the government of the United States. It can really take a joke. This is particularly true of Defense Secretary Robert McNamara. He can never be accused of being a poor sport.

No matter what pranks the Viet Cong play in Viet Nam, Old Mac assumes a suave devil may-care attitude and expounds on the bright future of the Southeast Asia playground. Who cares whether the Cong recently bombed an American theater in Saigon?

What harm is there in bombing an American Army softball stadium when only a few women and children were injured? After all, boys will be boys, and what red-blooded American could deprive some red-blooded Reds of their only fun in life?

No War?

Yes, Mr. McNamara is a jovial character. In fact, the only thing that is able to irritate the venerable defense chief is being told that there is a war going on in Viet Nam. McNamara is quick to refute such a heresy.

The only problem there is a slight ideological difference between two groups of Asians, and the United States is only too happy to act as a referee.

If a few Americans happen to be killed in the proceedings, it is merely an unavoidable stroke of bad luck. Even Ruby Goldstein occasionally gets floored by a stray punch.

Currently Mr. McNamara is on an inspection tour of Viet Nam. Naturally this trip was by no means necessitated by a sense of international urgency. Actually, Mr. McNamara is visiting Viet Nam to investigate its chances of hosting the 1968 Olympics.

A site such as this would provide revolutionary innovations in the format of the International Games. Various new events could be introduced, such as the grenade put, the bayonet toss, and the running helicopter shoot.

Pool

But Mr. McNamara's mind does not merely run on one track. He is also contemplating a plan to increase the Treasury of the United States in the form of a national pool.

For $1 a throw, any American citizen can venture his guess on the date and the winner of the next Vietnamese government overthrow. (The holder of the winning ticket gets double if the former ruler is assassinated.) Never let it be said that our leaders miss an opportunity to improve the national economy.

But let us not be too harsh on Secretary McNamara. He may be under strict orders from above to avoid improving the Viet Nam situation. A full scale Viet Cong uprising in Saigon could have its good points for the brains in Washington. Henry Cabot Lodge could be tough in November.

Easter vacation this year begins after the last class on Wednesday, March 25. Classes resume at 8:30 a.m. on the following Wednesday, April 1.

Thinking Adolescent Big Danger With A Little Bit Of Knowledge

by Jeff Radowich

Colleges and Universities today are experiencing the dubious benefits of an invasion of the thinking adolescent.

This individual can be male or female and is always superficially well-read. He knows an awful lot about very little, and is quite adroit at infesting any conversation with the piles and piles of cluttered minutiae which constitute his knowledge.

He is, above all, an "individual" (for the sake of being an individual), and will not hesitate to assert this claim.

He can be dressed in a variety of ways — and usually at the same time.

He vacillates from course to course, complaining all the while of the utter idiocy of most of the professors. "Most of the professors" have given him the mark he deserves.

Conformity

He possesses an entirely negative attitude about "stuffy conformity," not knowing that almost all conformity is merely the sensible thing to do.

He objects to all forms of authority on the grounds that he is a free man, not realizing he is free only to choose what is right.

He spouts all the latest philosophical jargon, yet is unable to define his purpose in life.

He scorns religion in any form, yet is plagued by inherent contradictions is his way of thinking.

But, most significantly, he deprecates not only those who have come to college to get a solid background for their future life's works, but also those here just for a good time.

He feels the former are boring automatons and the latter are immature fools.

Advice

As a result of this all-encompassing criticism, he never hesitates to offer definitive advice concerning what you should be doing and where you should be going, but he has no clear idea of his own direction.

He can be classified with the marriage counselor who has three divorces to his credit, and the psychiatrist who engages in peeping tom activities on the homeward journey.

One of his chief interests is psychology, yet he is a walking plea for compulsory mental examinations.

He participates in long "who am I, why am I, where am I" sessions, yet never attempts to answer these questions. Evidently, he intuitively realizes that were he to answer them, he would no longer have an excuse for his failure to accomplish something useful.

Futile

He ends up a beatnik with a college degree, not a college education.

He's boring, weary and oh, so futile.

Now, of course, this thinking adolescent doesn't really exist as I have outlined him above. Rather, he is present on college campuses as a set of tendencies, an inclination to the extremes I have mentioned.

I have observed this animal in myself and in my closest friends.

The real danger is in this animal's influence, not in his control. That he is omnipresent, subtle and gentlemanly makes him all the more potent.

Overdone

I write this article by virtue of one of the most basic democratic principles: freedom of speech.

Likewise, the thinking adolescent exists and continues to excrete his destructive criticism.

But, even the best things in life, besides being free, can also be overdone.

Civil Rights

by Bob Healy

Within a few short days, the United States Senate will be faced with one of its greatest legislative fights in history. Prime object of this fight is the Civil Rights Act.

Possibly one of the ignominies of American political thought, this year's Civil Rights Bill is the broadest piece of rights legislation to come before the Congress in years. Basically, the bill contains ten major provisions: voting rights, public accommodations, federal intervention for desegregation, public education, extension of the term of the Civil Rights Commission, cessation of federal aid to discriminating states, equal employment, voting statistics, judical reviews, and community relations.

Filibuster

But, before this House passed-bill clears the Senate floor, hours of debate and the probability of a filibuster haunt the atmosphere. Naturally, there will be a division in the Senate along geographic lines. Southerners are planning for filibuster while Northerners are attempting to plan for roll calls to make the Southern attempt futile.

The ideal situation is the passage of the bill in its entirety. However, this is extremely unlikely. Seasoned political observers tend to feel that the administration, in order to secure passage, must accept some amendments.

Old Issue

Civil rights in itself is not a new issue. It has prevailed since 1860. However, it has taken the people of the United States one hundred years to realize that in this land of equal opportunity, all is not equal.

The Rising Curtain

One But Not The Other

by Paul Norton

Last weekend the Jest and Gesture Society of Rosemont attempted Jean Giraudoux's magnificent Madwoman of Chaillot, a play that is fascinating, intriguing and funny. Rosemont's production captured one point of interpretation but unfortunately at the sacrifice of another.

There are two levels of meaning in the play. On the surface, this is pure farce, comedy with many stock situations, but nevertheless much possibility for invention. One does not have to dig deep also to find a commentary on the human race, the "haves and the have-nots" fighting for survival against each other. It is that the Jest and Gesture production sought to interpret and here they succeeded well.

With the aid of clever lighting and imaginative sets they produced the other worldliness of the Countess Aurelia and her mad friends. The director separated the sililoquies from the action of the main play and gave us some delightful moments particularly in the hands of the more capable actors.

Acting;

Joe Monaghan, the Ragpicker and mock defender in the trial of the un-mad people, gave an even performance with many high spots bordering on brilliance. The only other member of the cast to approach his quality was Harry Vanore as the colorful Dr. Jadin.

Less powerful but worth mentioning for their effectiveness were Lucia Beebe, Susan Moore and Sonia Shaw as the madwomen and Valeria Scalera as the Juggler. This last role was well interpreted as a liason between the two worlds of the mad and the un-mad.

For the most part, the remainder of the cast was about at the level of good high school acting and this is why the comic angle of the play fell so badly.

If a choice had to be made (and it shouldn't on a college level) the director chose the best avenue of intepretat.on. As a play about "saving humanity every afternoon" the play is brilliant; as a comedy it is only good. It would take a better than average college group to blend both elements in this show. Rosemont came close but didn't quite make it.

Be sure to see Anyone Can Whistle the most exciting musical play since "My Fair Lady". It is a brilliant piece of craftsmanship with many new ideas and a real break from the assembly line musicals of the past few years. It stars Lee Remick, Harry Guardino, and Angela Lansburg and finishes this week at the Forrest Theater before opening in New York.

* * *

Also worth noting is Noel Coward's High Spirits at the Schubert. An adaptation of an earlier play, this musical stars the gravel-voiced Tammy Grimes and the great Beatrice Lillie. With that combination how could this show miss?

She was a Phantom of delight
When first she gleamed upon my sight,
A lovely Apparition sent
To be a moment's ornament;
Her eyes as stars of Twilight fair;
Like Twilight's, too, her dusky hair;
But all things else about her drawn
From May-time and the cheerful Dawn
A dancing shape, an Image gay,
To haunt, to startle, and way-lay.

I saw her upon nearer view,
A Spirit, yet a Woman too;
Her household motions light and free,
And steps of virgin-liberty;
A countenance in which did meet
Sweet records, promises as sweet;
A Creature not too bright or good
For human nature's daily food;
For transient sorrows, simple wiles,
Praise, blame, love, kisses, tears, and smiles.

And now I see with eyes serene
The very pulse of the machine;
A Being breathing thoughtful breath,
A Traveler between life and death;
The reason firm, the temperate will,
Endurance, foresight, strength, and skill;
A perfect woman, nobly planned.
To warn, to comfort, and command;
And yet a spirit still, and bright
With something of angelic light.

Belle Masque Announces Play Hayes' 'The Desperate Hours'

The Belle Masque Society's next production will be The Desperate Hours, written by Joseph Hayes. The play will be held on April 10, 11, 17, 18 in Vasey Hall Auditorium.

Tickets will go on sale April 6 in the Pie Shoppe at the price of $1 for students. All evening performances will begin at 8:30 p.m.

A suspense-packed drama, resembling those of Alfred Hitchcock, The Desperate Hours relates the story of three escaped convicts who hold a family hostage for 48 hours.

The lead role in the play will go to James Mason, president of Belle Masque, who will portray Dan Hillard. Co-featured are Kathleen Roos, taking the part of Mrs. Hillard, and Brian Morgen, who will play the character of Glen Griffin.

Other participants in the play are Bonnie Lucas, Jim Stillwagon, Richard Rostella, John Meihon, Bill Byrne, and his 16 year-old brother, John Byrne.

training college for native teachers.

Author

A prolific author, Father McCormack has several other published works: People, Space Food; Papal Teaching on Population Problems and Under-Development; and is the editor of Christian Responsibility and World Poverty, a symposium published in 1963.

Also under his name are various articles and pamphlets which have appeared in the periodical Commonweal.

Father McCormack had to return from Africa in 1948 because of ill health. Settling in England, he recovered in 1956 and has made a special study of world poverty with special reference to economic and demographic problems.

He has lectured at the London School of Economics and the Catholic Societies of many English universities. Besides these diverse activities, Father is the co-editor of World Justice, a quarterly review published by the Research Centre for International Social Justice of Louvain University in Belgium.

Many towns have reaped the benefits of Father's humanitarian work; he is the guiding light behind the Freedom From Hunger Campaigns.

Among his variegated lecture topics are: world population, freedom from hunger, birth control, papal encyclicals, and theology and ethics of sex.

Associated With Leaders

When Father was the principal of the training college in the British Cameroons, the present Prime Minister of the country, John Foucha, and also the Ambassador of the Cameroon Republic of Great Britain, His Excellency Martie Epie, were tutors on his staff.

ICG Chapter Plans For State Convention To Be Held April 9-11

Villanova's chapter of the Intercollegiate Conference on Government along with the chapters of 40 other schools will convene at their annual state convention in Harrisburg on April 9, 10, 11.

This convention will simulate an actual political convention. The ICG members from the 40 schools will draw up a model political platform and select a presidential candidate. This convention is aligned with their purpose: to stimulate public interest in our government's problems.

The officers of Villanova's chapter of the ICG include: Chairman Jerry Cardamone; Vice-President Gary Suoja; Secretary Mike Rosani; and Treasurer Joe Deighan.

Prior to the state convention in Harrisburg, the members of the ICG will hold two more campus meeting, one on March 19 and the other on April 2 in 105 Vasey Hall. All members expecting to go to Harrisburg must attend these meetings.

History Club Prexy Elected, Dr. Rofinot Lecture Is Set

The newly formed History Club held its first regular meeting last week and elected Joe Horn as president.

Horn appointed Frank Escobar as chairman of the club's committee on graduate information and Joe Kudless as chairman of the club's committee of public relations. The meeting was attended by 35 dues-paying members.

On April 6, at 4:30 p.m., in a room to be announced, budget plans will be drawn up and submitted to the general membership. Prospective members are invited to attend this meeting. Those unable to attend should see Mr. Thomas Mentzer in the History Department for information on future meetings.

The club's first guest lecturer will be Dr. Henry Rofinot, chairman of the Villanova History Department, who will speak on some phase of American intellectual history. The date of the lecture is April 15; the room and time will be announced at a later date.

The History Club will sponsor two more lectures in addition to Dr. Rofinot's and one social event during the remainder of the semester.

Junior Class Holds Party On April 10

Jack Emery, president of the Junior class, has announced a class party to be held April 10. The affair will be held at Richard McDonald's Labor Lyceum, Ridge Avenue in Conshohocken from 7:30 p.m. until 12 a.m.

Tickets will be on sale from Junior class officers for $3 per couple.

The party is a date affair and it is open to class members only.

A Junior class meeting will be held tomorrow at 10:30 a.m. in Vasey Hall auditorium. The procedure for Junior Week and the class party will be discussed.

THERE'S A WIDE RANGE OF OPPORTUNITY IN THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANIES

To outer space and into the deep sea, we take the sum total of our scientific and managerial knowledge. A case in point is Telstar, which represents the first step toward a worldwide communications system. Another example, the new deep-sea amplifier that simultaneously transmits two-way messages. Both communications triumphs stem from Bell System planning, research and development.

Such trailblazing projects command the best of managerial and scientific talent. That's why you'll find, throughout the Bell System, men with college training as diverse as the responsibilities they shoulder. Their backgrounds run the gamut from liberal arts and business courses to science or specialized engineering majors.

Admittedly, the work is demanding. It requires that unusual caliber of man who finds a greater satisfaction in challenge than in ready solution . . . who is eager to see his education yield dividends . . . who wants an immediate opportunity for leadership.

Men with this kind of impatience will discover the stimulation, welcome and rewards they seek in the telephone business.

Catholic Renascence Group Plans Symposium On 'Christian Humanism'

by Frank Quattrone

The twenty-first Annual Symposium of the Catholic Renascence Society will be held at Villanova University on Monday and Tuesday, March 30-31. The general theme this year is "Christian Humanism in Contemporary Letters."

Beginning at 9:30 a.m. on the thirtieth, two lectures under the sub-theme of "Parochialism in Catholic Letters?" will be delivered.

The first of these, "Biblical Scholarship," will be given by the Most Rev. John J. Dougherty, D.D., President of Seton Hall University. "Letters in an Open Church," a talk by Michael Novak, Jr., of the Harvard University faculty, will follow.

'Disappearing Hero'

Later on in the day, a pair of lectures on "The Disappearance of the Hero" are planned. At 2 p.m. W. H. Frohock, also of the Harvard faculty, will speak on the waning humanistic tradition "From Birotteau to Saint-Genet."

Richard A. Duprey, Chairman of Villanova's Theatre Department, will take the dais after Mr. Frohock's talk. His topic is "Schweik vs. Oedipus."

The four lectures on Tuesday will focus on "Myth and Symbol in Sacred Scripture and in Contemporary Letters." The Rev. John J. O'Rourke of St. Charles Seminary, Philadelphia, will deliver a talk entitled "In the Bible: What and Where?"

Ralph A. Ranald of the Fordham University faculty will follow Fr. O'Rourke's 9:30 a.m. talk with a lecture on the status of Christian humanism in its contemporary historical perspective.

Philip Scharper, an editor for the Sheed & Ward Publishing Company, will be delivering the 2 p.m. lecture on "Language as Ecumenical." A talk by Mother Kathryn Sullivan, RSCJ, from Manhattanville College of the Sacred Heart, will conclude the two-day Symposium.

All lectures are slated to occur on the Villanova campus.

Honorary Chairman of the Symposium is the Most Rev. John J. Krol, Archbishop of Philadelphia, while the Rev. Robert J. Welsh, OSA, heads the local chair.

Chevrolet will go to any length to make you happy

Things have changed a lot since a Chevy was only a Chevy. Especially your ideas of what you want a Chevy to be.

So now you have the Jet-smooth Chevrolet—17½ feet of pure luxury, bumper to bumper. The size makes it a luxury car. But not the price.

Or you can choose the thrifty Chevy II, a 15¼-foot family car with all kinds of passenger and luggage space.

This year, your choice might be the new 16-foot-plus Chevelle, sized to fit nicely between Chevrolet and Chevy II (and between parking meters, with five whole feet left over).

Then, too, there's the sporty 15-foot Corvair, so right for so many people (you girls, in particular) that we've never touched an inch of it. And finally, Corvette—still 14½ feet and still too much for any true sports-car lover to say no to.

The long and short of it is, you don't have to go to any length to find exactly the kind of car you want. Just see the five different lines of cars at your Chevrolet dealer's.

asking — why should the people of Cuba be penalized for the excesses of their leaders?

"We cannot permit the maintenance of a communistic state 90 miles off our shore." This has become a base for subversion in the rest of Latin America and Africa.

An interesting comment by Rusher on this subject was that President Johnson will probably take action on this Cuban fiasco before election time.

Blockade Cuba

Continuing, Rusher said that we need a serious economic blockade of Cuba, for it would have a profound effect on their economy. If this doesn't work: "We should support the Cuban exiles in an attempt to get back their homeland."

Our final course of action, if nothing else is successful, should be to take action ourselves and support the Monroe Doctrine.

In conclusion, Rusher stated that the conservatives tend to rely more on the evidence of things unseen, but the ultimate reliance is beyond the political sphere. "Mankind in the long run will not be deserted by his Creator."

Question and Answer

A question and answer period followed the lecture. One dealt with the John Birch Society and the Minutemen. Rusher replied that he didn't know anything about the Minutemen but that Robert Welch, head of the Birch Society, is totally mistaken about recent history.

An example of this would be his views on former President Eisenhower. He continued saying that Robert Welch, though, is sometimes misrepresented in the press.

Another question dealt with our right to have missiles in Turkey, while we object to Communist missiles in Cuba.

Rusher retorted that we have a perfect right to protect freedom, and to object to the Communists trying to destroy it. The battle being waged is for the preservation of the freedom under which we now live.

Genevieve Blatt Lecture

Union were not quite satisfied with Miss Blatt's presentation and were opposed to the intrusion of the federal government into urban affairs through a federal aid program. The Liberals were in favor of such a program of federal aid and attempted to back up Miss Blatt with their opinions. The Moderates, led by the glib tongues of the black-robed members of the Canadian Club, quite dissatisfied with every one's and anyone's presentation save their own, acted as a buffer between the other two groups by verbal chastisement of both while they themselves took a negative view toward federal aid.

At an informal reception for Miss Blatt at the conclusion of the program, Miss Blatt expressed her views on a variety of subjects during an impromptu question and answer period.

Asked to comment upon the role of the American college students in national politics in contrast with that of his Latin American and European counterparts, she stated that the American college student for some reason does not seem to be considered mature enough to exert any real political influence.

On the future of women in American national politics, Miss Blatt feels that the American woman can go as far as she wishes if she is only willing to work.

Yale Cops Eastern Swimming Championships, 'Cats Fourth

by Gerry Bruderle

Dick McDonough retained his 200 yard butterfly title and Villanova's relay team captured the 400 yard freestyle relay in the 24th annual Eastern Seaboard Intercollegiate Swimming Championships at Hanover, N.H. last weekend.

McDonough, defending champion in one freestyle and two butterfly events, captured a first, a second, and a third in the three day competition held in the new pool at Dartmouth College. On Thursday, North Carolina junior Harrison Merrill edged McDonough in the meet record time of 5:02.3 in the 500 yard freestyle.

The Villanova senior bounced back on Friday in the 200 yard butterfly, defeating Ronnie Levine of Pittsburgh by seven feet in 1:59.9. But on Saturday, Yale's Steve Clark nipped McDonough, who had the best qualifying time, in the 100 yard free style.

The Elis, paced by Clark, who swept three individual titles in addition to anchoring a relay triumph, ran away with the team competition. They took six of the first ten events and clinched the team title on the second day of competition.

The Ivy Leaguers tallied 129 points, far ahead of Army with 53 and North Carolina with 50. Villanova finished fourth with 38 points.

Yale actually captured the 400 yard frestyle relay but Villanova was declared the winner on a disqualification. A Yale man jumped into the pool to congratulate his swimmers before all other teams had finished. The Wildcats composed of Ray Donnelly, Paul Winn, Rick Girdler and Jack Goeghegan led the qualifiers with a 3:15.9 mark and were declared winners in 3:15.6.

In the 200 yard freestyle, Goeghegan placed fourth behind Clark, who set a new NCAA mark in this event. Donnelly also trailed Clark, placing fifth for the Wildcats in the fifty yard freestyle. Girdler placed fourth behind Bill Steuck of Colgate in the 100 yard freestyle.

The Mermen now prepare for the Middle Atlantic A.A.U. Championships in next week.

Melchionni

For 24 regular season games the Cyclop shot 48.3 per cent from the field and 79.1 per cent from the free throw line, for a total of 221 points, 9.2 ppg. He also snared 78 rebounds.

The ambitions of the Pennsauken flash extend beyond the basketball court however. This spring he is running for C and F resident representative to the Student Council. "I want to do something around here. I want to feel that I'm really a part of the school," says Bill.

Coach Vic Bubas of the Blue Devils says that Billy is "a great shooter who gets a lot out of the size of his body. He has good eyes in spotting the open man on offense and plays a fine brand of defense."

After Friday night's heartbreaking loss to a great Duke team Bill couldn't wait to get Princeton out of the way. Like all the other players, he just wanted to get the whole thing over with. It was like taking the lid off a boiling pot—'The pot ranneth over.'

Billy kept complaining that his "hundred dollar raincoat" was all wet. So what do you expect when you wear it in swimming? But, just as the Cyclops said, over and over Saturday night—The 'Cats'll be back, the 'Cats'll be back.

In his three year tenure on the varsity, Jones played in 85 games (VU won 64 of them) and scored 480, 487, and 461 points in his sophomore, junior, and senior years, respectively, averaging 16.8 ppg.

The squad's only other senior is 5-11 Butch Winterbottom. Although seeing only limited action over the past three years behind the likes of Jones, Melchionni, George Leftwich and Eric Erickson, he filled in admirably whenever called upon. One such instance was in last year's battle with Wichita.

In as a substitute for Erickson, Winterbottom recovered a loose ball from the Shockers with 3:50 remaining in the game. He quickly sank a jump shot which provided the impetus for Villanova's stunning come from behind 54-53 win.

Businessmen In Pinstripe Suits

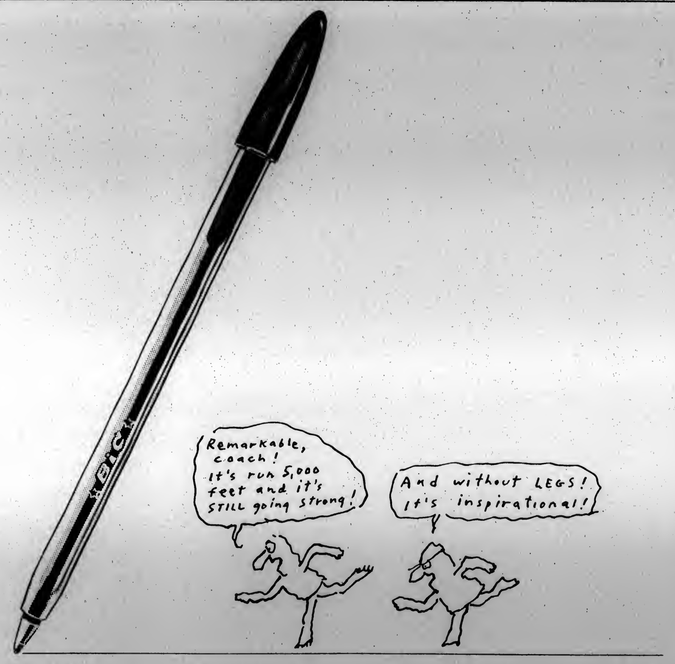
by Steve Freind

It's that time of year again when young men's thoughts turn to fancy, love and baseball. Winter-softened athletes pack their gear and head south to gird themselves for the coming six-month marathon. Every training camp exudes confidence, optimistic predictions and "can't miss" rookies that somehow disappear by the season opener.

Amid this pre-season chatter and wishful thinking stands a group of athletes that seem totally indifferent to their surroundings. Casually, the New York Yankees take on the air of white collar men preparing for their business, which happens to be winning the American League Lennant more times than Charles Finley appears in court. A new manager seems to have changed the Bombers' pattern little, as they quietly make ready to reduce the Junior Circuit race to a battle for second place by mid-season.

As usual, there is an abundance of trite cliches floating about the Grapefruit Circuit that amount to the same thing — this is the year that the Yanks fall. Boston and Chicago are rated as possible heirs to the Yankee throne, while half a dozen other teams are given an outside chance to end the Bomber reign. Gleeful critics claim that New York's decaying farm system has failed to breathe new life into the aging machine and the forty-year Yankee empire is about to crumble. They point to the World Series rout as proof that the Bronx Bombers are in their death throes.

It is advisable that these hardball experts refrain from holding their breath while waiting for the American League to upend its leader. The Yanks have been reported dying for ten years, during which time they have managed to eek out eight pennants and four world championships. Barring some unforseen miracle, such as Dick Stuart winning the fielding title, the Yanks should find themselves playing for the big cookie again in October.



Besides winning championships, the Yanks lead the major leagues in a special department-number of enemies. When Sandy Koufax and company silenced the Bomber bats in four straight last year, almost the entire nation cheered the upset. The Yanks had been humiliated and in every town, except New York, this was regarded as a national victory.

This reaction was not unexpected. The Yankee's confidence has infuriated baseball fans for years as the Bombers assumed an almost nonchalant air in notching their triumphs. Critics also claimed that the Yanks' domination of the American League was detrimental to baseball. Dwindling attendance figures in many of the league's ballyards gave weight to this argument.

When the champs fell, the world waited for their reaction, expecting excuses and a good deal of crow digestion. But the Yanks accepted the loss as they had taken their many victories, with the quiet acceptance of a champion.

The Yankee success story is more than merely having the money to buy the cream of the baseball crop. Through the years, the Bomber tradition has created a baseball legend. When a player dons the Yankee pinstripes, he is aware that he is a part of the greatest team in the history of baseball. Lou Gerhig best explained it in his farewell speech. "I consider myself the luckiest guy in the world," said the Iron Horse, "to be a Yankee."

The chatter still goes on in the training camps about the Yanks' weakness this year. By September, though, the Bombers should create a little silence.

Ruggers Open Season With Victory Over Manhattan Football Club, 6-0

by Jim Proud

In their first game of the season the Villanova Rugby Club won a notable victory in defeating the Manhattan Rugby Football Club.

In the game, played on the 'Cats home field, Villanova shutout the group from New York by the score of 6-0.

The scoring for Villanova was done by Hal Canty and Ed Kurek.

Canty, husky forward, scored the first points for the 'Cats on a 3-point penalty kick in the first half.

Canty, Kurek Score

The scoring of Canty proved to be sufficient to topple the New Yorkers but Ed Kurek added an extra margin by scoring 3 more points on a 10-yard dash in the second half.

The outstanding feature of the game, which captain Ed Wilkinson called the best game the Villanova club has played in a long time, was the hard play of the defensive forwards.

Hampered by wet ground the 'Cats could not use their speedy backfield to advantage and had to relay on their defense for the victory.

Little Practice

The victory was especially significant and satisfying because the team had been practicing for only a week prior to the game.

Because of the snow and cold weather the team was not able to practice outdoors and to perfect their timing.

O'Donough leads troops

After the "A" team game the Villanova "B" team, lead by captain Ross O'Donough, beat the Manhattan "B" team by 5-3.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

Two members of Villanova's basketball team have been named to the ten-man American University All-Opponent basketball team for the 1963-64 season. Two otehrs also received votes.

As could be expected, Wally Jones was a unanimous choice. Joing the Villanova captain were Mike Silliman (Army), Wayne Estes (Utah State), Willie Somerset (Duquesne), Fred Crawford (St. Bonaventure) and Jim Williams (Temple).

Richie Moore was unanimous choice along with Jerry Nash (DePaul), Jim Christy (Georgetown) and Terry Collier (Utah State).

Other Villanovans receiving votes were Jim Washington and and George Leftwich.

The VU-AU game was win number 16 for the Wildcats and was played on January 30 in Villanova's Field House.

VU 84-AU 49

After the first 20 minutes of play, Villanova held a slim 36-34 lead. Although the 'Cats suffered a cold first half, another possible reason for the lack-lustre performance was because the Wildcats were in an unfamiliar man-to-man defense.

In the second half, coach Jack Kraft's boys exploded for 48 points and returned to their regular zone defense holding the Eagles to 15 points and winning 84-49.

Moore was top Cat with 21 points followed by Jones with 19, Leftwich with 12 and Washington with 10.

Lacrosse Opens Fourth Season With 3-2 Victory Over Rivere

by Bob McIntyre

The Lacrosse Club of Villanova edged out The Rivere Beach Club of Maryland by a score of 3-2 Saturday afternoon as the team opened its season by engaging in a hotly contested scrimmage at Baltimore, Maryland.

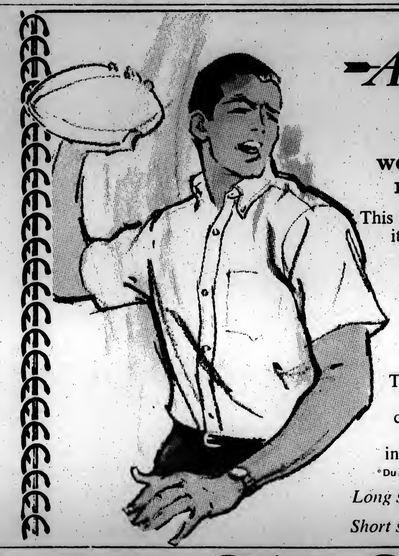
Don Pellechia got his Villanova teammates off to a fast start when he flipped the hard rubber ball through the opposition's goal in the first period to make it 1-0.

Captain Bill White soon followed suit as he scored to make it 2-0 in favor of Villanova but the Rivere Beach Club came back as they scored two goals before the half ended.

Early in the third period Bill White came through by firing another goal to put Villanova ahead again. At is turned out, this was to be the final goal of the day, thus the score read 3-2 in favor of the Cats as the scrimmage came to a close.

Both teams as a result gained much experience which they will put to their advantage in their opening games.

The Club, coached by a former Haverford High School coach, John Smyth, opens up against C. W. Post this Saturday, away. After this game one of the biggest games of the season comes into view as Ohio State's Lacrosse team comes to Villanova the March 24. The game will be played at 3 p.m.



This game and all other home games will be played in back of the Football Stadium. Other teams to be played this year include Georgetown, N. Y. Maritime, Washington and Lee, Franklin and Marshall, and Hartuck College.

The team has about thirty players out now but anybody really interested in trying to make this squad is welcome to come out. Actually the Lacrosse team is a Club run by the students themselves but they are trying to become recognized in the near future by the school authorities. Lacrosse has only been at Villanova for about four years and last years squad had a record of 6-5.

This year's squad has the potential of being the best in its four year history. The defense looks strong with Danny O'Connell, Jim Rantamnen and Charlie (Spook) Helgartner leading the way.

The midfield is composed of a hardcore of players in Mike Sweeney, Herb Fixler, Don Pellechia and Captain Bill White with John McFadden leading the attack or offensive part of the team.

All of the above are experienced but there are new faces on the squad who also show signs of becoming good Lacrosse players. They include Keven Tyler, James Boniuto, Ken Shields and Greg Shorten.

Kraftmen Eliminated By Duke, 87-73

by Tom Bruderle

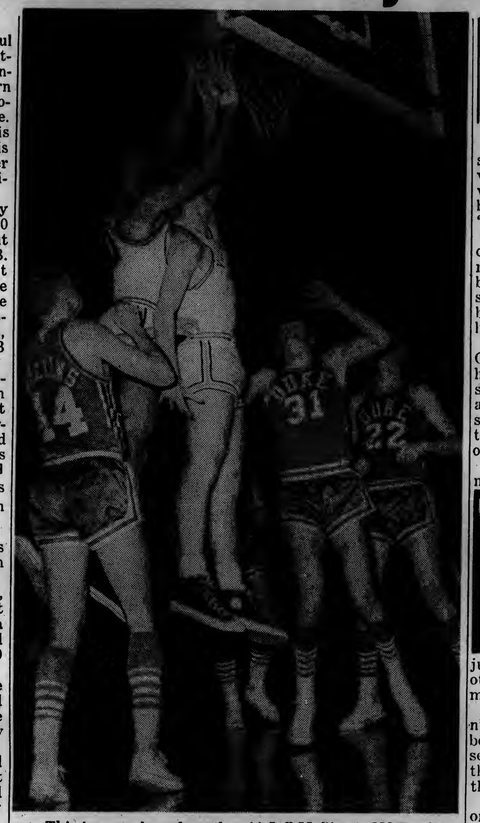
Villanova brought its most successful basketball season (24-4) to a close last Saturday night with a 74-62 triumph over Princeton in the consolation game of the Eastern Regional championships held at North Carolina State's Reynolds Memorial Field House.

In the process, Wally Jones played his last game for the blue and white scoring his season high of 34 points breaking an earlier mark of 31 set against Minnesota in the Holiday Festival in New York.

Both clubs "earned" the right to play one another after the Tigers dropped a 52-50 squeaker to eventual runner-up Connecticut while the 'Cats were taken by Duke 87-73.

The score of a game very often doesn't tell the full story and this was certainly true as the Wildcats grudgingly yielded to the taller Blue Devils. Thanks to a brilliant 28-point first half performance by Jeff Mullins, Duke left the court at halftime with a 49-33 lead.

At 10:53 of the second half, Jim Washington picked up his fifth personal foul which is usually crushing to a team as dependent on its big man as Villanova was on Washington. Nevertheless, the 'Cats refused to fold and actually crept up to within three points with 6:25 left. Mullins, Jay Buckley and Steve Vacendak quickly shut the door as the Blue Devils outscored the 'Cats 20-11 in the closing minutes.



Mullins led all scorers with 43 points while Jones and Bill Melchionni chipped in with 18 each.

In the consolation game with the Tigers, the situation was reversed. Playing a tight defensive first half, Villanova encouraged a dozen Princeton ball-handling mistakes and walked off the court at halftime with a 42-30 lead.

In the second stanza, the Ivy champs came on strong tying the game three times and grabbing the lead on five other occasions, the last with 7:57 showing via a Bill Bradley jumper.

With long jumpers by both Jones and Melchionni accounting for 15 of a 16 point surge, the 'Cats took the lead and increased it as time ran out. Wally spent the last few seconds of his collegiate career scoring on a layup just as the game ended. Jones' 34 point production was followed by Bradley's 30 and Melchionni's 17.

This is one rebound number 44 Jeff Mullins is NOT going to get as Jim Washington and Bernie Schaffer battle for the tip-in. Standing by are the Blue Devils' Hack Tison (31) and Jay Buckley (22).

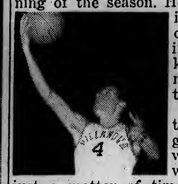
Billy The Kid



by Rusty Miller

They call him "the kid." He's been described as looking like "he's always on the verge of a cry," and —"a little boy who wandered onto the court during a college basketball game." The girls all want to "mother" Bill Melchionni.

The descriptions do fit too—until the opening jump of a game. You may have noticed that Billy always takes a pill just before he comes out on the floor. They're something new—instant grow-up pills for baby faced basketball players. You also may have noticed—they work.

Starting the season as expected, behind George Leftwich, Bill quickly proved both his own worth and Villanova's backcourt strength. A natural hustler, he was always all over the court. His favorite trick is a steal as soon as he enters the game. It rattles the opposition to see a second string guard open up like that.

Bill had a definite problem at the beginning of the season. He was expected to fill in for one or the other of a pair of outstanding backcourt men who knew each other's moves as well as Liston knew Clay's voice.

At first Billy tended to play his own type of game—not that there was anything wrong with his game. It was just a matter of time before he and the other players adjusted to each other's moves for a more concerted team effort.

From a guy named Jones, Bill got the nickname "Cy"—short for Cyclop. "That boy has an eye," said Wally. During the season the Cyclop several times abandoned the bench to add his winning touch when the Wildcats were faltering.

Toward the end of the season Billy came on so strong that Coach Kraft was forced to recognize his talents with a starting position. "That meant a lot," says Bill. "When you get in there everybody's equally cold so the pressure isn't as great"

Cruz, Relaymen Nab Seconds At Cleveland Indoor Finale

by Roy Baron

Villanova's trackmen finished the indoor track season last Saturday night in Cleveland and immediately began looking forward to the upcoming outdoor campaign. Coach Jumbo Elliott took two relay teams and his pole vaulter out to Cleveland and came back with three second place finishes.

Big Event

The pole vault turned out to be the big event that night as LaSalle's John Uelses vaulted 16 feet 4½ inches to break the old American mark of John Pennel by ¼ inch. The Wildcats' Rolando Cruz could do no better than to garner the silver medal, as he missed at 16-1.

Cruz, who has been vaulting every weekend for the last ten weeks, appears to have tired out in the last couple of weeks. Uelses, on the other hand, who was forced to take a couple weeks rest by an injury earlier in the season ,appears to be just reaching his peak.

Anti-Climax to IC4A's

In this the anti-climax to the IC4A championships of the previous week, the Villanova two-mile relay team could do no better than a second place finish. Seton Hall's quartet, featuring the Germann brothers, outdistanced the Wildcat team composed of Jim Orr, Bob Cubbin, Al Adams, and Tom Sullivan.

In the mile relay Stan Kozlowski's fall on the last turn of the third leg put the Mainliners out of contention. Anchorman Noel Carroll was too far behind first place Purdue by the time he got the baton to do anything but hold on for second place. Larry Livers and Marshall Uzzle ran the first two legs.

Puerto Rican Trip

The indoor season now over, the cindermen are already preparing for the outdoor season. One of the highlights of the season will come in the first meet. Fifteen members of the team will fly to Puerto Rico to meet an all-star team from the Puerto Rican colleges in a special dual meet on April 10.

After this, Coaches Elliott and Tuppeny will send the boys into weekly meets in an attempt to get them ready to defend the IC4A outdoor trophy. This meet will take place in the Villanova Stadium on May 29 and 30.

Freindly Foolishness

Beneath The Chamberlain Banner

by Steve Freind

Wilt Chamberlain has the world by the tail. Whether he is stuffing a ball through the nets or waxing his vocal talents for prosperity, the Stilt of San Francisco seems to enjoy life to the fullest. The smile of contentment is always on his lips as he pushes his seven foot frame around the court.

Since leaving Overbrook High, the school that produced two other guys named Hazzard and Jones, the Dipper has displayed his Midas touch. At Kansas, Wilt brought back the Jayhawks' fallen court prestiege, pacing them to a second place national finish. Tiring of college after his junior year, he joined the Harlem Globetrotters for the tidy sum of $100,000. There are some who feel that this figure represents a cut from his benefits at Kansas, but the NCAA frowns on such gossip.

After a one year stint with the Trotters Chamberlain moved into the NBA amid speculation that the rugged program would be too much for his lanky torso. These opinions proved as weighty as Liz Taylor's morals as the Stilt proceeded to shatter every league scoring and rebounding record. Two years ago against the New York Knicks, Wilt became the first pro to hit triple figures, burning the nets for one hundred points, giving Bill Campbell an acute case of larangytis in the process.

But the world of Wilt Chamberlain is larger than a basketball court. The only man to beat shotput champion Bill Nieder in arm wrestling, Wilt has run the 100 under 10.0 and cracked 50.0 in the 440. "Just for fun," he once tossed the shot 60 feet and at Kansas he captured the Big Eight high jump title, leaping a shade under 7 feet.

The Dipper has also been offered a bundle of greenbacks to turn his talents to the ring, where he was guaranteed the heavyweight title in less than two years by a prominent fight promoter. Jack Nilon should be listening! During the off season, Wilt tosses around the pigskin in Fairmount Park, where another ex-Philadelphia athlete has been known to frolic in a different manner, with Baltimore Colt star Johnny Sample. Sample claims that Chamberlain has the hands and moves to make it in the NFL.

The only thing the Dipper needs to make his world complete is an NBA championship. In Philadelphia, the Warriors ran a consistent second to the Boston dynasty. Last season's debut in 'Frisco proved a flop but the picture is brighter in the Bay City this year. With rookie coach Alex Hannum relieving Wilt of some of the pressure, he has finally been free to play an all-around game.

Once regarded as strictly a scorer, Wilt is now averaging over five assists a game and playing defense so well that Bill Russell is becoming a forgotten name. Through his efforts, the Warriors have vaulted past the Lakers and Hawks and now stand atop the Western division.

In the past, a lack of team support has kept Wilt's greatness from being acknowledged. Now, every game brings more critics flocking beneath the Chamberlain banner. The Dipper has not yet been crowned the king of basketball, but keep the sceptre ready.

Villanova Student Council Ratifies Major Revisions In Constitution

by Tom Krause

The Student Council held a special meeting on March 23 in order to ratify a new constitution. The constitution is basically the same as last year although it has been shortened considerably.

The major changes are: the Student Council is now known as the Student Government Association (SGA), the vice-chairman's post is deleted, and the nurses have two representatives, a junior and a senior, as compared to one previously.

Last year, a committee of 10 was formed to provide the best possible constitution. Tom Stanley, was appointed its chairman by Marty McGuinn, president of the student body. This committee had been working on a new constitution since the first semester.

The meeting began with a recommendation by the chair to accept the new constitution. The Inter-Fraternity Council was lauded for its help in co-ordinating the recognized campus fraternities and sororities and again gained a niche in the constitution by-laws.

Voting article by article, the first three articles were quickly accepted, since they merely defined the purpose and structure of the SGA. Article IV listed the officers of the Student Government Association: a president, who shall be president of the undergraduate student body, three executive vice-presidents, a secretary, and a treasurer.

Jim McErlane, speaking at the Student Council meeting, defends the position of having two nurses represented in the Council.

Vice-Chairman's Post

Thus the post of vice chairman was deleted. Debate of this section came mainly from Jim Griffin who expressed a desire to keep the post in the congress His reasons stemmed from his consideration of the vice-chairmanship as a training ground for undergraduates.

He also thought that the projects and leadership development displayed by former vice-chairmen were ample precedent for a continuation of the office The chair's reason for erasing the post was the possibility of a junior taking over the chairman's position in his absence and that the post of vice-chairman has been continued because of tradition.

The chair won the argument and the article was accepted. Article V dealing with the Student Senate's composition and powers, also gained the approval of the Student Congress.

The most polemical article of the constitution was then debated. Section 3 of Article VI proposes that the College of Nursing shall have two representatives, one of which shall be a junior and one a senior.

The staunchest opposition came from Senior Class President Jim Murphy who believed that there would be too great a ratio between the nurses' representatives and their number. He proposed an amendment calling for one representative, as formerly.

Jim McErlane, vice-president of student affairs, retorted commending the nurses for their participation in campus activities and commenting on their growing numbers. Finally, after further defense of the article by Bettv Kelly, the amendment was defeated.

Tuition Increase Announced By University's President

The Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, president of the university, has announced a tuition increase in all undergraduate colleges and the Law School, effective September 1, 1964.

The decision was made at a Board of Trustees meeting on February 25, 1964. The tuition for all undergraduate colleges will be $650 per semester. Tuition in the law school will be $600 per semester. Effective September 1, 1965, tuition in the undergraduate colleges will be $700 per semester. There will be some minor changes in the fees charged for contingent purposes such as change of course, withdrawal, and transcripts.

In a letter to parents, Father Klekotka stated that the increase was necessary because of the growing instructional costs at Villanova. These costs have resulted in tuition rises in many colleges and universities. It is necessary for Villanova to maintain the high level of instruction that is expected.

Justice Douglas Will Hear Final Moot Court Argument

Dean Harold Gill Reuschlein announced today that the Final Argument in the Annual Reimel Moot Court Competition would be held in the courtroom of Garey Hall at 3 p.m. on Saturday, April 11.

The Final Argument will match two teams, survivors from a series of moot court arguments between teams entered by the eight law clubs at the School of Law. The finalists this year are Richard H. Roesgen of Williamsport, Kings '59 and Thomas M. Twardowski of Bryn Mawr, Notre Dame '62 representing the Saint Thomas More Law Club; and William J. Green, III of Philadelphia, Saint Joseph's '60, and Thomas A. Riley, Jr. of West Chester, Saint Joseph's '61 representing the Chief Justice Warren Law Club.

The bench sitting to hear this year's culminating argument will be a distinguished one, presided over by Justice William O. Douglas of the Supreme Court of the United States. Sitting as associate judges will be Justice Benjamin R. Jones of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania and Justice J. Cullen Ganey of the United States Court of Appeals.

Case

This year's case involves the review of a conviction for contempt by a New York Court. The conviction was based on the petitioner's failure to answer the questions of a New York Investigating Commission which had granted him immunity from prosecution.

The Petitioner failed to answer the questions on the ground that the answers might tend to incriminate him because he is subject to federal prosecution despite the state grant of immunity.

Following the argument in Garey Hall will be a cocktail party in the dining area of Bartly Hall, and this will be followed by the Eleventh Annual Law School Dinner. Two former Chief Justices of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Horace

SC Reps And Officers Election Date Posted For Thursday, April 16

Student Congress President Martin McGuinn has announced that elections for class officers and Student Council representatives will be held on Thursday, April 16, in Alumni Gym.

All nominees for these positios are taking qualifying exams today. These tests, conducted by the Student Council determine the candidate's knowledge of parliamentary procedure and the constitution.

All student organizations are also holding elections this week. New officers must be elected by April 16.

On Wednesday, April 22, there will be a joint meeting of the Student Congress to elect new officers.

These elections are being carried out under the new constitution. The candidates, however, are still required to have a 2.5 cumulative average and the approval of the Dean of Men and the Chaplain.

William C. Sullivan Of The FBI Gives Address On Communism

by Jim Breman

The Assistant Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, William C. Sullivan recently gave an address concerning "College Students and Communism." The affair was sponsored by the Senior Class and was the opening phase of Senior Week.

Sullivan opened his address by stating that college students face many challenges from the revolutionary inter-national communist movement. These challenges must be met with intelligence and determination, and they must be met sucessfully if academic freedom and all other freedoms are to endure.

Continuing he said, the communists are aware of the potential of youthful energy. They always seek to gain control of this force to manipulate it for their own purposes.

"The sole function of education under communism is to train the individual to serve the all-powerful state." Their education is planned and organized to insure that each student is imbued with a compulsion to devote his best efforts to the full development of the state.

Young People

Sullivan went on to say that as a result of basic communist principles, the Communist Party in the United States has devoted major emphasis to gaining the support of our young people.

In 1922, an aboveground organization, the Young Workers League was created by the Party and an underground group the Young Communist League was also formed.

These two groups merged around 1925 as an aboveground organization called the Young Communist League.

There have been other groups formed since those mentioned above, and today the Party has turned with renewed vigor to expanding its influence among American youth.

"Communists have long held the conviction that any movement which can attract and capture the youth of a nation will ultimately capture the nation itself." For this reason they have not limited their educational program to their own nations, and indoctrination plays a vital role in their plans for world domination.

Continuing, Sullivan then stated the differences between the American way of life and the communist system.

He said that because of these differences a gulf exists which furnishes the basis for the communist challenges hurled today at the United States.

These challenges converge on one strong communist note. It is their belief that their thought and practices are superior to the American way of life and because of this they will compete with us, struggle with us, overcome us and finally bury us.

Sullivan then stated that today the Communist Empire extends

Student Council Cuts NFCCS Ties By An Overwhelming Majority Action

by Pete Mangan

The climax of the Student Council meeting Wednesday, March 18, was the vote on a motion discontinuing the Student Council's affiliation with NFCCS. The motion, introduced by Chairman Martin McGuinn, proposed to remove the organization fror its present position as a presidential standing committee. It passed by a large majority.

In taking the floor to speak on the motion, McGuinn pointed out the lack of workable programs provided by the national organization.

He claimed that Villanova has had difficulty in the past several years justifying its affiliation with the organization, primarily because of the inequality between dues paid and services received.

He stated that the Religious Affairs Committee of the Student Council could initiate and maintain programs similar to those of the NFCCS without actually being a member school.

Speaking against the motion, Senior Delegate of the NFCCS Terry Cooney, defended the organization and its work on the campus. Cooney contended that the major objection to the NFCCS was the financial burden which it placed on the Council. This he claimed could be alleviated if the organization would be allowed to sponsor its own funds as it had in the past.

Bob Dean, acting Regional President of NFCCS, also defended the organization. He attempted to propose an amendment to the motion in an attempt to have the NFCCS recognized immediately as an independent campus organization entitled to membership in the Council. The amendment was disallowed on the grounds of improper procedure.

It was revealed however that the NFCCS would be recognized as a regular campus organization by the Dean of Student Activities when it qualifies for membership in the Council as an independent organization.

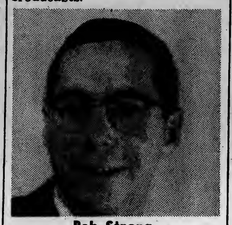
Other motions passed included one by Denis Addonizio and Jim McErlane proposing that the Student Council invite the Student Body presidents and spirit committee chairman of the Big Five schools to discuss spirit activities of the member schools at the Palestra.

The makers of the motion explained that it was prompted by an increasing display of bad taste in spirit activities during the basketball season.

Another motion, introduced by Jan Dyroff and Frank Sauers, proposed the establishment of informal meetings between faculty members and students outside of class, in order to exchange ideas and explore areas of mutual interest.

The motion was passed unanimously by the Congress and it was forwarded to the Student-Faculty Committee for action.

Robert Strong, Electrical Engineer Cops WWVU Top Post For Second Year



by Tom Dabney

Bob Strong was reelected for a second year as WWVU's Radio's station manager. Strong was voted in for another term by a vote of the staff heads and coordinators of the radio station. He will pick the new staff heads for the 1964-65 broadcast year, and announce them at the annual Villanovan-WWVU Dinner Dance on April 25 at the Warwick Hotel. The new staff heads will in turn choose their coordinators at a later date.

Strong, a junior, joined the radio station during his freshman year, as an engineer. This extracurricular activity goes well with his course of study, Electrical Engineering, in which he has maintained a Dean's list average.

Achievements of Past Year

In retrospect, under Strong's direction and with the help of his staff, WWVU had made many additions and changes internally to improve the quality of its broadcasts.

Bob Strong

The news department instituted a campus news and public affairs bureau whose job it is to keep the students informed about what is happening on campus, and to hold interviews with visitors to the University and to keep their listeners informed on topics of interest.

The sports department was given the job of an increased and more in depth coverage of Villanova's sporting activities. The music department has sponsored two monthly music festivals, plus a stepped-up policy for the purchase of more popular records. Strong said that in addition to these progressive programs, his overall purpose was to get "our engineering department back on its feet . . . and to get our music back into the realm of universal appeal, while maintaining good music quality."

Goals for Next Year

Strong, who seems not content to rest on his laurels still feels there are many necessary improvements to be made. His main stress for the coming year will be to develop for his listeners a news staff of professional quality, whose primary purpose will be to cover all campus and student activities.

Soph Class Outing Planned For St. John's Orphanage

The Sophomore Class Charity Spring Outing will be held this year on Saturday, May 9. Committees were organized during the class meeting on Thursday, March 5.

An annual affair, the outing provides for the entertainment of approximately 100 orphans. A full day of activities is planned: a campus tour, demonstrations, displays, a lunch, and athletic events.

The day will begin about 10 a.m. when the outing members will pick up the orphans from St. John's Orphanage. The committee chairmen have recommended that as many students as possible drive their own cars in order to bring a greater number of orphans to the affair.

After the displays in the morning, there will be a lunch from 12 to 1 p.m. As far as the afternoon activities are concerned, a schedule of rigorous athletic events is planned.

Benediction in the grotto at 3 p.m. will conclude the day on a holy note. The class members who attend the outing will act as hosts and hostesses for the day.

Tickets will go on sale in the Pie Shoppe two weeks before the affair. A price has not yet been agreed upon for those attending; however, an important class meeting will be held on April 9 to discuss this matter.

Committee Applications

All those interested in working on the orphans' outing should attend this meeting to obtain committee applications. Other class business will also be discussed.

Frank Eck, general chairman, has announced the chairmen for the various committees. Some of the chairmen are: Brian Banmiller, Steve Freind, schedule coordinators; Leo Carroll, Pat Mahady, lunch; Jim Griffin, tickets; and Bob Mentzinger, special problems.

The co-ordinating chairmen are responsible for the day's schedule of amusements. The other announced chairmen are; Paul Dixon, John DiGennaro, orphans; George D'Ambrosia, Greg Galland, transportation; and George Vrionis, George Valva, publicity.

Junior Class Party Will Be Held Friday; 'Playboys' Entertain

The Junior Class party will be held on April 10 at the United Steel Workers of America, Local 1392, on Ridge Pike in Conshohocken. Music will be presented by The Playboys from 7:30 p.m. to 12:15 a.m. The donation is $3.

'Concept's' Norton Promises April 20 Magazine Delivery

Concept, a campus publication for the expression of student fact and opinion, will appear April 20. Paul Norton, Concept's editor, said that this long-awaited issue, composed of 12 articles, promises to offer a distinct and diverse cross-section of student thought.

The articles will vary from a "Symposium on Aeneas" to a critique on Edward Albee in the realm of the modern theatre. In addition there will be an editorial statement on the recent wave of censuring Catholic college publications. As a special insert, a biographical sketch of Barbara Ward, noted world economist, who will speak at the University April 23, has been included.

The artcles will contain illustrated contributions by students. The articles which are well documented, are selected by Concept's editorial board. They are picked on the basis of originality and positive expression of the student's fact or opinion in a certain area.

The magazine will go on sale starting April 20 and continue through that whole week. It will be sold in the Pie Shoppe and outside the University Shop.

Indian First Secretary Ray, To Address Political Union

A. K. Ray, First Secretary for Political Affairs in the Indian Embassy, will address the Villanova Political Union on Monday evening at 7 p.m. in 110 Bartley Hall.

The subject of the evening's debate will be foreign aid to neutralist countries.

The text of the debate resolution is: Resolved, that this house favors substantial cuts in economic aid to unaligned countries.

The Union commences its debate as Congress begins to consider President Johnson's $34 billion foreign aid bill. A significant portion of that bill is allotted to unaligned countries such as India.

Proponents of aiding such countries believe that aiding them is in our interest even if they are not allied to the United States.

Opponents tend to hold that it is foolish to give substantial assistance to countries who will not take sides in the cold war. The meeting is open to the public and it will follow the Union's traditional debate format.

Room Registration Standards Announced For Coming Year

The Rev. George J. McLaughlin, OSA, Villanova dean of men, has announced the rules for room registration for the 1964-65 semester. The Student Council will cooperate with the Office of the Dean of Men in reservations.

Each student will draw a number which will determine his place in line. Numbers will be drawn in the Student Council Office by classes from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. as follows: Class of 1965, Monday, April 6; Class of 1966, Tuesday, April 7; and the class of 1967, Wednesday, April 8.

The numbers will be called for in succession to be presented in the Dean of Men's Office, 221 Tolentine Hall in this order: Class of 1965, Monday, April 13; Class of 1966, Tuesday, April 14; and the Class of 1967, Wednesday, April 15.

Roommate in Same Class

Students' who wish to retain the room they now occupy must claim them before 10:15 a.m. on the day assigned to their class. A student must pick a roommate in the same class.

The student having the lowest number may present it with his next year's roommate's matriculation card and number at the Dean of Men's Office. Matriculation cards of both residents must be presented at the time the room is reserved.

Off-campus students who wish to move on campus must register for a room at the same time as present resident students. Only present freshmen off-campus students are allowed to request a room on campus for 1964-1965

Transfer Charge

By action of the Board of Trustees, a fee of $25 will be charged to undergraduate students who seek transfer to the non-resident status after they have reserved a room. If a student is moving off-campus, he should not reserve a room.

Next year, Good Counsel, Alumni, Austin, and Corr Halls, as well as Moriarity Hall (the new house on Lancaster Avenue) will be Freshmen residence halls. Tolentine Hall will no longer be used as a residence hall and St. Rita's Hall will become an upperclass residence with over 30 single rooms.

The administration reserves the right to change a student's room at any time. Any student dropped for academic or other reason loses his place on campus. If a student is dropped from one division of the University and is accepted in another, he must personally notify the Dean of Men's office immediately, in order to avoid being dropped.

'The Desperate Hours' By Joseph Hayes Set For Apr. 10-11,17-18

The spring production of the Belle Masque Drama Society will be The Desperate Hours by Joseph Hayes. A suspense-filled, Alfred Hitchcock-type thriller, The Desperate Hours is the story of a home invaded and held by three escaped criminals; but it is also a story of civilized people being driven toward violence.

The play will run two weekends, April 10 and 11, 17 and 18 in Vasey Hall Auditorium beginning at 8:30 p.m. Tickets are on sale at $1 for students outside the University Shop in Dougherty Hall.

Smash Hit

The play was a smash hit in Broadway with a cast headed by Paul Newman and Karl Malden and won the Antoinette Perry Award as the best play of the season. The World Telegram called it a "whirlwind melodrama with no time for breath or wonder."

The Belle Masque's production stars Jim Mason, a senior appearing in his last Belle Masque play, who last semester won high praise for his role as Drummond in Inherit The Wind. His is the part of Dan Hilliard whose home and family are threatened.

Soph Debuts

Glen Griffin, the leader of the convicts will be played by Rich Rotella, a sophomore making his Belle Masque debut. Kathy Roos, a senior nurse will portray Hilliard's wife, Ellie.

Other principals in the cast include John Meehan, Bonnie Lucas, Jim Stillwagon, Brian Morgan and Bill Byrne.

Rich Rotella portraying Glen Griffin threatens Kathy Roos, as Mrs. Hillard, in the latest Belle Masque production, "The Desperate Hours."

Mark DeWolfe Howe To Give Final Law Forum Of 1963-64

The last law forum of the year will be held on Friday, April 17, at 8:30 p.m. in Garey Hall. The topic "Neutralism and Activism in Constitutional Law" will be presented by Mark DeWolfe Howe, author of biographies of Justice Holmes and professor of law at Harvard University.

Howe received his A.B. degree from Harvard College in 1928 and his LL.B from Harvard Law School in 1933.

He was a professor of law at the University of Buffalo from 1937-44 and dean of the law school from 1940-44. Since 1946 he has been a professor of law at Harvard University.

Howe has taught various subjects including Contracts, Conflicts of Laws, Constitutional Law, Judicial Remedies, Admiralty, Legal History and Equity.

His writings include Touched With Fire; Holmes-Laske Letters; Reading in American Legal History; Cases on Church and State; Justice Holmes; The Shaping Years, 1841-1870; and Justice Holmes, the Proving Years.

Howe was also editor of Holmes-Pollock Letters and co-editor of Constitutional Law, Cases and Other Problems.

The law forum is open to the public.

Student Council Forum Sponsors Lectures By Sean O'Faolain

Sean O'Faolain, renowned short story writer and lecturer, will give three lectures on the Villanova campus on Tuesday, May 5. The Irish wit will be here under the aegis of the Villanova Student Council Forum and the University's Department of English.

The first lecture will take place at 10:30 a.m. dealing with an aspect of modern Irish literature. His second talk will be given at 1:30 p.m. and will treat of short story writing after which Mr. O'Faolain will read some excerpts from his own works. This lecture will be held in the West Lounge, Dougherty Hall.

In the last lecture at 8 p.m., Mr. O'Faolain's topic will be "The Essential Pleasures of Fiction." The evening lecture, which will be held in the Field House, is sponsored by the Student Council Forum while the day lectures are sponsored by the English Department.

Mr. O'Faolain, born in County Cork, Ireland, was educated at the National University of Ireland and Harvard University. He holds a Master's degree from Harvard, having been a Commonwealth Fellow in America from 1926 to 1928 and a John Harvard Fellow the following year.

Mr. O'Faolain had been a lecturer at Boston College in 1929 and is presently in residence there.

Historical Record Of JFK Assassination Sold By SC, WWVU

Four Days, the historical record of President Kennedy's assassination, which is being sold on campus jointly by the Student Council and WWVU, is almost a sellout.

For weeks the book has been on top of many best seller lists including Time and the New York Times. It is on sale on campus for $2.

For those who find the book sold out, or those who would rather order by mail, orders are being taken by mailing a check for $2 to Four Days, Box 700, Great Neck, New York.

When ordering mention WWVU and Villanova.

An Old Soldier Fades Away

Counterpoint

While The Beasts Go Naked

by Frank Sauers

At a time when such boring problems as Khrushchev, inflation, and Mandy Rice-Davies plague humanity, it is delightful to note the emergence of a fresh intellectual problem that can temporarily push these other concerns aside.

I am speaking specifically of the current revival of interest in exploring the age-old philosophic question that delves more deeply than any other into the caverns of the human psyche, namely, "Why must man be clothed while the beasts go naked?"

Inasmuch as the noted Broadway columnist Dorothy Kilhalfpint hasn't gotten hold of the story yet, we decided to get in on the scoop.

Intervention

Everyone seems to be debating the topic. One of the first to comment was Senator Weary Coldblatter, leader of the U. S. political "preservatives." He said that it is the preservative position that man has to wear clothing for one obvious reason — Divine intervention in support of the New York garment industry, upon which, of course, rests victory over socialism and the survival of morality.

Religious leaders are taking part in the controversy too. They contend that there is only one answer to the question and that everyone can find it in the first book of Genesis. Man wears clothing, they say because he is evil. Everyone was happy to hear that, feeling that here at last is something in Genesis we can actually believe.

College Response

On the college campus the debate is no less intense. There it centers around the differing "liberal" and "conservative" points of view.

Liberals are outraged by the fact that animals, in not having to wear cloth, are in a better position socially than mankind. As a solution they propose a bold new program on a nationwide basis incorporating nudist colonies into college extra-curricular programs in the hope of rectifying this blatant inequality. Man, in their view, has gone far enough in this inferior position.

Response to this idea here at Villanova is already intelligible. Student Council member Van Wetoff had planned to propose to the administration that an inter-collegiate nudist club be established here. But, unfortunately, he soon discovered that the entire administration had taken sudden leave to explore the latest advances in higher education in Acapulco.

In opposition to the liberals, conservatives are vehemently objecting to campus nudist colonies. They demand that we continue to maintain the time-tested practice of a clothed mankind with an unclothed kingdom of beasts. After all, they say, it is the only way we have of telling the two apart.

Organizations

In further reaction, another group proposes that instead of disrobing mankind we attempt to clothe the animal kingdom. In this way, they figure, man's continual guilt and inferiority feelings toward animals will eventually disappear.

Opposed to this group is the "Society for the Integrity of Beasts." They assert that placing clothing on beasts would be nothing short of pulling them down to our level.

LEO GOODREAU

A Forthright Step

In a previous editorial, we pointed to the need for a more viable rapport between students and professors outside of the rigid formality of the classroom. We suggested the formation of informal student-teacher "coffee-clatches" organized by the individual departments as a possible step in the right direction.

The Student Council at their last session approved a resolution calling for consideration of a similar concept. The measure recommended that the individual departments study the possibility of establishing informal, seminar-type discussions with interested teachers and students participating.

The concept, we think, is a good one. We only hope that this resolution, having been passed by Council, will not go completely ignored. We look for some response from the administration or the individual departmental authorities.

Further Response

Response to another editorial in this special series has also been forthcoming. The Rev. Richard A. Appicci, OSA, dean of student activities, appearing on WWVU radio recently noted that our suggestion for a permanent outdoor display that would function as a central publicity showcase for campus activities was a good idea that should be given serious consideration.

A great deal of the difficulty in terms of support for campus functions involves the often unclear and frequently scattered means of publicity. Erection of an attractive, colorful, permanent display at a central campus location for advertising campus events would undoubtedly communicate to the bulk of the student body and faculty.

It would also go a long way, we think, in meeting the difficulty in a sensible way. In fiscal terms, the funds expended for such an operation would seem to be more than compensated for by the reduction in expenditures for the many tacks and reams of paper now used to cover our bulletin boards.

Again, we hope that this will not become another idea ignored. Effective response should be forthcoming from Student Council and others directly concerned with the extra-curricular program.

Distorted Image

Jonathan Swift believed that the waters of a troubled stream cast a distorted image. The truth of this statement is not terribly hard to discern.

Swift, unlike the moderns, was not concerned with the image but with the fact. He was not troubled by "reflections," but reflected, sought, and wrote the truth as it was.

In recent weeks a number of Catholic campus newspapers have had the unwonted audacity to print objective truths about certain of their respective faculty—without suffering the stifling of the administration.

The point is that the truth—which often must be ugly—was allowed to prevail, while the image, despite possible distortion, was cast into secondary prominence.

Letter To The Editor

To The Editor:

On reading "To Be (In U. S.) Or Not To Be" by Frank Sauers, in the March 11, 1964 edition of the Villanovan, I found myself compelled to take issue with every point made by the author.

If he is attempting to protest the idea of the press setting itself up as judge and jury, then his choice of supporting material is not only extremely poor, but is also without basis in fact. If, on the other hand, he is defending the morality of Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton, his article is erroneous in nature.

Mr. Sauers attempts to make the point that there is no evidence that Miss Taylor and Mr. Burton have committed any act that might be construed as immoral. Is making a farce of their marriages moral? Is using marriage as a matter of convenience, to be dissolved when something more interesting turns up — moral?

The Catholic religion teaches that matrimony is a sacrament, to be terminated only by the death of one of the partners. All civilizations look upon marital infidelity as immoral.

Both Taylor and Burton put their marriages aside in order to further their immoral relationship. Can immorality be denied in the fact of this evidence, simply because concrete proof of some act does not exist?

As for excluding Mr. Burton from our country, there is already provision in the law to deny admission to undesirable aliens. His immoral behavior, and irresponsibility certainly qualify Mr. Burton as undesirable, and even Mr. Sauers must agree, he is an alien.

I am alarmed, and somewhat disappointed to find that a member of the Editorial Board of the Villanovan has such a poorly developed sense of moral values as to condone or in any way try to justify the disgusting antics of this pair.

Mr. Sauers does not disagree with the writer of this letter that Mr. Burton is indeed an alien—Ed.

The Caligula Complex

In Spring Our Fancies Turn

by Phillip A. Ludlow

There is a time of levity that engulfs our minds and carries on to higher goals. Springtime comes and with it the vernal season's joys. Soon green things will be sprouting from the earth in gay profusion.

All of which turn one's thoughts, as is traditionally done in springtime, to eggplants. In case you might be wondering, the patches vert between Sullivan and Sheehan and in back of Alumni aren't as is commonly believed, composed of grass.

They're really baby eggplants. In fact nine-tenths of Delaware County's annual eggplant crop is grown on the campus of Villanova University (a fact easily verifiable by the county agricultural extension agent).

One may, if one is of a philosophical bent of mind, wonder further and ponder the question as to the popularity of eggplants. The typical reply when the question is put is "I dunno, I just like em!"

At the root of the matter is the fact that the local food purveyors don't dig eggplants and eggplants along with all sorts of other good and interesting food never appear on the menu. This is not to say that good food doesn't appear at Villanova.

Eggplants are many things to many people. Some people like them raw, others like them fried. There is a great esprit-de-corps among the eggplant group. At one time they were going to march on Tollentine to get eggplants included in the diet but a word from Zeus cooled them.

Upon hearing the word that all eggplants served would de natura be in plastic containers and that there would be no room for the refuse containers despite them, they said Oh! and retired. If you can figure that one out you're better than we are.

On Campus with Max Shulman

(Author of Rally Round the Flag, Boys!" and "Barefoot Boy With Cheek.")

WELL-KNOWN FAMOUS PEOPLE: No. 1

This is the first in a series of 48 million columns examining the careers of men who have significantly altered the world we live in. We begin today with Max Planck.

Max Planck (or The Pearl of the Pacific, as he is often called) gave to modern physics the law known as Planck's Constant. Many people when they first hear of this law, throw up their hands and exclaim, "Golly whiskers, this is too deep for little old me!"

(Incidentally, speaking of whiskers, I cannot help but mention Personna Stainless Steel Razor Blades. Personna is the blade for people who can't shave after every meal. It shaves you closely, cleanly, and more frequently than any other stainless steel blade on the market. The makers of Personna have publicly declared—and do here repeat—that if Personna Blades don't give you more luxury shaves than any other stainless steel blade, they will buy you whatever blade you think is better. Could anything be more fair? I, for one, think not.)

Max showed no indication.....

But I digress. We were speaking of Planck's Constant, which is not, as many think, difficult to understand. It simply states that matter sometimes behaves like waves, and waves sometimes behave like matter. To give you a homely illustration, pick up your pencil and wave it. Your pencil, you will surely agree, is matter—yet look at the little rascal wave! Or take flags. Or Ann-Margret.

Planck's Constant, uncomplicated as it is, nevertheless provided science with the key that unlocked the atom, made space travel possible, and conquered denture slippage. Honors were heaped upon Mr. Planck (or The City of Brotherly Love, as he is familiarly known as). He was awarded the Nobel Prize, the Little Brown Jug, and Disneyland. But the honor that pleased Mr. Planck most was that plankton were named after him.

Plankton, as we know, are the floating colonies of one-celled animals on which fishes feed. Plankton, in their turn, feed upon one-half celled animals called krill (named, incidentally, after Dr. Morris Krill who invented the house cat). Krill, in their turn, feed upon peanut butter sandwiches mostly—or, when they are in season, cheeseburgers.

But I digress. Back to Max Planck who, it must be said, showed no indication of his scientific genius as a youngster. In fact, for the first six years of his life he did not speak at all except to pound his spoon on his bowl and shout "More gruel!" Imagine, then, the surprise of his parents when on his seventh birthday little Max suddenly cried, "Papa! Mama! Something is wrong with the Second Law of Thermodynamics!" So astonished were the elder Plancks that they rushed out and dug the Kiel Canal.

Meanwhile Max, constructing a crude Petrie dish out of two small pieces of petrie and his gruel bowl, began to experiment with thermodynamics. By dinner time he had discovered Planck's Constant. Hungry but happy, he rushed to Heidelberg University to announce his findings. He arrived, unfortunately, during the Erich von Stroheim Sesquicentennial, and everyone was so busy dancing and duelling that young Planck could find nobody to listen to him. The festival, however, ended after two years and Planck was finally able to report his discovery.

Well sir, the rest is history. Einstein gaily cried, "E equals mc squared!" Edison invented Marconi. Eli Whitney invented Georgia Tech, and Michelangelo invented the ceiling. This later became known as the Humboldt Current.

Mr. Shulman is, of course, joshing, but the makers of Personna Blades are not: if, after trying our blades, you think there's another stainless steel blade that gives you more luxury shaves, return the unused Personnas to Box 500, Staunton, Va., and we'll buy you a pack of any blade you think is better.

Caught In Passing

Pa. Ballet

by Jan Dyroff

The Pennsylvania Ballet Company will make its first Philadelphia appearance featuring Patricia Wilde, Robert Rodham, and Earl Sieveling as guest soloists in an evening of ballet at the Irvine Auditorium, 34th and Spruce Streets, Sunday evening April 19 at 8:30 p.m. The performance will be under the sponsorship of the Philadelphia Art Alliance.

Other featured soloists include Patricia Turko, Barbara Sanonato, Anne Byrne, Alfonso Cata, Rosanne Caruso, and Carole Luppescu. Robert Rodham will be the Ballet Master.

Under the personal direction of Barbara Weisberger, artistic director, and George Balanchine, artistic advisor, the Pennsylvania Ballet Company also featuring a full company of fifty including Corps de Ballet and orchestra. The concert pianist will be Thomas Hyrnkiw and the lighting for the ballets will be by George Bardyguine. Richard Marcus is the musical director.

The program will include "Concerto Barocco" with choreography by George Balanchine and music by J. S. Bach; "Valse Oubliee" (a world premiere) with choreography by Robert Rodham and music by Franz Liszt; "Pas de Dix" with choreography by George Balanchine and music by A. Glazounov; "Symphonic Variations" with choreography by Barbara Weisberger and music by Ceasar Franck.

Tickets for the performance Sunday, April 19 will be available at the Art Alliance, 251 South 18th Street, Philadelphia.

Ward Book Delightful

Rev. George P. Lawless, O.S.A.

It is sheer delight to read a book by Barbara Ward. The author is, indeed, contemporary. Currently visiting the United States (she will lecture at Villanova on April 23), Lady Jackson had a personal visit with President Lyndon Johnson the week of March 15.

The New York Times Book Review of March 8 reported the news item that President Johnson had just finished reading The Rich Nations and the Poor Nations. Not so long ago, Robert McNamara, the Secretary of Defense, declared to the New York Herald Tribune that he, too, had recently read Miss Ward's latest book.

Must Book

It is a must for anyone who would claim to possess even a modest understanding of the ceaseless and convulsive changes that beset the contemporary world. The author's limpid prose coupled with her keen insight into the forces which shape our "catastrophically revolutionary age" mesmerize the reader and elicit a sense of urgent response and responsibility.

Four Claims

Miss Ward claims that we are living with ten or twenty revolutions. She selects four of them: 1) the passion for equality now so vigorously at work among nations and within nations, 2) the rapidly spreading "this-worldliness" with its insistence on more material goods, 3) the sudden and vast increase in birth rate in many parts of the world, and 4) the unprecedented development of science and technology which she describes as "the most pervasive of all revolutions."

The author is not pessimistic about the outcome of these interconnected forces, although she does insist that "time is running out."

Ideals Moved

Lady Jackson views the four revolutions which engulf the world as a "challenge to the quality of our mind and our spirits." After all, souls stand equal before the throne of God, God looked on His material creation and found it good, and science, the physical order of reality, is in no way incompatible with the moral order.

In this connection the author states:

Science has removed us from the heaviest bondage of the past: the fact that material resources were always too scarce to match even the greatest goodwill. Only a hundred years ago, if we had wished to give covering, food, shelter, and a simple education to the mass of mankind, we could not have done so because our material means were not equal to the task.

What science has done has been to set us free. It has delivered us from bondage of our material property and opened a great area of choice where vision and will can operate because they have the physical means at hand.

In the initial three chapters, "The Rich Nations, "The Poor Nations," "Communism's Blue Print," the author takes a hard look at the modern world. Miss Ward brings clarity to confusing and complex issues, and enables the reader to gain an intelligent grasp of a host of divisive problems which sunder the world.

In the three concluding chapters, "The Economics of Development," "The Politics of Development," and "Not by Bread Alone," Miss Ward presents a positive platform and program for the future of the free world.

Elaboration

In essence, her message further elaborates the thesis of her earl brilliant book, Faith and Freedom: "We reap what we sow and if freedom for us is no more than the right to pursue our own self-interest — personal or national — then we can make no claim to the greatest vision of our society: 'the glorious liberty to the sons of God'.

Without vision we, like other peoples, will perish. But if it is restored, it can be as it always has been, the profoundest inspiration of our society, and can give our way of life its continuing strength."

The Rich Nations and the Poor Nations, a difficult topic, is an easy book to read owing to the authorship of Miss Ward. Here obviously is an extremely knowledgeable woman whose writing reflects the essential doctrine of Mater et Magistra and Pacem in Terris, long before these messages were drafted by Pope John XXIII.

Miss Ward is truly avant-garde. She possesses, if you will, a sixth sense which makes her an uncanny observer and interpreter of world events. The present generation is heavily in her debt.

"I told you he was sensitive about being called a dog."

Tourney Rag Dumped

by Ray Ritter

Plans to publish a special NCAA edition of Providence College's Cowl, for distribution during the Villanova-Providence game, had to be canceled, as it would violate NCAA rules.

After the editors had planned for a special publication to be printed, they discovered in a telephone conversation with Charles Scott, tournament director of sports information at the University of Pennsylvania, that it would be against the explicit rules of the NCAA to distribute complementary copies of the newspaper at the Palestra.

The co-editors added, "We are very disappointed that efforts to publish this special supplement have been blocked. It seems to be just one further indication that this tournament is being played for outsiders, not for the students of the participating schools."

The faculty at Lafayette College has voted to allow no further unexcused class cutting by the students.

This means that students will be liable for suspension if they miss classes for anything other than a "legitimate, pressing, unavoidable reason, or any other manner of infirmity." The rule becomes effective immediately.

Under the former system, Dean's List students were allowed unlimited cuts, other students in good standing six cuts per semester, and students on academic probation two per semester. The new no-cut system will apply to all students.

Although the faculty voted the measure more than two weeks ago, it was not announced until last Monday. "Frankly, we were scared to make the announcement," said one faculty member.

Finally, reliable sources indicate that Temple University may become a state institution.

The Associated Press quoted Dr. Millord E. Gladfelter, president of Temple, asking "that hi-school be given the status of a state university."

When interviewed by the Temple News Dr. Gladfelter said "the reports were too rapid a deduction. I merely said the university is ready to take any steps necessary to strengthen its relationship with the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania."

In a speech on Tuesday Dr. Gladfelter said, "For the sake of the youth of southeastern Pennsylvania and in the interest of developing the human potential in Philadelphia and the Commonwealth, we hope that evolving circumstances will hurry the day bringing to full fruition the partnership between the University and the Commonwealth."

Temple University is currently classified as a state-related private University, and is currently receiving $4.8 million a year in state aid. This amounts to about 27% of its total income.

One step closer towards the status of a state institution was taken earlier this year when Governor Scranton recommended six new trustee appointments to the Board of Directors at Temple, which were later approved. State aid has also increased by 15 percent. All data points to a state university in Philadelphia area within a few months.

Our Changing (?) World

by Bob Healy

How far a civilization progresses is measured by its past history. According to history, then, maybe the world should re-examine its accomplishments.

Recently, in New York, a sealed box containing newspapers of the year 1904 was opened. Some of the headlines in 1904 are as familiar as the headlines today.

Cigarettes

One paper warned of cigarettes and cigarette smoke. The surgeon-general recently published a report linking cigarettes to cancer and other lung congestions.

Another paper reported that there were uprisings in Africa. Categorically, this statement has never been more valid. Unrest in Portugual's colonies, strife in Kenya, border disputes between sovereign nations, all these contribute to uprisings in Africa.

Panama

Perhaps the keynote of the sealed parchment was a new article concerning Panama. The old paper labeled it as a "trouble spot and a place to watch." How true! Currently, the United States and Panama are engaged in the most slashing inter-American feud since the Alamo.

When we stop to analyze the world situation today as compared to the situation a mere 60 years ago, we can't help but ask ourselves, how far have we progressed?

Have we failed to learn a lesson from History? Can it be that the world is technologically moving forward but socially moving in reverse?

Goals, Life And Happiness

by Barbara Greehy

Did you ever strive for a material or abstract goal, certain that this was what you needed to make you happy? Then with the attainment of this end you found yourself discontented, disappointed, and still not happy? Don't feel unusual or unique because it's the story of man.

Man has aspired to and reached great heights. Today he has more chances for advancement than any time before. Medicine and scicnce have increased his life span and allow him to live in comfort. The finest in literature, arc, and music is his.

The Problem

But is man happy? In the long run, no. This can be seen by the quantities of patients in mental hospitals, the amount of alcohol and tranquilizers sold, the considerable need for counselling services.

He has become estranged from religion and his final end. For the most part he doesn't have the security of being a necessary part and a contributor to a community. Even the family — the first and most enduring group is gradually breaking down. Man is even more alone today than an isolated frontiersman of the eighteenth century.

No Answer

This isn't to say that there's no explanation. It's easy to see the cause — mechanization, world unrest, constant change, etc. But in this case, man can have his cake and eat it too — in other words to enjoy the prosperity which he has created.

All he has to do is come to grips with himself. It's not an impossible task. Man is just too busy chasing rainbows to stop and think.

A Solution

Complete joy can't be found in this life, but man can achieve a certain degree of happiness — and it can be done a little easier with the following formula.

First he should re-examine his values and be able to discern between what's important and what's not. For aren't false values, when set up as our ambitions, a source of much frustration, doubt, and anxiety?

Next he must recognize his capabilities and his insufficiencies. In this way he won't underestimate himself and on the other hand he won't struggle after impossibilities.

Social Creature

The man must remember that he's a social creature and learn that to live is to both give and take — and that to live well is to emphasize the "to give."

Of course the formula isn't complete — its conclusion and also its execution must be found within each individual.

School's Out.

Right now, graduation seems way off in the wild blue yonder. But it's not too early to start planning. In the future, you'll look back on decisions you make today with satisfaction... or regret.

What can an Air Force career mean to you in tangible gain? The opportunity to take on executive responsibilities you might otherwise wait years to attain. And a head-start into one of a wide range of possible careers in the exciting Aerospace Age.

As an Air Force officer, for example, you may be flying a supersonic jet...helping to keep America's guard up. Or you may be in an Air Force laboratory, working to solve an intricate scientific or technological problem.

Doing jobs like these, you can hold your head high. In addition to being essential to your country, they're the beginnings of a profession of dignity and purpose.

Villanova Engineering Dean Attends So. Calif. Conference

John J. Gallen, the dean of Engineering, spent nearly a week in Southern California attending a conference of engineering educators.

The five day conference, sponsored jointly by The University of Southern California's School of Engineering and Graduate School of Business Administration, explored many topics from the organization of the engineering dean's office to matters of departmental budget, the administration of engineering research, distribution and delegation of authority, and the objective evaluation of one's own performance as a dean.

Among the visiting speakers was Dr. William Price, executive director of the U.S. Air Force's Office of Scientific Research, who spoke on "A Government Agency Official's View of the Administration of Engineering Research."

Villanova University's Arts and Science Division has announced the Fall 1964, pre-registration program for all classes.

All members of the class of '65 can pre-register for next fall during the week of May 4, 1964. Likewise, those in the class of '66 can pre-register during the week of May 11, 1964, and those in the class of '67 can pre-register during the week of May 18, 1964.

Shea House, St. Mary's Hall Scheduled To Be Renamed

Two buildings on the Villanova campus will be renamed. The Shea House located across the Lancaster Pike will be renamed the Moriarity Hall in honor of Father Patrick E. Moriarity, OSA, who was Commissary General of the Augustinian Order in the United States during the 1840's.

He purchased the college property from its former owner, John Rudolph, for the sum of $18,000 on October 31, 1841. It was known until then as the Belle Aire Estates. In his day Father Morarity was by far the best known Catholic preacher along the eastern seaboard.

The other building to be renamed is St. Mary's Seminary which will be renamed Corr Hall in honor of Mr. Corr who provided the funds for St. Mary's Seminary which was built in 1912.

ICG Chapter Readies For Annual Pilgrimage To Pa. State Capitol

The Villanova Chapter of the Intercollegiate Conference on Government will journey, this weekend, to Harrisburg for their annual State Convention—to be held in the State Capitol Building, April 9-11.

This year's Convention will be attended by 40 colleges from throughout Pennsylvania. Jerry Cardamone, campus President, has announced that Villanova will send 20 delegates who will vote in a sphere of approximately 500 votes in all.

Each election year the group meets for the purpose of drawing up a model political platform and nominating a Presidential candidate in the form of a mock convention of an actual political party.

Thursday night — the night before actual proceedings begin — nominations will be presented for Speaker — the most important and hotly contested position at the convention.

The delegates will meet first in Committees, nine in all; each assigned to draw up a specific portion of the platform for presentation to the entire body. Action this year will most likely center around the Committees concerned with civil rights and foreign affairs.

While the organization is nonpartisan and concerns itself with both Democratic and Republican Presidential Nominees, they may this year, according to Cardamone, consider only Republican Nominees since the actual Democratic Nomination will almost certainly go to President Johnson.

The Convention will open Thursday morning with a keynote address by a prominent member of the State Government—yet to be announced. Last year's keynote speaker was Governor Scranton.

Dr. Henry Rofinot To Speak On 'Changing Interpretations'

Dr. Henry Rofinot, chairman of the History Department, will give a lecture entitled "Changing Interpretations In American Intellectual History" on April 16 in 209 Bartley Hall at 7:30 p.m.

Having been a faculty member for the past 16 years, Dr. Rofinot received his Ph.D. from Columbia University in 1958 where he worked under the renowned Allen Nevins. One of his specialties has been an avid interest in American intellectual and cultural History. Hence, he is well qualified to speak on this topic.

Dr. Rofinot was awarded the Lindback Award for teaching at the 1962 commencement exercises. This award is chosen by a combined group of administration, faculty and students. Traditionally, Dr. Rofinot's advance classes in American History are among the most popular with upperclassmen.

Speaking in the name of the officers, Mr. Mentzer, the moderator of the newly formed organization, was gratified at the acceptance of Dr. Rofinot to be the first speaker sponsored by the club. He feels that Dr. Rofinot will be in keeping with one of the special purposes of the club to bring to the Villanova students something that is in way of historical information beyond the normal classroom material.

It is felt that Dr. Rofinot will reflect the high standards of speaker to bring to Villanova in the future. It is the intention of the club to offer this lecture not only to the Villanovan students but also to other Colleges.

Constitution

of all campus organizations and the editors of all campus publications were entitled to one-third votes. An amendment was proposed to give the representatives one-half votes by Conrad Cowan.

A vote was taken and the amendment passed by a tally of 251/2-12, retaining the one-half vote for member organizations. After accepting this article, the rest of the constitution was ratified, nine articles in all.

After a brief recess, debate was begun on the by-laws. All 10 articles were accepted in their entirety. Chairman McGuinn commended the efficiency of the congress members who had perused the by-laws before the meeting, therefore facilitating the ratification process.

The preamble to the constitution will remain the same as before. The draft of the constitution as passed at this meeting will be submitted to the administration for final approval on April 8 and will be officially accepted on that date.

Conservative Club Slates Lecture By Literature Professor Dr. Molnar

by John Collins

Jack Ames, president of the Conservative Club, announced that his organization will sponsor a lecture by Dr. Thomas Molnar, Professor of French and World Literature at Brooklyn College.

The lecture will be given on Friday, April 24 at 1:30 p.m. in 110 Bartley Hall. The topic will be announced.

Dr. Molnar, born in Budapest and educated in three European countries came to the United States in 1949. He has taught French and World Literature at Rutgers University, and at the Sacred Heart College in San Francisco.

The author of three books, Dr. Molnar also contributes to eight French magazines and weeklies in addition to his duties as New York correspondent for La Nation Francaise. An ISI trustee, he is also a member of the editorial board of National Review, and has contributed to Modern Age, University Bookman, Catholic World, Commonwealth, Review of Politics, and many other publications.

Dr. Molnar has recently returned from a tour of Africa during which he spent much of his time in Angola.

Of special interest to college students is a pamphlet, written by Dr. Molnar entitled, Modern Art as an Expression of Our Times. In this work, he expresses a conservative's view of the world of modern art.

Fraternities And Sorority Prepare For Social Weekend

Villanova's four fraternities and one sorority will unite socially on the weekend of April 17, for the annual Interfraternity Weekend.

Plans are already set for an informal party Friday night from 8 till 12, which is to be held at the Labor Lyceum on Ridge Pike in Conshohocken. Tickets will sell for $3 per couple and only fraternity members and their dates will be admitted.

Music for this event will be by Lee Andrews and the Hearts, and Ron Sheer and his band. Interfraternity Council President John Intravartolo has announced that the party will have a "beachcomber" theme and suggested that all plan to dress in keeping with this theme.

Work for the party has been divided by the five organizations. DPE is in charge of ticket sales, DPM and Phi Theta Chi are handling the decorations, Phi Kappa Pi is publicizing the affair, and LKD obtained the entertainment and the hall.

On Saturday night each fraternity has a dinner dance planned.

Additional plans for picnics for Saturday afternoon will be announced as soon as they are made available.

Senior Father's Day Has Varied Program; Brunch To Banquet

George McKeon and Jim McErlane, chairmen of the committee sponsoring "Senior Father's Day" have outlined the program for Saturday, May 9.

The memorable day will commence with registration at 10:30 a.m. followed by Mass at 11 a.m. in the chapel. After Mass, a brunch will be served in the day-hop cafeteria.

The day's activities will be highlighted by a baseball game featuring Seton Hall vs. Villanova followed by a track meet between Villanova and the Quantico Marines.

The day will culminate with a banquet at Kugler's Restaurant in downtown Philadelphia. Cocktails will be served at 5:30 p.m. In addition, a prominent guest speaker will be present, at the banquet, to say a few words.
